The first nine editions were known as Shelford's Real Property Statutes. With the 1902 edition Mr. Carson's name took the place of Mr. Shelford's.

PREFACE.

SINCE the last edition of this work was published in 1910, under the editorship of the late Mr. T. H. Carson, K.C., and of Mr. H. B. Bompas, there have occurred the great changes in the law of land effected by the Property Acts passed in 1925, especially by the Law of Property, Settled Land, and Administration of Estates Acts of that year; as well as the abolition of copyhold and customary tenure, and of perpetually renewable leaseholds, by the Parts of the Law of Property Act, 1922, which have not been replaced by the legislation of 1925. It is on this account specially to be wished that this edition of the work with which Mr. Carson had so long been associated could have had the benefit of his exceptional knowledge of Real Property law, which the present editor learnt to appreciate in Mr. Carson's chambers.

The great length of the Acts of 1925, together with the adoption of a somewhat larger type, have increased inevitably the bulk of the present volume as compared with its predecessors; though space has been gained by the omission of the repealed Debts Recovery Acts, Trustees and Mortgagees ("Lord Cranworth's") Act, 1860, Settled Estates Act, 1877, and Partition Acts, 1868 and 1876; and of numerous repealed sections of the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, and by the shortening of the notes on the Inheritance and Dower Acts, the operation of which will now increasingly be limited.

The Land Registration Act, 1925, has been inserted at the end of the work, previous editions of which did not contain the Land Transfer Act, 1875, or the Parts of the Land Transfer Act, 1897, relating to the Registration of Land. As regards the subjects unaffected by the recent Acts, many important decisions have been delivered in the interval since the publication of the last edition. On Prescription attention may specially be drawn to Lyell v. Hothfield ([1914] 3 K. B. 911); Att.-Gen. v. Reynolds ([1911] 2 K. B. 888); and Hulley v. Silversprings Co., ([1922] 2 Ch. 268); and on Custom to Derry v. Sanders ([1919] 1 K. B. 223), where a manorial custom enabling the acquisition for demesne land of a right of way over the land of tenants was considered.

The right to support has been dealt with by the House of Lords in Howley Park Co., v. L. & N. W. Railway Co., ([1913] A. C. 11) and Thomson v. St. Catharine's College ([1919] A. C. 468); and the effect of the principles as to the right to light laid down in Colls v. The Home and Colonial Stores ([1904] A. C. 179) has been considered in Litchfield-Speer v. Queen Anne's Gate Syndicate ([1919] 1 Ch. 407) and Slack v. Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society ([1924] 2 Ch. 475), and the jurisdiction to award damages in Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society v. Slack ([1924] A. C. 851).

The relation between section 25 sub-section 2 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and section 10 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, as regards the effect of express trusts in preventing the running of the Statutes of Limitation, was discussed by the Court of Appeal in Re Jordison, Raine v. Jordison ([1922] 1 Ch. 440); and the authorities on the subject of acknowledgments taking cases out of the Statute were reviewed in Spencer v. Hemmerde ([1922] A. C. 507).

With regard to the law of Married Women's Property, section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, has rendered a married woman carrying on a trade or business, whether separately from her husband or not, subject to the bankruptcy laws; and in Edwards v. Porter ([1925] A. C. 1) the House of Lords defined the conditions under which a husband is liable for his wife's torts.

The general arrangement of the work adopted in former editions has been retained. The title "Administration of Estates of Deceased Persons" has been substituted for that of "Payment of Debts out of Real Estates," and that of "Conveyancing and Law of Property" for "Conveyancing Statutes."

The cases have been brought down to October, 1926.

Mr. E. Weston, of Goldsmith Buildings, Temple, has rendered valuable assistance in the preparation of the Table of Cases.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 1.

Whereas the expression "Time Immemorial, or Time whereof the Memory of Man runneth not to the contrary," is now by the law of England in many cases considered to include and denote the whole period of time from the reign of King Richard the First, whereby the title to matters that have been long enjoyed is sometimes defeated by showing the commencement of such enjoyment, which is in many cases productive of inconvenience and injustice; for remedy thereof, be it enacted, That no claim which may be lawfully made at the common law, by custom, prescription, or grant (b), to any right of common (c) or other profit or benefit, to be taken and enjoyed from or upon any land of our sovereign lord the King, his heirs or successors, or any land being parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster or of the Duchy of Cornwall (d), or of any ecclesiastical or lay person, or body corporate, except such matters and things as are herein specially provided for, and except tithes, rent, and services, shall, where such right, profit, or benefit shall have been actually taken and enjoyed by any person claiming right thereto without interruption for the full period of thirty years, be defeated or destroyed by showing only that such right, profit, or benefit was first taken or enjoyed at any time prior to such period of thirty years, but nevertheless such claim may be defeated in any other way by which the same is now liable to be defeated; and when such right, profit, or benefit shall have been so taken and enjoyed as aforesaid, for the full period of sixty years, the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was taken and enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing.

Claim to right of common and other profits à prendre not to be defeated after thirty years' enjoyment by showing the commencement.

After sixty years' enjoyment the right to be absolute, unless had by consent or agreement.

(a) By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 42, this Act was extended to Ireland.

(b) The reader is referred to Note II. at the end of this Act (pp. 22 et seq.) dealing (A) with the question whether the above Act has superseded the common law; (B) with prescription generally, including prescription at common law and by lost grant; (C) with custom; and (D) with grants, express and implied, of incorporeal rights, and with licences in relation to real estate. By s. 12 of the Law of Property Act, 1925, post, nothing in Part I. of that Act affects the operation of the law with reference to the acquisition of easements or rights over or in respect of land.

(c) As to rights of common, see Note III. at the end of this Act, p. 43, post.

(d) The provisions of this Act are not affected by the Act for limiting Actions and Suits by the Duke of Cornwall, in relation to Real Property (23 & 24 Vict. c. 53, s. 2).

(1) Subject-matter of the Section...2.
(2) Enjoyment under the Section...4.

(1) Subject-matter of the first section.

The first section of this Act includes different subects from those in the second, and distinguishes easements from rights of common or profits à prendre; a different limitation is established for the former and latter cases (Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 167; Lawson v. Langley, 4 Ad. & Ell. 890; Jones v. Richard, 5 Ad. & Ell. 413). The right to receive air, light, or water, passing across a neighbour's land, may be claimed as an easement; but the right to take "something out of the soil" is a profit à prendre, and not an easement (Manning v. Wasdale, 5 Ad. & Ell. 764; Blewitt v. Tregonning, 3 Ad. & Ell. 554). A profit à prendre is a right to take something off another person's land (Sutherland v. Heathcote, [1892] 1 Ch. 484). This section applies only to profits à prendre in the land of another, and has no application to a copyholder's acts on his copyhold tenement (Hanmer v. Chance, 4 D. J. & S. 626). 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 1.

The right to kill and carry away wild duck is a profit à prendre (Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 139; see Davies' Case, 3 Mod. 246). The liberty to hawk is one species of ancupium, the taking of birds by hawks, and seems to be also a profit à prendre. The liberty of fishing appears to be of the same nature; it implies that the person who takes the fish, takes for his own benefit, and may carry them away (Anon., Hardr. 407; Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 96; see Grove v. Portal, [1902] 1 Ch. 727; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, sup.). The liberty of hunting is open to more question, as it does not of itself import the right to the animal when taken; and if it were a licence given to one individual, either on one occasion or for a time, or for his life, it would amount only to a mere personal licence of pleasure, to be exercised by the individual licensee. But in the case of a grant by deed—"of free liberty with servants or otherwise to enter lands and there to hunt, hawk, fish, and fowl"—to persons, "their heirs and assigns," where it is apparent that not merely the particular individual named, but any to whom they or their heirs choose to assign it, should exercise the right, it has been considered that an interest or profit à prendre was intended to be granted (Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 78,79; see Hooper v. Clark, L. R. 2 Q. B. 200). The property in animals feræ naturæ, while they are on the soil, belongs to the owner of the soil (Blades v. Higgs, 11 H.L.C. 621). He may grant a right to others to come and take them by a grant of hunting, shooting, fowling, and so forth, and such a grant is a licence of a profit à prendre (Ewart v. Graham, 7 H. L. C. 344; Radcliff v. Hayes, [1907] 1 I. R. 101). The lessee of a right of shooting cannot interfere with the ordinary management of the land even if injurious to the shooting (Gearns v. Baker, 10 Ch. 355). But he can take steps necessary to preserve game from fire (Cope v. Sharpe, [1910] 1 K. B. 168). In substance a profit à prendre may be reserved by the owner of the fee simple when he alienates, although it is considered that, technically speaking, in such a case it is a re-grant of the right by the alienee of the fee simple to the alienor (Ewart v. Graham, 7 H. L. 344, 345; see Houston v. Sligo, 52 L. T. 870; 55 L. T. 614). The following are other instances of profits à prendre which have been dealt with by the Courts; viz. As regards things renewable by nature; the right to cut down and carry away trees growing in another's close (Bailey v. Stevens, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 91; Dowglass v. Kendal, Cro. Jac. 256); the right to cut and carry away litter (De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 535); and see the rights to common of pasture, estovers and turbary mentioned in Note III., post, p. 45. As regards things not renewable by nature; the right to take clay from another's close (Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q. B. 420); and see the commonable rights of taking stone, coal, and sand mentioned in Note III., post, p. 54. Profits à prendre.

Rights to profits à prendre may exist as annexed or appurtenant to particular land, and only exercisable by the landowners. Or they may exist in gross, that is, apart from the ownership of land. See for instances, Barrington's Case, 8 Rep. 36B; Welcome v. Upton, 6 M. & W. 536; Johnson v. Barnes, 8 C. P. 527; Devonshire v. Pattinson, 20 Q. B. D. 274; Neill v. Devonshire, 8 A. C. 153; Goodman v. Saltash, 7 A. C. 633. In the former case (that is, as annexed to land), profits à prendre cannot be prescribed for without stint and for commercial purposes: but only when connected with the enjoyment of the land and limited accordingly (Harris v. Chesterfield [1911] A. C. 623; see Bailey v. Stevens, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 91; Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Wms. Saund. 727 n.). In Profits à prendre appurtenant and in gross.

the latter case (that is, in gross) it seems that profits à prendre may be claimed as exclusive rights. See Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687, and the cases as to profits à prendre in gross quoted above.

Profits à prendre in gross may be claimed by common law prescription (Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527). An attempt was made to claim them under this Act, but the Court of Common Pleas held that having regard to sect. 5, prescriptive rights in gross were not within the scope of sect. 1 (Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687; see Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 664; Ramsgate v. Debling, 22 Times L. R. 369). A different view of the Act was raised before the Court of Appeal, but the point was not decided (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 574, 586).

(2) Enjoyment under the section.

Before this Act, a prescriptive claim was a claim of immemorial right; the evidence in support of it was such as a party might be able to give in such a case; and the jury were to draw their inference from such proof as could be produced. Now in the case of claims under the Act, the proof is limited to thirty years. But the party must prove his enjoyment for that whole period (Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 161). Undoubted enjoyment for twenty-nine years and three-quarters will not be sufficient (Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 164; see Flight v. Thomas, 11 Ad. & Ell. 688; and compare Battersea v. Commrs. of Sewers, [1895] 2 Ch. 708). Taking the first, fourth, and fifth sections together, the period mentioned in the Act is thirty years next before some action in which the claim shall be brought into question (Richards v. Fry, 7 Ad. & Ell. 698; Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77). See further the note to sect. 4, post.

Period of enjoyment.

Nature of the necessary enjoyment.

Where on the ground of prescription profits à prendre are claimed under this section, the ordinary rules as to claims to prescriptive rights apply (see Note B, pp. 23, 30, post). Thus a grant of the right must be presumed. And a claim in respect of a tenement to common over a forest grounded on thirty years' enjoyment was defeated by showing that a grant of any right over the forest would have been void by statute (Mill v. New Forest, 18 C. B. 60). Nor can a tenant acquire a profit à prendre in other land belonging to his landlord (Warburton v. Parke, 2 H. & W. 64). Nor is an enjoyment sufficient which can be referred to an agreement in writing made by the owner of the servient tenement (Lowry v. Crothers, I. R. 5 C. L. 98). The enjoyment under this section must be enjoyment as of right (De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 591; as to enjoyment as of right, see post, p. 9). But where the acts were done as of right it was immaterial that they were done under a mistaken supposition of title (De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 585; Dawson v. MacGroggan, [1903] 1 I. R. 92, which cases were distinguished in Lyell v. Hothfield, [1914] 3 K. B. 911, where the claim was based on acts showing a claim of right to the soil itself, not to a right of common).

As to the nature of the evidence to be given in claiming a right under this section to common appurtenant, see Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 19 Eq. 150, 151. A declaration by a tenant in derogation of the title of the reversioner was inadmissible (Papendick v. Bridgwater, 5 Ell. & Bl. 166; distinguish Blandy Jenkins v. Dunraven, [1899] 2 Ch. 121; and see Scholes v. Chadwick, 2 Moo. & R. 507; R. v. Bliss, 7 Ad. & Ell. 550).

Pleading.

As to pleading the section, see the note to sect. 5, post, and the early cases of Welcome v. Upton (6 M. & W. 401), and Jones v. Price (3 Bing. N.C. 52).

In claims of right of way or other ease-

2. No claim which may be lawfully made at the common law (e), by custom, prescription, or grant, to any way or other easement, or to any watercourse, or the use of any water, to be enjoyed or derived upon, over, or from any land or water of our said lord the King, his heirs or successors, or being parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster or the Duchy of Cornwall, or being the property of any ecclesiastical or lay person, or body corporate, when such way or other matter as herein last before mentioned shall have been actually enjoyed by any person claiming right thereto without interruption for the full period of twenty years, shall be defeated or destroyed by showing only that such way or other matter was first enjoyed at any time prior to such period of twenty years, but nevertheless such claim may be defeated in any other way by which the same is now liable to be defeated; and where such way or other matter as herein last before mentioned shall have been so enjoyed as aforesaid for the full period of forty years, the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly given or made for that purpose by deed or writing.

ment the period to be twenty years and forty years.

(e) As to the modes of claiming an easement by prescription at common law, and by non-existing grant, which were used before the passing of this Act, see Note II., post, p. 24. The Act has provided an additional mode of claiming easements, but has not abolished the former modes (see post, p. 22). As to the law of ways, see post, p. 61; and as to watercourses, see post, p. 86. As to the right to a pew, which is an easement, see post, p. 114.

(1) Definition and nature of easements.

An easement (from the French word aise, i.e., commoditas) is defined to be a privilege that one neighbour hath of another by writing or prescription without profit, as a way, or a sink through his land, or such like (Termes de la Ley, adopted Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 229; Mounsey v. Ismay, 3 H. & C. 497; Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Fowler, [1892] 1 Q. B. 180). "A servitude is a charge imposed upon one heritage for the use and advantage of a heritage belonging to another proprietor" (Code Civ. Art. 637). There can be no easement, properly so called, unless there be both a servient and a dominant tenement (Rangeley v. Midland Ry. Co., 3 Ch. 310; Hawkins v. Rutter, [1892] 1 Q. B. 671; see post, p. 27). The servient tenement is that over which a right claimed by custom, prescription, or grant is exercised, and the dominant tenement is that to which such right is attached. An easement must be connected with the enjoyment of the dominant tenement (Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B. 164). It may benefit other tenements (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696). The servient owner, however, cannot insist on a benefit therefrom (Mason v. Shrewsbury Co., L. R. 6 Q. B. 587). It must be an incident of a known and usual kind (Hill v. Tupper, 2 H. & C. 121; see Aspden v. Seddon, 1 Ex. Div. 509). The public right of passage over a highway was said not to be a dominant tenement in respect of which they could acquire an easement of discharging water from the road on to other land (Att.-Gen. v. Copeland, [1901] 2 K. B. 101; see S. C., Servient and dominant tenements.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 2.

[1902] 1 K. B. 690). On the other hand, a right of way may be appurtenant to a several fishery in gross (Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401; see Edgar v. Fishery Commrs., 23 L. T. 732). It is essential that the two tenements should belong to different owners; for the owner of two tenements can have no easement over one of them in respect of the other (Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 236; Bolton v. Bolton, 11 Ch. D. 970). You cannot have an easement over your own land (Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Fowler, [1892] 1 Q. B. 171; Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 461). And, if the ownership was originally separate, upon the two tenements becoming vested in the same person the inferior right of easement is merged in the superior title of ownership (Holmes v. Goring, 2 Bing. 83). Where there is a unity of seisin of the land and of the way over the land in one person, the right of way is either extinguished or suspended, according to the duration of the respective estates in the land and the way (James v. Plant, 4 Ad. & Ell. 761).

Easements are incorporeal hereditaments.

As regards their legal character, easements are incorporeal hereditaments (Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 293; Jones v. Watts, 43 Ch. D. 585; Re Sanders, [1896] 1 Ch. 494; Hastings v. N. E. Ry., [1898] 2 Ch. 678; see Re Brotherton; B. v. B., [1907] W. N. 230, where they are said to be rather "rights"; see further, 24 L. Q. R. 199, 259, 264). A contract to grant a right of way was held to be a contract for sale of real estate (Rowe v. London School Board, 36 Ch. D. 619).

It has been doubted whether there can be a grant of an incorporeal hereditament, such as an easement, subject to a perpetual payment in the nature of a fee farm rent (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 217, 220; see S. C., [1903] A. C. 239). It is settled that rent cannot issue out of a mere easement (Buzzard v. Capel, 8 B. & C. 141; 2 M. & R. 197; 6 Bing. 150; 3 M. & P. 480; 3 Y. & J. 344; Re Gerard and Beecham, [1894] 3 Ch. 315; see Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 601; [1901] 2 Ch. 217). But payment of money in respect of an easement may be secured by agreement (see Hastings v. N. E. Ry., [1898] 2 Ch. 674; [1899] 1 Ch. 656; [1900] A. C. 260; see Aspden v. Seddon, 1 Ex. D. 504); and where the easement is granted for a term the reversioner of the land may sue for the money (Ib). See further, p. 140, post.

Instances of easements.

There are a great variety of easements. The following may be enumerated:—Right of way. Right to place over neighbouring soil clothes on lines (Drewell v. Towler, 3 B. & Ad. 735); or telephone wires (Lancashire Co. v. Manchester, 14 Q. B. D. 267; see Wandsworth v. United Telephone Co., 13 Q. B. D. 904; Midland Ry. Co. v. Wright, [1901] 1 Ch. 783; Finchley Co. v. Finchley Council, [1903] 1 Ch. 437). The right to move a timber traveller through air over neighbouring land (Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 251); or to build so as to project over neighbouring land (Lemmon v. Webb, [1894] 3 Ch. 11, 18; [1895] A. C. 1, distinguishing the case of overhanging trees). The right of landing nets on another's ground (Gray v. Bond, 2 Brod. & B. 667). Right to make spoil banks upon the surface in working mines (Rogers v. Taylor, 1 H. & N. 706; see Ramsay v. Blair, 1 App. Cas. 701); or quarries (Middleton v. Clarence, I. R. 11 C. L. 499). The right to mix muck an another's land (Pye v. Mumford, 11 Q. B. 666). The right to place a pile in the soil of a river (Lancaster v. Eve, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 717; Cory v. Greenwich L. R. 7 C. P. 499); or to place stones on the foreshore for protection of adjoining land (Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114). The right to place a signpost on a common (Hoare v. Metropolitan Board, L. R. 9 Q. B. 296); or to affix a signboard to the walls of another's house (Moody v. Steggles, 12 Ch. D. 261); or to use a fascia on another's house

(Francis v. Hayward, 22 Ch. D. 177); or to place an advertisement hoarding on land (R. v. St. Pancras, 2 Q. B. D. 581; see Kerrison v. Smith, [1897] 2 Q. B. 445). The right to go on the soil of another to clear a mill stream and repair its banks (Beeston v. Weate, 5 E. & B. 996); or repair the banks of a non-navigable river (Long v. Gowlett, [1923] 2 Ch. 177); or to fish (Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401). The right to open locks on another's river (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696). The right in the occupier of a messuage to water cattle at a pond, and to take water for domestic purposes (Manning v. Wasdale, 5 Ad. & Ell. 758; see Fitch v. Rawling, 2 H. Bl. 395). The right to go on a neighbour's close and to draw water from a spring there (Race v. Ward, 4 El. & Bl. 702); or from a pump (Polden v. Bastard, L. R. 1 Q. B. 156). The right to conduct water across a neighbour's close by an artificial watercourse (Beeston v. Weate, supra). The right to discharge polluted water into another's watercourse (Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77). The right to discharge rain-water by spout or projecting eaves (Harvey v. Walters, L. R. 8 C. P. 162). The right to commit a private nuisance by discharging coal dust over another's land (Royal Mail Co. v. George, [1900] A. C. 980), or by creating noise (Elliotson v. Feetham, 2 Bing. N. C. 134; Ball v. Ray, 8 Ch. 471), or by polluting water (Baxendale v. McMurray, 2 Ch. 790), or by polluting air by smoke or smell (Crump v. Lambert, 3 Eq. 413). The right to use the chimney of another's house for the passage of smoke (Hervey v. Smith, 1 K. & J. 389; 22 Beav. 299; see Tebb v. Cave, [1900] 1 Ch. 643; Jones v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 630). The right to receive air by a defined channel (Bass v. Gregory, 25 Q. B. D. 481). Or to receive light by ancient windows (Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290). The right of support from land (Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 740); or from buildings (Tone v. Preston, 24 Ch. D. 739; Waddington v. Naylor, 60 L. T. 480). The right to let down the surface of land (Sitwell v. Londesborough, [1905] 1 Ch. 460). The above rights in respect of air, light and support are sometimes referred to as negative easements; that is, a right to prevent the owner of the servient tenement from exercising over such tenement his ordinary rights of ownership, as he would have been entitled to do but for the easement. Compare restrictive covenants which have been said to bind the land in equity, as being in the nature of negative easements (Re Nisbet & Potts, [1906] 1 Ch. 402, 406).

Negative easements.

The undertakers of a navigation, in whom the soil of the river is not vested, have a mere easement in the soil (9 B. & C. 109; Hollis v. Goldfinch, 1 B. & C. 205). And the following have been held to be easements: The licence to make a vault in a church, and to have the exclusive use of it (Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 288). The right to sit in a pew in a church annexed to a house (Mainwaring v. Giles, 5 B. & Ald. 361; Hinde v. Chorlton, L. R. 2 C. P. 104; Brumfitt v. Roberts, L. R. 5 C. P. 224; see Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15; Halliday v. Phillips, 23 Q. B. D. 53). The right to a fishing weir in non-tidal waters (Rolle v. Whyte, L. R. 3 Q. B. 286; Leconfield v. Lonsdale, L. R. 5 C. P. 657).

Other easements.

(2) Subject-matter of the second section.

The 2nd section refers to easements properly so called, and it has been held that to be within its protection an easement must be in some way appurtenant to a dominant tenement (Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687; 34 L. J. C. P. 309). Accordingly, the section was held not to extend to a custom for the freemen of a town to enter on land, to hold horse-races (Mounsey v. Ismay, 3 H. & C. 486), or to a custom for fishermen to dry nets on the beach (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 540, 554; see Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 664; Ramsgate v. Debling, 22 Times L. R. 369). A different view of the section was raised before the Court of Appeal, but not decided ([1905] 2 Ch. 574, 586).

The above section extends to other easements besides ways and watercourses (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 798; Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 709). Thus it extends to support for buildings from land (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 798), or from buildings (Le Maitre v. Davies, 19 Ch. D. 281); and to a right to open locks (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696); and to easements of every description (Ibid. 709); except light (Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 665; Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 48). A claim to a watercourse within this section includes a claim to send through another's watercourse polluted water (Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77); or sand and rubble (Carlyon v. Lovering, 1 H. & N. 784); also a claim to have water which would otherwise flow down to the plaintiff's land diverted over other land (Mason v. Shrewsbury Co., L. R. 6 Q. B. 578; see Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 254), but not a claim to have water allowed to percolate through the banks of a stream (Roberts v. Fellows, 94 L. T. 279).

(3) Enjoyment under the section.

Sect. 2 provides a method of claiming easements (other than light) alternative to the methods of claiming them at common law or by lost grant (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 238). Where these easements are claimed in either of the two last-mentioned methods a grant must be presumed (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 239). Where they are claimed under this section, and the claim is based on user for twenty years, a grant must also be presumed (Rochdale Canal Co. v. Radcliffe, 18 Q. B. 315). If the claim is based on user for forty years it seems that the same presumption must be made (Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 260, 278; and see Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 457, deciding that enjoyment as of right is in this case necessary. See contra, Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290, and compare the language of sect. 7, post, p. 20).

Presuming a grant.

Enjoyment must justify the presumption of an absolute grant.

Where in the case of claims under sect. 2 a grant must be presumed, the enjoyment must be such as will justify the presumption. In general, the rules as to presuming a grant (see note on prescription, post, p. 31) apply. In particular the presumed grant must be an absolute one. For the easement must be acquired in favour of the dominant as against the servient tenement, in respect of the fee simple in both cases (Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 466). So in a leading case decided in 1834 it was held that under sect. 2 an enjoyment of twenty years, which cannot give a good title against all having estates in the lands in question, will not confer any title at all, even as between the parties having partial interests under leases. And where for more than twenty years the plaintiff, holding a lease from a bishop of one close, enjoyed without interruption a way over another close occupied by the defendant holding a lease under the same bishop, such enjoyment did not give the plaintiff a right of way over the defendant's close (Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 211; where see the discussion of the Act by Parke, B.).

Bright v. Walker was a decision on the part of the section relating to twenty years' enjoyment (see Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 251). And (apart from questions respecting light under sect. 3; as to which, see p. 12, post) it is clear in general that under this Act the tenant of one close cannot as such acquire a prescriptive easement over another close belonging to the same landlord either by twenty years' user (Gayford v. Moffatt, 4 Ch. 133; Russell v. Harford, 2 Eq. 507; Bayley v. G. W. Ry., 26 Ch. D. 441; Daniel v. Anderson, 31 L. J. Ch. 610; Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 855; Macnaghten v. Baird, [1903] 2 I. R. 731) or by forty years' user (Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 457; disapproving Fahey v. Dwyer, 4 L. R. Ir. 271, and the dictum of Chitty, J., in Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 252). As to the presumption of a lost grant in such a case, see Timmons v. Hewitt, 22 L. R. Ir. 627.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 2.

Since an absolute grant must be presumed, a person claiming an easement under sect. 2 must show that the right might have been granted by a person capable of making the grant (Rochdale Co. v. Radcliffe, 18 Q. B. 315). And the claim cannot be sustained where such a grant would have been ultra vires either as regards the grantee (National Manure Co. v. Donald, 4 H. & N. 28; 28 L. J. Ex. 185) or as regards the grantor (Rochdale Co. v. Radcliffe, supra; Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 278; see Mill v. New Forest, 18 C. B. 60).

No presumption of grant where it would have been ultra vires as regards the grantee, or the grantor;

The various cases in which the Courts have refused to presume a grant are collected, post, p. 31. It may be mentioned here that a grant will not be presumed where the servient owner is incapable of preventing the user (Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852). Accordingly the owner of a windmill cannot under this section claim by twenty years' user a free passage of air to his mill (Webb v. Bird, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 283); nor can the right of access of air to chimneys over the unlimited surface of a neighbour be acquired (Bryant v. Lefever, 4 C. P. D. 172; see as to the passage of air through a defined channel, Bass v. Gregory, 25 Q. B. D. 481; Chastey v. Ackland, [1895] 2 Ch. 389; [1897] A. C. 155). Nor can subterranean water percolating in no known channels be acquired as an easement by user (Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349). Nor can the right to annoy neighbours by noise be acquired by user, unless during the user the noise has amounted to an actionable nuisance (Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852; see Murgatroyd v. Robinson, 7 E. & B. 391).

or where servient owner incapable of preventing user;

Nor will a grant be presumed where the enjoyment was not "as of right" (Hanna v. Pollock, [1900] 2 I. R. 671). There must be enjoyment "as of right" whether the claim is made on the ground of forty, or of twenty, years' enjoyment (Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 457).

or where enjoyment was not "as of right."

In the case of prescription, long enjoyments, in order to establish a right, must have been "as of right," and therefore neither by violence nor by stealth, nor by leave asked from time to time (Mills v. Colchester, L. R. 2 C. P. 486). The enjoyment must be "nec per vim, nec clam, nec precario" (Co. Litt. 113 b; Gardner v. Hodgson's Brewery, [1903] A. C. 238). It is not sufficient if it be "per vim" (Eaton v. Swansea, 17 Q. B. 267); or if it be "clam," as where there was no open and visible enjoyment of an unusual support for a dock from underground rods (Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557); or if it be "precario," as in the case of an artificial watercourse the user of which was permissive only (Burrows v. Lang, [1901] 2 Ch. 502; but see Lewis v. Meredith, [1913] 1 Ch. 571). Acts done under a mistaken supposition of title have been held to amount to enjoyment as of right (De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 535; Dawson v. MacGroggan, [1903] 1 Ir. R. 92). But the acts must show a claim to a right of profit in alieno solo, not to the soil itself (Lyell v. Hothfield, [1914] 3 K. B. 911). On the other hand, where a watercourse was made and enjoyed by a tenant, the landlord and tenant both being under the mistaken belief that this was authorised by the lease, there was no enjoyment as of right (Chambers v. Hopwood, 32 Ch. D. 549; see Rivers v. Adams, 3 Ex. D. 361; Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294).

The words in sect. 5, "enjoyment as of right," must have the same sense as the words in sect. 2, "claiming right thereto" (Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 382). They do not mean rightful apart from the Act (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 596). An enjoyment which the owner of the servient tenement cannot stop is not an enjoyment as of right (Winship v. Hudspeth, 10 Exch. 5; see Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852; Sanders v. Manley (1878), W. N. 181). It was said by Lord Denman that the words "enjoyment thereof as of right," must mean an enjoyment had, not secretly or by stealth, or by tacit sufferance, or by permission asked from time to time on each occasion, or even on many occasions of using it; but an enjoyment had openly and notoriously, without particular leave at the time, by a person claiming to use it, without danger of being treated as a trespasser, as a matter of right, whether strictly legal by prescription and adverse user or by deed conferring the right, or though not strictly legal, yet lawful to the extent of excusing a trespass, as by a consent or agreement in writing not under seal, in case of a plea for forty years, or by such writing or parol consent or agreement, contract or licence, in case of a plea for twenty years (Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 369; see as to this dictum, Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 599; [1901] 2 Ch. 217; and see Beasley v. Clarke, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 705; Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 219; Arkwright v. Gell, 5 M. & W. 333).

Where an easement was enjoyed during part of the period in exercise of a statutory right, and, the statutory right having ceased, the enjoyment was continued for the rest of the period, no easement was acquired (Kinloch v. Neville, 6 M. & W. 806). The use of waste water from a canal was held not to be an enjoyment as of right (Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 254; compare Bankhart v. Tennant, 10 Eq. 141; McEvoy v. G. N. Ry., [1900] 2 I. R. 325; Att.-Gen. v. Grand Junction Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 505). It was said by Blackburn, J., that Wood v. Waud (3 Ex. 748) was in effect a decision that an active enjoyment in fact for more than the statutable period is not an enjoyment as of right, if during the period it is known that it is only permitted so long as some particular purpose is served (Mason v. Shrewsbury, &c., Ry. Co., 6 Q. B. 584; compare Tone v. Preston, 24 Ch. D. 739; see Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732).

Where the simple issue is, whether there has been a continued enjoyment of a way for twenty years, any evidence negativing the continuance is admissible. "Every time that the occupiers asked for leave, they admitted that the former licence had expired, and that the continuance of the enjoyment was broken" (Monmouthshire Co. v. Harford, 1 C. M. & R. 615). In the case of twenty years' enjoyment it was said by Alderson, B., that if a parol permission extends over the whole of the twenty years, the party enjoys the way as of right and without interruption for the twenty years; not so, if the leave be given from time to time within the twenty years (Kinloch v. Neville, 6 M. & W. 795). In the case of a forty years' enjoyment annual payments were made for the use of a cartway during the whole forty years. These payments were treated as having been made for permission to use the way during each successive year; and accordingly there was no user as of right (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 229, see p. 238).

Effect of interruptions.

No interruption for less than a year breaks the period when once the enjoyment as of right has begun. But interruptions acquiesced in for less than a year may show that the enjoyment never was of right (Eaton v. Swansea Co., 17 Q. B. 275; see Brook v. Archer (1868), W. N. 5). See further, as to interruptions in the enjoyment, the note to sect. 4, post.

Easement must have been enjoyed as such.

The enjoyment of an easement as of right for twenty years next before the commencement of the suit, within this statute, means a continuous enjoyment as of right for twenty years next before the commencement of the suit, of the easement as an easement, without interruption acquiesced in for a year. It is therefore defeated by unity of possession during all or part of the period of enjoyment, although such unity of possession has its inception after the completion of twenty or forty years (Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696). Where a plaintiff had enjoyed a way as of right and without interruption from 1800 to 1855, when the action was brought, it was held, that his claim under this statute was defeated by a unity of possession from 1843 to 1853 (Ibid.; Damper v. Bassett, [1901] 2 Ch. 350; Hulbert v. Dale, [1909] 2 Ch. 576). And such unity of possession need not be specially replied under the 5th section (Onley v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 496; see Monmouthshire Co. v. Harford, 1 C. M. & R. 631; Richards v. Fry, 7 Ad. & Ell. 698). Easements were defeated by showing unity of possession in Clay v. Thackrah, 9 C. & P. 47, and Wilson v. Stanley, 12 Ir. C. L. Rep. (N.S.) 345.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 2.

Effect of unity of possession.

To support a plea framed on the 2nd section of this statute, of a right of way enjoyed for forty years, evidence may be given of user more than forty years back (Lawson v. Langley, 4 Ad. & Ell. 890; see Beeston v. Weate, 5 E. & B. 986). As to pleading licences, see Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 369; Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 546. See further, as to evidence of user, the note to sect. 4, post.

3. When the access and use of light to and for any dwelling-house, workshop, or other building, shall have been actually enjoyed therewith for the full period of twenty years without interruption, the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, any local usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement, expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing.

Claim to the use of light enjoyed for twenty years indefeasible, unless shown to have been by consent.

As to the law of light generally and the modes of claiming it apart from the Act, see post, p. 119.

(1) Period of Twenty Years...11.
(2) Subject-matter of the Section...12.
(3) Nature of the Enjoyment...12.
(4) Custom of London...14.

(1) Period of twenty years.

The period of twenty years is not limited to the period next before the pending action, but is, by the 4th section, the period next before any action wherein the claim to the right was brought into question (Cooper v. Hubbuck, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 456). Until such an action is commenced, the right remains inchoate (Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1908] 1 Ch. 171). It was said that this inchoate right was not an interest in land or easement known to the law (Greenhalgh v. Brindley, [1901] 2 Ch. 328). Compare, however, the compensation granted in such a case, Re London and Tilbury Ry. Co., 24 Q. B. D. 326; Barlow v. Ross, ibid., 381. The Court will not interfere to protect the inchoate right before the expiration of the full twenty years (Battersea v. Commissioners of Sewers, [1895] 2 Ch. 708; Bridewell v. Ward, 62 L. J. Q. B. 270). If, however, there has been an enjoyment for nineteen years and a fraction, and then an interruption takes place, the right may be established at the end of the twentieth year, inasmuch as the interruption, under the 4th section, in order to defeat the twenty years' user, must have been acquiesced in or submitted to for a whole year (Flight v. Thomas, 8 Cl & Fin. 231).

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 3.

No right can, under this section, be acquired as against the Crown, which is not bound thereby (Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 658; Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 48). There can be no prescription under the statute for light to open ground forming a garden (Potts v. Smith, 6 Eq. 311). Compare the case of a timber yard (Roberts v. Macord, 1 M. & Rob. 230). Under the statute light must be claimed in respect of a "building" (Scott v. Pape, 31 Ch. D. 554); and a structure for storing timber is not such a "building" (Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 238). Before the Act, light was held not acquired where the building was not permanent (Maberley v. Dowson, 5 L. J. K. B. 261). The right may be acquired for a church (Eccl. Comm. v. Kino, 14 Ch. D. 213; Anderson v. Francis, [1906] W. N. 160; but see Norfolk v. Arbuthnot, 5 C. P. D. 392); an unconsecrated chapel (Att.-Gen. v. Queen Anne Co., 60 L. T. 759); a picture gallery (ibid.); a greenhouse (Clifford v. Holt, [1899] 1 Ch. 698). The building need not be occupied, or fit for occupation, during the period (Courtauld v. Legh, L. R. 4 Ex. 126; Collis v. Laugher, [1894] 3 Ch. 659). And even where the building has been pulled down, an injunction may be granted if the right has not been abandoned (Eccl. Comm. v. Kino, supra). Structural identity between the building which acquires the right, and the building which, after the period, is to enjoy the right, is not necessary (Scott v. Pape, supra.).

(2) Subject-matter of the section.

"Building."

"Access."

"Access," in the section, refers not to access through the aperture of the dominant tenement, but to freedom of passage over the servient tenement. The aperture defines the free area (Scott v. Pape, 31 Ch. D. 554). The aperture may be a skylight (Easton v. Isted, [1903] 1 Ch. 405), and the light may come through an arch (Myers v. Catterson, 43 Ch. D. 470), but not through a doorway (Levet v. Gas Light and Coke Co., [1919] 1 Ch. 24). The access must be by one and the same definite channel (Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 238).

(3) Nature of the enjoyment.

Sect. 3 provides a method of claiming light alternative to the methods of claiming it at common law or by lost grant (Aynsley v. Glover, 10 Ch. 283; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 238). Where light is claimed in either of the two last-mentioned methods, a grant must be presumed ([1903] A. C. 239) and the enjoyment must be as of right (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 206). Where light is claimed under sect. 3, it is not necessary either to presume a grant (Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290; Jordeson v. Sutton, [1898] 2 Ch. 636), or that the "actual enjoyment" should be as of right (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 205).

Sect. 3 converts into a right such an enjoyment only of access of light over contiguous land as has been had for twenty years in the character of an easement, distinct from the enjoyment of the land itself (Harbidge v. Warwick, 3 Exch. 552; see Mallam v. Rose, [1915] 2 Ch. 222). During unity of possession of the dominant and servient tenements there is no such enjoyment (Ladyman v. Grave, 6 Ch. 763). And it was said that during such unity the running of the twenty years is suspended (ibid., 768; but see Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1907] 2 Ch. 526). There is no such unity of possession of glebe and church by a rector as to prevent the acquisition of an easement of light for the church (Eccl. Comm. v. Kino, 14 Ch. D. 213).

Light claimed under statute, where servient tenement is in occupa-

Where the servient tenement was in the occupation of a lessee for years, and different persons owned the fee simple of the dominant and servient tenements, light was enjoyed for the statutory period, and a right was claimed under sect. 3. The claim was dealt with by Wood, V.-C., who laid down in effect that where there has been an enjoyment of light for a sufficient period as against the owner of a leasehold interest, the right is under sect. 3 acquired against all persons interested in the servient tenement, including the owners in fee (Simper v. Foley, 2 J. & H. 564; Ladyman v. Grave, 6 Ch. 769). The rule on this point where light is claimed by prescription at common law or by lost grant is different, no right being acquired unless the owner in fee has acquiesced for twenty years (Daniel v. North, 11 East, 370; Barker v. Richardson, 4 B. & Ald. 579; Cross v. Lewis, 2 B. & C. 686).

tion of lessee for years. Dominant and servient tenements owned in fee; (a) by different persons,

The case where the fee simple in the dominant and servient tenements is owned by the same person, but the two tenements are in the occupation of different lessees, and the enjoyment has taken place during such occupation, has also been considered. In dealing with this case, it is necessary to bear in mind two rules of the old law:—(1) If the claimant of an easement be a lessee for years, he must show seisin of the dominant tenement in his lessor and prescribe in him, for a prescription in himself is bad (Att.-Gen. v. Gauntlett, 3 Yon. & J. 99; Anon. v. Stringer, 2 Cro. Car. 599; Bean v. Bloom, 2 W. Bl. 928; Grimsted v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 718; Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 63). (2) A man cannot have an easement over his own land (Metrop. Co. v. Fowler, [1892] 1 Q. B. 71; Rowe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 236; Ladyman v. Grave, 6 Ch. 768). Having regard to these rules, it is clear that by an enjoyment under the circumstances above described, an easement other than light cannot be acquired either by prescription at common law or lost grant (Large v. Pitt, Peake, 152; Gayford v. Moffatt, 4 Ch. 133), or under sect. 2 of the Prescription Act (Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 462, and other cases, ante, p. 8). As regards the easement of light, it seems clear that by prescription at common law, this easement also could not be claimed on the ground of an enjoyment under the above circumstances (see Fear v. Morgan, [1906] 2 Ch. 416). The words of sect. 3, however (which differ from sect. 2), give rise to a new and exceptional result. It has been held by the House of Lords that under sect. 3 the right to light can be acquired by a termor over land held by another termor under the same reversion (Morgan v. Fear, [1907] A. C. 429). This holding was based upon earlier authorities which were referred to in the Court of Appeal as laying down that the rights so acquired enure not only as between the two lessees, but as against all owners of the servient tenement and in favour of all owners of the dominant tenement (Fear v. Morgan, [1906] 2 Ch. 422; see Frewen v. Philipps, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 449; Mitchell v. Cantrill, 37 Ch. D. 56; Robson v. Edwards, [1893] 2 Ch. 146; Richardson v. Graham, [1908] 1 K. B. 45). The Court of Appeal also approved Wheaton v. Maple, where Lindley, L.J., laid down ([1893] 3 Ch. 65) that under sect. 3 a right to light cannot be acquired for a term of years. It seems difficult to reconcile these holdings with the old rule that a man cannot have an easement over his own land.

The question whether there has been an "actual enjoyment" of light is a question of fact depending on the circumstances of each case (Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 138). Continuous user is not necessary (Cooper v. Straker, 40 Ch. D. 26). The owner of a building having windows with moveable shutters acquires the right if, during twenty years, he opens the shutters at any time he pleases (ibid.). Boarding over apertures for more than a year was such a discontinuance of user as prevented the acquisition of a right (Smith v. Baxter, supra). See Hollins v. Verney (13 Q. B. D. 314) and other cases, post, p. 15.

"Actual enjoyment."

"Interruption" in the section bears the same meaning as in sect. 4, and refers to adverse obstruction, not discontinuance of user (Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 138; Ladyman v. Grave, 6 Ch. 768). A fluctuating interruption to light is not sufficient (Presland v. Bingham, 41 Ch. D. 268). A hoarding for the purpose of an interruption may be erected by a railway company (Bonner v. G. W. Ry., 24 Ch. D. 1; see Myers v. Catterson, 43 Ch. D. 470; Foster v. L. C. D. Ry., [1895] 1 Q. B. 711) or by a local authority on a Metropolitan Open Space (M. O. S. Act, 1881), the hoarding not being a "building" prohibited by the last-mentioned Act (Paddington v. Att.-Gen., [1906] A. C. 1).

Payment of rent or verbal permission.

Mere payment of rent by the occupier of a house for the use of lights is not an interruption of the enjoyment within this section (Plasterers' Co. v. Parish Clerks' Co., 6 Exch. 630; see Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 215). An actual enjoyment of light for twenty years, even under permission verbally given by the person having right to obstruct, may create an easement (London v. Pewterers' Co., 2 M. & Rob. 409; see as to a verbal agreement, Judge v. Lowe, I. R. 7 C. L. 291; Mallam v. Rose, [1915] 2 Ch. 222). On the other hand, a writing signed by A, the owner of the dominant tenement, but not by B, the owner of the servient tenement, declaring that A would at B's request block up windows, and in the meantime pay B sixpence a year, was a sufficient "consent" to prevent an easement (Bewley v. Atkinson, 13 Ch. D. 283; see Smith v. Colbourne, [1914] 2 Ch. 533). So a letter signed by the occupier of the dominant tenement was a sufficient "consent" (Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1907] 2 Ch. 531). But an inscription on a stone placed in the wall of the dominant tenement by its owner was not a sufficient agreement (Ruscoe v. Grounsell, 89 L. T. 426). In the case of a lessee claiming the right to light, a reservation in the lease of the right to obstruct was a sufficient "agreement" (Haynes v. King, [1893] 3 Ch. 439); secus an exception in the lease of any right restricting the free use of adjoining land (Mitchell v. Cantrill, 37 Ch. D. 56). An agreement to pay rent for windows overlooking property included a skylight (Easton v. Isted, [1903] 1 Ch. 405).

"Consent or agreement by writing."

(4) Custom of London.

By the custom of London (which is stated in the case of Wynstanley v. Lee, 2 Swanst. 339, 340; see Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 658), an occupier of a house has not an absolute property in light, but the adjoining owner may build to any height, unless precluded by writing between them. The custom is not repealed merely by the length of the time of enjoyment (2 Swanst. 341; see Privilegia Londini, p. 101, cited Mood. & Malk. 351; and see Godb. 183; Yelv. 215; 1 Bulstr. 115; Com. R. 273; 1 Burr. 248; 3 C. & P. 317; Shadwell v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & Ad. 97). This custom remains binding where light is claimed by prescription at common law. But where the claim is under the statute, this section controls the custom (Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 667; Salters' Co. v. Jay, 3 Q. B. 109; Truscott v. Merchant Taylors' Co., 11 Exch. 855).

Before-mentioned periods to be deemed those next before suit for claims to which such periods relate.

4. Each of the respective periods of years hereinbefore mentioned shall be deemed and taken to be the period next before some suit or action wherein the claim or matter to which such period may relate shall have been or shall be brought into question, and no act or other matter shall be deemed to be an interruption within the meaning of this statute, unless the same shall have been or shall be submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the party interrupted shall have had or shall have notice thereof, and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 4.

(1) Enjoyment required by the Section...15.
(2) Interruptions...16.

(1) Enjoyment required by the section.

This section is nothing but an exposition of the proof required to establish the right (Jones v. Price, 3 Bing. N. C. 52). The enjoyment of the occupier which gives right under this statute is enjoyment for thirty, sixty, twenty, or forty years, according to the nature of the case, next before the commencement of some suit, and not before the act complained of (Ward v. Robins, 15 M. & W. 242; Richards v. Fry, 7 Ad. & Ell. 707; see Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 98; R. v. Calow, 3 M. & S. 22). A plea of forty or twenty years' user, under the 2nd and 4th sections of this statute, is not supported by proof of a user from a period of fifty years before the commencement of the action down to within four years of it (Parker v. Mitchell, 11 Ad. & Ell. 788).

Where a right of way was claimed by prescription at common law, it was necessary to show user for at least twenty years as of right; but not necessarily for the twenty years next before the commencement of the suit (Darling v. Clue, 4 F. & F. 329).

The period referred to in sect. 4 is not limited to the period next before the pending action, but may be the period next before any action in which the right is brought in question (Cooper v. Hubbuck, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 456). Until such an action is commenced, the right remains inchoate (Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1908] 1 Ch. 171). In an action relating to light claimed under the statute, the Court refused in computing this period to exclude a time during which the light had been enjoyed by written consent (Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1907] 2 Ch. 528; [1908] 1 Ch. 171). As to whether in such an action the Court can exclude from the period a time of unity of possession, see the dicta of Lord Hatherley, Ladyman v. Grave, 6 Ch. 768. In an action relating to a right of way claimed under the statute the Courts have held that a time of unity of possession cannot be excluded from the period (Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696; Onley v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 496).

Requisite evidence of user during statutory period.

It was said in earlier cases that some act of user must be shown to have been exercised in the year in which the action was brought (Lowe v. Carpenter, 6 Exch. 825; see Ennor v. Barwell, 2 Giff. 420); and also during the first year (Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 161). Carr v. Foster (3 Q. B. 581) seemed to intimate that the intermediate time was not so material (but see De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 593). The Court of Appeal, however, denied any distinction between non-user for a year at the beginning or end or in the middle of the statutory period. Proof of actual user in every year is not essential, but the absence of user for any year will be fatal, unless explained in such a way as to warrant the inference of continual actual enjoyment, notwithstanding such temporary non-user (Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 314, the case of a right of way. See, in the case of light, Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 138). The Court of Appeal further laid down that no actual user can be sufficient to satisfy the statute, unless during the whole statutory term (whether user be proved in each year or not) the user is enough at any rate to carry to the mind of a reasonable person who is in possession of the servient tenement the fact that a continuous right to enjoyment is being asserted and ought to be resisted if such right is not recognised (Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 315; see MacInroy v. Athole, [1891] A. C. 633). If there be ten years' enjoyment of a right of way, and then a cessation under a temporary agreement for another ten years, this may be a sufficient enjoyment of the old right for twenty years to make it indefeasible under this statute (Payne v. Shedden, 1 M. & Rob. 383; see Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 585).

(2) Interruption.

An easement was established under this Act which had only been enjoyed for nineteen years and a fraction, and then interrupted during the remainder of the twentieth year and down to the commencement of the action, the action, however, having been commenced within a year from the notice of the interruption (Flight v. Thomas, 8 Cl. & Fin. 231; see Eaton v. Swansea Co., 17 Q. B. 272). But the inchoate right will not be protected before the expiration of the full twenty years (Battersea v. Commrs. of Sewers, [1895] 2 Ch. 708; see Greenhalgh v. Brindley, [1901] 2 Ch. 324). The interruption whch defeats a prescriptive right under the Prescription Act is an adverse obstruction, not a mere discontinuance of user by the claimant himself (Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 581; see note to sect. 6, post). Mere intermission of user for more than a year, in the middle of the prescriptive period, is not necessarily an "interruption"; such an intermission may be explained, and it is for the jury to say whether there has notwithstanding been substantial enjoyment for the requisite period (Ibid.; see Plasterers' Co. v. Parish Clerks' Co., 6 Exch. 630; Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 314; Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 138). An interruption from natural causes of the flow of a stream did not prevent prescription. "If such were the rule, the accident of a dry season, or other causes over which the party could have no control, might deprive him of a right established by the longest course of enjoyment" (Hall v. Swift, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 381; see Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 585, 586). The interruption may be caused by the act of a stranger, as well as by that of the person in whose land the easement is claimed (Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 558). A fluctuating interruption was held not sufficient to prevent a right to light being acquired (Presland v. Bingham, 41 Ch. D. 268, where the onus of proof as to interruptions was considered).

An interruption in the enjoyment may cause the acquisition of a qualified easement instead of preventing the acquisition of any easement (Rolle v. Whyte, L. R. 3 Q. B. 286; see Brook v. Archer (1868), W. N. 5). Although, under this section, no interruption will be sufficient, unless acquiesced in for a year, yet an interruption for a shorter period may show that the enjoyment never was as of right, and thereby prevent a right being acquired under sect. 2 (Eaton v. Swansea Co., 17 Q. B. 267; see Brook v. Archer (1868), W. N. 5).

Acquiescence in interruptions.

Where an obstruction to an ancient light had existed more than twelve months, but a promise had been given to remove the obstruction, and twelve months had not elapsed from that promise before proceedings were taken, it was held, that there had not been such an interruption of the enjoyment as would deprive the owner of the light of his remedy (Gale v. Abbott, 10 W. R. 748). It was said by Kindersley, V.-C., that if the plaintiff had allowed twelve months to elapse without taking proceedings, even though he had continued to complain, that would have been a submission to the interruption within sect. 4 (Ibid.). It has, however, been held that, in order to negative submission to the interruption to light, it is not necessary to bring an action or actively remove the obstruction (Glover v. Coleman, L. R. 10 C. P. 108). Non-acquiescence in an interruption is a question of fact for a jury (Bennison v. Cartwright, 5 B. & S. 1). An interruption acquiesced in for four years before action barred the right (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98). A person asserting an interruption must prove that some notice other than the mere existence of a physical obstruction was given to the person interrupted of the person interrupting (Seddon v. Bank of Bolton, 19 Ch. D. 462).

As to evidence of interruptions to the right of common, see Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 558; Welcome v. Upton, 6 M. & W. 536. Where the lord claimed to stop the user of a common, the fact that some of the tenants yielded was not an "interruption" so as to bar the rights of freeholders, who never acquiesced in the claim (Warrick v. Queen's College, 10 Eq. 105).

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 4.

5. In all actions upon the case and other pleadings, wherein the party claiming may now by law allege his right generally, without averring the existence of such right from time immemorial, such general allegation shall still be deemed sufficient, and if the same shall be denied, all and every the matters in this Act mentioned and provided, which shall be applicable to the case, shall be admissible in evidence to sustain or rebut such allegation; and in all pleadings to actions of trespass, and in all other pleadings wherein before the passing of this Act it would have been necessary to allege the right to have existed from time immemorial, it shall be sufficient to allege the enjoyment thereof as of right by the occupiers of the tenement in respect whereof the same is claimed for and during such of the periods mentioned in this Act as may be applicable to the case, and without claiming in the name or right of the owner of the fee, as is now usually done; and if the other party shall intend to rely on any proviso, exception, incapacity, disability, contract, agreement, or other matter hereinbefore mentioned, or on any cause or matter of fact or of law not inconsistent with the simple fact of enjoyment, the same shall be specially alleged and set forth in answer to the allegation of the party claiming, and shall not be received in evidence on any general traverse or denial of such allegation.

In actions on the case the claimant may allege his right generally as before the Act.

In pleas to trespass and other pleadings, where party used to allege his claim from time immemorial, the period mentioned in this Act may be alleged; and exceptions or other matters to be replied to specially.

Before this Act a prescription in a que estate must always have been laid in the person who was seised of the fee simple. A tenant for life, for years, or at will, or a copyholder, could not prescribe in this manner, by reason of the imbecility of their estates; for as prescription was deemed to be always beyond time of memory, it would have been absurd that those whose estates commenced within the memory of man should have prescribed for any thing. Therefore, a tenant for life must have prescribed under cover of the tenant in fee simple, and a copyholder under cover of his lord (6 Rep. 60 a; Fortesc. 340). The practice, in a plea justifying under a right of common, was to show a seisin in fee of the land in respect of which the defendant claimed a right of common, to have been either in himself or in some other person under whom he claimed, and then to prescribe in the que estate by showing the right to have been in the party seised in fee, and all those whose estate he had in the land from time immemorial (Grimstead v. Marlow, 4 T. R. 718; 1 Wms. Saund. 346, n. (1)). If the defendant was lessee for years, he must have shown the seisin in his lessor, and prescribed in him; for if he laid the prescription in himself it was bad (Att.-Gen. v. Gauntlett, 3 Y. & Jer. 93).

Pleading before 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71.

By the above section, the claimant might allege his right generally; and in pleading to actions of trespass, it was sufficient to allege enjoyment as of right by the occupiers of the dominant tenement

Pleading under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 5.

during the proper period. In the cases mentioned in the Act enjoyment "as of right" must be alleged in those words (Stamford v. Dunbar, 13 M. & W. 827; Holford v. Hankinson, 5 Q. B. 584). For the meaning of "enjoyment as of right," see Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 369, and other cases quoted, ante, p. 9.

Evidence admissible under a general denial of enjoyment as of right.

Under a general denial of the enjoyment as of right, evidence of unity of possession was under this section admissible, inasmuch as such proof went to show that the enjoyment was not as of right (Onley v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 496; Clayton v. Corby, 2 Q. B. 813; England v. Wall, 10 M. & W. 699; Clay v. Thackrah, 9 C. & P. 47). Under such a general denial "the plaintiff is at liberty to show the character and description of the user and enjoyment of the way during any part of the time—as, that it was used by stealth, and in the absence of the occupier of the close, and without his knowledge; or that it was merely a precarious enjoyment by leave and licence, or any other circumstances which negative that it was a user or enjoyment under a claim of right; the words of the 5th section 'not inconsistent with the simple fact of enjoyment,' being referable to the fact of enjoyment as before stated in the Act, viz., an enjoyment claimed and exercised as of right" (Beasly v. Clark, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 709). So, under a general denial, evidence might be given of asking leave within the period (Monmouthshire Co. v. Harford, 1 C. M. & R. 614), or of an agreement commencing within the period (Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 383). As to whether a parol permission extending over the whole period could be shown, see Kinloch v. Neville, 6 M. & W. 806.

Matters to be replied specially.

It was said that where a defendant justified under an enjoyment for a statutory period if the plaintiff relied on a licence covering the whole period, it must be replied specially (Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & Ell. 369; see Lowry v. Crothers, I. R. 5 C. L. 98). Where a defendant pleaded an enjoyment for a statutory period, and the plaintiff relied on the existence of a life estate, &c. (see sect. 7), such life estate had to be replied specially (Pye v. Mumford, 11 Q. B. 666).

Pleading prescriptive rights under the Jud. Acts.

The above section and the decisions under it must now be read in connection with the rules of pleading established under the Judicature Acts, and so far as inconsistent therewith the section must be taken to have been repealed (Judicature Act, 1875, ss. 17, 21, 33). R. S. C., Ord. 19, provides (r. 4) that every pleading shall contain, and contain only, a statement in a summary form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies; and further (r. 15) that a party must raise by his pleading all matters which show the action or counterclaim not to be maintainable, and all such grounds of defence or reply as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise; and further (r. 17), that in a defence or reply a general denial shall not be sufficient, but the party must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth. Pleadings need not state inferences of law (Hanmer v. Flight, 24 W. R. 347).

The forms of pleading contained in the appendices to R. S. C. (see Ord. 19, r. 5)—which are not to be slavishly adhered to (The Isis, 8 P. D. 228), but illustrate the meaning of the Act (Turquand v. Fearon, 40 L. T. 545)—include a statement of claim in an action for obstruction of light (App. C. sect. 6, No. 10), which contains the simple allegation, "The plaintiff is the owner of a house in which are the following ancient lights, &c." Further, to the defence in an action for polluting water given in App. D. sect. 6, there is added the following note:—"If the defendant claims the right by prescription or otherwise to do what is complained of, he must say so, and must state the grounds of his claim, i.e. whether by prescription, grant, or what." 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 5.

As to pleading a claim in various forms, see further the note, post, p. 23.

It would seem from Ord. 19, that the general allegations and denials which were sufficient within sect. 5 of the Prescription Act, 1832, are now insufficient. Accordingly, in an action to restrain the obstruction of an alleged private right of way, the plaintiff was held bound in pleading to state the title by which he claimed, and whether by grant or by prescriptive user (Harris v. Jenkins, 22 Ch. D. 483; Farrell v. Coogan, 12 L. R. Ir. 14; see Pledge v. Pomfret, [1905] W. N. 56). Where in trespass the defendants pleaded that the locus in quo was a highway, they were ordered to show the mode in which they claimed that it had become a highway, and to give particulars of dedication (Spedding v. Fitzpatrick, 38 Ch. D. 410).

Under the R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 18, a joinder of issue operates as a denial of every material allegation of facts in the defence or reply, as the case may be. See also Ord. 23, r. 1; Ord. 27, r. 13. Where a party justifies the acts complained of by an allegation of a prescriptive right, it is doubtful whether a mere joinder of issue will include a denial of the allegation that the acts were done in exercise of the right (see Bullen & Leake, 5th ed. 1000).

Amendments.

According to the practice before the Judicature Acts, it was a rule that in cases of prescription the allegation must be proved as laid (2 Roll. Abr. 706; 5 Rep. 79; 4 Rep. 29 b; 1 Campb. 313; see Brook v. Willet, 2 H. Bl. 224). It was not material that a party proved a larger right than he alleged (Cro. Eliz. 722; 1 Taunt. 142; West v. Andrews, 1 B. & C. 77; Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 167; Manifold v. Pennington, 4 B. & Cr. 161; Pigott v. Bayley, 6 B. & C. 16); but if he alleged a larger right than he proved, he could not amend Drewell v. Taylor, 3 B. & Ad. 735; see Ricketts v. Salway, 2 B. & Ald. 363; Beadsworth v. Torkington, 1 Q. B. 782; Brunton v. Hall, Ibid., 792). If the allegation of right was divisible, the plaintiff was entitled to a limited verdict for a divisible part of the right alleged, though he failed to prove the residue (Giles v. Groves, 12 Q. B. 721). Compare the difference between allegation and proof in Farquhar v. Newbury, [1909] 1 Ch. 12; Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., ibid. 775.

Since the Judicature Acts, a much wider liberty of amendment has been introduced. R. S. C., Ord. 28, r. 1, provides that all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. And this wider liberty of amendment has been allowed in pleading prescriptive rights (Budding v. Murdoch, 1 Ch. D. 42; Laird v Briggs, 19 Ch. D. 22; Bourke v. Alexandra Co. (1877), W. N. 30). As to amending at the trial by pleading lost grant, see Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 387; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 601; Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 147.

As to new assignement under the old practice, see Cowling v. Higginson, 4 M. & W. 245; Lane v. Hone, I. R. 6 C. L. 232; and the old rule, Ord. 23, r. 6.

Restricting the presumption to be allowed in support of claims herein provided for.

6. In the several cases mentioned in and provided for by this Act, no presumption shall be allowed or made in favour or support of any claim, upon proof of the exercise or enjoyment of the right or matter claimed for any less period of time or number of years than for such period or number mentioned in this Act as may be applicable to the case and to the nature of the claim.

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 6.

This section forbids a presumption in favour of a claim to be drawn from a less period of enjoyment than that prescribed (Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 222). Compare the refusal of the Court to recognise inchoate easements (Battersea v. Commrs. of Sewers, [1895] 2 Ch. 708; Greenhalgh v. Brindley, [1901] 2 Ch. 324). The meaning of this section seems to be that no inference in support of the claim shall be derived from the bare fact of enjoyment for less than the prescribed number of years; but when there are other circumstances in addition, the statute does not take away from the fact of enjoyment for a shorter period its natural weight, so as to preclude a jury from taking it along with other circumstances into consideration as evidence of a grant (Hanmer v. Chance, 4 D. J. & S. 626). Thus acquiescence on the part of the owner of a servient tenement over which an easement is in fact used, in the expenditure of money by the owner of the dominant tenement with a view to such user, might prevent the former from interfering with such user although the easement may not have been enjoyed for the full period (see Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 88; Bankart v. Tennant, 10 Eq. 141).

In a case under the 1st section, if proof be given of a right of enjoyment at the time of action brought, and thirty years before, but disused during any part of the intermediate time, it is a question for the jury whether at that time the right had ceased or was still substantially enjoyed. The inference from the facts proved on this point is not a presumption within the 6th section. Where a commoner has ceased to use the common during two years of the thirty, having no commonable cattle at the time, but had used it before and after, a jury were justified in finding a continued enjoyment of the right (Carr v. Foster, 3 Q. B. 581; see Hall v. Swift, 4 Bing (N.C.) 381; Dare v. Heathcote, 25 L. J. Ex. 245).

In the case of a profit à prendre, a lost grant might before the Act have been inferred from twenty years' user. Since the Act it seems that, having regard to sects. 1 and 6, the minimum period for which the user should be proved must in all methods of claim be thirty years.

Proviso for persons under disabilities.

7. Provided also, That the time during which any person otherwise capable of resisting any claim to any of the matters before mentioned shall have been or shall be an infant, idiot, non compos mentis, feme covert, or tenant for life, or during which any action or suit shall have been pending, and which shall have been diligently prosecuted, until abated by the death of any party or parties thereto, shall be excluded in the computation of the periods hereinbefore mentioned, except only in cases where the right or claim is hereby declared to be absolute and indefeasible.

It is the intention of the Act that as against a party under disability an enjoyment of thirty years, or twenty years, shall be of no avail, but one of sixty or forty years shall confer an absolute title (Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77). This section in express terms excludes the time that the person capable of resisting the claim is tenant for life. During a tenancy for life the exercise of an easement will not affect the fee; in order to do that there must be enjoyment against an owner of the fee (Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 222). A claim was defeated by proof of an outstanding life estate (Hale v. Oldroyd, 14 M. & W. 739; Roberts v. James, 89 L. T. 282). Under sects. 1, 4 and 7 of this Act an enjoyment as of right for thirty years next before the commencement of an action may be proved by showing that the party has enjoyed for several periods amounting together to thirty years, and that during the whole time between such periods, and between the last of them and the action (if such period intervened), the estate over which the right has been exercised was in the hands of a tenant for life (Clayton v. Corby, 2 Q. B. 813. A woman married since 1882 can resist a claim (Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 268, applying the principle of Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. D. 676, decided under sect. 7 of the Limitation Act, 1623, post, p. 266, and Re Hastings; Hallett v. Hastings, 35 Ch. D. 105).

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 7.

Cases where right is declared absolute.

The cases in which the right is declared by the statute to be absolute and indefeasible are as follows:—By the 1st section, where the right, profit or benefit shall have been taken as required for the full period of sixty years, the right shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was taken and enjoyed by some consent or agreement, expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing. By the 2nd section, where any way or easement, or any watercourse, or the use of any water, shall have been been enjoyed as therein mentioned for the full period of forty years, the right thereto is made absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly given or made for that purpose by deed or writing. By the 3rd section, the enjoyment of light for the full period of twenty years without interruption is made absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing.

What time to be excluded in computing the term of forty years appointed by this Act.

8. Provided always, and be it further enacted, That when any land or water upon, over, or from which any such way or other convenient (f) watercourse or use of water shall have been or shall be enjoyed or derived, hath been or shall be held under or by virtue of any term of life, or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of any such way or other matter as herein last before mentioned, during the continuance of such term, shall be excluded in the computation of the said period of forty years, in case the claim shall within three years next after the end or sooner determination of such term be resisted by any person entitled to any reversion expectant on the determination thereof (g).

Omission of easement in 8th section.

(f) The question whether "easement" should in this section be substituted for "convenient" was treated by the Court of Appeal as open (Laird v. Briggs, 19 Ch. D. 26, 33).

(g) The 8th section applies expressly to the computation of an enjoyment for forty years; and it would be contrary to all rules of construction to hold that it applies also to twenty years (Palk v. Skinner, 18 Q. B. 568). The effect of the 8th section is not to unite discontinuous periods of enjoyment, but to extend the period of continuous enjoyment, which is necessary to give a right, by so long a time as the land is out on lease, subject to the condition therein mentioned (Onley v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 500). A tenancy for life is excluded from the period of forty years by the 8th section on condition that the reversioner shall bring his action within three years after its determination; a user of forty years confers a prima facie title, which is good, unless the reversioner in resisting the claim to an easement pursues his remedy within the three years (Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77).

The word "reversion" at the end of the section does not include remainder (Symons v. Leaker, 15 Q. B. D. 629; see Laird v. Briggs, 16 Ch. D. 440; 19 Ch. D. 22, where the distinction between a "reversion" and a "remainder" is discussed. See also Co. Litt. 22, 142 b; Re Hunter and Hewlett, [1907] 1 Ch. 46; and as to the estates which can now exist at law, see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 1, post).

Replication of life estate.

Where a replication to a plea of enjoyment of an easement for forty years, under this Act, sets up a life estate in order to bring the case within the 8th section of the Act, it must show that the plaintiff is the party entitled to the reversion expectant upon such life estate (Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 100).

Not to extend to Scotland.

9. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

This Act has been extended to Ireland by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 42.

II.—Modes of claiming Incorporeal Rights apart from the Prescription Act, 1832.

A. Whether the Prescription Act, 1832, has superseded the Common Law...22.

B. Of Prescription generally; and herein of Prescription at Common Law and by Lost Grant...23.

C. Of Custom...34

D. Of Grants, Express and Implied, of Incorporeal Rights; and herein of Licences in Relation to Real Estate...40

A. Whether the Prescription Act, 1832, has superseded the Common Law.

Prescription Act has not superseded common law.

There is nothing in the Prescription Act, 1832, to interfere with a claim of a right of way or other easement by express grant (Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 223; Livett v. Wilson, 3 Bing. 115; Plant v. James, 4 Ad. & Ell. 749, 765; Blewitt v. Tregonning, 3 Ad. & Ell. 554). Nor has that statute superseded the common law; so that a party may proceed either under the statute or according to the common law (Holford v. Hankinson, 5 Q. B. 584; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 238). In Onley v. Gardiner (4 M. & W. 496), where the defendant failed in proving under the statute a right of way in consequence of unity of possession, the Court allowed a right of way immemorially to be pleaded by amendment (Richards v. Fry, 3 Nev. & P. 72; Welcome v. Upton, 5 M. & W. 403, 404; Parker v. Mitchell, 11 Ad. & Ell. 788; Lowe v. Carpenter, 6 Ex. 825). Rights of common were established by prescription at common law, independently of the statute (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 728).

The case of light is specially dealt with by sect. 3, and it has been suggested that by that section the earlier methods of claim were taken away or limited. (See Lord Westbury's judgment, Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290; and the remarks thereon of Farwell, L.J.; Hyman v. Van den Bergh, [1908] 1 Ch. 176; Truscott v. Merchant Taylors' Co., 11 Exch. 863). In a case, however, where unity of possession was raised as an objection to the plaintiff's title under the statute, he established his title independently of the statute by proof of enjoyment from time immemorial (Aynsley v. Glover, 10 Ch. 283); Mellish, L.J., remarking that the Prescription Act, 1832, had not taken away any of the modes of claiming easements which previously existed (Ib. 285; see Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 814; Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 146; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 238). In Norfolk v. Arbuthnot (5 C. P. D. 392), and Ecclesiastical Commrs. v. Kino (14 Ch. D. 213), both the former modes of claiming light were treated as still existing. Prescription.

In the case of tithes, where a party pleads a modus existing from time immemorial, he may proceed just in the same way as he might have done before the Tithe Act, 1832, was passed (Stamford v. Dunbar, 13 M. & W. 822).

It is frequently advisable to plead together in the same case alternative claims of (1) prescription by statute, (2) prescription at common law, and (3) lost grant. For if on the evidence the enjoyment could not be brought down to the commencement of action, prescription by statute could not be relied upon. Again, if the enjoyment were shown to have commenced within the period of legal memory, prescription at common law could not be relied upon. See Bullen & Leake, Pleadings. The three alternative claims were pleaded together in Bailey v. Stevens, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 91; Norfolk v. Arbuthnot, 4 C. P. D. 293. See as to pleading lost grant, post, p. 26. Pleading.

In stating a claim under the statute it may be also advisable to plead prescription both for the longer and shorter periods mentioned in sects. 1 and 2 (Stamford v. Dunbar, 13 M. & W. 827); the reason being to meet a possible difficulty arising from failure of proof by reason of interruption, &c. (see Welcome v. Upton, 5 M. & W. 398; 6 M. & W. 536; Hollins v. Verney, 13 Q. B. D. 304, and cases quoted in the judgment).

B. Prescription generally; and herein of Prescription at Common Law, and by Lost Grant.

Prescription (referred to in the above Act as a ground on which the claims mentioned in sects. 1 and 2 can be made) is a title taking its substance of use and time allowed by law. Præscriptio est titulus ex usu et tempore substantiam capiens ab auctoritate legis. To prescription two things are incidents inseparable, viz., possession or usage and time. Possession must have three qualities, it must be long, continual, and peaceable. (Co. Litt. 113 a & b). According to the common law, all prescription presupposes a grant (Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 239; Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 654). And where the above incidents are found, the Court will if possible presume a grant of the right in question. For where there has been long-continued possession in assertion of a right, the right should be presumed to have had a legal origin if such a legal origin was possible. And the Court should presume that those acts were done and those circumstances existed which were necessary to the creation of a valid title (Philipps v. Halliday, [1891] A. C. 231; Clippens v. Edinburgh, [1904] A. C. 69). The rule with regard to prescription is, that every prescription is good, if by any possibility it can be supposed to have had a legal commencement (Pelham v. Pickersgill, 1 T. R. 667). For supposing this, the Court has "a great power of imagination" (Neaverson v. Peterborough Council [1902] 1 Ch. 573. But see Lyell v. Hothfield, [1914] 3 K. B. 911). But for such things as can have no lawful beginning, nor be created by grant, reservation or deed, no prescription is good Prescription generally. Presupposes grant.

Prescription.

(Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 795; Goodman v. Saltash, 7 A. C. 655; Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 198; cf. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, [1913] 2 Ch. 140). As to presuming a legal origin in support of a claim to prescriptive rights, see further, Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98; Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1896] 1 Ch. 218; Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 698; Att.-Gen. v. Copeland, [1902] 1 K. B. 690; Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 679.

The common law doctrine of prescription was adopted for the convenience of the community (see Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 569; Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 818); and rests upon acquiescence (Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 863; Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 773).

Three methods of claiming prescriptive rights.

The three legal methods in which prescriptive rights can be claimed are: (1) prescription at common law; (2) claims based on lost grant; and (3) prescription under the Prescription Act, 1832. The most important distinction between these methods relates to the period during which evidence of acts of user must be given. This distinction is to a certain extent historical, and historically speaking the method which came earliest into use was prescription at common law.

Prescription at common law

As regards prescription at common law, Littleton laid down (sect. 170) that time out of mind and title by prescription were all one in law. And the time prescribed by law is time whereof there is no memory of man to the contrary (Co. Litt. 114 b). There was originally no fixed period of prescription, but by several statutes periods were limited for the bringing of actions for the recovery of real estate; and in particular by the Statute of Westminster (3 Edw. I. c. 39) provision was made for protecting the possession of real estate when as old as the reign of Richard I. The Courts applied this analogy to claims to incorporeal hereditaments based on prescription (Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 103; Bryant v. Foot, L. R. 2 Q. B. 180), and fixed the term of legal memory at 1189, the first year of the reign of Richard I.; see Chapman v. Smith, 2 Ves. Sen. 511. According to the rule first adopted, they required the evidence of enjoyment to be carried back to that year (Linn Regis v. Taylor, 3 Lev. 160; see recital in Prescription Act, 1832, p. 1, supra). As time went on this became impossible, and according to the rule next adopted the evidence was sufficient if carried back as far as living memory would go (Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 104). Later on a third rule followed the analogy of the statute, 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, which in the case of real estate limited the time for bringing possessory actions to twenty years; and the Courts laid down that if evidence could be given of twenty years' enjoyment, the prescriptive right would be presumed to have existed from 1189 (Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 105; see notes to Yard v. Ford, 2 Wms. Saund. 503; Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 214). In effect, they presumed a grant of the right executed in or before that year.

Claims based on lost grant.

It was found in practice that a claim by prescription at common law could often be defeated; e.g., by showing that the user originated in an existing deed executed since 1189 (Welcome v. Upton, 5 M. & W. 398), or by showing that a building for which the right to light was claimed was erected since 1189 (Norfolk v. Arbuthnot, 5 C. P. D. 393), or by showing unity of ownership since 1189 (Mounsey v. Ismay, 3 H. & C. 486; 34 L. J. Ex. 55). To meet this difficulty of proof, the Courts adopted a new device, and held that evidence of user for twenty years was sufficient to raise the presumption of a lost grant executed at some date since 1189 (Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 105). And juries were directed to find the execution of such a deed although known to be a fiction. These difficulties gave rise to the Prescription Act, 1832 (Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 105; Bryant v. Foot, L. R. 2 Q. B. 181; Mounsey v. Ismay, 34 L. J. Ex. 55), which provided that a claim to rights which had been enjoyed for certain specified periods before action should not be defeated merely by showing that the enjoyment began at any time prior to such period but since 1189.

Prescription under the statute.

As to prescription under the statute, see the notes to the several sections set out above. The remainder of the present note relates primarily to prescription at common law and lost grant.

Doctrine of presuming lost grant.

The doctrine of lost grant was thus stated by Parke, B. (Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 217): "For a long series of years prior to the passing of the Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, judges have been in the habit, for the furtherance of justice, and for the sake of peace, to leave it to juries to presume a grant from a long exercise of an incorporeal right, adopting the period of twenty years, by analogy to the Statute of Limitations (21 Jac. 1, c. 16). Such presumption did not always proceed on a belief that the thing presumed had actually taken place, but (2 Stark. on Ev. 669) a technical efficacy was given to the evidence of possession beyond its simple and natural force and operation. And though in theory it was mere presumptive evidence, in practice and effect it was a bar. The Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, is intended to make that possession a bar or title of itself, which was so before only by the intervention of a jury" (see Holcroft v. Heel, 1 Bos. & P. 400; Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294; Read v. Brookman, 3 T. R. 591; Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 387). In the older cases uninterrupted enjoyment of an easement for twenty years was treated sometimes as a bar to an action on the case, sometimes as evidence from which the jury were directed by the Court to presume a grant, licence or agreement (Yard v. Ford, 2 Wms. Saund. 503; Cross v. Lewis, 2 B. & C. 689; see Livett v. Wilson, 3 Bing. 118). It was said that the lost grant doctrine was ancillary to common law prescription, and only applicable where common law prescription could not be applied (Bryant v. Lefever, 4 C. P. D. 177; Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 816).

Present extent of doctrine.

Since the Prescription Act, 1832, the doctrine has been resorted to as an alternative not only to prescription at common law, but also to prescription under the Act (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696; and see Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 229; Neaverson v. Peterborough Council, [1902] 1 Ch. 557). The Court has presumed lost grants in the nature of an agreement substituting one way for another (Hulbert v. Dale, [1909] 2 Ch. 570), or of an agreement as to paying a quit rent (Bomford v. Neville, [1904] 1 I. R. 474; Foley v. Dudley, [1910] 1 K. B. 317). It may presume not only a grant from an individual, but an award (East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 332), or a faculty from the Ordinary (Philipps v. Halliday, [1891] A. C. 228), or a regulation of a Port Authority (Att.-Gen. v. Wright, [1897] 2 Q. B. 318), or a grant from the Crown (Somersetshire v. Bridgwater, 89 L. T. 732, where the right of a corporation to discharge sewage into a tidal river was thus supported). So a grant from the Crown of a lost charter may be presumed (Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 490; Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 14 Q. B. D. 263; Rivers v. Adams, 3 Ex. D. 365, and compare the cases as to lost grants by the Crown, post, p. 145). Where the right was capable of being granted but the enjoyment is shown to have had in fact an invalid origin, a subsequent lost grant may possibly be presumed (Philipps v. Halliday, [1891] A. C. 236).

Rebutting presumption.

As to rebutting this presumption by giving evidence that no grant was in fact made, the better opinion seems to be that such evidence cannot be given. (See the opinion of Lord Blackburn, 6 App. Cas. 812; Lindley, J., ibid. 765; Thesiger, L.J., 4 Q. B. D. 172; Cotton, L.J., ibid., 187. See contra, Cockburn, C.J., in Angus

Prescription.

v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 130; Brett, L.J., in Angus v. Dalton, 4 Q. B. D. 201; and compare the opinion of Bowen, J., Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 783).

Pleading lost grant.

According to modern practice, a lost grant, if relied upon, should be pleaded (Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 147); but claims based on lost grant have been added by amendment at the trial (Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 380, 387; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 601). Formerly, the names of the parties to, and the date of, the supposed grant had to be stated (Hendy v. Stephenson, 10 East, 55; see Livett v. Wilson, 3 Bing. 115; Doe v. Reed 5 B. & Ald. 232); but on averment that the deed had been lost profert was excused (Read v. Brookman, 3 T. R. 151). The statement of date and parties is no longer necessary (see the pleadings in Norfolk v. Arbuthnot, 4 C. P. D. 293; Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 380). But a statement whether the supposed grant was before or after a private Act was required (Palmer v. Guadagni, [1906] W. N. 165).

Nature of rights claimable by prescription.

As regards the nature of the rights which can be claimed by prescription, these rights are of two sorts, either a personal right, which has been exercised by a man and his ancestors; or a right attached to the ownership of particular land, and only exercisable by those who are seised of the land. The first is termed a prescription in the person, and the rights are called prescriptive rights in gross. The second is called a prescription in a que estate, which means a right or privilege claimed by prescription as annexed to and going along with particular land (Co. Litt. 113 b, 121 a; 3 Gwill. 1291; Austin v. Amhurst, 7 Ch. D. 692; Constable v. Nicholson, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 230; 32 L. J. C. P. 240).

Every prescription presupposing a grant (p. 23, sup.), prescription by immemorial usage can in general only be for incorporeal hereditaments, which may be created by grant, such as commons, ways, waifs, estrays, wreck, warren, park, treasure trove, royal fishes, fairs, markets, and the like (Co. Litt. 114 a; 5 Rep. 109 b; 1 Ventr. 387; Bac. Abr. Customs (B); Com. Dig. Prescription (C.); Ib. Franchises (A.1)). A prescription to have a free warren in a manor and in the demesnes thereof is good (R. v. Talbot, Cro. Car. 311; Jones, 320; as to franchises, see Cruise's Dig. tit. XXVII.; 2 Bl. Comm. 37—40).

Prescription must be certain and reasonable.

A prescription ought to be certain; a prescription which was pleaded for a right every year, and at all times of the year, to turn cattle into a certain close, is too vague (Bailey v. Appleyard, 8 Ad. & Ell. 161). Again, a claim to carry from a close so much clay as might at any time be required for making bricks at a brick kiln in every year, and at all times of the year, was held bad (Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q. B. 415; see Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 K. & J. 592). And a prescription ought to be reasonable; and therefore a man cannot prescribe for an heriot upon the death of every stranger within his manor (Com. Dig. Prescription (E. 4)). But it may be reasonable, although unusual or inconvenient, as for a way over a churchyard, or through a church (2 Roll. Abr. 265, l. 40). There can be no prescriptive right in the nature of a servitude or easement so large as to preclude the ordinary uses of property by the owner of the lands affected (Dyce v. Hay, 1 Macq. H. L. C. 305).

Profits à prendre and easements.

The most important classes of rights which can be claimed by prescription are profits à prendre (as to which see ante, pp. 3, 4) and easements (as to which see ante, p. 5). Profits à prendre may exist as rights in gross (Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687); and be acquired in gross by prescription (Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527). As regards easements, it seems that in a wide sense an easement in gross (in the nature of a right to discharge sewage into a tidal river or sea) might be acquired by the corporation of a town (on behalf of the inhabitants), the right being based on a lost grant from the Crown (Somersetshire v. Bridgwater, 81 L. T. 732) or possibly on prescription at common law (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 664). But in the strict sense of the word there cannot be an easement in gross (Rangeley v. Midland Ry. Co., 3 Ch. 311; see ante, p. 5). As rights annexed to land, both profits à prendre and easements may be prescribed for. But such a profit à prendre cannot be without stint (Harris v. Chesterfield, [1911] A. C. 623). Prescription.

Besides profits à prendre and easements, there are a number of miscellaneous rights claimable by prescription which may be referred to here. Thus there may be prescriptive burdens. A corporation, or an individual, may be bound by prescription to repair a highway (Co. Rep. XIII. 435) or a bridge (R. v. Lincoln, 8 Ad. & Ell. 65; Hertfordshire Council v. New River Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 521). As to presumptions in such a case, see Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 491; and Esher v. Marks, 86 L. T. 222, where liability to repair a highway was established on the ground of a licence presumed to have been granted by the Crown. Again, the owner of one close may be bound by prescription to maintain a fence between his close and an adjoining close (Lawrence v. Jenkins, L. R. 8 Q. B. 274; and see Coaker v. Willcocks, [1911] 2 K. B. 124). And the owner of land fronting the sea may be similarly bound to maintain a sea-wall for the protection of an adjoining owner (Hudson v. Tabor, 2 Q. B. D. 292; R. v. Essex, 14 Q. B. D. 561; 11 App. Cas. 449; L. & N. W. Ry. v. Fobbing Levels, 66 L. J. Q. B. 127). As to the duty of a riparian proprietor on a tidal river in this respect, see Nitro-Phosphate Co. v. London and S. Katharine's Dock Co., 9 Ch. D. 503; Burt v. Victoria Co., 47 L. T. 378. As to repair of the banks of a non-navigable river, see Long v. Gowlett, [1923] 2 Ch. 177. Prescriptive burdens.

A claim to visitation fees may be supported by prescription (Shepherd v. Payne, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 132; 33 L. J. C. P. 158); also a claim to marriage fees (Bryant v. Foot, L. R. 3 Q. B. 497). Fees.

The right to hold a fair or market may be acquired by grant and by prescription (2 Inst. 220). A market held immemorially in certain places within a manor may be presumed to have been granted to be held in any convenient place within the manor (De Rutzen v. Lloyd, 5 Ad. & E. 456). So from immemorial enjoyment it was presumed that a market was granted to be held at any place in a parish to which the grantee could have access (Gingell v. Stepney, [1908] 1 K. B. 115, 144); and streets were presumed to have been dedicated to the public subject to the market (Ibid.; Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 11 A. C. 66). A market and a fair may be held on the same day in the same manor (Newcastle v. Worksop Council, [1902] 2 Ch. 145). Where a royal charter granted a market on two days of the week, and a usage to hold the market also on additional days was proved, the Court refused to presume a lost grant of the market for the additional days (Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 14 Q. B. D. 245, and see S. C., [1913] 2 Ch. 140). The grant of a market does not imply a right in the grantee to prevent persons selling marketable articles on market days in their own houses within the limits of the franchise (Macclesfield v. Chapman, 12 M. & W. 18; Penryn v. Best, 3 Ex. D. 292). But such a right may be acquired by prescription (Ibid.; Fearon v. Mitchell, L. R. 7 Q. B. 696; Moseley v. Walker, 7 B. & C. 40; Macclesfield v. Pedley, 4 B. & Ad. 404). A right to market tolls was held to have been acquired by prescription in Lawrence v. Hitch, L. R. 3 Q. B. 521. The lord of the manor, to whom a grant of a market is made, has a right to remove the market-place from Markets.

Prescription.

one situation to another within the precincts of his grant (Curwen v. Salkeld, 3 East, 538; see De Rutzen v. Lloyd, 5 Ad. & Ell. 456; London v. Lowe, 42 L. T. 16). As to the enlargement of a market, see Att.-Gen. v. Cambridge, L. R. 6 H. L. 303; Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 14 Q. B. D. 245. Where an old market franchise has been increased in strength and character by statute, the old franchise is gone, and the statute is alone to be looked to (Abergavenny v. Straker, 42 Ch. D. 89; see Birmingham v. Foster, [1894] W. N. 43; Hailsham v. Tolman, [1915] 2 Ch. 1). A statutory market will be protected by injunction even where the statute provides a particular remedy (Stevens v. Chown, [1901] 1 Ch. 894).

A market may be disturbed by establishing a new market, either within or without the limits of the franchise (Dorchester v. Ensor, L. R. 4 Ex. 341). If a new market is held on the same day as an old market, it is presumed to be a disturbance of the old market, but if on a different day actual damage must be shown (Ib.; Elwes v. Payne, 12 Ch. D. 472; Yard v. Ford, 2 Wms. Saund. 500). A market may also be disturbed by establishing a rival place of sale, though not technically a market (London v. Lowe, 42 L. T. 16; Goldsmid v. G. E. Ry. Co., 25 Ch. D. 541; 9 App. Cas. 927; Abergavenny v. Straker, 42 Ch. D. 83; Wilcox v. Steel, [1904] 1 Ch. 212); and the rival place of sale may be outside the limits of the franchise (S. CC.). But as an ordinary rule, the sale of a man's own goods in the ordinary course of business, in his own shop, outside the limits of the franchise, is not a disturbance (Manchester v. Lyons, 22 Ch. D. 307; Haynes v. Ford, [1911] 2 Ch. 237. See Lambert v. Rowe, [1914] 1 K. B. 38). Where the grantee of a market from the Crown suffered another to erect a market in his neighbourhood, and to use it for twenty-three years without interruption, such user was a bar to an action on the case for disturbance (Holcroft v. Heel, 1 Bos. & P. 400; see 2 Wms. Saund. 502, n.; and Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294). See, however, London v. Lowe (42 L. T. 16), where acts of disturbance were held not justified, although they had continued for more than half a century. The Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, consolidates the provisions usually contained in Acts for regulating markets and fairs. As to the meaning of "fair," see Collins v. Cooper, 68 L. T. 450, and Walker v. Murphy, [1915] 1 Ch. 71, where horse-races and a temperance festival with roundabouts and shows were held not to be a "fair" within the meaning of a local Act. (See as to a custom to hold races Mounsey v. Ismay, 1 H. & C. 729). And as to markets generally, see Pease and Chitty on Markets.

Stallage.

There is a distinction between market tolls which are paid for the use of a market, and stallage which is paid for the occupation of lands within the market (London v. St. Sepulchre, L. R. 7 Q. B. 313; R. v. Casswell, Id. 382; Yarmouth v. Groom, 1 H. & C. 102). The test is, has a man any occupation beyond what the general public has? (R. v. Bedford, 45 L. T. 616, 621). Stallage tolls are rateable, but market tolls are not (S. CC.; and see Percy v. Ashford Union, 34 L. T. 579). As to occupiers of stands within a market being entitled to franchise, see Hall v. Metcalfe, [1892] 1 Q. B. 208. Payments made to the owner of the soil for stalls on fair days were held to be stallage, not fair tolls (Newcastle v. Worksop Council, [1902] 2 Ch. 145). An exemption from stallage for the inhabitants of a town can be only by way of custom, not by grant or prescription (Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 50).

Tolls.

Toll-traverse is defined to be a sum demanded for passing over the private soil of another (Com. Dig. tit. Toll (A.); see Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 692), or a duty which a man pays for passing over the soil of another in a way not a high street (Vin. Abr. tit. Toll (A.), or for a passage over the private ferry, bridge, &c. of another (1 Sid. 454). Toll-traverse may be claimed by prescription by a corporation or an individual, without alleging any consideration, and payment time out of mind is sufficient to support the prescription (2 Wils. 296; see Brecon Co. v. Neath Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 555; 8 C. P. 157; New Windsor v. Taylor, [1899] A. C. 41). One kind of toll-traverse is said to arise where the owner of the soil dedicates it to the use of the public as a road, but reserves toll at the time of dedication (Brett v. Beales, Moody & Malkin, 428). It seems that a subject cannot without a grant from the Crown or a statute dedicate a road to the public subject to a toll (Austerberry v. Oldham, 29 Ch. D. 750). And it is essential that the reservation of the toll should be contemporaneous with the dedication (Att-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 693, see Lawrence v. Hitch, L. R. 3 Q. B. 521). Where the soil of a highway and tolls claimed for the use of it were before the time of legal memory in the same hands though severed since, it was presumed that the soil was originally dedicated to the public in consideration of the tolls, and the toll-traverse was supported (Pelham v. Pickersgill, 1 T. R. 660; Brecon Co. v. Neath Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 567).

Toll-thorough is a toll for passing over the public highway. And where a prescription against public right is claimed a consideration must be proved (Nottingham v. Lambert, Willes, 111; Brett v. Beales, 10 B. & C. 508; Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 692; 1 T. R. 660). See further as to the distinction between toll-thorough and toll-traverse, Brecon Co. v. Neath Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 555; 8 C. P. 157.

A right of distress is incident to every toll (Bac. Abr. Distress, F. pl. 6), but it cannot be sold, except in the case of turnpike tolls under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 39. Tolls may be recovered in assumpsit, without proving a contract by the defendant; and stallage, which is a satisfaction to the owner of the soil for the liberty of placing a stall upon it, may be recovered in the same way (Newport v. Saunders, 3 B. & Ad. 411). The exemption from toll may also be claimed by prescription or by the King's grant (4 Inst. 252; 1 H. Bl. 206; London v. Linn Regis, 4 T. R. 130; 1 Bos. & P. 512; 7 Br. P. C. 126; Truro v. Reynolds, 8 Bing. 275; Middleton v. Lambert, 1 Ad. & Ell. 401). The citizens or burgesses of a city, borough, &c., may prescribe to be quit of tolls (F. N. B. 226, I.; 1 H. Bl. 206; Com. Dig. Toll (G. 1). As to whether inhabitants of a place may prescribe to be quit of toll, see Baker v. Brereman, Cro. Car. 418; recognised, 6 Q. B. 63. Port or anchorage tolls may be claimed by prescription (Foreman v. Whitstable, L. R. 4 H. L. 266).

What cannot be claimed by prescription.

No prescriptive right can be acquired to justify a public nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Barnsley (1874), W. N. 37; see Brown v. Russell, L. R. 3 Q. B. 251; Mumford v. Oxford, &c., Ry. Co., 1 H. & N. 34; Mott v. Shoolbred, 20 Eq. 24; Butterworth v. West Riding, [1909] A. C. 57). Nor can a claim be made by prescription to anything which could not have had a lawful beginning (Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 648). But it is not necessary that the thing should be legal through all the time of prescription (Millington v. Griffiths, 30 L. T. 65, 68; see Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 268). The jus spatiandi cannot be prescribed for (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 198). Nor by prescription at common law can an easement for a term of years be acquired (Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 65). Nor can a profit à prendre without stint be prescribed for as annexed to land (Harris v. Chesterfield, [1911] A. C. 623). Land cannot be claimed by prescription (Beauchamp v. Winn, L. R. 6 H. L. 238; see Brooke Prescription, 122; Vin. Abr. Pres. B. pl. 2; Dr. & St. dial. 1, c. 8; Finch, 132). The right to a given substratum of coal lying under a certain close is a right to land, and cannot be claimed by prescription. It is otherwise of a right to take coal in another man's land (Wilkinson v. Proud, 11 M. & W. 33; see Stoughton v. Leigh, 1 Taunt. 402). What arises by matter of record cannot be prescribed for, but must be claimed by grant, entered on record; such as, for instance, the royal franchises of deodands (which are now abolished by stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 62), felons' goods, and the like. These not being forfeited until the matter on which they arise is found by the inquisition of a jury, and so made a matter of record, the forfeiture itself cannot be claimed by an inferior title (Co. Litt. 114; 2 Bl. Comm. 265). A prescription for a right common to all the subjects of the realm cannot be supported (Pell v. Towers, Noy, 20; Br. Abr. Pres. pl. 71). One prescription cannot be prescribed against another prescription, for the one is as ancient as the other; as if a man prescribe for a way, light or other easement, another cannot prescribe for liberty to stop it when he pleases (Aldred's Case, 9 Rep. 58 b; 2 Mod. 105; Com. Dig. Prescription (F. 4)).

Persons by whom prescriptive rights can be claimed.

As regards the persons by whom prescriptive rights can be claimed, inasmuch as (generally speaking) every prescription supposes a grant (ante, p. 23), and as every grant supposes a capable grantee, prescriptive rights must be claimed by defined persons. Accordingly neither profits à prendre nor easements can be prescribed for by "inhabitants" (Fox v. Venables, Cro. Eliz. 180; Constable v. Nicholson, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 230, 32 L. J. C. P. 240; Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735). Nor can profits à prendre be prescribed for by "owners and occupiers" of ancient tenements in a manor (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98); or in a parish (Baylis v. Tyssen Amhurst, 6 Ch. D. 500); nor by "occupiers" of lands or houses (Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 551, 559; Austin v. Amhurst, 7 Ch. D. 689; Knight v. King, 20 L. T. 494); nor by "dwellers" in a manor (Allgood v. Gibson, 25 W. R. 60; 34 L. T. 583).

Persons against whom prescriptive rights can be claimed.

As regards the persons as against whom prescriptive rights can be claimed, the necessary grant supposing a capable grantor, this grantor must be an owner capable of disposing of the fee (Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 48; Rochdale Canal Co. v. Ratcliff, 18 Q. B. 315). And enjoyment as against an owner who cannot dispose of the fee is not sufficient (Roberts v. James, 89 L. T. 282; Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372).

Prescription against the Crown.

Formerly a prescription could not run against the King, as no delay in resorting to his remedy would bar his right. The maxim was nullum tempus occurrit regi (2 Inst. 273; 2 Roll. 264, l. 40; Com. Dig. Prescription (F. 1); Broom's Maxims, p. 61, 6th ed.). This rule, however, was subject to various exceptions (see Co. Litt. 114 a and b, and Hargrave's note, 119 a). Liberties and franchises were excepted in the Crown Suits Act, 1769, limiting the claims of the Crown to sixty years (see post, note on the limitation of the rights of the Crown). By 32 Geo. 3, c. 58, the Crown is barred in informations for usurping corporate offices or franchises by the lapse of six years (see Bac. Abr. 7th ed., Prerogative (E. 6), 467, and stat. 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 23; R. v. Harris, 11 Ad. & Ell. 518). By the Prescription Act, 1832, ss. 1, 2 (ante, pp. 1, 4), the Crown is placed upon the same footing with the subject as to the rights affected by those sections. Secus, as to the rights affected by sect. 3 (Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 658; Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 48).

General rules as to the

As regards the presumption of a grant. This presumption is necessary in all cases where a prescriptive right is claimed by prescription at common law or by a lost grant (see ante, p. 23). A presumption is also necessary where profits à prendre or easements (other than light) are claimed under the Prescription Act, the claim being based on user for the shorter periods mentioned in sects. 1 and 2. As to whether the presumption is necessary as regards claims based on the longer periods mentioned in those sections, see Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Canal Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 260, 278; Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904], 1 K. B. 457; Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290. The presumption is not necessary in the case of a claim to light under sect. 3 of the Act (Tapling v. Jones, supra).

Where the claim is based on prescription at common law, the presumed grant must be an absolute one by an owner in fee to an owner in fee (Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 63; Kilgour v. Gaddes, [1904] 1 K. B. 466). It seems that the same rule applies where the claim is based on lost grant (Bright v. Walker, 1 Cr. M. & R. 211; Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 48; see, however, in England, Bright v. Walker, 1 Cr. M. & R. 201; East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 332; and in Ireland, Timmons v. Hewitt, 22 L. R. Ir. 627; Hannah v. Pollock, [1900] 2 I. R. 664). As to the character of the presumed grant where the claim is made under sect. 2 of the statute, see supra, p. 8.

Cases where Court has refused to presume grant.

In dealing with the presumption (where necessary) the Court has refused to presume a grant in the following cases, viz.:—

(1) Where the grant would have been contrary to a statute of a public nature. (Neaverson v. Peterborough Council, [1902] 1 Ch. 557; Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 268; Mill v. New Forest Commrs., 18 C. B. 60; Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 488; see Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294). As regards a statute of a private nature, a waiver may be presumed (Goldsmid v. G. E. Ry. Co., 25 Ch. D. 511; 9 A. C. 927; Att.-Gen. v. Grand Junction Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 516).

(2) Where it would have been inconsistent with a custom (Winstanley v. Lee, 2 Sw. 333; Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 667).

(3) Where the owner of the dominant tenement could not take by way of grant (National Manure Co. v. Donald, 4 H. & N. 8; 28 L. J. Ex. 185). See the rule that prescriptive rights can only be claimed by defined persons because there must be a capable grantee, ante, p. 30.

(4) Where the owner of the servient tenement could not make a grant, e.g. on the ground of ultra vires (Rochdale Canal Co. v. Ratcliffe, 18 Q. B. 315; Staffordshire Co. v. Birmingham Canal Co., L. R. 1 H. L. 287; Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., [1909] 1 Ch. 775), or on the ground of the deficiency of his estate, e.g. where he was a rector (Barker v. Richardson, 4 B. & Ald. 579), or a tenant for life (Roberts v. James, 89 L. T. 282), or a tenant for years (Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372), none of whom could make an absolute grant.

(5) Where the owner of the servient tenement was incapable of preventing the enjoyment (Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852; Bryant v. Lefever, 4 C. P. D. 173; Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349, 370).

(6) Where the owner of the servient tenement had no knowledge (actual or presumptive) of the enjoyment (see Ambler v. Gordon, [1905] 1 K. B. 424). The mere knowledge of a tenant of the servient owner is not sufficient (Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372). But if the enjoyment has been for a long time, it may be presumed the landlord was aware of it (Davies v. Stevens, 7 C. & P. 570; Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 507).

(7) Where the enjoyment was not as of right (Hannah v. Pollock, [1900] 2 I. R. 671), e.g. where it was per vim (Eaton v. Swansea Waterworks 17 Q. B. 267), or clam (Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557; Partridge v. Scott, 3 M. & W. 229), or precario

Prescription.

(Burrows v. Lang, [1901] 2 Ch. 502; but see Lewis v. Meredith, [1913] 1 Ch. 571). or where there was unity of possession (Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 706; Outram v. Maude, 17 Ch. D. 405; Damper v. Bassett, [1901] 2 Ch. 354).

Enjoyment under a mistake may be enjoyment as of right (De La Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 535; Dawson v. MacGroggan, [1903] 1 I. R. 92; see contra; Rivers v. Adams, 3 Ex. D. 361; Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 301; Chamber Co. v. Hopwood, 32 Ch. D. 549.

(8) Where the enjoyment was capable of other explanation (Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 698; Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 199; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 216; [1903] A. C. 240), e.g. as being an extension of rights expressly granted by a document in evidence (Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 14 Q. B. D. 258; Sheringham v. Holsey, [1904] W. N. 83). The doctrine of lost grant applies only where the enjoyment cannot otherwise reasonably be accounted for (Lyell v. Hothfield, [1914] 3 K. B. 911). See Penryn v. Best, 3 Ex. D. 297, 299. And compare R. v. Hudson, Strange, 909; Labrador Co. v. R., [1893] A. C. 104; and Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 69, where it was said that prescription at common law is not maintainable where we know the whole truth. A claim to a prescriptive right may be defeated by showing the origin of the user, and that it is not in accordance with the right claimed (Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 19 Eq. 155; see Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 135).

Effect of ancient grant.

An ancient grant without date did not necessarily defeat a claim to a prescriptive right; for it might be either before time of memory, or in confirmation of such prescriptive right, which is matter to be left to a jury (Addington v. Clode, 2 Bl. Rep. 989); but if the ancient grant is clearly not antecedent to the time of legal memory it will disprove immemorial prescription (Welcome v. Upton, 5 M. & W. 398; see R. v. Westmark, 2 M. & Rob. 305). Where a bishop, having free warren by prescription over the demesne and tenanted lands of a manor whereof he was seised jure ecclesiæ, accepted a grant from the Crown to himself and his successors of free warren over the demesne lands of all his manors in England: it was held that, even admitting the grant to have the effect of extinguishing the prescription as to the demesne lands (which the court considered to be at least doubtful), it could not affect it over the other lands of the manor (Carnarvon v. Villebois, 13 M. & W. 313).

Statutes in relation to prescription and custom.

A man cannot prescribe, or allege a custom, against a statute of a public nature, because it is the highest matter of record in law, unless the custom or prescription be saved or preserved by another Act (Co. Litt. 115; see Noble v. Durell, 2 T. R. 271; Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 488; Butterworth v. West Riding, [1909] A. C. 57). Lord Coke makes a difference between statutes in the negative and in the affirmative; for a statute in the affirmative without any negative, express or implied, does not take away the common law; likewise between statutes that are in the negative, for if a statute in the negative be declarative of the ancient law, a man may prescribe or allege a custom against it, as he may against a common law (Harg. Co. Litt. 115 a, n. (15)). But the benefit of a statute of a private nature may be waived, and the waiver may be presumed (Goldsmid v. G. E. Ry. Co., 25 Ch. D. 511; 9 App. Cas. 927; Att.-Gen. v. Grand Junction Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 516). An ancient custom may be destroyed by the express provisions of a statute or by positive language inconsistent with the existence of the custom (Merchant Taylors' Co. v. Truscott, 11 Exch. 855; Salters' Co. v. Jay, 3 Q. B. 109). But where a statute making an act illegal comes into force while a prescription is running, the prescription, after the proper period, may be an answer to one suing as an individual (Millington v. Griffiths, 30 L. T. 65). Where a statute has "embraced and confirmed" a right which had previously existed by custom or prescription, that right becomes thenceforward a statutory right. The lower title by custom or prescription is merged in and extinguished by the higher title derived from the statute (New Windsor v. Taylor [1899] A. C. 49). A permanent right to take tolls based on prescription was held to have merged in and been extinguished by statutes temporary in their operation (Ib.). As to the effect of statutes in confirming customs, see London v. Cox, L. R. 2 H. L. 257; Wake v. Hall, 8 A. C. 198. Easements are sometimes extinguished by the express words of a statute, e.g. the Inclosure Acts, 1801 and 1845 (see Turner v. Crush, 4 App. Cas. 221), or by necessary implication from a statute (Yarmouth v. Simmons, 10 Ch. D. 518).

How prescriptive rights may be destroyed.

By the common law a man might have prescribed for a right which had been enjoyed by his ancestors or predecessors at any distance of time, though his or their enjoyment of it had been suspended for an indefinite series of years. But by the Statute of Limitations (32 Hen. 8, c. 2) it is enacted that no person shall make any prescription by the seisin or possession of his ancestor or predecessor, unless such seisin or possession had been within threescore years next before such prescription made (2 Bl. Comm. 263, 264). And the remedy for such rights, so far as it depended upon real actions, was further abridged by the abolition of real actions (R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 36, post). It was said by Lord Redesdale that where a profit of any kind to be taken out of lands has not been taken for a vast number of years, and the lands have been enjoyed without yielding such profit to a third person, the consequence is, that the title to it, whatever its nature, shall be presumed to be discharged (Norbury v. Meade, 3 Bligh, 245). But in Neill v. Devonshire (8 App. Cas. 135), it was said that an incorporeal hereditament such as a several fishery, which can only pass by deed, cannot be abandoned.

A title gained by prescription or custom is not lost by mere interruption of possession for ten or twenty years, unless there be an interruption of the right, as by unity of possession of right of common and the land charged therewith in respect of an estate equally high and perdurable in both (Co. Litt. 114 b). A unity of possession merely suspends; there must be a unity of ownership to destroy a prescriptive right (Canham v. Fisk, 2 Cr. & Jerv. 126). Thus, if a person having a right of common by prescription takes a lease of the land for twenty years, whereby the common is suspended, he may, after the determination of the lease, claim the common again by prescription; for the suspension was only of the enjoyment, not of the right (Co. Litt. 113 b). Easements are extinguished by the union of seisin of the dominant and servient tenements in the same person (James v. Plant, 4 Ad. & El. 749). They are also extinguished when the purpose for which they were created no longer exists (National Manure Co. v. Donald, 4 H. & N. 8). A prescriptive right may be lost by the destruction of the subject-matter (4 Rep. 88); but not by an alteration of the quality of the thing to which a prescription is annexed (Hob. 39; 4 Rep. 86 a, 87 a). Alterations in the dominant tenement will sometimes extinguish an easement (Allan v. Gomme, 11 Ad. & El. 772). The release of an easement may be implied from abandonment or non-user (Cook v. Bath, 6 Eq. 177). It was said that a release of a right of way, or of a right of common, will not be presumed by mere non-user for a less period than twenty years, although it is otherwise as to lights (Moore v. Rawson, 3 B. & C. 339). But "it is not so much the duration of the cesser, as the nature of the act done by the grantee of the easement or of the adverse act acquiesced in by him, and the intention in him which either the one or the other indicates, which are material" (R. v.

Prescription.

Chorley, 12 Q. B. 519: see Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 482; Ecclesiastical Commrs. v. Kino, 14 Ch. D. 213; James v. Stevenson, [1893] A. C. 162; Swan v. Sinclair, [1925] A. C. 227). The right to hold Courts for the determination of civil suits, granted by the King's charter to the steward and suitors of a court of ancient demesne, was held not to be lost by a non-user of fifty years (R. v. Havering, 5 B. & Ald. 691; R. v. Hastings, Id. 692, n.). An unlicensed change of days for holding fairs may forfeit the charter (Newcastle v. Worksop Council, [1902] 2 Ch. 145; where see as to losing the right to fair tolls).

C. Custom.

Custom is also referred to in the above Act as a ground on which the claims mentioned in sects. 1 and 2 can be made. Customs (as distinguished from usages, p. 40, post) may be copyhold or non-copyhold. This note deals mainly with the latter, and copyhold and customary tenure were abolished as from January 1, 1926, by the Law of Property Act, 1922, Part V.

Non-copyhold Customs.

Nature of custom: it differs from prescription.

The nature of custom and its difference from prescription was thus expressed by Tindal, C.J.:—"A custom which has existed from time immemorial without interruption within a certain place, and which is certain and reasonable in itself, obtains the force of law, and is in effect the common law within that place to which it extends, though contrary to the general law of the realm. In the case of a custom, therefore, it is unnecessary to look for its origin; but, in the case of prescription, which founds itself upon the presumption of a grant that has been lost by process of time, no prescription can have had a legal origin where no grant could have been made to support it. Thus a custom for all fishermen within a certain district to dry their nets upon the land of another might well be a good custom, as it was held in 5 Co. 84 [qu. 3 Lev. 160]; and yet a grant of such an easement to fishermen within the district eo nomine might well be held to be void" (Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 64, 65; see Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 654; Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 414).

The difference between custom and prescription, said Farwell, J., in Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 556 (referring to claims to incorporeal hereditaments), "is only that the right to the former must be claimed by or in respect of a locality, and to the latter by a person or corporation. See Co. Litt. 113 b, where it is laid down that prescription is personal while custom is local, alleged in no person but laid within some place." The difference between custom and prescription lies in the mode of claim. Where the claimant has a weak and temporary estate, he cannot claim in his own right, but must have recourse either to the place, and allege a custom there. Or if he prescribes in the que estate, it must be under cover of the tenant in fee (Bean v. Bloom, 2 Bl. R. 928; S. C., 3 Wils. 456; Sharp v. Lowther, Cas. temp. Hard. 293; Linn Regis v. Taylor, 3 Lev. 160). In other words, a prescriptive right must be claimed by a defined person. While a customary right can be claimed by undefined persons or a fluctuating class, such as "inhabitants": the claim in the latter case being made in respect of some district, but not in respect of any defined dominant tenement within that district.

Nature of rights claim

The Prescription Act deals with profits à prendre and easements, and mentions custom in connection with each of these subject-matters. As regards profits à prendre claimed on the ground of non-copyhold custom, the general rule is that a profit à prendre in another's soil cannot be claimed by custom (Blewitt v. Tregonning, 3 Ad. & E. 534; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 163). For if it could, the claim by custom being for an indefinite number of people, the subject of the profit à prendre would be liable to be entirely destroyed (Race v. Ward, 4 E. & B. 705; Bland v. Lipscombe, ibid., 713). And there could be no release of such a right (Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 655; Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 K. & J. 591). Thus the Courts refused to admit a claim by custom to profits à prendre for "inhabitants" (Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735; Mitcham Conservators v. Banks, 76 J. P. 413). In trespass for taking stones, &c., from the seashore, defendant pleaded a custom in the inhabitants of a township of which he was a member, and also a prescriptive right for the inhabitants and overseers of highways to take such stones. Such a custom was held bad, being a profit à prendre in alieno solo; and the overseers and inhabitants, not being a corporation, were not capable of taking by grant, and therefore could not claim by prescription (Constable v. Nicholson, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 230; Pitts v. Kingsbridge Board, 19 W. R. 884; Hough v. Clark, 23 T. L. R. 682). A claim, however, by "inhabitants" of tenements in a borough to the privilege of oyster dredging within a fishery which had been acquired by prescription by the borough corporation was supported by presuming a grant to the corporation subject to a trust (in the nature of a charitable trust) in favour of the inhabitants; Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 633; see the charitable trusts held to exist in Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, [1893] A. C. 1; Wilson v. Barnes, 38 Ch. D. 507. Compare the right of fishing vested in a corporation in trust for its members (Re Free Fishermen of Faversham, 36 Ch. D. 329); the case of a manor (including the right of sporting) vested in trustees for individual copyholders (Hutchinson v. Morritt, 3 Y. & C. 547); and the case where a vestry had during a long period let the grazing on a highway, and a lawful origin was found by presuming a grant to a trustee for the parish (Haigh v. West, [1893], 2 Q. B. 19; see Eliot v. Bristol, 71 L. T. 659). A Crown grant to the inhabitants of a parish to take profits à prendre out of a royal manor is valid, the effect being to incorporate the inhabitants for the purpose (Willingale v. Maitland, 3 Eq. 103). Such a grant may be presumed from user: but not if the presumption is inconsistent with the past and existing state of things and there is no trace of such a corporation having existed (Rivers v. Adams, 3 Ex. D. 361). In the case of such a grant an action is maintainable only by the inhabitants as a corporation (Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735).

Rule that profits à prendre in another's soil cannot be claimed by custom.

Exceptions to the rule that a profit à prendre in another's soil cannot be claimed by custom occur in (1) certain mining customs as to tin mining in Cornwall (Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 26; see Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 K. & J. 591) and lead mining in Derbyshire (Wake v. Hall, 8 App. Cas. 198; Wake v. Redfern, 43 L. T. 123; Ex p. Young, ib. 725), and in (2) copyhold customs entitling copyholders to rights of common in the waste of a manor; as to which see post, p. 44.

Exceptions to rule.

Rights in the nature of easements may be claimed by a fluctuating class of persons (such as the "inhabitants" of a parish) on the ground of non-copyhold custom (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 348). Thus a right of way may be so claimed (Grimstead v. Marlow, 4 T. R. 713). The "inhabitants" of a town cannot by that name and description prescribe for an easement in alieno solo; where such a claim has been allowed, it will be found to have been invariably rested on the ground of custom, and not of prescription (Fox v.

Rights in nature of easements.

Custom.

Venables, Cro. Eliz. 180; Day v. Savadge, Hob. 85, 5th edit.; Gateward's case, 6 Rep. 59 b; S. C., as Smith v. Gateward, Cro. Jac. 152; Baker v. Brereman, Cro. Car. 418; Fitch v. Rawling, 2 H. Bl. 393; see Att.-Gen. v. Acton, 22 Ch. D. 228).

Instances of non-copyhold customs.

The following are instances of non-copyhold customs under which rights in the nature of easements have been established: A custom for the inhabitants of a township to enter on land within the township and take water from a spring there (Race v. Ward, 4 E. & B. 702; 24 L. J. Q. B. 153; Harrop v. Hirst, L. R. 4 Ex. 43; Smith v. Archibald, 5 A. C. 512; Goodday v. Mitchell, Cro. Eliz. 441. See as to enforcing such a custom, Stoke Council v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277). A custom for tin-bounders inhabiting Cornwall to use for the purpose of mining the water in their district (Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732; see Ivimey v. Stocker, 1 Ch. 409; Bastard v. Smith, 2 M. & Rob. 129); or for the same purpose to discharge rubbish into a stream (Carlyon v. Lovering, 1 H. & N. 781). A custom for the inhabitants of a parish to have a churchway over land within the parish forming the demesne of a manor (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 344). A custom for parishioners to perambulate parish boundaries (Taylor v. Devey, 7 Ad. & Ell. 409; Grant v. Kearney, 12 Price, 773). A custom for the inhabitants of a town to use for recreation a promenade in the town (Abercromby v. Fermoy, [1900] 1 I. R. 302; see Dyce v. Hay, 1 Macq. 305). A custom for the inhabitants of a single parish to enter on land in the parish and dance there, or play any lawful game, or enjoy any lawful recreation at any time in the year, is good (Hall v. Nottingham, L. R. 1 Ex. D. 1; Warrick v. Queen's College, 10 Eq. 129). Such a custom cannot be claimed for the inhabitants of several parishes (Edwards v. Jenkins, [1896] 1 Ch. 313). A custom for the inhabitants of a parish to train horses at all seasonable times of the year on land within the parish might be good; but not where the training ground was outside the parish (Sowerby v. Coleman, L. R. 2 Ex. 99). A custom, however, for the freemen of a city to hold horse-races on a certain day in the year outside the city was held good (Mounsey v. Ismay, 1 H. & C. 729; 32 L. J. Ex. 94). A custom for any liege subject of the Queen, being a victualler, to enter, during a fair, within a certain borough, on land within the borough, and for the convenient carrying on of his trade to erect there booths, paying reasonable compensation to the owner of the soil, was good (Elwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383; Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & Ell. 406). A custom for the inhabitants of a seaside town to place chairs on the shore was held not proved (Ramsgate v. Debling, 22 T. L. R. 369). A custom for the fishermen in a seaside parish to dry their nets on land within the parish, at all times seasonable for fishing, was good (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 538). A custom for the fishermen of a particular locality to deposit oysters on the foreshore might be good (Truro v. Rowe, [1901] 2 K. B. 870); but was not supported by evidence ([1902] 2 K. B. 709). A custom for navigators frequenting a particular part of the coast to fix moorings there might be good (Att.-Gen. v. Wright, [1897] 2 Q. B. 321).

Non-copyhold custom can only apply to limited class, and limited district.

Non-copyhold customs conferring rights in the nature of easements can only be claimed for a limited class of persons, not the public generally (Coventry v. Wills, 12 W. R. 128; Bourke v. Davis, 44 Ch. D. 120; Dungarvan v. Mansfield, [1897] 1 I. R. 420; De Morgan v. Metropolitan Board, 5 Q. B. D. 155), and must be claimed for some definite district known to the law (Co. Litt. 110 b.; Edwards v. Jenkins, [1896] 1 Ch. 313; Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 353). It has been said that there cannot be a custom in one place to do something in another (R. v. Ecclesfield, 1 B. & Ald. 360; Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 354; but see Mounsey v. Ismay, 1 H. & C. 729). Land added by accretion to other land becomes subject to customs affecting the latter (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 560).

Construed strictly.

Customs are not to be enlarged beyond the usage, but must be construed strictly (Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 57; Arthur v. Bokenham, 11 Mod. 160; Fitzgib. 243).

Relation of custom to the common law.

Custom, said Jessel, M.R., referring to non-copyhold custom, is local common law. It is common law because it is not statute law. It is local law because it is the law of a particular place as distinguished from the general common law (Hammerton v. Honey, 24 W. R. 603). As to the relation of custom to statute, see ante, p. 32. As to its relation to the common law, it is of the very essence of a custom that it should vary from the common law (Horton v. Beckman, 6 T. R. 764; Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 64; Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 311).

What customs are valid.

But to give validity to a custom, it must be certain, reasonable in itself, commencing from time immemorial and continued without interruption (Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & Ell. 421, Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 551); rules which relate to the evidence of a custom (Hammerton v. Honey, supra).

Rules of evidence.

A custom must be certain.

A custom accordingly must be certain (Baylis v. Tyssen Amhurst, 6 Ch. D. 509; Champneys v. Buchan, 4 Drew. 116). A custom is not uncertain because it is not invariable in every part. Thus, the number of persons entitled to enjoy it will vary (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 552). So a custom to play games is not uncertain if it be extended to new games (ibid. 553); or a custom to dry nets, if it be extended to a new process of drying (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 581). For general customs may be extended to new things which are within the reason of those customs (London v. Vanacre, 12 Mod. 270). Nor is a custom uncertain because its area varies by accretions or recessions of the sea (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 584). Compare with the above rule as to certainty, the certainty required where profits à prendre were claimed by copyholders on the ground of custom (Peppin v. Shakespear, 6 T. R. 743; Wilson v. Willes, 7 East, 121); or by freeholders on the ground of prescription (Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q. B. 415; Att.-Gen. v. Matthias, 4 K. & J. 592).

Reasonable.

Again, a custom must be reasonable. Customs, especially where they derogate from the general rights of property, must be construed strictly, and above all things they must be reasonable (Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 57). This rule has been explained as meaning in effect that to be valid a custom must be consistent with the general principles underlying the common law (Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 311). A custom which is for the advantage of an industry or trade may be good, although it bears hardly on the individual. While, on the other hand, a custom which is for the advantage of the individual only, and is prejudicial to the public or a class of the public, is bad. For the common law in principle imposes obligations on the individual for the benefit of the public, and not on the public for the benefit of the individual (ibid.).

"It belongs to the judges of the land to determine whether a custom is reasonable or not. A custom is not unreasonable merely because it is contrary to a particular maxim or rule of the common law, for consuetudo ex certâ causâ rationabili usitata privat communem legem (Co. Litt. 113 a), as the custom of gavelkind and borough-English, which are directly contrary to the law of descent; or, again, the custom of Kent, which is contrary to the law of escheats. Nor is a custom unreasonable because it is prejudicial to the interests of a private man, if it be for the benefit of the commonwealth, as the custom to turn the plough upon the headland of another, in favour of husbandry, or to dry nets on the land of another, in favour of fishing and for the benefit of navigation. But, on the other hand, a custom that is contrary to the public good, or injurious or prejudicial to the many, and beneficial only to some particular person is repugnant to the law of reason; for it could not have had a reasonable commencement; as a custom set up in a manor, on the part of the lord, that the commoner cannot turn in his cattle until the lord has put in his own, is clearly bad; for it is injurious to the multitude, and beneficial only to the lord (Year B. Trin. 2 H. 4, fol. 24, B. pl. 20). So a custom that the lord of the manor shall have £3 for every pound breach of any stranger (21 H. 4 (a)); or that the lord of the manor may detain a distress taken upon his demesnes until fine be made for the damage, at the lord's will (Litt. s. 212)." (Per Tindal, C.J., Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & Ell. 421.) The Judges accordingly as trained lawyers determine whether a custom is reasonable (Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 311, 316; Tyson v. Smith, supra; compare Bradburn v. Foley, 3 C. P. D. 135; Re Walkers & Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 159; cases of usage). The Judges will not admit mere usage to establish what they think unreasonable (Hammerton v. Honey, 24 W. R. 603). And if they think an alleged custom unreasonable they in effect hold that the usage though immemorial must have resulted from accident or negligence and not from any right conferred (Salisbury v. Gladstone, 9 H. L. C. 701). The time for ascertaining whether a custom is reasonable in its inception (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 557; Mounsey v. Ismay, 32 L. J. Ex. 96; Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 306).

As instances of the rule as to reasonableness, a custom for the fishermen in a parish to dry their nets on land within the parish, was reasonable (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 552). But a custom for tin bounders in Cornwall to preserve their rights by mere annual renewals without working was unreasonable (Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 57); as was a custom for any person to take rabbits on the waste of a manor (Coote v. Ford, 83 L. T. 482).

Again, the custom must have commenced from time immemorial, i.e., from the reign of Richard I. But this rule will not render a custom bad, unless the impossibility of its having existed in that reign be demonstrated (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 555). A custom to erect stalls for hiring servants at statute sessions was held bad, statute sessions having been introduced by the Statutes of Labourers, the first of which was in the reign of Edward III. (Simpson v. Wells, L. R. 7 Q. B. 214). A custom is usually proved by evidence extending over at least half a century (Hammerton v. Honey, 24 W. R. 604). But a regular usage for twenty years unexplained and uncontradicted may suffice to support an immemorial custom (R. v. Jolliffe, 2 B. & C. 54). And from such modern usage, unless the contrary appear, the immemorial existence of the right ought to be presumed (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 350).

Lastly, a custom must have been continued without interruption (Hammerton v. Honey, 24 W. R. 603). But mere discontinuance of user will not amount to interruption (Scales v. Key, 11 Ad. & Ell. 823). There must be an interruption of the right as well as the possession (Co. Litt. 114 b; Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 556). And there may be an intermittent customary right (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 571).

Enjoyment must be as of right.

As regards the nature of this continuous user. It was laid down by Willes, J., that in the case of custom, long enjoyment in order to establish a right must have been as of right, and therefore neither by violence nor by stealth, nor by leave asked from time to time (Mills v. Colchester, L. R. 2 C. P. 486; see Montgomery v. Wallace James, [1904] A. C. 82). Compare the rule as to the user on which prescriptive rights must be founded, ante, pp. 9, 10.

The Prescription Act mentions custom as well as prescription as a mode of claiming incorporeal hereditaments, both in the case of profits à prendre (sect. 1) and in the case of easements (sect. 2). Sect. 5, however, refers to "the tenement in respect whereof the right is claimed," while it will be remembered that a claim by custom is made in respect of some district, but not in respect of any defined dominant tenement within that district. Notwithstanding the above words in sect. 5, it was at first suggested that rights not annexed to a defined dominant tenement might still be claimed under the statute, as being within the equity of it (Welcome v. Upton, 5 M. & W. 404; 6 M. & W. 542; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 81; see 2 Wms. Saund. 515). The words in sect. 5, however, led the Courts to decide that such claims could not be made under the statute, either in the case of profits à prendre in gross (Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687; 34 L. J. C. P. 309; Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 664), or in the case of rights in the nature of easements based on custom (Mounsey v. Ismay, 3 H. & C. 486; 34 L. J. Ex. 52). These decisions were followed where a customary right for the fishermen of a district to dry their nets on the shore was attempted to be claimed under the statute (Mercer v. Denne, [1904] 2 Ch. 540, 555; see Ramsgate v. Debling, 22 T. L. R. 369). In the Court of Appeal, a different view of the statute was raised, but the point not decided ([1905] 2 Ch. 574, 586).

Method of claiming customary rights in the nature of incorporeal hereditaments.

Customary rights accordingly cannot be claimed under the statute. They are claimed by a method analogous to common law prescription, upon proof of immemorial enjoyment as of right (Montgomery v. Wallace James, [1904] A. C. 81).

Custom being local law cannot be got rid of except by statute (Hammerton v. Honey, 25 W. R. 604; see Scales v. Key, 11 Ad. & Ell. 822). Customary rights can be extinguished by the express words of a statute (Salters' Co. v. Truscott, 11 Exch. 855); or through being embraced and confirmed by a statute, in which case they become statutory rights (New Windsor v. Taylor, [1899] A. C. 49; see Wake v. Hall, 8 App. Cas. 195).

Extinguishment of customary rights.

Besides the above customs which establish the right to certain incorporeal hereditaments, other customs should be mentioned which are connected with the tenure of land; e.g. the customs of gavelkind and borough-English, abolished by sect. 45 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post, q.v. In the case of lands of burgage tenure, a custom for a married woman to dispose thereof with her husband's consent, but without separate examination, was held unreasonable and bad (Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 303). Again, there were customs connected with copyhold tenure. Thus a custom binding the copyhold tenants of a manor to repair their tenements was good (Blackmore v. White, [1899] 1 Q. B. 293). In Derry v. Sanders, [1919] 1 K. B. 223, it was held that long user of a right of way raised a presumption that a custom existed whereby a right of way could be acquired over land in a manor as appurtenant to other land in the manor, but that the right was extinguished on enfranchisement without a reservation of it. (Copyhold and customary tenures were abolished by the Law of Property Act, 1922, Part V.) Many other instances of copyhold customs will be found in the note on Rights of Common, post.

Customs connected with tenure of land.

Copyhold customs.

Again, in a wide sense of the word custom there are a number of miscellaneous rights which are mentioned in the books as customary rights. As, for instance, a custom obliging landowners to maintain sea frontages (L. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Fobbing, 66 L. J. Q. B. 27). (See as to lands enfranchised by the Law of Property Act, 1922, Part V., Sched. XII. (6) of that Act, and sect. 10, Class A (vi.) of the Land Charges Act, 1925, post.) township liable to repair highways within it (R. v. Ecclesfield, 1 B. & Ald. 360) or exempting it from contributing to repair highways without it (R. v. Barnardswick, 4 Q. B. 499; R. v. Rollett, L. R. 10 Q. B. 469). A custom as to marriage fees (Bryant v. Foot, L. R. 2 Q. B. 161, 171, 178), or the appointment of churchwardens (Bremner v. Hall, L. R. 1 C. P. 748; R. v. Green, 30 L. T. 255), or as to payment of church rates (R. v. Dalby, 3 Q. B. 602), or as to paying to a corporation duties on imported coal (Jenkins v. Harvey, 1 C. M. & R. 877). A custom binding the parson as owner of great tithes to keep a bull and boar for the use of parishioners is mentioned in Lanchbury v. Bode, [1898] 2 Ch. 120.

Usages.

All the customs referred to above must be distinguished from usages which are imported into mercantile contracts or into contracts between landlord and tenant. Such usages need not be immemorial (Crouch v. Crédit Foncier, L. R. 8 Q. B. 386). But they must be reasonable (Gibbon v. Pease, [1905] 1 K. B. 810) and certain (Re Walkers & Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 159). Their reasonableness is a question of law for the Court, not of fact for the jury (Bradburn v. Foley, 3 C. P. D. 135, compare Re Walkers & Co., [1904] 2 K. B. 159). It seems that mercantile usage cannot prevail against positive law (Goodwin v. Robartes, L. R. 10 Ex. 357). Modern usages between landlord and tenant were discussed in Bradburn v. Foley, supra; Tucker v. Linger, 8 A. C. 508. A modern usage as to cutting timber was considered in construing a will and as between persons claiming under the will rendered that not waste which would have been waste between others (Dashwood v. Magniac, [1891] 3 Ch. 350). As to the above modern usages, see further Wigglesworth v. Dallison, 1 Sm. L. C.

D. Of Grants, Express and Implied, of Incorporeal Rights; and herein of Licences in Relation to Real Estate.

The title to incorporeal rights may arise by grant, whether express or implied.

As regards implied grants of easements, see the decisions in the case of ways, p. 79, post; water, p. 94, post; and light, p. 120, post.

Creation by express grant.

As regards express grants, sect. 62 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881 (repealed and not re-enacted by the Law of Property Act, 1925), provided that easements might be granted by way of use; and by sect. 51, sub-sect. 2 of the latter Act, post, the word "grant" is not necessary to convey land or to create any interest therein. Any words which show the intention to give an easement which is by law grantable are sufficient to effect that purpose (North British Ry. v. Park Yard, [1898] A. C. 646). Thus a covenant may operate as a grant of an easement (Northam v. Hurly, 1 Ell. & Bl. 665).

Estate of grantor in the land:

With respect to the estate in the servient tenement which the grantor of the easement must possess at the date of the express grant, it has been held that an easement could not be granted by an executor who had no estate but only a power of sale (Re Barrow-in-Furness & Rawlinson, [1903] 1 Ch. 339), or by one who had only a right of entry under a building agreement (Quicke v. Chapman, [1903] 1 Ch. 659), or by an owner in fee who had previously contracted to sell the servient tenement (Beddington v. Atlee, 35 Ch. D. 317). And where at the time of the express grant of the easement, the grantor had only a term of years in the servient tenement, the grant did not bind the subsequently acquired fee (Booth v. Alcock, 8 Ch. 663).

With respect to the estate in the dominant tenement which the grantee of the easement must possess at the date of the express grant, it was said that no easement could be granted to one who at that date has no interest in the dominant tenement (Rymer v. McIlroy, [1897] 1 Ch. 532, 535; see North British Ry. v. Park Yard, [1898] A. C.

643). But where at that date A was yearly tenant of the dominant tenement, a grant of an easement "to A his heirs and assigns" enured for the benefit of the fee which A subsequently acquired (Rymer v. McIlroy, supra). Grants.

A right of way, or a right of passage for water (where it does not create an interest in land) is an incorporeal right or hereditament (see ante, p. 6), and stands upon the same footing as rights of common, rents, advowsons, &c. It lay not in livery, but in grant (Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 229; see Hastings v. N. E. Ry., [1898] 2 Ch. 674; see now the Law of Property Act, 1925, s. 51, post.) According to the older cases at common law a deed was necessary to create either a freehold interest in an incorporeal right (Hewlins v. Shippam, supra; Blanchard v. Blanchard, 1 Ad. & E. 536), or a leasehold interest (Somerset v. Fogwell, 5 B. & C. 875, a case of a several fishery; Bird v. Higginson, 6 Ad. & E. 824, a right of sporting; Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 843). In accordance with this doctrine, it was held at common law that an agreement, otherwise than by deed, for an incorporeal right, was merely a parol licence revocable at will, though valuable consideration had been given or expense incurred (Fentiman v. Smith, 8 East, 107; Cocker v. Cowper, 1 C. M. & R. 418; Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 298; Adams v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 284; see R. v. Hornden-on-the-Hill, 4 M. & S. 565; Thomas v. Fredericks, 10 Q. B. 775; Smart v. Jones, 33 L. J. C. P. 154. But see now Hurst v. Picture Theatres, [1915] 1 K. B. 1). Necessity of a deed to pass incorporeal rights. Effect of an agreement not under seal; older cases at common law;

It has, however, been laid down more recently that an agreement for valuable consideration, though not under seal, is sufficient to create a right to an easement, and for the purpose of creating a lawful user is as good as a deed (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 765, 782; see May v. Belleville, [1905] 2 Ch. 605). And see the earlier cases in equity, where it was held that a parol licence for an easement was irrevocable where expense had been incurred, and there had been acquiescence (Devonshire v. Eglin, 14 Beav. 530; Moreland v. Richardson, 22 Beav. 596; Mold v. Wheatcroft, 27 Beav. 510; Laird v. Birkenhead Co., Joh. 500; Newby v. Harrison, 1 J. & H. 393; Bankart v. Tennant, 10 Eq. 141; Carr v. Benson, 3 Ch. 524). The decision in Walsh v. Lonsdale (21 Ch. D. 9) may have altered the earlier law in relation to agreements as to sporting rights (Lowe v. Adams, [1901] 2 Ch. 600). Such rights passed in Ireland under an agreement not sealed (Radcliff v. Hayes, [1907] 1 I. R. 101). A verbal agreement for an easement may be enforced where there has been part performance (McManus v. Cooke, 35 Ch. D. 681; cf. Grand Hotel v. White, 84 L. J. Ch. 938). In a case, however, where there was no writing and no part performance, sect. 4 of the Statute of Frauds prevented the recovery of damages for breach of a verbal agreement giving the right to shoot over land and take away game, such right being treated as real estate (Webber v. Lee, 9 Q. B. D. 315). recent cases

Easements may be created by statute, e.g., support (L. N. W. Ry. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 16). As to light see Boyce v. Paddington, [1903] 1 Ch. 115. As to right of way, see post, p. 81. Under the L. C. C. Acts alone no railway company could purchase an easement (Re Barrow-in-Furness and Rawlinson, [1903] 1 Ch. 350); but in special cases rights in the nature of statutory easements can be acquired (Hill v. Midland Co., 21 Ch. D. 143; G. W. Ry. v. Swindon Co., 22 Ch. D. 707; 9 A. C. 802). Creation by statute.

Licences in relation to Real Estate.

As regards licences generally in relation to real estate: "A dispensation or licence properly passeth no interest, nor alters or transfers property in anything, but only makes an action lawful Nature of a licence.

Licences.

which, without it, would have been unlawful" (Thomas v. Sorrell, Vaughan, 351). A licence authorising the commission of an act illegal by statute was held void (Edwick v. Hawkes, 18 Ch. D. 199). A personal licence, as to enter a house to seize goods, is not assignable (Re Davis, Ex parte Rawlins, 22 Q. B. D. 193; see Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B. 164). A personal licence of pleasure cannot be exercised with or by servants; secus, in the case of a licence of profit (Norfolk v. Wiseman, cited 7 M. & W. 77). As to the legal nature of the rights conferred by a railway passenger's ticket, see Butler v. Manchester S. & L. Ry. Co., 21 Q. B. D. 207.

Grant of licence: express;

A licence to be binding on a third party must be by deed, as in the case of a licence to use a common (Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Wms. Saund. 728, and n. 12; Shep. Touch. 330; Monk v. Butler, Cro. Jac. 574; see Perry v. Fitzhowe, 8 Q. B. 757; Ramsey v. Rawson, 1 Vent. 18—25); or a licence to a former tenant to enter to remove chattels after a new tenant is in possession (Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B. 574). But as against the licensor a parol licence is an excuse for a trespass until countermanded (Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 232; Cornish v. Stubbs, L. R. 5 C. P. 339). A parol agreement which is void under sect. 4 of the Statute of Frauds may operate as a licence (Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 257; Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602; compare Webber v. Lee, 9 Q. B. D. 315). As to parol licence by the Crown, see Harper v. Charlesworth, 4 B. & C. 590.

Where a party places goods of another upon his own close, he gives the owner an implied licence to enter for the purpose of recaption (Patrick v. Colerick, 3 M. & W. 483; Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 853); but no such licence will be implied to a purchaser of goods to enter the premises of the vendor to take them (Williams v. Morris, 8 M. & W. 488; see Wood v. Manley, 11 Ad. & Ell. 34).

Revocation of licences; executed licences to do acts on land of licensor,

As regards the revocation of licences, a mere licence which is not coupled with a grant, and which has not been executed, was revocable whether under seal or not (Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 845). But since the Judicature Acts Wood v. Leadbitter, is no longer law (Hurst v. Picture Theatres, [1915] 1 K. B. 1). Even where the licence had been executed and expense incurred by the licensee, according to the older cases at common law a parol licence to do an act on the land of the licensor was revocable (R. v. Hornden-on-the-Hill, 4 M. & S. 565; see Plimmer v. Wellington, 9 App. Cas. 699; Islington v. Hornsey, [1900] 1 Ch. 695: it should be observed, however, that under such circumstances there might be a contract for breach of which, if the licence were revoked, damages might be recovered, see Kerrison v. Smith, [1897] 2 Q B. 445). In equity a licence to do acts on the land of the licensor might, where expense had been incurred by the licensee, be held irrevocable (Devonshire v. Eglin, 14 Beav. 530, and other cases quoted ante, p. 41; Plimmer v. Wellington, 9 App. Cas. 699; Civil Service Association v. Whiteman, 68 L. J. Ch. 484; compare Ramsden v. Dyson, L. R. 1 H. L. 129; Edwards v. Summerton, [1899] W. N. 120; and as to the Crown, Att.-Gen. to Prince of Wales v. Collom, [1916] 2 K. B. 193.

on land of licensee;

As regards acts on the land of the licensee, licences for these acts were, in the older common law cases, distinguished from licences for acts on the land of the licensor (see notes to Coryton v. Lithebye, 2 Wms. Saund. 363). And where a parol licence for acts of the former nature had been given which involved expenditure by the licensee, and the work had been executed, it was held that the licensor could not revoke the licence, and require the status quo ante to be restored; at least, not without tendering the expenditure licence coupled with a grant;

Again, where a parol licence was coupled with a grant of something capable of being granted by parol, it was irrevocable (Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 845). So a licence to dig for tin and to dispose of the tin was irrevocable as carrying an interest in the ore (Doe v. Wood, 2 B. & Ald. 738; see Northam v. Bowden, 11 Exch. 70; Jones v. Tankerville, [1909] W. N. 171). So, also, where there was an agreement in writing to let, for one year, a shooting, with the right to the game shot, and the letting was continued by parol for some years, the right was not a licence revocable at will, although it was validly determined by a month's notice terminating at the end of a year (Lowe v. Adams, [1901] 2 Ch. 598; Radcliff v. Hayes, [1907] 1 I. R. 101; compare Wilson v. Tavener, [1901] 1 Ch. 578; and see the cases as to profits à prendre, ante, p. 3. Where by the conditions of sale of goods the buyer was to be allowed to enter to take them, the licence could not, after sale, be revoked, but could be executed even by force (Wood v. Manley, 11 Ad. & Ell. 34; see Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 853).

The locking a gate is sufficient notice of revocation of a parol licence to pass through it (Hyde v. Graham, 1 H. & C. 593; see Russell v. Harford, 2 Eq. 507). A parol licence for an easement over land is revoked by the transfer of the land to a third person (Wallis v. Harrison, 4 M. & W. 538; see Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B. 574; Coleman v. Foster, 1 H. & N. 37).

The licensee under a revocable licence is entitled to reasonable notice of revocation (Cornish v. Stubbs, L. R. 5 C. P. 334; Mellor v. Watkins, L. R. 9 Q. B. 400; Aldin v. Latimer, [1894] 2 Ch. 448). As to what is a reasonable notice, see Wilson v. Tavener, [1901] 1 Ch. 578; compare Lowe v. Adams, [1901] 2 Ch. 598.

Remedies: damages;

In some cases of revocation, even where a licence has been rightfully revoked, damages may be recovered by the licensee on the ground of breach of contract (Kerrison v. Smith, [1897] 2 Q. B. 445; see Cornish v. Stubbs, L. R. 5 C. P. 334; Mellor v. Watkins, L. R. 9 Q. B. 400). Where a licence to post bills was disregarded by a lessee of the grantor the latter was held liable in damages (King v. Allen & Sons, [1916] 2 A. C. 54). But the Statute of Frauds may prevent the recovery of damages (Webber v. Lee, 9 Q. B. D. 315; compare Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 257).

Where previously to the execution of a lease and as part of the consideration therefor an agreement not under seal for the exercise by the tenant of sporting rights was entered into, the tenant obtained an injunction restraining interference by the landlord with the sporting rights until a grant thereof under seal had been executed (Frogley v. Lovelace, Johns. 333).

(1) Several species of common.

Common is a right which one or more persons claim of taking some part of that which another man's lands, waters, woods, &c., naturally produce, without having an absolute property in such lands, waters, woods, &c. It is called an incorporeal right, which lies in grant, as originally commencing by some agreement between lords and tenants, for some valuable purposes, which continues good, although there be no instrument in writing that proves the original agreement (4 Rep. 37 a; 2 Inst. 65; Vent. 387; Bac. Abr. Common). The rights of common most frequently met with are the rights of tenants of a manor in the waste. By Part V. of the Law of Property Act, 1922, copyhold and customary tenures were abolished as from January 1, 1926 (that date being substituted for January 1, 1925, by 15 Geo. 5, c. 4). By Sched. 12 (1) (d) the land enfranchised by the Act is not to be subject to borough-English, gavelkind, or any other customary mode of descent, or to any custom relating to dower, or freebench, or tenancy by the curtesy, or to any other custom whatsoever. But para. (4) of the same Schedule provides that an enfranchisement by virtue of the Act shall not deprive a tenant of any commonable right to which he is entitled in respect of the enfranchised land, but where any such right exists in respect of any land on January 1, 1926, it shall continue attached to the land notwithstanding that the land has become freehold. See as to public rights of access to commons, Law of Property Act, 1925, ss. 193 and 194, post.

Claims to common by custom.

Rights of common in the waste might be claimed by copyhold tenants of a manor by custom (Gateward's Case, 6 Rep. 59; Bean v. Bloom, 2 Bl. R. 926; S. C., 3 Wils. 456). They could not prescribe in their own names by reason of the want of permanence. Nor could they in their lord's name, for he could not claim common in his own land. They were therefore allowed to claim it by custom (per Lord Denman, Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 61; see Warrick v. Queen's College, 10 Eq. 122).

Claims to common by prescription.

In the case of freehold tenants of a manor, rights of common in the waste may be claimed by prescription (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 716). Where rights of common have been exercised for many years by the freehold tenants of a manor, and also by the inhabitants, the Court will presume that the inhabitants claimed through the freehold tenants, and will try to find a legal origin for those rights (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 716). In the case of persons who were not themselves either copyhold or freehold tenants of the manor, common could not be claimed on the ground of either custom or prescription by "dwellers" in a manor (Allgood v. Gibson, 25 W. R. 60; 34 L. T. 883); or by "occupiers" of copyhold lands (Austin v. Amhurst, 7 Ch. D. 689; Knight v. King, 20 L. T. 494). See further, as to claims to common when based on prescription, the cases quoted ante, pp. 2, 26; and when based on custom, the cases, p. 35. For cases where trusts of commonable rights for the benefit of occupiers were held to have been created, see Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, [1893] A. C. 1; Simcoe v. Pethick, [1898] 2 Q. B. 555.

Rights of common have been frequently dealt with by statute (see note on Inclosure Acts, post, p. 57), and have been created by Crown grant (see Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735). Where the Crown dedicated land as permanent common but named no commoner, common of pasturage was not created (Sydney v. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales, [1894] A. C. 444). Rights of Common.

Common has been divided into five sorts (Co. Litt. 122 a), viz.: 1st, Common of pasture, which is a right that one man has in common with others to feed his beasts in another man's land. 2ndly, Common of turbary, or the liberty of cutting turves in another's soil, to be burnt in a house (see Valentine v. Penny, Noy, 145; Wilson v. Willes, 7 East, 121; 3 Lev. 165). 3rdly, Common of estovers, which is a right of taking trees, loppings, shrubs, or underwood, in another's woods, coppices, &c. (see Arundel v. Steere, Cro. Jac. 25; 5 Rep. 25 a; 4 Rep. 87 a; Cro. Eliz. 820; Plowd. 381). 4thly, Common of piscary, or a right of taking fish in pond, pool, or river, the soil whereof belongs to another. And 5thly, a liberty which in some manors the tenants have, of taking sand, gravel, stone, &c., in the lord's soil (Bac. Abr. Common, (A.)). All claims of this kind, in order to be valid, must be made with some limitation and restriction (Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q. B. 419). Different kinds of common.

Common of pasture is, where one person has, in common with other persons, the right of taking by the mouths of his cattle the herbage growing on the land of which some other person is the owner. This species of common is either appendant, appurtenant, or in gross (Selw. N. P. Common, s. 2). Common of pasture.

Common of pasture appendant is a right belonging to freehold tenants holding arable lands parcel of a manor. It is a right to put commonable beasts upon the lord's waste. Commonable beasts are horses and oxen to plough the land, and cows and sheep to manure it (Co. Litt. 122 a; 2 Bl. Com. 33; Tyrringham's Case, 4 Rep. 36 a; 2 Inst. 85). As to this right Parke, B., in the Exchequer Chamber, laid down that, although there are some books which state that common appendant is of common right, and that common appendant is the common law right of every free tenant in the lord's wastes (see Mellor v. Spateman, 1 Wms. Saund. 346 d, 6th ed.; Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 227; Com. Dig. Comm. B.), it is not to be understood that every tenant of a manor has by common law such a right, but only that certain tenants have such a right, not by prescription, but as a right at common law, incident to the grant. The right therefore is not a common right of all tenants, but belongs only to each grantee, before the stat. Quia Emptores, of arable land by virtue of his individual grant and as incident thereto; and it is as much a peculiar right of the grantee as one derived by express grant, or by prescription, though it differs in its extent, being limited to such cattle as are kept for ploughing and manuring the arable land granted, and as are of a description fit for that purpose; whereas the right by grant or prescription has no such limits and depends on the will of the grantor (Dunraven v. Llewellyn, 15 Q. B. 810, 811). As to this decision see Williams' Real Prop., App. F., 628, 17th ed., and Warrick v. Queen's College, 10 Eq. 123. Common of pasture appendant could not, it seems, be claimed by copyholders. Common appendant.

Common appendant can only be claimed in the lord's wastes (2 Inst. 85; 1 Roll. 396; 4 Rep. 37), for the claimant's own commonable cattle levant and couchant upon the land (ibid.; Burr. 320). A right of common for cattle "levant and couchant," upon inclosed land, extends to such cattle as the winter eatage of the land, together with the produce of it during the summer, is capable of maintaining (Whitelock v. Hutchinson, 2 M. & Rob. 205; 5 T. R. 46; Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 227; Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396; Meaning of levant and couchant.

Rights of Common.

Willis v. Ward, 2 Chit. 297). In other words the right is governed by the number of cattle which the commoner has the means of housing and providing for in the winter (Dyce v. Hay, 1 Macq. H. L. C. 313). Levant and couchant expresses a measure of the number of cattle that may be put in, and does not necessarily refer to cattle actually fed upon the particular land (Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 7 C. P. 592). It is rather the measure of capacity of the land than a condition to be actually complied with (Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 517; see Carr v. Lambert, L. R. 1 Exch. 168).

This species of common must have existed from time immemorial (1 Roll. Abr. 396), and only arises in the case of grants of arable land (Warwick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 730). It might formerly be claimed as appendant to a cottage, because by 31 Eliz. c. 7 (repealed by 15 Geo. 3, c. 32), it was requisite for a cottage to have four acres of land attached to it (Emerson v. Selby, 1 Salk. 169; 2 Lord Raym. 1015). Common appendant is so necessarily incident to the land, that it cannot be severed from it, and, therefore, however often the land may be divided, every parcel of it is entitled to common appendant (Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 240). Common of pasture appendant is extinguished by the erection of permanent buildings on the land in respect of which it is claimed, but not by the conversion of arable land into pasture (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 730; Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 517).

Common appurtenant.

Common of pasture appurtenant, though frequently confounded with common appendant, differs from it in many circumstances. It may be created by grant or prescription. It may be claimed as annexed to any kind of land, whereas common appendant can only be claimed on account of ancient arable land (4 Rep. 37 a). And it may be not only for beasts usually commonable, such as horses, oxen and sheep, but likewise for goats, swine, &c. (1 Roll. Abr. 399); but not for geese, where they had no connection with the land (Morley v. Clifford, 20 Ch. D. 753). A claim to a right of common under sect. 1 of the Prescription Act, 1832, must be grounded on acts acquiesced in or consented to by the owner of the land and showing a claim to a right of common of pasture, not a claim to the ownership of the soil (Lyell v. Hothfield, [1914] 3 K. B. 911, distinguishing De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 585, and Dawson v. MacGroggan, [1903] 1 Ir. 92, on this ground). A fold course is a right of common appurtenant of pasture for sheep (Robinson v. Duleep Singh, 11 Ch. D. 798). Common appurtenant for a fractional part of a cow was claimed in Nicholls v. Chapman (5 H. & N. 643). In the case of common appurtenant there must be some connection between the occupation of the lands in respect of which the right is enjoyed, and the right itself, which connection must limit the right (Baylis v. Tyssen-Amhurst, 6 Ch. D. 500). A copyholder could not lawfully claim common appurtenant without stint in respect of his copyhold tenement; but such common must be limited to the cattle levant and couchant on the tenement to which it is annexed, or the number must be ascertained by the Court rolls, or in some other manner (Morley v. Clifford, 20 Ch. D. 753; see Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396; Scholes v. Hargraves, 5 T. R. 46). A person may claim common appurtenant for a certain number of cattle, in which case the cattle of a stranger may be put upon the common, as no injury can arise to the owner of the soil as the number is ascertained (Bac. Abr. 96; Richard v. Squibb, 1 Ld. Raym. 726; see Stevens v. Austin, 2 Mod. 185; Thornel v. Lassels, Cro. Jac. 27). The principle furnished by Potter v. North (1 Wms. Saund. 635; Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Wms. Saund. 726), as to claims to common by custom or prescription, seems to be to ascertain the extent of the rights conferred, and the rights reserved, by the grant, and to see whether the act be in derogation of the latter (Jones v. Richard, 6 Ad. & Ell. 530; see 5 Ibid. 413). If the common appurtenant be for an uncertain number of cattle, it is limited to the claimant's own commonable cattle levant and couchant upon his lands see (Manchester v. Vale, 1 Wms. Saund. 28, ed. 1871; and see further, as to common appurtenant for cattle levant and couchant, Bowen v. Jenkins, 6 Ad. & Ell. 911). A right of common appurtenant for cattle levant and couchant is not extinguished or suspended by reason of a change in the condition of the tenement, if the tenement might still easily be turned to the purpose of feeding cattle (Carr v. Lambert, L. R. 1 Exch. 168). After the extinction of a prescriptive right of common by a unity of possession of the waste with the land in respect of which the right is claimed, proof that the successive tenants of such lands for above fifty years under different lords had actually enjoyed the right of common is evidence for presuming a new grant from the lord (Cowlam v. Slack, 15 East, 108). As to the evidence in support of a claim to common appurtenant, see Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 19 Eq. 150; and as to the proper mode of pleading a prescriptive right to common appurtenant, see Baylis v. Tyssen-Amhurst, 6 Ch. D. 500.

Apportionment of common.

If a man purchase part of the land wherein common appendant is to be had, the common shall be apportioned, because it is of common right, but it is otherwise as to common appurtenant and other kinds of common, as common of estovers or piscary. But both common appendant and common appurtenant will be apportioned on alienation of part of the land to which the common is appendant or appurtenant (Co. Litt. 122 a, 164 a; Tyrringham's Case, 4 Rep. 36; Wild's Case, 8 Rep. 78; O'Hare v. Fahy, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 318).

The rent-charges under the Acts for the commutation of tithes in England and Wales, in respect of the tithes of common appendant or appurtenant, are to be charged on the allotments thereafter to be made in respect of the lands to which the right of common is attached (Tithe Act, 1839, s. 14).

Common in gross.

Common in gross is such a right of common as is neither appendant nor appurtenant to land, but is annexed to a man's person, being granted to him and his heirs by deed; or it may be claimed by prescriptive right, as by a parson of a church, or the like corporation sole. It is a separate inheritance, entirely distinct from landed property, and may be vested in one who has no land in the manor (Co. Litt. 122 a; 2 Bl. Comm. 34). Common appurtenant for a certain number of cattle may be converted into common in gross (Drury v. Kent, Cro. Jac. 14; Bunn v. Channen, 5 Taunt. 244). So a common appurtenant to a manor may be granted in gross (1 Roll. Abr. 402, pl. 3; Day v. Spooner, Cro. Car. 432; Sir W. Jones, 375; 2 Wms. Saund. 727, n.). A right of common in gross sans nombre, in the latitude in which it was formerly understood, cannot exist (Mellor v. Spateman, 1 Wms. Saund. 622; 1 Ld. Raym. 407; Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 232; Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396), and it can have no rational meaning but in contradistinction to stinted common, where a man has a right only to put on a particular number of cattle (Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 232).

A corporation may prescribe for common in gross for cattle levant and couchant within the town, but not for common in gross sans nombre (Mellor v. Spateman, 1 Wms. Saund. 629; Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412, n.; Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527). Where all freemen inhabiting an ancient borough claimed right of common, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, extended the limits of the borough, the right of common was reserved to those who resided within the old limits (Beadsworth v. Torkington, 1 Q. B. 782; Hulls v. Estcourt, 2

Rights of Common.

New Rep. 131). See a plea of common by a burgess under a grant to a corporation, Parry v. Thomas, 5 Exch. 37.

The Tithe Act, 1839, s. 13, provides the mode in which Lammas lands and a right of common in gross are to be charged with rent-charges, in lieu of tithes under the Acts for the commutation of tithes.

Common because of vicinage.

Common because of vicinage or neighbourhood, is not strictly a right of common. It happens where the inhabitants of two townships which lie contiguous to each other have usually intercommoned with each other, the beasts of the one straying mutually into the other's fields without any molestation from either. It is confined to two townships (Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 19 Eq. 160), and if you have three vills, each of which has a common, A, B and C, and vill B lies between A and C, B may intercommon with A or C, but A cannot intercommon with C (ibid.). It is only a permissive right, intended to excuse what, in strictness, is a trespass in both, and to prevent a multiplicity of suits (Musgrove v. Cave, Willes, 322; Wells v. Pearcy, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 556; Gullett v. Lopes, 13 East, 348). And therefore either township may inclose and bar out the other, though they have intercommoned time out of mind. Neither hath any person of one town a right to put his beasts originally into the other's common; but if they escape and stray thither of themselves, the law winks at the trespass (Co. Litt. 121, 122; 4 Rep. 38; 2 Bl. Comm. 33). Where an individual claimed a right to participate in this kind of common it was said that although it may be claimed by prescription, it is rather matter of immemorial custom. The substance of the custom is, that cattle lawfully on one common have been used to stray upon the other. All that it is necessary therefore for the pleadings to show is, that the cattle were lawfully on their own common before they strayed, and that is done by showing thirty years' user under the Prescription Act, 1832 (Pritchard v. Powell, 10 Q. B. 603; see Hetherington v. Vane, 4 B. & Ald. 428; and as to pleading, see Morewood v. Wood, 14 East, 327). Reputation may be given in evidence in support of the immemorial right of such common so pleaded (Pritchard v. Powell, supra). Common pur cause de vicinage cannot be set up as an excuse for cattle rambling from downs subject to common of pasture into downs of which the owner has exclusive possession, notwithstanding there be no fence separating the downs (Heath v. Elliot, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 388). This common cannot be claimed by usage between the close of an individual and a common (Clarke v. Tinker, 10 Q. B. 604). Nor can it be claimed by custom in respect of a private estate over which no other right of common is shown (Jones v. Robin, 10 Q. B. 620).

To establish a right of common pur cause de vicinage an intercommoning between the two districts must be alleged and proved. It is not enough to show that there was no fence between the two districts, and that cattle strayed from one to the other, but were constantly either driven back by their own respective owners, or turned off by the owners of the land into which they had strayed (Clarke v. Tinker, 10 Q. B. 604).

Where the commons of two towns adjoin, and a right of common by reason of vicinage exists, and in one town there are fifty acres of common and in the other town one hundred acres of common, the commoners in the first town cannot put more cattle upon the entire common than the common of fifty acres will feed (Corbet's Case, 7 Rep. 5 a; Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 19 Eq. 161). Where common pur cause de vicinage exists one commoner cannot take the law into his own hands and distrain another commoner's cattle for a surcharge (Cape v. Scott,, L. R. 9 Q. B. 269).

An end may be put to this species of common by inclosure (Tyrring- ham's Case, 4 Rep. 36 b, 38 b, 39 a; Corbet's Case, 7 Rep. 5 a). Where one common is inclosed leaving open a passage for a highway, so that cattle could stray from one to the other by means of the highway, the common by vicinage still continues (Gullett v. Lopes, 13 East, 348). In case of open field lands, the owner of any particular spot may, by custom, exclude the other from right of pasture there, by inclosing his own land (2 Wils. 269). When there is a common pur cause de vicinage between two wastes, and one of them is under a private Act conveyed to allottees, for the purpose of being inclosed, and the commissioners extinguish all rights of common on such one waste, these proceedings do not of themselves put an end to the common pur cause de vicinage (Clarke v. Tinker, 10 Q. B. 604; Wells v. Peacey, 1 Bing. (N.R.) 556). Rights of Common.

Apart from common of pasture there should be mentioned certain rights of pasture which may be prescribed for. Thus a party may prescribe to take the sole and several herbage (Co. Litt. 122; Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Wms. Saund. 726; Potter v. North, 1 Vent. 385; Welcome v. Upton, 6 M. & W. 543; see North v. Cox, 1 Lev. 253; Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527). Instances of sole pasturage are to be found in the South Downs, in Sussex, and they are frequently transferred in gross; it is the same with the cattle-gates in the North of England, although some have thought the owners of them are tenants in common of the soil (Welcome v. Upton, 6 M. & W. 541, 542; R. v. Whixley, 1 T. R. 137). The grant of vesturam terræ or herbagium terræ does not pass the land or soil itself (Co. Litt. 4 b). A cattle-gate is not a more extensive right than the above, and does not include the right to the soil (Rigg v. Lonsdale, 1 H. & N. 923, 936; see Robinson v. Wray, L. R. 1 C. P. 490). A person may prescribe to have the sole and several pasture, vesture or herbage, in exclusion of the owner of the soil, for a limited time in every year (Fitz. Prescription, 51; Co. Litt. 122 a; 2 Roll. Abr. 267 (L.) pl. 6; Winch's Rep. 5; Hutt. 45; Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527); or for the whole year (Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Wms. Saund. 726; S. C., 2 Lev. 2; Pollexf. 13; 1 Mod. 74). But a man cannot prescribe to have common eo nomine for the whole year, in exclusion of the lord, for this is held to be repugnant to the nature of the thing (Co. Litt. 122 a; 1 Roll. Abr. 396 (A.), pl. 1, 2; 2 Roll. Abr. 267, pl. 3; 2 Lev. 268; 1 Ventr. 395). However, it is said that the lord may by custom be restrained to a qualified right of common during a part of the year (Yelv. 129; 1 Brownl. 187; Cro. Jac. 208, 257). So it is said the lord may be restrained, together with the commoners, from using a common at all during a part of the year (1 Roll. Abr. 405, 406); and that the commoners may have common in exclusion of the lord for part of a year (2 Roll. Abr. 267 (L.), pl. 1; 1 Wms. Saund. 353, n. (2)), or in part of the common (De la Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 587). The claim in right of a freehold estate and the lands which formerly belonged to the manor farm, of a separate right of feeding and folding an unlimited number of sheep, is not a claim of a right of common, but of something in the nature of a separate right of feeding and folding (Keilway, 198 a; Punsany and Leader's Case, 1 Leon. 11), which may have arisen out of an exception made by the lord upon granting the lands, or it may have been created by an Act of Parliament (Ivatt v. Mann, 3 M. & G. 699). What rights of pasture may be prescribed for.

(3) Common of turbary.

Common of turbary is a right to dig turf upon another's land, or upon the lord's waste. This kind of common can only be appurtenant to a house, not to land; for turves are to be burnt in a house; nor can it extend to a right to dig turf for sale (Valentine v. Penny, Noy, 145; see Hayward v. Cannington, 1 Lev. 231; 1 Sid. 354). An ancient right of turbary can only exist as being a right in respect of an ancient dwelling-house or building, or at the most, for the house which supplies the place of that house (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 730). In an action of trespass the user of this right of common was held to extend to all parts of a common fit for the production of fuel, but not to a rock (Peardon v. Underhill, 16 Q. B. 120). A custom for all the customary tenants of a manor, having gardens, to dig turf for making grass plots, at all times of the year, and as often and in such quantity as occasion required, is bad, as being indefinite and destructive of the common (Wilson v. Willes, 7 East, 121, recognised in Salisbury v. Gladsone, 9 H. L. C. 692; see Peppin v. Shakespear, 6 T. R. 748). Common of turbary, appurtenant to a house, will pass by grant or demise of such house with the appurtenances (Solme v. Bullock, 3 Lev. 165; Dobbyn v. Somers, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 293). There is nothing in law to prevent a party dealing with his own land and demising it, from annexing to the land or granting to the lessee a right to take turbary upon other lands of the landlord, to be consumed upon houses to be subsequently built upon the premises (Hill v. Barry, Hay & J. 688; Duggan v. Carey, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 210). The right of turbary is apportionable (Hargrove v. Congleton, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 368). As to trusts of turbary right for benefit of occupiers, see Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, [1893] A. C. 1; Simcoe v. Pethick, [1898] 2 Q. B. 555.

(4) Common of estovers.

Common of estovers, or estouviers, that is, necessaries (from estover, to furnish), is a liberty of taking necessary wood for the use or furniture of a house or farm from off another's estate. The Saxon word bote is used by us as synonymous to the French estovers; and therefore house-bote is a sufficient allowance of wood to repair or to burn in the house; which latter is sometimes called fire-bote; plough-bote, and cart-bote, are wood to be employed in making and repairing all instruments of husbandry; and hay-bote, or hedge-bote, is wood for repairing hedges or fences, as pales, stiles, and gates, to secure inclosures. These botes or estovers must be reasonable ones: and such any tenant or lessee, except a strict tenant at will, may take off the land let or demised to him without waiting for any leave, assignment, or appointment of the lessor, unless he be restrained by special covenant to the contrary (Co. Litt. 41; 2 Bl. Comm. 35). Every tenant for life or years has a liberty of this kind of common right in the lands which he holds unless restrained, which is usual by particular covenants or exceptions (2 Bl. Comm. 282). The rule is founded on the obligation upon tenants of making necessary repairs (De Salis v. Crossan, 1 Ball & B. 188). Where no wood exists, and where part of the premises demised are bog, from which no other beneficial use can arise, a tenant is in Ireland entitled to use such bog for the purposes of fuel (Howley v. Jebb, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 435). A person having common of estovers in a certain wood of another, by view and delivery of the owner's bailiff, by taking estovers without such view and delivery is a trespasser, though he takes less than he was entitled to (5 Rep. 25 a).

Common of estovers can only be claimed by prescription for an ancient house (F. N. B. 180; 4 Co. 86; see, however, Arundel v. Steer, Cro. Jac. 25); but if it be pulled down and another built, either in the same or another place, the prescription will not be lost (Costard & Wingfield's Case, Godb. 97; Cowper v. Andrews, Hob. 39; Att.-Gen. v. Reynolds, [1911] 2 K. B. 888, where a dictum in Costard & Wingfield's Case, that the new house must be built on the foundations of the old one, was impugned). Rooms may be altered or new chimneys built, or additions made to the house, without the right being lost. But the estovers cannot be used in the parts newly added (Luttrell's Case, 4 Rep. 87 a). A person having common of estovers is not entitled to estovers out of timber which the owner of the soil has cut down in part of the wood, but he must take his estovers out of the residue (Basset v. Maynard, Cro. Eliz. 820; Dowglass v. Kendal, Cro. Jac. 256). A person having common of estovers appurtenant to a house cannot grant the estovers to another, reserving the house to himself, nor grant the house to another, reserving the estovers to himself (Plowd. 381). The estovers taken must be reasonable, and limited to the wants of the tenement in respect of which a man claims them, upon which therefore they must be expended (7 E. 4, 27; 12 E. 4, 8; 8 Rep. 54); and cannot be sold to be used elsewhere (11 H. 6, 11 b; Pembroke's Case, Clayt. 47). Where a tenant abuses his right of estovers, an injunction will be granted (Courtown v. Ward, 1 Sch. & Lef. 8; see Wilson v. Bragg, 8 Bac. Abr. 428, Waste (O)).

Apart from common of estovers the right to estovers may be appurtenant to a messuage by prescription or grant, to be exercised in lands not occupied by the tenant of the house; as if a man grants estovers to another for the repair of a certain house, they become appurtenant to that house; so that whoever afterwards acquires it, shall have such common of estovers. This right may be claimed either by prescription or grant, but (except in the case of copyholders) it cannot be claimed by custom; for, according to a well-known rule, a custom to take profits in alieno solo is bad (Gateward's Case, 6 Rep. 59; Bean v. Bloom, 3 Wils. 456; 2 Sir W. Black. 926; Grimstead v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 717; Selby v. Robinson, 2 T. R. 758; Hoskins v. Robins, 1 Vent. 123—163; 2 Saund. 320). And special rights in respect of wood may be acquired by prescription. Thus the owner of a house established by prescription the right to take for use in the house all thorns growing upon another's land (Dowglass v. Kendal, Cro. Jac. 256). But, if claimed as appurtenant to land, such a right must have connection with the enjoyment of the land. And where a right to cut all the wood on another's land and to dispose of it as the claimant pleased was claimed as appurtenant, the claim was bad (Bailey v. Stevens, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 91; 31 L. J. C. P. 226).

As analogous to estovers there should be mentioned the rights of commoners to cut furze, etc. (Smith v. Brownlow, 9 Eq. 241; Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 716; also the right of the inhabitants of a parish to lop for fuel the branches of trees growing on the waste, which right may exist by virtue of a Crown grant (Willingale v. Maitland, 3 Eq. 103; Rivers v. Adams, 3 Ex. D. 361; Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735).

(5) Common of piscary.

A common of fishery is a right of fishing in common with other persons in a stream or river, the soil whereof belongs to a third person. This does not differ in any respect from any other right of common (Salk. 637); and trespass will not lie for an injury to it. Common of fishery might be claimed by copyhold tenants by custom (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 115; and see Payne v. Ecclesiastical Commrs., 30 Times L. R. 167). The right cannot be claimed by "inhabitants" (Bland v. Lipscombe, 24 L. J. Q. B. 155 n.; Lloyd v. Jones, 6 C. B. 81); nor by "dwellers" in a manor (Allgood v. Gibson, 34 L. T. 883); the ground being that, independently of manorial rights, a fishery in alieno solo, which is a profit a prendre, must be claimed not by custom but by prescription (Bland v. Lipscombe, supra); and a large and indefinite class cannot prescribe (Tilbury v. Silva, supra).

Different kinds of fishery.

As to the various kinds of fisheries, the only substantial distinction is between an exclusive right of fishery usually called "several," sometimes "free," used as in "free warren"; and a right in common with others usually called common of fishery, sometimes "free," used as in "free port" (per Willes, J., Malcolmson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C. 593). A grant of a "free fishery" is primâ facie a grant of non-exclusive fishery (Bloomfield v. Johnston, I. R. 8 C. L. 68). A "common fishery," as distinguished from a "common of fishery," means a fishery extending to all mankind, as in the sea (Benett v. Costar, 8 Taunt. 186).

Several fishery.

A several fishery is when a person has an exclusive right of fishery either in his own soil or in the soil of another (1 Selw. N. P. 751, 13th ed.) within particular limits (3 Salk. 360; 2 Salk. 637; see Co. Litt. 122 a, n. 7; R. v. Ellis, 1 M. & S. 652). Such a right is, strictly speaking, the proper subject of a grant, but not of an exception or reservation (Doe v. Loch, 2 Ad. & El. 743; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 76; Corker v. Payne, 18 W. R. 436; see Hamilton v. Musgrave, 19 W. R. 443; Grove v. Portal, [1902] 1 Ch. 727). The word "several" is not necessary to create such a right (Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401). A grant of the exclusive right of fishing includes the right to take away fish (Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 96).

A several fishery cannot be appurtenant to a several pasture (Edgar v. Fishery Commissioners, 23 L. T. 732). But a several fishery may be appurtenant to a manor (Rogers v. Allen, 1 Camp. 309). And in such a case will remain in gross if the lands of the manor are conveyed away (Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 153, 169; Devonshire v. Pattinson, 20 Q. B. D. 263), unless the intention to transfer the fishery appear in the conveyance (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98). A perfect paper title to a several fishery may not be absolutely conclusive if there be evidence of user by others inconsistent therewith (Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 681, n.; Neill v. Devonshire, supra; Smith v. Andrews, [1891] 2 Ch. 678). A several fishery may have annexed to it a right of way (Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401), and such a fishery, whether in tidal or non-tidal waters, may exist independently of riparian ownership, and that whether the owner of the fishery be the owner of the soil of the river (Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 153; Devonshire v. Pattinson, supra; Smith v. Andrews, [1891] 2 Ch. 697; Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401), or not (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 654; Miller v. Little, 4 L. R. Ir. 302; Foster v. Wright, 4 C. P. D. 449). The owner of a several fishery is entitled (as an incident to the right) to do all things necessary for exercising the right (Caldwell v. Kilkelly, [1905] 1 I. R. 434), and may take away fish (Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 96). A several fishery may be followed where the water gradually shifts its course (Foster v. Wright, 4 C. P. D. 438; see Miller v. Little, 4 L. R. Ir. 302; Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 1); but not where it leaves the old course and commences to follow a new course which was always distinguishable from the old (Carlisle v. Graham, L. R. 4 Ex. 361). As to whether the right to a several fishery can be lost by abandonment, see Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App Cas. 154, 170.

A claim to a fishery in gross is not within the Prescription Act (Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 687; 34 L. J. C. P. 309).

Distinction between fisheries in non-tidal, and tidal, waters:

In addition to the above distinction between common of fishery and a several fishery, it is important to bear in mind the distinction between (1) non-tidal waters (which include that part of a river in which the water is not salt, and in ordinary tides is unaffected by tidal influence, Reece v. Miller, 8 Q. B. D. 626); and (2) tidal waters.

non-tidal waters;

In the case of a non-tidal river the presumption is that each riparian owner is entitled to a several fishery in the river in front of his land ad medium filum (Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 689, n. Zetland v. Glover, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 70; see Beauman v. Kinsella, 8 Ir. Ch. 291). This is so even in the case of a navigable non-tidal river or "king's stream" (ibid.); or of a river flowing through a manor (Lamb v. Newbiggin, 1 C. & K. 549). The Crown is not entitled as of common right to the soil or waters of an inland non-tidal lake, and no public right of fishing can exist in such waters (Johnston v. O'Neill, [1911] A. C. 552). But the several fishery of a riparian owner may extend over the whole stream (Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 688). As to fishery in a lake, see Bristow v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas. 641; Marshall v. Ulleswater Co., 3 B. & S. 732; Johnson v. Bloomfield, I. R. 8 C. L. 68; Blackett v. Clayton, quoted [1897] 2 Ch. 564. In non-tidal waters, an individual may acquire a title by prescription to a several fishery (Co. Litt. 122 a; Ventr. 391; see 2 Saund. 326; Peers v. Lacy, 4 Mod. 362); which when prescribed for as annexed to land cannot be without stint (Harris v. Chesterfield, [1911] A. C. 623). An individual can also acquire a prescriptive title to a fishing weir (Rolle v. Whyte, L. R. 3 Q. B. 286; Leconfield v. Lonsdale, L. R. 5 C. P. 657; see Barker v. Faulkner, [1898] W. N. 69; Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401). As to fishing from a canal tow-path, see Staffordshire, &c., Navigation v. Bradley, [1912] 1 Ch. 91. The owner of a several fishery in non-tidal waters can obtain an injunction restraining pollution (Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 96), or the abstraction of water (Pirie v. Kintore, [1906] A. C. 478; but see Fraser v. Fear, 107 L. T. 423). It is doubtful whether the Crown can grant an exclusive right of fishing in a non-tidal river flowing over the soil of a subject (Devonshire v. Pattinson, 20 Q. B. D. 263). The public cannot have a right to fish in non-tidal waters founded on custom, prescription, or lost grant (Smith v. Andrews, [1891] 2 Ch. 699, and cases there quoted; Blount v. Layard, ibid., 689, n.).

In tidal waters (whether sea or river), the right of fishing is prima facie in the public (Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 177; Malcolmson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C. 618; cf. Wyatt v. Att.-Gen. of Quebec, [1911] A. C. 489). This public right includes the right to fish for shell fish (as oysters), as well as floating fish (Bagot v. Orr, 2 Bos. & P. 472; Saltash v. Goodman, 7 Q. B. D. 116); but not the right to appropriate foreshore for storing oysters (Truro v. Rowe, [1902] 2 K. B. 709). The right to create a several fishery in tidal waters existed in the Crown before Magna Charta, and a several fishery so created could lawfully afterwards be made the subject of a grant by the Crown to an individual (Malcolmson v. O'Dea, supra; see Neill v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 135). And when the Crown acquired the right to such a fishery by merger since Magna Charta it could re-grant it (Northumberland v. Houghton, L. R. 5 Ex. 127). Long exclusive enjoyment alone may be ground for presuming the grant of such a fishery (Edgar v. Fishery Commissioners, 23 L. T. 732; Mannall v. Fisher, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 856; Little v. Wingfield, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 279; Beaman v. Kinsella, ibid., 291). So a several fishery in tidal waters has been presumed to have been granted to a corporation subject to a trust (in the nature of a charitable trust) in favour of inhabitants, authorising them to dredge for oysters within a certain period annually (Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 633). A several fishery was held to have been granted to a corporation in trust for the members thereof (Re Free Fishermen of Faversham, 36 Ch. D. 329). An individual may claim a several fishery in an arm of the sea by prescription (Orford v. Richardson, 4 T. R. 437; see Ward v. Cresswell, Willes, 265; Crichton v. Collery, 19 W. R. 107; R. v. Downing, 11 Cox, C. C.

Rights of Common.

584). A several fishery in the sea was held to be vested in the lord of the manor who also had the soil of the foreshore vested in him (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 659). A grant of foreshore would not of itself convey the right to a several fishery over it (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 654). There may be a several fishery for oysters, the right to take floating fish remaining in the public (Rogers v. Allen, 1 Camp. 23); and, independently of a several fishery, there may be a right to have on the foreshore oyster beds or oyster layings (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 680). The owner of a several fishery over the foreshore, whether owner of the soil or not, can restrain the reclamation of part of the foreshore (Bridges v. Hinton, 11 L. T. 653).

Ownership of soil in relation to fishing.

As to the relation of the ownership of a fishery to the ownership of the soil of the bed, it is settled that the owner of a several fishery must be presumed to be the owner of the soil, whether the fishery is in tidal waters (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 649); or in a non-tidal river (Holford v. Bailey, 13 Q. B. 426; Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401; Palmer v. Thames Conservators, [1902] 1 Ch. 163); or in a lake (Marshall v. Ulleswater Co., 3 B. & S. 732). The ownership is a limited one, in support and for the purposes of the fishery (Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 19). The terms of the grant of the fishery may rebut this presumption (Somerset v. Fogwell, 5 B. & C. 886; see Bloomfield v. Johnson, I. R. 8 C. L. 95, 106; Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 655). In the case of a grant of a "free fishery," i.e., a non-exclusive right, the presumption is that the soil does not pass (Bloomfield v. Johnson, supra). Where the waste of a manor is bounded by a river, and there is evidence of the exercise of rights of common (e.g., fishing) over the bed, the bed ad medium filum forms part of the waste (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 110). But it is not part of the waste, where the commoners' rights do not extend beyond the water's edge, and the bed is enjoyed as a separate tenement (Ecroyd v. Coulthard, [1898] 2 Ch. 368). For the ordinary rules as to the ownership of the soil below water, see post, p. 106. And as to when the rights of lords of manors depend upon the ownership of the soil, see Grand Union Canal Co. v. Ashby, 6 H. & N. 394; Clarke v. Mercer, 1 F. & F. 492.

As to weirs, see Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 195; Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 401; Barker v. Faulkner, [1898] W. N. 69.

As to the relief in equity in the case of common of fishery, see post, p. 60.

(6) Customs to take sand, gravel, &c.

Customs have been established entitling copyholders for the use of their tenements to take from the waste of the manor sand, gravel (Peppin v. Shakespear, 6 T. R. 748; Duberley v. Page, 2 T. R. 391), coal (Portland v. Hill, 2 Eq. 765), loam (Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 514), and stone (Heath v. Deane, [1905] 2 Ch. 86). Compare the customs established for copyholders to take clay, &c., without limit from their copyhold tenements (Salisbury v. Gladstone, 9 H. L. C. 692; Hanmer v. Chance, 4 D. J. & S. 626; see now Law of Property Act, 1922, Part V. and Sched. 12 (1) (d) and (4)).

In connection with the above customs giving copyholders mineral rights in the lord's waste there should be mentioned the customs as to the lord's own rights. Thus a custom for the lord of a manor to enter on the waste and to dig through the same for the purpose of working the quarries below was held good (Rogers v. Taylor, 1 H. & N. 706; 26 L. J. Ex. 203). So, also, the custom for the lord to enter on copyhold tenements for the purpose of mining proved to exist in the Isle of Man (Ballacorkish Co. v. Harrison, L. R. 5 P. C. 49). An alleged custom for the lord of a manor to work mines under any parcel of the manor so as to let down the surface, without making compensation, was held bad (Hilton v. Granville, 5 Q. B. 701; Cr. & Ph. 283; a decision criticised unfavourably in Blackett v. Bradley, 1 B. & S. 140; and in Buccleuch v. Wakefield, L. R. 4 H. L. 410; but approved in Bell v. Love, 10 Q. B. D. 561; 9 App. Cas. 286; see Hayles v. Pease, [1899] 1 Ch. 567; Bishop Auckland v. Butterknowle, [1904] 2 Ch. 419; [1906] A. C. 305). A similar custom where the lord was required to pay compensation would be good (Aspden v. Seddon, 1 Ex. D. 510). And possibly a similar custom where it was confined to the waste (Gill v. Dickinson, 5 Q. B. D. 159).

As to taking materials for repairing highways from wastes or commons, see Highway Act, 1835, s. 51; Commons Act, 1876, s. 20; Rylatt v. Marfleet, 14 M. & W. 233; Hayes Conservators v. Bromley Council, [1897] 1 Q. B. 321.

(7) Interest of the commoner.

The interest which a commoner has in the common is, in the legal phrase, to eat the grass with the mouths of his cattle. He must not meddle at all with the soil, nor with its fruit and produce, even though it may eventually improve and meliorate the common (1 Roll. Abr. 406, pl. 10; 12 H. 8, 2 a; Harcourt's Case). Therefore he cannot cut the grass, wood, bushes, fern, or other thing, growing on the common; nor can he cut the molehills, or make fishponds there (12 H. 8, 2 a; per Brooke, J., 2 Leon. 202; Gobd. 182, pl. 258; Anon., Bridg. 10; Samborn v. Harilo, 2 Bul. 116; Currill v. Pack, 1 Sid. 251). See as to an obligation to maintain fences to keep out sheep, and as to impounding cattle damage feasant, Coaker v. Willcocks, [1911] 2 K. B. 124. But in special cases there may be special rights. Thus there may be a custom for commoners to take rabbits on the waste (Coote v. Ford, 83 L. T. 482). Again in the case of forests, there may exist either by custom or prescription a right of common of pannage; in other words, a right exercisable in common with others by an owner of land who keeps pigs to take his pigs into the forest to eat acorns fallen on the ground (Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 562). So, again, a prescriptive right of cutting in a forest litter for the use of a copyhold tenement in an adjoining manor was established by the owner of that tenement as being exercisable by him in common with others (De La Warr v. Miles, 17 Ch. D. 535). And see the special prescriptive rights of pasture referred to, ante, p. 49, and the special prescriptive rights of cutting wood referred to at p. 51.

Prescriptive rights over the waste.

(8) Presumption that waste land belongs to lord of manor.

Prima facie the lord of the manor is entitled to all waste lands within the manor; and it is not essential that the lord should show acts of ownership of such lands; evidence that the public have been used to throw rubbish on waste land is rather evidence that it belongs to the lord (Doe v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 332). A right to the waste may, however, be established against the lord by repeated acts of ownership, as by cutting trees, digging turf, and the like (Tyrwhitt v. Wynne, 2 B. & Ald. 554; Barnes v. Mawson, 1 M. & S. 77; Richards v. Peake, 2 B. & C. 918). The lord may take gravel and loam from the waste, provided he does not infringe the commoners' rights (Hall v. Byron, 4 Ch. D. 667; see Bateson v. Green, 5 T. R 411; Folkard v. Hemmitt, 5 T. R. 417; Hilton v. Granville, 5 Q. B. 730). The onus of showing that such rights are interfered with lies on the commoner (Hall v. Byron, 4 Ch. D. 680; Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 501). The tenants of demesne lands may have quasi rights of pasturage over the waste (Musgrave v. Inclosure Commrs., L. R. 9 Q. B. 175).

Rights of Common.

Grants by the lord.

The lord might, with the consent of the homage, grant part of the soil for building, if he had immemorially exercised such right (Folkard v. Hemmett, 5 T. R. 417). In like manner there might be a valid custom for the lord with the assent of the homage to grant parcels of the waste to be holden by copy of court roll, and for the grantees to inclose the same, and to hold them in severalty against the commoners (Boulcott v. Winmill, 2 Camp. 261; see Northwich v. Stanway, 3 Bos. & P. 346; Lascelles v. Onslow, 2 Q. B. D. 433), even where a sufficiency of common was not left (Ramsey v. Cruddas, [1893] 1 Q. B. 228). The consent of the majority of the homage was sufficient (Ibid.). But without a custom for the purpose, the lord could not make a new grant of copyhold (R. v. Hornchurch, 2 B. & Ald. 189; R. v. Wilby, 2 M. & S. 504). A custom for the lord to grant leases of the waste of the manor without restriction is bad in point of law (Badger v. Ford, 3 B. & Ald. 153). A custom to inclose (even as against a common right of turbary), leaving sufficiency of common, is good; but the onus of proving that a sufficiency is left lies on the lord (Arlett v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 346; see Rogers v. Wynne, 7 D. & R. 521; Betts v. Thompson, 6 Ch. 732; Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 501). It seems that the lord may license training of horses on the waste so long as it does not injure the right of pasture (Coote v. Ford, 83 L. T. 483).

Presumption as to encroachments on the waste.

Where a copyholder encroached on the waste, Fry, J., laid down that the encroachment became (at any rate where the lord might by custom grant the waste as copyhold) a copyhold accretion to the previous holding (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 5 Ch. D. 750; see Doe v. Tidbury, 14 C. B. 324, and the judgment of Campbell, C.J., Andrews v. Hailes, 2 E. & B. 353; 22 L. J. Q. B. 409; compare Whitmore v. Humphries, 7 C. P. 1, where the encroachment on the waste was made by a lessee holding adjoining waste under a lease from the lord; and see the presumption as to a tenant's encroachment stated in the note to sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, post). In the C. A. it was doubted whether under any circumstances an encroachment could become copyhold (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 160).

Right to approve.

By the Statute of Merton (20 Hen. 3, c. 4), and by subsequent statutes (29 Geo. 2, c. 36, and 31 Geo. 2, c. 41), the lord of a manor may inclose so much of the common as he pleases, for tillage, or wood ground, provided he leaves common sufficient for those entitled to rights of common. But the consent of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries is now necessary (56 & 57 Vict. c. 57). This inclosure, when justifiable, is called in law "approving," an ancient expression signifying the same as "improving" (2 Bl. Com. 34). The statutory right to approve applies as against common appurtenant of pasture (Robinson v. Duleep Singh, 11 Ch. D. 798); but there can be no approvement against tenants of a manor who have a right to dig gravel on the waste, and to take estovers (Duberley v. Page, 2 T. R. 391; Grant v. Gunner, 1 Taunt. 435; Shakespear v. Peppin, 6 T. R. 741). The statute does not authorise the lord to approve as against common of turbary or estovers; but such a right may exist by custom (Lascelles v. Onslow, 2 Q. B. D. 451; Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412, n.; Bateson v. Green, 5 T. R. 411; Place v. Jackson, 4 D. & R. 318; 2 Atk. 189). There can be no inclosure under 29 Geo. 2, c. 36, as against persons entitled to the underwood on the waste (Nicholls v. Mitford, 20 Ch. D. 380). A custom for tenants to approve by the lord's consent, and by presentment of the homage of the court baron, does not restrain the lord's right to approve (Duberley v. Page, 2 T. R. 392, n.).

An owner pur autre vie of a common may approve under the statute (Patrick v. Stubbs, 9 M. & W. 830). A person seized in fee of part of the waste, although not lord, may approve without consent of the homage, provided he leaves a sufficiency of common for the tenants (Glover v. Lane, 3 T. R. 445). Rights of Common.

Where a lord approves, there lies upon him (apart from a custom to a different effect, Ramsey v. Cruddas, [1893] 1 Q. B. 228) the onus of showing that sufficient waste is left for the commoners (Betts v. Thompson, 6 Ch. 732). The question of sufficiency depends, not on the average number of sheep commoners have in fact turned out, but on the number they are entitled to turn out (Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 484, see p. 518, where the C. A. treat as doubtful the decisions in Lake v. Plaxton, 10 Exch. 196; and Lascelles v. Onslow, 2 Q. B. D. 433).

A lord cannot under 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, grant waste for a burial ground, discharged from a customary right of recreation (Forbes v. Eccl. Commrs., 15 Eq. 5).

(9) Inclosure acts.

The greater part of the commons in England have been inclosed under local Acts of Parliament. The Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801, consolidated provisions which had usually been inserted in Acts of inclosure, and facilitated the proofs usually required on the passing of such Acts. The 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 23, amended the law of inclosure. The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 87, remedied defects in titles to real property allotted under inclosure Acts. Further facilities for inclosure were given by stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 115; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 31. By the Inclosure Act, 1845, the superintendence of applications for inclosure, and the carrying the same into operation was entrusted to commissioners, whose powers and duties are now vested in the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (52 & 53 Vict. c. 30; 3 Edw. 7, c. 31). The Act of 1845 has been amended by recent Acts, and these Acts are now collectively known as the Inclosure Acts, 1845 to 1882 (Short Titles Act, 1896). The rules for construing inclosure Acts as regards the right to support when the ownership of minerals and surface is severed are given in Bishop Auckland v. Butterknowle, [1904] 2 Ch. 419; [1906] A. C. 305. See as to boundaries under an award under a local Act for the regulation of a common, Collis v. Amphlett, [1920] A. C. 271. Inclosure commissioners.

Where, under an inclosure Act, the waste of a manor is directed to be allotted, the freehold of the unallotted land remains in the lord (Packe v. Mee, 9 W. R. 335). The legal estate in land allotted under an inclosure Act passed to the allottee (Simcoe v. Pethick, [1898] 2 Q. B. 555; see Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, [1893] A. C. 1). Where by agreement between lord and copyholders, waste lands were allotted, the allotments taken by copyholders were freehold (Paine v. Ryder, 24 Beav. 151; Doe v. Davidson, 4 M. & S. 175). Under the Inclosure Act, 1845, gavelkind lands in Kent might be exchanged for lands in Middlesex held in common socage (Minet v. Leman, 7 D. M. & G. 340 (gavelkind tenure is abolished by sect, 45 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post)). See further, as to inclosure, Cooke on Inclosures, 4th ed.

29 & 30 Vict. c. 122, amended and extended by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 107, provides for the improvement, protection and management of commons near the metropolis. See as to the validity of bye-laws regarding them, Mitcham Conservators v. Cox, [1911] 2 K. B. 854, and Harris v. Harrison, 111 L. T. 534.

(10) By what words a right of common will pass.

By the conveyance of the lands to which common either appendant or appurtenant is annexed, the right of common will pass (Solme v. Bullock, 3 Lev. 165; Sacheverell v. Porter, Cro. Car. 482; Drury v. Kent, Cro. Jac. 14). Where common has been extinguished by union of ownership, and a grant is made of the land, to which, before the extinguishment, the right of common was attached, and the words "appertaining" and "belonging" only are used, the right will not pass. But if the words "or therewith used or enjoyed" are inserted, they would be sufficient to revive the right (Clements v. Lambert, 1 Taunt. 205; Morris v. Eggington, 3 Taunt, 24; Barlow v. Rhodes, 1 C. & M. 448; Wardle v. Brocklehurst, Ell. & Ell. 1058; Baring v. Abingdon, [1892] 2 Ch. 374). Now, by sect. 62 of L. P. Act, 1925 (post), re-enacting sect. 6 of Conv. Act, 1881, a conveyance of land includes all commons appertaining or reputed to appertain to the land or any part thereof, or at the time of the conveyance demised, occupied, or enjoyed with, or reputed or known as, part or parcel of or appurtenant to the land.

The effect of an enfranchisement being to extinguish all rights annexed to the copyholder's estate as such, the right of common did not pass by the word "appurtenances" in the deed of enfranchisement (Moore, 667; Cro. Jac. 253; 2 Ld. Raym. 1225; Salk. 170, 364); but must be created by express grant (Moore, 667; Cro. Eliz. 570; see Doidge v. Carpenter, 6 M. & S. 49). General words in a conveyance by the lord were held not to re-create rights of common (Hall v. Byron, 4 Ch. D. 667). And where a lord granted demesne lands together with all commons, &c., the words did not create a right of common (Baring v. Abingdon, [1892] 2 Ch. 374). On the other hand, where a copyhold tenement (to which common was appurtenant), having vested in the lord by forfeiture, was granted by him as copyhold with the appurtenances, it was entitled to common (Badger v. Ford, 3 B. & Ald. 153). And a copyholder, who had common in a waste without the manor of which his copyhold is parcel, did not lose it by enfranchisement (Barwick v. Matthews, 5 Taunt, 365). By Sched. 12 (4) of L. P. Act, 1922, an enfranchisement by virtue of that Act does not deprive a tenant of any commonable right.

Where upon an inclosure an allotment was awarded in lieu of commonable rights annexed to land (which were thereupon extinguished), a subsequent lease of the land with general words did not carry the allotment (Williams v. Phillips, 8 Q. B. D. 437).

(11) Extinguishment of common.

A right of common may be extinguished by a release, by unity of possession of the land, by severance, or formerly by the enfranchisement of a copyhold. If the commoner releases part of the common, it will operate as an extinguishment of the whole, because the right is entire throughout the whole land, therefore a release of part is a release of the whole (Rotherham v. Green, Cro. Eliz. 593; 1 Show. 350; Johnson v. Barnes, L. R. 8 C. P. 527). Common appendant and appurtenant become extinguished by unity of possession of the land to which the right of common was annexed with the land in which the common was. But it is necessary that the party should have an estate equal in duration, quality, and other circumstances of right, in the two tenements (R. v. Hermitage, Carth. 239; Bradshaw v. Eyr, Cro. Eliz. 570; 4 Rep. 38 a; see Lloyd v. Powis, 4 El. & Bl. 485; compare the quasi rights of pasturage in Musgrave v. Inclosure Commrs., L. R. 9 Q. B. 175). Common appendant or appurtenant for cattle levant and couchant may also be extinguished by severance. As where a person, having common of this kind annexed to a messuage or tenement, conveys the messuage or tenement, excepting the common, the common is extinguished (1 Roll. Abr. 401). Where a right of common was annexed to a copyhold, and the lord granted the land to the copyholder and his heirs, with the appurtenances, the common was extinguished, because it was annexed to the customary estate, which being converted into a freehold, the right of common was gone (Marsham v. Hunter, Cro. Jac. 253; Gilb. Ten. 224). But there might be words amounting to a re-grant of common (Doidge v. Carpenter, 6 M. & S. 49; see Baring v. Abingdon, [1892] 2 Ch. 374). See now Sched. 12 (4) of L. P. Act, 1922, supra. Common is not extinguished on the release of seigniorial rights in the freeholds of a manor (Baring v. Abingdon, supra; Broome v. Wenham, 68 L. T. 651). Equity will, under certain circumstances, decree the continuance of common, where it would be extinct at law (Styant v. Staker, 2 Vern. 250; Comb. 127). Commonable rights were not extinguished by enfranchisement under the Copyhold Acts (Copyhold Acts, 1841, s. 81, 1852, s. 45, and 1894, s. 22). Nor were the lord's mineral rights or sporting rights affected (Copyhold Act, 1894, s. 23); and see as to enfranchisements under L. P. Act, 1922, Sched. 12 (5) of that Act. A right of common appurtenant for cattle levant and couchant may be extinguished by alteration in the dominant tenement (Carr v. Lambert, L. R. 1 Ex. 168), or by cesser of the product of the waste (Scrutton v. Stone, 9 Times L. R. 478).

(12) Remedies for disturbance of rights of common; by abatement;

One remedy for an injury to the right of common is abatement. It is, however, the policy of the law not to allow commoners to abate, except in a few cases. The abator is a judge in his own cause, which ought seldom to be permitted, whereas an action will best ascertain the just measure of the damages. The cases where the law allows abatement by commoners are where the nuisance wholly, not only partially, excludes them from their rights (Hope v. Osborne, [1913] 2 Ch. 349). The acts of the lord must not be contrary to the nature of the common. For by the grant of it, the grantor gives everything which is incident to the enjoyment of the grant, such as free ingress, egress, &c. Therefore, if the lord erect a fence on land surrounding the common, to exclude from the common the commoner's cattle, the commoner may abate, because it is inconsistent with the grant (2 Roll. Abr. 145, (W.) pl. 2; Cooper v. Marshall, 1 Burr. 259; Sadgrove v. Kirby, 6 T. R. 485); but only so much of the erection as to make a way for his cattle (15 Hen. 7, 10 b, pl. 18; 29 Edw. 3, 6; 2 Inst. 88; Mason v. Cæsar, 2 Mod. 65; see 1 Wms. Saund. 651). So where a wall is erected upon the common itself, he may abate the whole erection, for it deprives him of his common, and forms no part of the soil, and by such abatement the commoner does not meddle with the soil (Mason v. Cæsar, 2 Mod. 65; 2 Inst. 88; Litt. Rep. 38). And yet, as the lord may approve, leaving a sufficiency of common, the commoner acts at the peril of an action for trespass, provided the lord has left a sufficiency of common (Arlett v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 346; 9 B. & C. 671; see Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 496).

A commoner may pull down a house wrongfully erected upon the common, if necessary for the exercise of his right, unless persons are in it at the time (Perry v. Fitzhowe, 8 Q. B. 757; Jones v. Jones, 1 H. & C. 1; see Harvey v. Bridges, 1 Exch. 261). And may do so even where persons are in the house at the time, after notice and request to the occupier to remove it (Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 543; see Lane v. Capsey, [1891] 3 Ch. 411). If a stranger erect a building upon land belonging to another, the owner is justified in pulling down the building, although the intruder is at the time in the building (Barking v. Read, 19 L. J. Q. B. 291).

If the lord plant trees on the common, and the commoner thereby cannot have his common so beneficially as he ought, he cannot cut them down, for they are part of the soil itself, being the fruit and produce of the soil, but he must bring an action (Sadgrove v. Kirby, 6 T. R. 483; 1 Bos. & P. 13). So if the lord's rabbits on a common increase so much that there is not a sufficiency of common left, a commoner cannot fill up the coney-burrows (Cooper v. Marshall, 1

Burr. 259; S. C., 2 Wils. 51; 1 Roll. Abr. 405, pl. 3). Much less can a commoner kill the rabbits to prevent their increase to the prejudice of the common (Hodson v. Grissell, 1 Roll. Abr. 405, pl. 1, 2; Cro. Jac. 195; Yel. 104; 1 Lutw. 108; 2 Leon. 203; see 1 Wms. Saund. 651; Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 501). As to a custom to take rabbits, see Coote v. Ford, 83 L. T. 482.

by distress; A commoner can distrain the cattle of a stranger (Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2428); but he cannot distrain the cattle of another commoner, because they come on the commonable land by colour of right (Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2426). This principle applies to common pur cause de vicinage, as well as to common appurtenant (Cape v. Scott, L. R. 9 Q. B. 269). But he can sue another commoner for torts interfering with his rights of common without proof of actual pecuniary damage (King v. Brown & Co., [1913] 2 Ch. 416). As to the right of distress for a surcharge, see further 1 Wms. Saund. 630.

by action; According to the practice before the Jud. Acts of the Courts of common law the usual remedy for an injury to the right of common was an action for disturbance of the right, which might be maintained either against the lord or owner of the soil (Hassard v. Cantrell, Lutw. 101), or a stranger, or a commoner (1 Selw. N. P. 381, 13th ed.), or a company which had taken a common without first making compensation to the commoners (Stoneham v. L. B. & S. C. R., L. R. 7 Q. B. 1). The plaintiff had to prove an injury; but the smallest injury was sufficient, as that of taking away manure dropped on the common (Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154; see cases cited in Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Ad. 426; Blofield v. Payne, 4 B. & Ad. 410; and Beadsworth v. Torkington, 1 Q. B. 782). Again, if one commoner surcharged the common (that is, put more cattle into the common than he was entitled), an injured commoner might sue for a surcharge, notwithstanding himself guilty of one (Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71; see Bowen v. Jenkins, 6 Ad. & Ell. 911; Atkinson v. Teesdale, 2 W. Bl. 817; Cheesman v. Hardham, 1 B. & Ald. 706). Such a plaintiff was not obliged to show that he was exercising his right of common at the time, but only that he could not enjoy his common so beneficially as he ought (Wells v. Watling, 2 W. Bl. 1233).

A commoner (being as such entitled to a profit à prendre) has such possessory right that he can maintain an action of trespass for infringement (Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 101). Thus an action of trespass will lie by one commoner against another for making holes in the common, and for digging and taking turves in excess of the defendant's commonable rights (Wilkinson v. Haygarth, 16 L. J. Q. B. 103). Where burgesses were during part of the year entitled to the exclusive possession of the surface of Blackacre (which belonged in fee to A) and to depasture cattle thereon, A could during that time maintain trespass against B for digging in the subsoil, but not for riding on the surface (Cox v. Glue, 5 C. B. 533). As to pleading in an action of trespass against several claiming a right of common, see Church v. Wright, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 750; Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 543.

actions in Chancery Division. As to proceedings in equity in relation to rights of common before the Jud. Acts, see York v. Pilkington, 1 Atk. 282; Tenham v. Herbert, 2 Atk. 483; Whitchurch v. Hyde, Id. 391; Welby v. Rutland, 6 Br. P. C. 575; 1 Br. C. C. 40, 572.

An action might be brought in the Chancery Division against the lord by one copyholder (if he sued on behalf of himself and the other copyholders, not otherwise) to have their rights of common ascertained (Phillips v. Hudson, 2 Ch. 243). An action for the purpose of establishing a right of common over the wastes of a manor might be maintained by a copyhold and freehold tenant of the manor on behalf of himself and all other copyhold and freehold tenants (Smith v.

Rights of Common.

Brownlow, 9 Eq. 241; Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 484); and may be maintained by one freehold tenant of a manor on behalf of himself and all other freehold tenants (Warrick v. Queen's College, 6 Ch. 716; Betts v. Thompson, 6 Ch. 732). An action for the purpose of establishing a right of common over the wastes of a forest may be maintained by an owner and occupier of land within the forest on behalf of all the owners and occupiers (Commrs. of Sewers v. Glasse, 7 Ch. 456). The decree in such an action is given (19 Eq. 164). The defendants were the lord and two grantees of the waste, who were sued as representing other grantees. The decree was held binding on another grantee against whom a supplemental statement of claim was subsequently filed (Commrs. of Sewers v. Gellatly, 3 Ch. D. 610; see Howard v. Maitland, 11 Q. B. D. 695). Where it was alleged that the Crown had granted a profit à prendre to "inhabitants" of a parish, thereby constituting them a corporation, an individual cannot sue to establish the right; only the corporation (Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735). Questions as to the distribution of compensation between the owners of commonable rights have been dealt with by the Chancery Division in Nash v. Combs, 6 Eq. 51; Fox v. Amhurst, 20 Eq. 403; Austin v. Amhurst, 7 Ch. D. 689; Weatherly v. Layton, [1892] W. N. 165. But unless the parties are agreed in invoking the jurisdiction of the High Court, the action may fail (Richards v. De Winton, [1903], 1 Ch. 507; Salmon v. Edwards [1910] 1 Ch. 552).

Before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the commoner was barred of his right of entry and ejectment, by having acquiesced in the inclosure of part of a common for more than twenty years, and his remedy was by writ of assize of common. The lord was not conclusively barred of his remedy to recover common lands which had been inclosed until the lapse of sixty years, within which time he might recover the lands by a real action (Edwards v. M'Leay, Cooper, C. C. 318; Hawke v. Bacon, 2 Taunt. 155; Creach v. Wilmot, Id. 159). Writs of assize have been abolished by R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 36, post.

As to production of documents in a suit instituted to establish a right of common, see Minet v. Morgan, 11 Eq. 284; Warrick v. Queen's College, 3 Eq. 683. On an issue whether land was common land or subject to any commonable rights of the commoners of certain parishes, evidence of reputation was admitted (Evans v. Merthyr Tydfil Council, [1899] 1 Ch. 241).

As to the law of common in general, see Bac. Abr. Common; Com. Dig. Common; Cruise's Dig. tit. XXIII.; Elton on Commons; Williams on Commons.

Rights of Way.

A right of way may be either public or private. Ways common to all the king's subjects are called highways (1 Ventr. 189; 1 T. R. 570). Whether a way be a public or private way is a matter of fact, and depends much on common reputation (1 Ventr. 189; Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 76, s. 1). A public road is prima facie a road which leads from one public place to another (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 206). A road may be a highway, although it is circuitous (R. v. Lloyd, 1 Camp. 261). It may be a highway though it terminates in a common (R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 63), and there may be a highway over a cul de sac (Rugby Charity v. Merryweather, 11 East, 375; Bateman v. Bluck, 18 Q. B. 870; Campbell v. Lang, 1 Macq. H. L. C. 451; South v. East London Ry. Co., 16 Eq. 108; Vernon v. S. James, 16 Ch. D. 449). But in such a place it is very difficult to make out dedication by user (Whitehouse v. Hugh, [1906] 2 Ch. 285; Att.-Gen. v. Sewell, 88 L. J. K. B. 425). And it seems that such a dedication will not be presumed without evidence of the expenditure on the cul de sac of public money (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 207; Bourke v. Davis, 44 Ch. D. 122; Att.-Gen. v. Richmond, 89 L. T. 700). See Woodyer v. Hadden (5 Taunt. 125), where a court, which was no thoroughfare, was held not a highway. A footpath across a churchyard may be a "churchway," to which the right is in the parishioners, or else a common highway (Batten v. Gedye, 41 Ch. D. 515; compare Farquhar v. Newbury, [1908] 2 Ch. 589). There may be a faculty for such a path, see Re St. John's, Cardiff, [1898] P. 155. As to the distinction between a right for the public to use a footway on the ground of dedication, and a right for the inhabitants of a district to use a promenade on the ground of custom, see Abercromby v. Fermoy, [1900] 1 I. R. 302.

(1) What roads are highways.

Evidence of reputation.

On an issue, whether land is a highway, evidence of reputation is admissible, e.g. that at a meeting held to consider the repairing of a way, several, since dead, signed a paper, stating that the land was not a highway, there being at the time no litigation (Barraclough v. Johnson, 8 Ad. & Ell. 99; see Nicholls v. Parker, 14 East, 331, n. to Outram v. Moorewood). On such an issue a tithe map and award may be evidence (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 193), but not ordnance maps (Ibid., 203, Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 538). Evidence of reputation is not admissible to prove particular facts as to the boundaries of a highway (R. v. Bliss, 7 Ad. & El. 550; R. v. Berger, [1894] 1 Q. B. 823).

(2) Creation of highways.

Highways may be created—(1) by statute, (2) by dedication (Cubitt v. Maxse, L. R. 8 C. P. 714). The creation of a highway over a cemetery or churchyard may be authorised by faculty (Re Bideford Parish, [1900] P. 314). In the Channel Islands, a highway must be made out by grant or prescription (Godfrey v. Sark, [1902] A. C. 534).

By statute.

A highway may be created by statute (R. v. French, 4 Q. B. D. 507) e.g. the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 154; the Inclosure Acts; or the Settled Land Act, 1925, s. 56. When such a public right was created by a statute which also reserved private rights to the lord of the manor, the private reservation was subject to the public right (Benfieldside Board v. Consett Co., L. R. 3 Exch. D. 54; see L. & N. W. Ry. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 28).

By dedication.

Where a highway is created by dedication, there must be both dedication by the owner and user by the public (Cubitt v. Maxse, L. R. 8 C. P. 715; Att.-Gen. v. Biphosphated Guano Co., 11 Ch. D. 327). Whether a highway has been dedicated so as to become repairable by the inhabitants is a question of fact (Folkestone v. Brockman, [1914] A. C. 338, and see Cababé v. Walton-upon-

Rights of Way.

Thames, ibid., 102). Public user for a sufficient time (e.g. six years) is prima facie evidence on which dedication may be presumed (R. v. Petrie, 4 El. & B. 737). But the user must be open and as of right (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 202). User inferred to have been permissive was not sufficient ground for the presumption (Ibid., 208). The effect of user may depend on the nature of the land; and on the owner being resident or not (Chinnock v. Hartley Council, 63 J. P. 327). A single act of interruption by the owner is of much more weight upon a question of intention than many acts of enjoyment (Poole v. Huskinson, 11 M. & W. 830, adopted Healey v. Batley, 19 Eq. 388; Vernon v. S. James, 16 Ch. D. 456; Mann v. Brodie, 10 App. Cas. 386; see Coats v. Herefordshire, [1909] 2 Ch. 579). The common course to show that a licence only is intended, is to shut up the way one day in every year (British Museum v. Finnis, 5 C. & P. 460; R. v. Broke, 1 F. & F. 514). The presumption of dedication may be rebutted by proof of a bar having been placed across the street (Roberts v. Karr, 1 Camp. 262, n.; see Lethbridge v. Winter, Id. 263, n.). But a gate being kept across a way is not conclusive, as the way may have been granted to the public with the reservation of a gate to prevent cattle from straying (Davies v. Stephens, 7 C. & P. 570; R. v. Bliss, 2 Nev. & P. 464; see Barry v. Lowry, I. R. 11 C. L. 483; Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, 79 J. P. 515). As to the effect of dealing with the land as private property, see Friern Council v. Richardson, 62 J. P. 547.

Dedication a question of intention.

Dedication is a question of intention. The mere acting so as to lead persons into the supposition that a way is dedicated to the public does not of itself amount to dedication (Simpson v. Att.Gen., [1904] A. C. 493; Barraclough v. Johnson, 8 Ad. & El. 99). The mere setting out of an intended road, even where the public have traversed it, is not an irrevocable dedication (Hall v. Bootle, 44 L. T. 873). But a dedication may be presumed from an uninterrupted user by the public during six years (Rugby Charity v. Merryweather, 11 East, 376; R. v. Petrie, 4 El. & B. 737; 24 L. J. Q. B. 167). See also Webb v. Baldwin, 75 J. P. 564. Where an owner lays out a private carriage-way alongside a public footway, he is presumed to have dedicated the whole surface as a public footway (Att.-Gen. v. Esher Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 647); and see Att.-Gen. v. Hemingway, 81 J. P. 112. A public footway, however, which originated in an award was not converted by user into a public cartroad (Sheringham v. Holsey, [1904] W. N. 83).

Where highway can be dedicated.

Dedication may be proved of a space which includes a ditch, even though the ditch cannot be used for passage (Chorley v. Nightingale, [1906] 2 K. B. 618; [1907] 2 K. B. 637; see Simcox v. Yardley, 69 J. P. 66). As to the dedication as a highway of a non-tidal river, see Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 476; [1901] 2 Ch. 671. From user the Court may presume the dedication to the public of a way over a disused tramway site (Coats v. Herefordshire, [1909] 2 Ch. 579); or over a bridge (R. v. Southampton, 17 Q. B. D. 424; 19 Q. B. D. 590; see Surrey Canal Co. v. Hall, 1 Man. & Gr. 382; R. v. Wright, 3 B. & Ad. 681; Tyne Commrs. v. Imrie, 81 L. T. 174). Or over a sea wall or embankment (Greenwich v. Maudslay, L. R. 5 Q. B. 397); or over a path along the sea coast (Behrens v. Richards, [1905] 2 Ch. 614; Maddock v. Wallasey Board, 55 L. J. Q. B. 267). From user of some paths of this nature, however, which is often permitted by the landowner's good nature, it is difficult to infer an intention to dedicate ([1905], 2 Ch. 619). See the words of Bowen, L.J., in Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 691 n. "Nothing worse can happen in a free country, than to force people to be churlish about their rights, for fear that their indulgence may be abused," adopted in Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 492; Brinckman v.

Rights of Way.

Matley, [1903] 2 Ch. 340; Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 200).

Jus spatiandi

The right for the public to walk round and inspect a public monument is not one which can be the subject-matter of grant or prescription (Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 198, 199); nor would a network of tracks be held to be public roads (Ibid. 204). The use by the public of an open space by passing over it in every direction without any defined path was not evidence of the dedication of the whole space to the public (Robinson v. Cowpen Board, 63 L. J. Q. B. 235). Nor will dedication to the public be presumed in the case of a wood with tracks through it leading in different directions where people have wandered at pleasure (Chapman v. Cripps, 2 F. & F. 864; Schwinge v. Dowell, ibid. 845; Eyre v. New Forest Board, 8 T. L. R. 648). As to a footpath over a mountain, see Macpherson v. Scottish Society, 13 App. Cas. 744; and as to a road to a view point, Moser v. Ambleside, 89 J. P. 59. A presumption of dedication does not arise from user by purchasers of plots (Kirby v. Paignton, [1913] 1 Ch. 337).

Who can dedicate;

As regards the title of the person alleged to have dedicated. Continued user of a way by the public raises a presumption of dedication, and it is not incumbent on the public to show by what particular owner the dedication has been made; see as to the burden of proof Att.-Gen. v. Watford, [1912] 1 Ch. 417. But it is open to the owner of the soil to establish that owing to the condition of the title dedication was not possible (Farquhar v. Newbury, [1908] 2 Ch. 596; see R. v. Petrie, 4 El. & B. 737; 24 L. J. Q. B. 167; R. v. Eastmark, 11 Q. B. 877). It is settled that if there is dedication at all, it must be in perpetuity (Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 858), i.e. it must be by an owner in fee. A fee farm grantee can dedicate tenant for life;

(Smith v. Wilson, [1903] 2 I. R. 45). Where since 1810 the servient tenement had been held by successive tenants for life the Court refused in 1902 to presume dedication (Roberts v. James, 89 L. T. 282; Att.-Gen. v. Antrobus, [1905] 2 Ch. 201; Eyre v. New Forest, 56 J. P. 517). But where in 1842 there was a tenant for life and remainderman in fee; and the remainderman, being in possession, laid out a new road, and such road had been used by the public ever since, the Court in 1908 presumed that the acts of the remainderman had been done with the approval of the tenant for life, and decided in favour of dedication (Farquhar v. Newbury, [1909] 1 Ch. 12). Under special statutory provisions (S. L. Act, 1925, s. 56) the tenant for life of settled land can dedicate.

As regards a tenant for years, he cannot dedicate for his term (Corsellis v. London, [1907] 1 Ch. 704). A tenant for ninety-nine years cannot dedicate without the consent of the owner of the fee; and permission by such tenant will not bind the landlord after the expiration of the term (R. v. Bliss, 7 Ad. & Ell. 555; Barraclough v. Johnson, 8 Ad. & Ell. 104; Pryor v. Pryor, 26 L. T. 760). However, after a long lapse of time, and a frequent change of tenants, and from the notorious and uninterrupted use of a way by the public, it may be presumed that the landlord had notice of the way being used, and that it was so used with his concurrence (R. v. Barr, 4 Camp. 16; Davies v. Stephens, 7 C. & P. 570; Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 507; see Deeble v. Linehan, 12 Ir. C. L. Rep. (N.S.) 1; R. v. Hudson, Str. 909). Notice to the steward is notice to the landlord (R. v. Barr, supra; Doe v. Wilson, 11 East, 56). Where evidence was given of user over nearly seventy years, but during the whole period the land had been on lease, the jury might presume from these acts a dedication at a time anterior to the lease (Winterbottom v. Derby, L. R. 2 Ex. 316; see Wood v. Veal, 5 B. & Ald. 454; Barraclough v.

Johnson, 8 Ad. & Ell. 104; R. v. Lloyd, 1 Camp. 260; Baxter v. Taylor, 4 B. & Ad. 72; Bermondsey v. Brown, 1 Eq. 204).

Rights of Way.

Others.

Long user of a way across copyholds is evidence of dedication by both lord and copyholder (Powers v. Bathurst, 42 L. T. 123). The Crown may dedicate, R. v. East Mark, 11 Q. B. 877; Turner v. Walsh, 6 App. Cas. 636. Land acquired by a company for statutory objects may be dedicated by the company; but only if the public user be not inconsistent with those objects (Grand Junction Co. v. Petty, 21 Q. B. D. 273; G. W. Ry. Co. v. Solihull Council, 86 L. T. 852; Att.-Gen. v. L. S. W. Ry. 21 T. L. R. 220; Taff Vale v. Pontypridd, 93 L. T. 126; Coats v. Herefordshire, [1909] 2 Ch. 579; see Re Gonty and Manchester Co., [1896] 2 Q. B. 439, the case of a private way). As to dedication of land under the administration of the Court, see London C. C. v. Hughes, 104 L. T. 685.

Limited dedication.

There may be a partial dedication of a highway to the public (Stafford v. Coyney, 7 B. & C. 257; see Roberts v. Karr, 1 Camp. 262; R. v. Northamptonshire, 2 M. & S. 262). Although the dedication of a way to the public may be partial or limited as to the sort of way (as to a horseway, &c.), yet there cannot be a qualified dedication to the public, subject to a power of resumption to the grantor (Fitzpatrick v. Robinson, 1 Hudson & Brook, 585; see Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. 315; Lade v. Shepherd, 2 Str. 1004; Barraclough v. Johnson, 8 Ad. & Ell. 104). There can be no dedication of a way to the public for a limited time; if dedicated at all, it must be dedicated in perpetuity (Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 848). Nor can there be a dedication to a limited part of the public, as to a parish (Farquhar v. Newbury, [1909] 1 Ch. 12; Poole v. Huskinson, 11 M. & W. 827; Bermondsey v. Brown, 1 Eq. 204). But parishioners may by custom have a churchway (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 348). A subject cannot without a grant from the Crown or a statute dedicate a way to the public subject to a toll (Austerberry v. Oldham, 29 Ch. D. 750; Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901], 2 Ch. 693). But a highway may be dedicated, subject to a pre-existing right of user by adjoining occupiers for depositing goods thereon (Morant v. Chamberlin, 6 H. & N. 541), or subject to a market (Gingell v. Stepney [1908] 1 K. B. 115). Where an erection or an excavation exists upon land, and the land is dedicated as a highway, the dedication must be taken to be made to the public and accepted by them, subject to the inconvenience or risk (Fisher v. Prowse, 2 B. & S. 770; see Robbins v. Jones, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 221; Horridge v. Makinson, 84 L. J. K. B. 1294). There may in law be a dedication to the public of a footpath across a field, subject to the right of the owner of the soil to plough it up (Mercer v. Woodgate, L. R. 5 Q. B. 26; Arnold v. Blaker, L. R. 6 Q. B. 433; see R. v. Leeke, 5 B. & Ad. 469). In such a case the public have no right to deviate (Arnold v. Holbrook, L. R. 8 Q. B. 96). Where part of a highway is dedicated as a carriage-way and part as a footway the urban authority cannot, under sect. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, alter the relative proportions (Robertson v. Bristol, [1900] 2 Q. B. 198).

(3) Nature of public rights over highway.

The prima facie right of the public is one of passage; but the reasonable and usual mode of using a highway as such includes other things (Harrison v. Rutland, [1893] 1 Q. B. 146). The public, however, have no right to remain on a highway for sporting (R. v. Pratt, 4 El & Bl. 860; see Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 168; Fielden v. Cox, 22 T. L. R. 411), or for interfering with sport (Harrison v. Rutland, [1893] 1 Q. B. 142), or for watching trials of racehorses on adjoining land (Hickman v. Maisey, [1900] 1 Q. B. 752). Nor can they depasture cattle on the highway (Dovaston v. Payne, 2 H. Bl. 527; Stevens v. Whistler, 11 East, 51; see Luscombe v. G. W. Ry.

Rights of Way.

Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 313). The owner of the soil may exercise all rights of ownership not inconsistent with the dedication to the public (St. Mary, Newington v. Jacobs, L. R. 7 Q. B. 47). As to deviation by the public, see Arnold v. Holbrook, L. R. 8 Q. B. 96; Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 848. And as to the rights of using a highway possessed by occupiers of premises abutting thereon, see cases quoted, p. 75, post.

Fences by the side of a highway are prima facie the boundaries of the highway so as to raise a presumption that the public right of way extends over the whole space between the fences (Offin v. Rochfort, [1906] 1 Ch. 342); so far as that space can be used for passage (Chorley v. Nightingale, [1906] 2 K. B. 618; Harvey v. Truro, [1903] 2 Ch. 638, and see Rowley v. Tottenham, [1914] A. C. 95). But the mere existence of a fence is not conclusive. The presumption will not arise where there is reason for supposing that the fence was not put up as a boundary of the highway (Offin v. Rochfort, supra), e.g. where the road crosses uninclosed waste the fence may have been put up to separate adjoining closes from the waste (Neeld v. Hendon Council, 81 L. T. 410). See as to footpaths, Ford v. Harrow, 88 L. T. 394, and see generally, R. v. U. K. Electric Telegraph Co., 2 B. & S. 647; 31 L. J. M. C. 166; Turner v. Ringwood Board, 9 Eq. 418; Nicol v. Beaumont, 50 L. T. 112; Locke King v. Woking Council, 77 L. T. 790. Evidence rebutting the above presumption was given in Neeld v. Hendon Council, 81 L. T. 405. The nature of the district, the width and level of the margins, and the regularity of the lines of fence must be considered (Belmore v. Kent Council, [1901] 1 Ch. 873). Where, by an inclosure award, a way was set out fifteen feet wide as a public bridlepath and footway and also as a private driftway, the public were held entitled to use the whole width for those purposes (Pullin v. Deffel, 64 L. T. 134). As to the application of the fifteen feet rule, see Easton v. Richmond Board, L. R. 7 Q. B. 69.

(4) Repair of public ways.

At common law, highways are repairable by the inhabitants of the parish (Glen on Highways, cap. 4). In the case of dedications before the Highway Act, 1835, the assent of the parish was not requisite (R. v. Leeke, 5 B. & Ad. 469; Rishton v. Haslingden, [1898] 1 Q. B. 301). In the case of dedications since the Act, parishes are not liable to repair the highway unless it is made to the satisfaction of the surveyor of the highways, and of two justices of the peace, who are to give a certificate to this effect, which certificate is to be enrolled (Highway Act, 1835, s. 23). After a lapse of time these formalities were presumed (Leigh Council v. King, [1901] 1 Q. B. 747). But this case was disapproved in H. L. (Cababé v. Walton-upon-Thames, [1914] A. C. 102).

Under recent statutory provisions, main roads are now repairable by the county council (Local Government Act, 1888, s. 11). And other highways (unless repairable by some person ratione tenuræ) by the district council (Local Government Act, 1894, s. 25; see R. v. Shipley Council, 61 J. P. 488, and as to taking over highways responsible ratione tenuræ, Re Stamford and Warrington, [1911] 1 Ch. 648). As to roads within urban districts, see Public Health Act, 1875, s. 144; R. v. Poole, 19 Q. B. D. 602; R. v. Wakefield, 20 Q. B. D. 810. A parish council may undertake the repair of a public footpath (Local Government Act, 1894, s. 13 (2)). Where there is no obligation to repair there can be (in the absence of special power) no right to repair (Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518).

See further as to the repair of highways, Dovaston v. Payne, 2 Smith's L. C.; R. v. Stoughton, 2 Wms. Saund. 462, edit. 1871, and Glen on Highways.

Rights of Way.

(5) Extinction of public ways.

Mere disuse of a highway for any length of time cannot deprive the public of their rights in respect of it (Harvey v. Truro, [1903] 2 Ch. 638; Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & Ald. 662; R. v. Montague, 4 B. & C. 598). The public cannot release their right to a public highway by non-user (Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 848; Freeman v. Tottenham Ry. Co., 13 W. R. 335; Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 265), or by acquiescence in an obstruction (Pullin v. Deffel, 64 L. T. 134). Consent by a highway authority to an obstruction is ineffectual (Harvey v. Truro, [1903] 2 Ch. 638). A highway may be destroyed by the sea (R. v. Hornsea, 23 L. J. M. C. 59), or by a landslip (R. v. Greenhow, 1 Q. B. D. 703); and a way ceases to be a public highway when the access to it at both ends has become impossible (Bailey v. Jamieson, 1 C. P. D. 329). A public right of way may be extinguished by statute, either by express words (Wells v. London and Tilbury Ry. Co., 5 Ch. D. 126), or by implication (Yarmouth v. Simmons, 10 Ch. D. 518). The repeal of a statute which had extinguished a public right of way did not revive the right (Gwynne v. Drewitt, [1894] 2 Ch. 616). As to the substitution by statute of one highway for another see E. Riding C. C. v. Selby Co., [1925] Ch. 841. A public right of way to a towing-path on the banks of a navigable tide river, is not destroyed by the river having been converted by statute into a floating harbour, although the user of the towing-path has been thereby increased (R. v. Tippett, 3 B. & Ald. 193). Where an inclosure Act directs that all ways not set out shall be deemed part of the lands to be allotted, an ancient towing-path upon the banks of the river, though not set out by the commissioners, still subsists, for it is not within their jurisdiction (Simpson v. Scales, 2 Bos. & P. 496; see Thackrah v. Seymour, 1 C. & M. 18). The 10th and 11th sections of the Inclosure Act, 1801, did not extinguish a right to take water from a well which the inhabitants of a parish had immemorially exercised upon common land which had been inclosed, although the ancient way to the well was extinguished under the inclosure (Race v. Ward, 7 El. & Bl. 384). The Railways Clauses Act, 1845, sect. 16, does not empower a railway company to divert a public footpath so as to place it upon land of which the company has not acquired the ownership (Rangeley v. Midland Ry. Co., 3 Ch. 306). The mere construction of a railway across a public footpath will not extinguish it (Cole v. Miles, 60 L. T. 145). But the company are not bound to make a bridge or tunnel (Dartford Council v. Bexley Heath Ry. Co., [1898] A. C. 210).

(6) Remedy for nuisances to public ways: by indictment, &c.,

In the case of public nuisance to a highway arising from nonfeasance in failing to repair it, no action will lie against an urban authority (Cowley v. Newmarket, [1892] A. C. 345; see Sydney v. Bourke, [1895] A. C. 433; Thompson v. Brighton, [1894] 1 Q. B. 332; Lambert v. Lowestoft, [1901] 1 Q. B. 590); and as against a person liable to repair ratione tenuræ, it was doubted whether an action for special damage for non-repair would lie (Rundle v. Hearle, [1898] 2 Q. B. 83). The remedy in the case of non-repair is by proceedings before justices (Highway Act, 1835, s. 94), or by indictment, which apparently lies against the inhabitants of a parish (Glen on Highways Bk. 1, ch. 5), but not against a parish council (R. v. Shipley Council, 61 J. P. 488). In the case of a public nuisance arising from misfeasance the remedy is by indictment, or by information at the suit of the Attorney-General. In the case of a private nuisance by misfeasance the remedy is by action. But where that which is a public nuisance is also a private nuisance to an individual by inflicting on him some special damage, the individual may have his private remedy by action (Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 143, 145; see Wallasey Board v. Gracey, 36 Ch. D. 593; Boyce v. Paddington, [1903] 1 Ch. 114). An indictment does not lie for obstruction of a local right, such as a parish church way (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 355); but does lie for obstruction of a highway (R. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640; R. v. U. K. Telegraph Co., 2 B. & S. 647, n.; R. v. Longton Gas Co., 29 L. J. M. C. 118). Such an indictment cannot be compromised (Windhill Board v. Vint, 45 Ch. D. 351). Statutory penalties are imposed on persons committing specified nuisances on a highway by Highway Act, 1835, s. 72.

Rights of Way.

by action for damages,

A private person cannot sue for damage arising from the disturbance of a highway, unless he has sustained some special damage (Co. Litt. 56 a; 5 Rep. 73 a; Rose v. Groves, 5 M. & G. 613; Dobson v. Blackmore, 9 Q. B. 1002; Blagrave v. Bristol, 1 H. & N. 369). Where the plaintiff proved no damage peculiar to himself, beyond delay in passing along the road, he could not maintain the action (Winterbottom v. Derby, L. R. 2 Ex. 316). So, an individual cannot maintain an action where the obstruction is temporary and the injury sustained by the plaintiff is only in common with others (Ricket v. Metropolitan Ry. Co., L. R. 2 H. L. 175; overruling Wilks v. Hungerford Co., 2 Bing. (N.C.) 281; Metropolitan Board of Works v. M'Carthy, L. R. 7 H. L. 243; Biggs v. London, 15 Eq. 376). But if the plaintiff can prove a particular damage to himself beyond the general damage to the public, and that such damage is direct and substantial, an action can be maintained (Benjamin v. Storr, L. R. 9 C. P. 400). In Iveson v. Moore (1 Lord Raym. 186), the preventing of colliers from coming to a colliery by obstructing a public highway, by which the benefit of the colliery was lost, enabled a man to maintain an action (see Rose v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101; Rose v. Groves, 5 M. & G. 620; Greasly v. Codling, 2 Bing, 266). The occupier of premises abutting on a highway may recover damages on the ground of an unreasonable use of a highway by others which has either occasioned loss of custom to the plaintiff (Fritz v. Hobson, 14 Ch. D. 542), or rendered his dwelling uncomfortable (Benjamin v. Storr, L. R. 9 C. P. 400; see Sadler v. G. W. Ry., [1896] A. C. 450). In a case of doubt the right of such an occupier himself to use the highway for loading and unloading goods at his premises must yield to the public right of passage (Att.-Gen. v. Brighton Association, [1900], 1 Ch. 276). Such right is not the occupier's private right, but an individual interest in a public right (Chaplin v. Westminster, [1901] 2 Ch. 329). As to the reasonable user of a highway by the occupiers of premises abutting thereon, see Original Hartlepool Co. v. Gibb, 5 Ch. D. 721; Barber v. Penley, [1893] 2 Ch. 447. Where a public right of way is raised as a defence to an action of trespass, see as to pleadings and evidence, Webber v. Sparkes, 10 M. & W. 485; Wood v. Wedgewood, 1 C. B. 273; Bracegirdle v. Peacock, 8 Q. B. 174; Offin v. Rochford Council, [1906], 1 Ch. 342; and as to particulars, see Spedding v. Fitzpatrick, 38 Ch. D. 410. In a case where this defence failed the Court granted nominal damages, but refused an injunction on the ground that the plaintiff was not injured (Behrens v. Richards, [1905], 2 Ch. 614).

by injunction,

The Attorney-General can obtain an injunction to restrain interference with a highway without showing actual injury (Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury, 21 Ch. D. 752; see Att.-Gen. v. L. & N. W. Ry., [1900] 1 Q. B. 78). But without proof of special damage an individual alone cannot sue (see London &c., Association v. London & India Docks Committee, [1892] 3 Ch. 270). Where, however, an individual can prove special damage, he can sue for an injunction without making the Attorney-General a party (Cook v. Bath, 6 Eq. 177; Barber v. Penley, [1893] 2 Ch. 447; Boyce v. Paddington, [1903] 1 Ch. 114). The remedy of a parishioner in respect of interference with a "churchway" is in the ecclesiastical court (Batten v. Gedye, 41 Ch. D. 507). The possessor of excavated land must keep it fenced off from any public place or right of way (Att.-Gen. v. Roe, [1915] 1 Ch. 235). Rights of Way.

The breaking up of the pavements of a town by an individual for the purpose of laying gas pipes, may be the subject of an indictment (R. v. Longton Gas Co., 29 L. J. M. C. 118); but it will not be restrained by injunction as a public nuisance, the injury not being either irreparable or continuous (Att.-Gen. v. Cambridge Co., 4 Ch. 71). Damages in a proper case may be awarded in substitution for an injunction (Wedmore v. Bristol, 11 W. R. 13), the jurisdiction of the Court under Lord Cairns' Act not being affected by its repeal (Sayers v. Collyer, 28 Ch. D. 103).

A private individual has no right to remove an obstruction to a highway, unless it is necessary in order that he may exercise his right of passage (Bateman v. Bluck, 18 Q. B. 870); or unless it causes a special injury to him (Bagshaw v. Buxton Board, 1 Ch. D. 224). As to removal by a highway authority, see post, p. 70. It is doubtful whether the right to abate exists in the case of nonfeasance (Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518). In any case it would not justify a member of the public in re-erecting a bridge which had been allowed to decay (ibid.). by abatement.

(7) Public bodies and highways.

With respect to public bodies, some statutory provisions require to be mentioned. By Loc. Gov. Act, 1888, s. 11, sub-s. 6, main roads, except where an urban district council maintains them, are vested in the county council. As regards ordinary roads, which are not main roads, it is provided by P. H. Act, 1875, s. 149, that streets within an urban district shall vest in and be under the control of the local authority (now known as the urban district council); and to this authority are given the management powers of surveyors of highways (P. H. Act, 1875, ss. 144-148; Loc. Gov. Act, 1894, s. 21). Ordinary roads in a rural district are not vested in the local authority (now known as the rural district council); but to this authority have been given the management powers mentioned in sects. 144-148 of the P. H. Act, 1875 (Loc. Gov. Act, 1894, s. 25). As regards the metropolis, sect. 96 of the Metrop. Management Act, 1855, contains vesting provisions similar to sect. 149 of the P. H. Act, 1875 (see Battersea v. County of London Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 474). Statutory provisions as to vesting and management.

The effect of these various vesting provisions (which seem to be substantially similar) has been much discussed. It has been held that sect. 149 of the P. H. Act, 1875, vests in the local authority property as distinguished from an easement (Tunbridge Wells v. Baird, [1896] A. C. 437; Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 311; Westminster v. Johnson, [1904] 2 K. B. 745). This means such property and such property only as is necessary for the control, protection, and maintenance of the street as a highway for public use (Tunbridge Wells v. Baird, [1896] A. C. 442; see Sydney Council v. Young, [1898] A. C. 459). That which is vested is what is called the "area of user"; all the stratum of air above the surface and all the stratum of soil below the surface which in any reasonable sense can be required for the purposes of the street as street vest in and belong to the local authority (Finchley Electric Co. v. Finchley Council, [1903] 1 Ch. 441; compare Midland Ry. Co. v. Wright, [1901] 1 Ch. 738; Att.-Gen. v. Barker, 83 L. T. 245). The local authority accordingly had no power to erect lavatories below the surface of a street (Tunbridge Wells v. Baird, supra; see now Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, s. 47); or to compel Effect of vesting provisions.

Rights of Way.

an electric company to remove wires two feet below the surface (Battersea v. County of London Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 474); or to prevent the placing of electric wires over the street at a height not interfering with the proper user of the street as a street (Finchley Electric Co. v. Finchley Council, supra). Secus where the wire interferes with such user (Wandsworth v. United Telephone Co., 13 Q. B. D. 904; compare National Telephone Co. v. St. Peter Port, [1900] A. C. 317). The property of the local authority was not enlarged by the fact that the street had been originally conveyed to turnpike trustees in fee (Finchley Electric Co. v. Finchley Council, supra), and the property ceased when the highway was stopped up or diverted (Rolls v. St. George's Vestry, 14 Ch. D. 785). It is a statutory determinable fee simple (Foley v. Dudley, [1910] 1 K. B. 317). In respect of their property in the area of user the local authority can sue for a trespass or a nuisance damaging their property (Wednesbury v. Lodge Co., [1907] 1 K. B. 90; [1908] A. C. 326; Foley v. Dudley, supra; Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 311; Sheringham Council v. Holsey, [1904] W. N. 83; 20 T. L. R. 402).

Powers of district councils;

Further, by sect. 26 of Loc. Gov. Act, 1894, it is the duty of every district council to protect public rights of way and to prevent obstruction, and also to prevent encroachment on roadside wastes. For the purposes of the section the council may institute or defend legal proceedings and take other steps. (See as to county councils, Loc. Gov. Act, 1888, s. 11, sub-s. 1).

as to removing obstructions;

Under the above section, a district council is in the position of a private individual protecting his own property (Murray v. Epsom Board, [1897] 1 Ch. 40). It can remove obstructions (Reynolds v. Presteign Council, [1896] 1 Q. B. 609; see Louth Council v. West, 65 L. J. Q. B. 535; Harris v. Northamptonshire Council, 61 J. P. 599); and may contribute to the costs of an individual who has done so, and been sued (R. v. Norfolk Council, [1901] 2 K. B. 268).

The district council can defend actions in which a public right of way is brought in question (Harvey v. Truro Council, [1903] 2 Ch. 635; Offin v. Rochford Council, [1906] 1 Ch. 302), and in such proceedings has under the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, recovered costs as between solicitor and client (Ibid.; see Greenwell v. Howell, [1900] 1 Q. B. 535). The council can in certain cases maintain in its own name an action of trespass (see Sheringham Council v. Holsey, [1904] W. N. 83; 20 T. L. R. 402). But in general the council cannot without proof of special damage sue alone in its own name in respect of a public nuisance (Wallasey Board v. Gracey, 36 Ch. D. 593; Tottenham v. Williamson, [1896] 2 Q. B. 353); or sue alone in its own name to enforce bye-laws as to new streets (Att.-Gen. v. Ashborne, [1903] 1 Ch. 101; Devonport v. Tozer, [1903] 1 Ch. 759; Att.-Gen. v. Gibb, [1909] 2 Ch. 265). The council may, however, in a proper case act as relator. In an action by the Attorney-General at the relation of a district council, an injunction was granted to restrain acts rendered illegal by a public general statute, even where such statute provided a special remedy by way of penalty which had been recovered (Att-Gen. v. Wimbledon Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 34; Att.-Gen. v. Pontypridd, [1908] 1 Ch. 388).

Parish authorities.

As regards parish authorities. Before the formation of parish councils under the Loc. Gov. Act, 1894, it was held that the vestry of a parish could not, except as relators, sue to restrain the obstruction of a public right of way (Bermondsey v. Brown, 1 Eq. 204). Since the Loc. Gov. Act, 1894, it has been held that a parish council which had property in the herbage growing on a private road could sue for trespass to the herbage (Att.-Gen. v. Garner, [1907] 2 K. B. 487). As to rights of way acquired by a parish council and actions in respect thereof, see Loc. Gov.

Act, 1894, s. 8, sub-s. 1 (g), and Stoke Council v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277.

Rights of Way.

The effect of statutory powers given to public bodies of interfering with a highway and the subsoil thereof was considered, as regards tramway poles, in Escott v. Newport, [1904] 2 K. B. 369; Goldberg v. Liverpool, 82 L. T. 362; as regards lamp-posts, in Chaplin v. Westminster, [1901] 2 Ch. 329; and as regards sanitary conveniences, in Vernon v. St. James', 16 Ch. D. 449; Westminster v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., [1905] A. C. 427. As regards sanitary conveniences in London, see as to the effect of the vesting provisions in s. 44 of the P. H. (London) Act, 1891, Westminster v. Johnson, [1904] 2 K. B. 737; L. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Westminster, [1904] 1 Ch. 765.

Statutory powers of interfering with highways.

(8) Ownership of soil of highway.

Subject to the above statutory provisions the rule is that the freehold of the highway is in the owner of the freehold of the soil, although the public may pass and repass at their pleasure (2 Inst. 705; Lade v. Shepherd, 2 Str. 1044). The owner of the soil is entitled to all profits, trees and mines upon or under the highway (1 Roll. Abr. 392; Goodtitle v. Alker, 1 Burr. 143). In the 82nd section of the Highway Act, 1835, there is a saving of mines to the owner of lands taken for widening narrow roads. The soil in turnpike roads does not vest in the trustees thereof, who have only the control of the highway, without a special clause for that purpose (Davison v. Gill, 1 East, 69; see also R. v. Mersey Navigation, 9 B. & C. 95; R. v. Thomas, Id. 114; Salisbury v. G. N. Ry. Co., 5 C. B. (N.S.) 174). The owner of land adjoining only one side of the highway may maintain an action of trespass against one who suffers his cattle to depasture along the highway (Dovaston v. Payne, 2 H. Bl. 527; Stevens v. Whistler, 11 East, 51; see Luscombe v. G. W. Ry., [1899] 2 Q. B. 313); or an action of ejectment for land over which there is a public right of way (Goodtitle v. Alker, 1 Burr. 133; Doe v. Wilkinson, 3 B. & C. 413; and see Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bing. 448; Bevan v. London Cement Co., 67 L. T. 615). And the owner of the soil can obtain an injunction to restrain a stranger from laying down pipes under the highway (Goodson v. Richardson, 9 Ch. 221). The principle is carried so far that a man may be a trespasser on the highway when he is there not for passing but for different purposes, e.g. sporting (R. v. Pratt, 4 El. & Bl. 860); or for interfering with sport (Harrison v. Rutland, [1893] 1 Q. B. 142); or for watching trials of racehorses on adjoining land (Hickman v. Maisey, [1900] 1 Q. B. 752). The owner who dedicates his land as a highway parts with no other right than a right of passage, and may exercise all other rights not inconsistent with such dedication (St. Mary, Newington v. Jacobs, L. R. 7 Q. B. 47). Title to the soil of a highway (subject to the public right of passage) was acquired by letting the grazing for a long period (Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 19).

Where an inclosure Act provided for the allotment of land to the lord in compensation for all right of soil, the soil of a private road set out under the Act vested ad medium filum in the allottees of the adjacent land (Neaverson v. Peterborough Council, [1901] 1 Ch. 22). But there is no general presumption that the soil in roads set out under an Inclosure Act belongs to the adjoining owners (R. v. Edmonton, 1 M. & Rob. 24; R. v. Wright, 3 B. & Ad. 681; see Haigh v. West, supra). Where the herbage of a road becomes vested by the Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801, s. 11, in the proprietors of allotments on each side, no presumption arises that the soil itself belongs to such proprietors (R. v. Hatfield, 4 Ad. & Ell. 156; see Hooper v. Bourne, 3 Q. B. D. 258). The soil in a road was held to remain in the lord of the manor, that portion of the soil only being taken from him for which he received compensation and which is allotted to others (Poole v. Huskinson, 11 M. & W. 827; see R. v. East Mark, 12 Jur. 332; Neaverson v. Peterborough Council, supra).

Where closes abutting on opposite sides of the highway belong to different owners, each owner is, according to presumption of law, entitled to the soil under the highway usque ad medium filum viæ (Beckett v. Leeds, 7 Ch. 424; Leigh v. Jack, 5 Ex. D. 270; L. & N. W. Ry. v. Westminster, [1902] 1 Ch. 279). Accordingly, such closes may be "adjoining or contiguous" within the meaning of a lease (Haynes v. King, [1893] 3 Ch. 439). As to the meaning of "adjoining" in covenants, see further White v. Harrow, 86 L. T. 4; Ind, Coope & Co. v. Hamblin, 84 L. T. 168; Vale v. Moorgate, 80 L. T. 487; and in a statute Re Bateman and Parker, [1899] 1 Ch. 599). The above-mentioned presumption exists only in the absence of evidence of ownership (Beckett v. Leeds, 7 Ch. 421). The presumption applies equally to a private as to a public road (Holmes v. Bellingham, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 329; Smith v. Howden, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 398).

When soil of highway passes by conveyance.

In the case of the conveyance of land adjoining a highway, the soil of the highway, ad medium filum viæ, passes by the conveyance. The rule applies even where the land is set forth by admeasurement and referred to in a plan, which includes no portion of the highway (Berridge v. Ward, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 400; R. v. Strand Board, 4 B. & S. 526, where the boundary of a parish was defined by statute; Micklethwait v. Newlay Co., 33 Ch. D. 145, a case of land bounded by a river). The rule applies to streets in a town as well as to highways in the country (Haynes v. King, [1893] 3 Ch. 439; Re White's Charities, [1898] 1 Ch. 659; L. & N. W. Ry. v. Westminster, [1902] 1 Ch. 279); and to leases as well as conveyances (Haynes v. King, supra; see Landrock v. Metropolitan Ry. Co. (1886), W. N. 195; Mappin v. Liberty, [1903] 1 Ch. 118). The rule does not apply to a grant of land adjoining a railway (Thompson v. Hickman, [1907] 1 Ch. 550). As to whether it applies to grants by the Crown, see Mappin v. Liberty, supra; Att.-Gen. v. British Museum, [1903] 2 Ch. 598. But the soil of the highway will not pass if it appears that such soil was not intended to pass, either from a map annexed to the conveyance, or from the form of the conveyance (Salisbury v. G. N. Ry. Co., 5 C. B. (N.S.) 174; 28 L. J. C. P. 40; Plumstead v. British Land Co., L. R. 10 Q. B. 16). The circumstances under which the conveyance was executed (e.g. trees on the highway having been omitted from a valuation) may assist to rebut the presumption (Pryor v. Petre, [1894] 2 Ch. 11). And where a conveyance described land as bounded by a street, which at that time was intended to be used as a highway, but had not been dedicated, the soil of the street did not pass (Leigh v. Jack, L. R. 5 Ex. D. 264; see Mappin v. Liberty, supra). Cotton, L.J., doubted whether the rule would ever apply to cases where land is sold in plots for building purposes, even although the roads had been actually laid out (Leigh v. Jack, supra). As to the effect of subsequent circumstances not contemplated at the time of the grant, see Micklethwaite v. Newlay Co., 33 Ch. D. 133. Where the grantor is the owner of the soil beyond the medium filum, the presumption is that the conveyance passes the soil so far as vested in him (Re White's Charities, [1898] 1 Ch. 659). Strips of land along a highway, even though indirectly connected with waste, may pass under a conveyance of the adjacent inclosure (Dendy v. Simpson, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1058; 9 W. R. 743; Simpson v. Dendy, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 433).

Ownership of waste

At common law (independently of statute) the presumption is, that waste land adjoining a road belongs to the owner of the adjoining

inclosure, and not to the lord of the manor (Steel v. Prickett, 2 Stark. 463; Scoones v. Morrell, 1 Beav. 251); whether such owner be a freeholder, copyholder, or leaseholder (Doe v. Pearsey, 7 B. & C. 304). The right extends to the centre of the road (Cooke v. Green, 11 Price, 736). This presumption may be rebutted by evidence of acts of ownership by the lord of the manor (Anon., Lofft, 358). And if the strip communicate with larger portions of land, the presumption is considerably narrowed; for the evidence of ownership, which applies to the larger portions, applies also to the strip (Grose v. West, 3 Taunt. 39; Headlam v. Hedley, Holt, N. P. C. 463). Upon this question the lord may give evidence of grants by him of the waste between the road and other inclosures at a distance from the spot, provided such evidence is confined to the road which passes by the spot (Doe v. Kemp, 7 Bing. 332; 2 Bing. N. C. 102; see Stanley v. White, 14 East, 332; Dendy v. Simpson, 18 C. B. 831). The presumption may also be rebutted by the owner of the adjoining land accepting an allotment of the strip from commissioners appointed to inclose the wastes of the manor (Gery v. Redman, 1 Q. B. D. 161). Where the lord has conveyed land to A and other land to B, and a strip passed by one of these conveyances, but it is doubtful by which; no presumption arises in favour of A from the fact that the strip lies between a highway and land indisputably comprised in the conveyance to A (White v. Hill, 6 Q. B. 787). The presumption may also be rebutted by showing that the strip adjoins other land occupied adversely to such owner (Doe v. Hampson, 4 C. B. 267; 17 L. J. C. P. 225). Where a lord incloses a strip by the side of a highway, a presumption arises that what he leaves between the metal and his fence is dedicated to the public (Copestake v. West Sussex, [1911] 2 Ch. 331. See also East v. Berkshire County Council, 106 L. T. 65).

As regards recent statutes, sect. 149 of the P. H. Act, 1875, ante, p. 69, enables the local authority to demise the right of pasturage on the side of a highway (Coverdale v. Charlton, 4 Q. B. D. 104). On the other hand, sect. 11, sub-sect. 6 of the Local Government Act, 1888, does not vest in the county council strips of grass bordering the metalled part of a main road or the herbage thereon (Curtis v. Kesteven Council, 45 Ch. D. 504). As to the rights of the public over roadside wastes, see ante, p. 70.

(9) Balks and ditches.

Balks are strips of land lying between lands which are private property. In presumption of law, balks belong to the owners of the adjacent land, unless the contrary is proved (Godmanchester v. Phillips, 4 Ad. & Ell. 560).

The rule about ditching is this: no man making a ditch can cut into his neighbour's soil, but usually he cuts to the very extremity of his own land; he is of course bound to throw the soil which he digs out upon his own land, and after, if he likes it, he plants a hedge upon the top of it; therefore, if he afterwards cuts beyond the edge of the ditch, which is the extremity of his land, he cuts into his neighbour's land, and is a trespasser; no rule about four feet or eight feet has anything to do with it (Vowles v. Miller, 3 Taunt. 138). Where two adjacent fields are separated by a hedge and ditch there is a primâ facie presumption that the owner of the close on the side of the hedge opposite to the ditch owns the hedge (Guy v. West, Selw. N. P. 1218), and also the land constituting the ditch (Doe v. Pearsey, 7 B. & C. 308). The presumption is not rebutted by acts of ownership done by another without the knowledge of such owner (Craven v. Pridmore, 18 T. L. R. 282; Henniker v. Howard, 90 L. T. 157). Whether the presumption applies to a natural watercourse, qu. (Marshall v. Taylor, [1895] 1 Ch. 641). If there are two ditches, one on each side of the hedge, then the ownership of the hedge must be ascertained by proving acts of ownership (Guy v. West, Selw. N. P. 1218; see as to acts of ownership of a ditch, Searby v. Tottenham Ry. Co., 5 Eq. 409; Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., 13 Ch. D. 268; Marshall v. Taylor, supra, followed in Kynoch v. Rowlands, [1912] 1 Ch. 527). If a tree grows near the confines of the land of two parties, so that the roots extend into the soil of each, the property in the tree belongs to the owner of the land in which the tree was first sown or planted (Holder v. Coates, M. & M. 112; see Waterman v. Soper, 1 Lord Raym. 737; Masters v. Pollie, 2 Roll. R. 141; Anon., 2 Roll. R. 255). But the other owner can cut branches which overhang his land even where they have overhung for twenty years (Lemmon v. Webb, [1895] A. C. 1), or recover damage caused by overhanging branches (Smith v. Giddy, [1904] 2 K. B. 448).

(1) Different kinds of ways.

There are four kinds of ways (Co. Litt. 56 a):—1, a foot-way—2, a horse-way, which includes a foot-way—3, a carriage-way, which includes both horse-way and foot-way—4, a drift-way (see Cannon v. Villars, 8 Ch. D. 420, 421). Although a carriage-way comprehends a horse-way and a foot-way (Davies v. Stevens, 7 C. & P. 570), yet it does not necessarily include a drift-way (Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279); but evidence of a carriage-way is strong presumptive evidence of the grant of a drift-way (Ibid.). As to the meaning of a right of way to "lead manure," see Brunton v. Hall, 1 Q. B. 792. A way may be granted for agricultural purposes only (Reynolds v. Edwards, Willes 282); or for the carriage of coals only (Iveson v. Moore, 3 Ld. Raym. 291; 1 Salk. 15); or for the carriage of all other articles except coals (Stafford v. Coyney, 7 B. & C. 257; Jackson v. Stacey, Holt, N. P. C. 455). There may be a private right of way over a cul de sac (Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 234). Parishioners may by custom be entitled to a church-way within the churchyard (Batten v. Gedye, 41 Ch. D. 507); or across the demesne of a manor within the parish (Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 341).

Public and private ways co-existing.

There may be both an occupation way and a public highway over the same road (Brownlow v. Tomlinson, 1 M. & G. 484; Wells v. London & Tilbury Co., 5 Ch. D. 126; Att.-Gen. v. Esher Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 647). The acquiring a right of way by the public does not destroy a previously existing right of way over the same line (Duncan v. Louch, 6 Q. B. 904; R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B. 515). The Court acted on an enclosure award which set out the same way as a bridle and footpath for the public, and as a carriage-way for particular persons (Pullin v. Deffel, 64 L. T. 134).

Rights of Way.

The right of a person who has land abutting on a highway to pass from one to the other is incontrovertible (Burgess v. Northwich, 6 Q. B. D. 275; Marshall v. Ulleswater, 7 Q. B. 172; Ramuz v. Southend Board, 67 L. T. 169; and see Rowley v. Tottenham, [1914] A. C. 95). It is a private right (Chaplin v. Westminster, [1901] 2 Ch. 329), quite different from such a person's individual interest in the public right of using the highway (ibid.; Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co., 1 App. Cas. 676; Fritz v. Hobson, 14 Ch. D. 554). He could sue in respect of this private right without joining the Attorney-General (Boyce v. Paddington, [1903] 1 Ch. 114).

Private access to highway.

A private right of way in gross (that is, not annexed or appurtenant to other property) can be created by express grant; but if so it is personal only and cannot be assigned (Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B. 188). An easement of a right of way strictly so called implies the existence of a dominant tenement to which the easement is appurtenant (Hawkins v. Rutter, [1892] 1 Q. B. 671). To be so appurtenant the easement must be an incident of a known and usual kind (Ackroyd v. Smith, supra), and it must be beneficial to and connected with the enjoyment of the property to which it is appurtenant; e.g., there cannot be a right of way over land in Kent appurtenant to an estate in Northumberland (Bailey v. Stevens, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 91; see Thorpe v. Brumfitt, 8 Ch. 650). A right of way may be appurtenant either to land or to a right of fishing (Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 423).

Private rights of way, in gross, and appurtenant.

(2) Acquisition of private rights of way;

A private way is a right which one or more persons have of going over the land of another. This may be claimed by express reservation, or by grant, or as necessarily incident to a grant of land: or it may be claimed by prescription, custom, or by virtue of an Inclosure Act (Selw. N. P. 1266, 13th ed.).

(a) by express reservation:

A right of way may be claimed by express reservation; as where A grants land to another, reserving to himself a way over such land (1 Roll. Abr. 109, pl. 45; Com. Dig. Chimin (D. 2); and see Cardigan v. Armitage, 2 B. & C. 197). Tindal, C.J., in Durham Ry. Co. v. Walker (2 Q. B. 967), observed, "A right of way cannot in strictness be made the subject either of exception or reservation. A right of way reserved to a lessor is, in strictness of law, an easement newly created by way of grant from the grantee or lessee, in the same way as the right of sporting or fishing" (see Doe v. Lock, 2 Ad. & Ell. 705; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 63). The effect of such a reservation, operating as a re-grant, was considered (Dynevor v. Tennant, 33 Ch. D. 420; 13 App. Cas. 279; see S. E. Ry. Co. v. Associated Manufacturers, [1910] 1 Ch. 12). As to reservations of legal estates, see Law of Property Act, 1925, s. 65, post. In order to establish an easement claimed by lessors, as in the nature of a grant from the lessee, it would in general be essential to show the execution of the lease by the lessees (Durham Ry. Co. v. Walker, 2 Q. B. 967; Corcor v. Payne, I. R. 4 C. L. 380; see, however, May v. Belleville, [1905] 2 Ch. 605, where an agreement for sale reserving a right of way followed by a conveyance not executed by the purchaser bound the purchaser). A right of access stipulated for by a contract was extinguished by the deed of conveyance which did not reserve it (Teebay v. Manchester Ry. Co., 24 Ch. D. 572; see Leggott v. Barrett, 15 Ch. D. 309; Greswolde Williams v. Barneby, 17 T. L. R. 110). In such a case the Court must see that the deed covers the whole ground of the contract (Palmer v. Johnson, 13 Q. B. D. 357); and if it does not there is no extinguishment (Brazier v. Glasspool, [1902] W. N. 162; see De Lasselle v. Guildford, [1901] 2 K. B. 215).

by express grant;

A way may be claimed by grant, as where an owner of land grants to another person a way through or over a particular close (Com. Dig. Chimin, D. 3). But the word "way" in a grant is not an apt word to create a new right of way. It is a word descriptive of an existing right—a right of way over the land of another person (Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 236). The description of a right of way in a grant was rectified, as not in accordance with the intention (Cowen v. Truefitt, [1899] 2 Ch. 309). A covenant by an owner of land that another person shall have and use a way amounts to an express grant (Holme v. Seller, 3 Lev. 305). A grant was implied from an express covenant (Oakley v. Adamson, 8 Bing. 356). A contract to grant a right of way was held equivalent to a contract for sale of real estate, so that no damages were given for breach (Rowe v. London School Board, 36 Ch. D. 619; see Jones v. Watts, 43 Ch. D. 574). If a right of way is appurtenant to a piece of land which is demised, the right of way passes also without any special mention of such right (Skull v. Glenister, 7 L. T. 827; see Evans v. Angell, 26 Beav. 205). The conveyance of an inland farm with the "appurtenances" did not pass the right to take seaweed from the neighbouring seashore (Baird v. Fortune, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 926; 10 W. R. 2). As to when a right of way will pass where there has been unity of seisin of the dominant and servient tenements, see the cases quoted below.

A railway company cannot grant a private right of way over land required for the purposes of its undertaking (Mulliner v. Midland Ry. Co., 11 Ch. D. 611; G. W. Ry. v. Talbot, [1902] 2 Ch. 765), except where the way is not inconsistent with such purposes (Re Gonty and Manchester Co., [1896] 2 Q. B. 439; see Foster v. L. C. & D. Ry., [1895] 1 Q. B. 711; S. E. Ry. Co. v. Associated Manufacturers, [1910] 1 Ch. 12; S. E. Ry. Co. v. Cooper, [1924] 1 Ch. 211).

On the construction of the devise of a right of way, it was held limited to the lifetime of the devisee (Pym v. Harrison, 33 L. T. 796). General words reserving a wayleave to a bishop for coal got out of any land were restricted by the context to land belonging to the See (Midgley v. Richardson, 14 M. & W. 495; see Hedley v. Fenwick, 3 H. & C. 349).

A grant of a right of way to Blackacre made to A., "his heirs and assigns," who at the time was tenant from year to year, and subsequently acquired the freehold, enured for the benefit of such freehold (Rymer v. McIlroy, [1897] 1 Ch. 528).

The grant should define the way (Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. G. W. Ry. Co., 84 L. T. 333). And a grantor having once defined a way cannot alter it (Deacon v. S. E. Ry. Co. (1889), W. N. 79). Compare the rule as to a way of necessity (Pearson v. Spencer, 1 B. & Sm. 584).

evidence as to grants;

In an action for obstructing a way, granted by a lease from the defendant to the plaintiff, the judge will receive evidence of the state of the premises at the time of the lease, and will then put a construction on the lease as to the line along which the way is granted: but he will not receive evidence of the declarations or acts of the parties, either before or after the lease, as showing where the way is or was intended to be; but if it be uncertain on the words of the grant which of two ways is intended, the judge will receive parol evidence to show which the grantor meant to grant (Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761; see R. v. Chorley, 10 W. R. 2).

way passing by estoppel;

Where in a conveyance land was described as bounded by a street or roadway (International Tea Stores v. Hobbs, [1903] 2 Ch. 173;

Rights of Way.

Espley v. Wilkes, L. R. 7 Ex. 304; Roberts v. Karr, 1 Taunt. 495; Gogarty v. Hoskins, [1906] 1 I. R. 173), or by the seashore (Mellor v. Walmesley, [1905] 2 Ch. 104), and the bounding land in fact belonged to the vendor, he was estopped from denying that the purchaser was entitled to a right of way over such bounding land. The inference of a right of way was assisted by a plan on the deed (Espley v. Wilkes, supra; Furness Co. v. Cumberland Society, 52 L. T. 144). A plan on the agreement cannot, it seems, be referred to to construe the deed (Barlow v. Rhodes, 1 C. & M. 439). Sometimes the agreement reserves power to vary the plan appearing thereon (Whitehouse v. Hugh, [1906] 2 Ch. 283). As to the effect of a plan, see further Bayley v. G. W. Ry. Co., 26 Ch. D. 441, 457; Randall v. Hall, 4 D. G. & Sm. 343; Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 228; Re Lindsay and Forder, 72 L. T. 832.

In the case of deeds executed after 1881, a conveyance of land operates, where there is no contrary intention, to convey all ways appertaining or reputed to appertain to the land, or at the time of the conveyance demised, occupied or enjoyed with or reputed or known as part or parcel of, or appurtenant to the land (Law of Property Act, 1925, s. 62). As regards the operation of conveyances independently of this Act, there have been a number of decisions on the question what words will pass rights of way where there has been unity of seisin of the quasi-dominant and quasi-servient tenements. The effect of these decisions is stated in the next paragraphs.

Where there is a unity of seisin of the land, and of the way over the land, in one and the same person, the right of way is either extinguished or suspended, according to the duration of the respective estates in the land and the way; and after such extinguishment, or during such suspension, the way cannot pass as an appurtenant under the ordinary legal sense of that word. In such a case the grantor must either employ words of express grant, or must describe the way in question as one "used and enjoyed with the land" (James v. Plant, 4 Ad. & Ell. 761; Kooystra v. Lucas, 5 B. & Ald. 830; Staple v. Haydon, 6 Mod. 3; Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96). The words "belonging or appertaining" are insufficient (Barlow v. Rhodes, 1 C. & M. 439; Baring v. Abingdon, [1892] 2 Ch. 390). Nothing is more clear than that under the word "appurtenances," according to its legal sense, an easement which has become extinct, or which does not exist in point of law, by reason of unity of ownership, does not pass (Grimes v. Peacock, 1 Bulst. 17; Saundeys v. Oliff, Sir T. Moore, 467; Whalley v. Thompson, 1 Bos. & P. 371; Phesey v. Vicary, 16 M. & W. 484; Clements v. Lambert, 1 Taunt. 295; see Worthington v. Gimson, 2 E. & E. 618; and Tatton v. Hammersley, 3 Ex. 279; Wardle v. Brocklehurst, 1 Ell. & Ell. 1058; Bolton v. Bolton, 11 Ch. D. 968; Brett v. Clowser, 5 C. P. D. 376). In some cases, however, "appurtenances" may have a secondary meaning (Thomas v. Owen, 20 Q. B. D. 232; and see Hansford v. Jago, [1921] 1 Ch. 322, where it was held to include a right of way de facto enjoyed at the date of the conveyance).

Again, it has been laid down that where there are two adjoining closes belonging to one owner, and there exists over one of them a formed road, which is in fact used for the purposes of the other, and that other is granted with the general words "together with all ways now used or enjoyed therewith," a right of way over the formed road will pass, even though that road had been first constructed during the unity of possession of the two closes (Barkshire v. Grubb, 18 Ch. D. 622; Baring v. Abingdon, [1892] 2 Ch. 390). Thompson v. Waterlow (6 Eq. 36) and Langley v. Hammond (L. R. 2 Ex. 161), so far as contrary to this view, have been overruled by

Rights of Way.

Watts v. Kelson (6 Ch. 166); and Kay v. Oxley (L. R. 10 Q. B. 360) (see Barkshire v. Grubb, supra; see further Bayley v. G. W. Ry. Co., 26 Ch. D. 457; Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 226; and Geoghegan v. Fegan, I. R. 6 Ch. 139). The Court will in these cases put such a construction upon general words, which prima facie might apply to rights and not to ways enjoyed de facto only, as is to be gathered from the true intention of the parties (Bayley v. G. W. Ry. Co., 26 Ch. D. 455). As to the construction in such cases of the words "now or heretofore enjoyed," see Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 224. As to the acquisition of a right of way as between tenants of a common landlord, see Flynn v. Harte, [1913] 2 I. R. 322.

(b) Acquisition by implied grant upon severance of tenements.

The rule about rights of way which arise from implication is simply this, that on a severance of two properties anything like a right of way which is used and which is reasonably necessary for the reasonable and comfortable use of the part granted is intended to be granted too. The principle is that the grantor is assumed to have intended that his grant shall be effectual (Bayley v. G. W. Ry. Co., 26 Ch. D. 452). Compare the grant of easements implied upon the conveyance of one moiety of an outside wall (Jones v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 635). Compare also the obligation of a lessor not to derogate from his grant implied in Grosvenor Hotel Co. v. Hamilton, [1894] 2 Q. B. 896; Aldin v. Latimer, [1894] 2 Ch. 437; also the agreement by the grantor implied upon the grant of property for a particular purpose (Robinson v. Kilvert, 41 Ch. D. 88; Corbett v. Jonas, [1892] 3 Ch. 137). In applying, however, the doctrine of implied grant of easements, a distinction has been drawn between easements which are only used from time to time on the one hand, and on the other hand easements which are of necessity, or are apparent and continuous. And it has been laid down as clear law that upon a severance of tenements easements used from time to time only do not pass without appropriate language (Polden v. Bastard, L. R. 1 Q. B. 161; Watts v. Kelson, 6 Ch. 173). But see Schwann v. Cotton, [1916] 2 Ch. 459.

In accordance with this rule a right of way, as being an easement which was not apparent and continuous, did not pass under a lease (Glave v. Harding, 27 L. J. Ex. 292). So a right to go to a well and take water, as being an easement which was not continuous, did not pass under a devise (Polden v. Bastard, supra; Taws v. Knowles, [1891] 2 Q. B. 570).

On the other hand, where a formed road has been made over a quasi servient tenement to and for the apparent use of the quasi dominant tenement, the formed road is considered to be an apparent and continuous easement, and it may pass by implied grant without any general words at all (Brown v. Alabaster, 37 Ch. D. 507; Thomas v. Owen, 20 Q. B. D. 231; Nicholls v. Nicholls, 81 L. T. 811; and see Schwann v. Cotton, supra; Hansford v. Jago, [1921] 1 Ch. 322). Similarly where at the date of the grant of a gravel pit a tramway was in fact enjoyed with the pit in such a manner as to lead to a reasonable expectation that the enjoyment would be permitted to be continued, a grant was implied (Brazier v. Glasspool, [1901] W. N. 237; [1902] W. N. 162). Again, where a quasi dominant tenement is so constructed as that part of it, in order to its enjoyment in the state it is in when dealt with, involves a necessary dependence upon the adjoining quasi servient tenement it has been laid down that a grant of a right of way will be implied. So held in the case of a lease (Ford v. Metropolitan Ry. Co., 17 Q. B. D. 28): and again where the same testator devised to different devisees the quasi dominant tenement and the quasi servient tenement adjoining (Pearson v. Spencer, 3 B & S. 761; Milner's Safe Co. v. G. N. & City Ry. Co., [1907] 1 Ch. 208, 220).

Rights of Way.

Where a formed road existed, a right of way over it was reserved by implication (Thomas v. Owen, 20 Q. B. D. 225).

Implied reservation.

Ways of necessity;

Where property devised or granted is landlocked, and there is no other way of getting at it without some way over the land of the testator or grantor, a way of necessity is created de novo (Pearson v. Spencer, 1 B. & S. 583; Pinnington v. Galland, 9 Exch. 1; Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 916; see Beaudely v. Brook, Cro. Jac. 189; Howton v. Frearson, 8 T. R. 50). An easement of necessity means an easement without which the property cannot be used at all, not one merely necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of that property (Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 572). A way of necessity is in fact only a right of way by implied grant (1 Wms. Saund. 323, n.; see Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387; Hinchliffe v. Kinnoul, 5 Bing. N. C. 1; Kavanagh v. Coal Mining Co., 14 Ir. C. L. R. 82; see Donnelly v. Adams, [1905] 1 I. R. 154). A grant of the right to use the staircase of a building was implied in a lease of an upper flat (Miller v. Hancock, [1893] 2 Q. B. 180). No grant will be implied where at the time the necessity did not exist (Midland Ry. Co. v. Miles, 33 Ch. D. 632). And a claim to a way of necessity was refused where one side of the land granted abutted on a highway twenty feet below it (Titchmarsh v. Royston Co., [1899] W. N. 256). The right may arise by implied reservation. Thus if the owner of four closes, having no way to one of them but over the others, grant the latter without reserving a right of way, it will be reserved to him by operation of law (Clarke v. Cogg, Cro. Jac. 170; Jordan v. Attwood, Owen, 121; London v. Rigg, 13 Ch. D. 798). On the sale of land to a purchaser who has notice that the adjoining land is to be laid out in building in a manner which will make a way over the purchased land necessary to the vendor, such a right of way is reserved to the vendor by implication (Davies v. Sear, 7 Eq. 427); and see Browne v. Maguire, [1922] 1 I. R. 23. As to the implied reservation of an easement of necessity, see Sherbrook v. Tufnell, 46 L. T. 886; Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557; cases of support.

A way of necessity cannot be pleaded generally, without showing the manner in which the land over which the way is claimed is charged with it (Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387; see 1 Wms. Saund. 323, n. 6).

instances of ways of necessity;

Where there is a private road through a farm, the parson may use it for carrying away his tithe, though there is another public way equally convenient (Cobb v. Selby, 6 Esp. 103; see James v. Dodds, 2 C. & M. 266). Where a man leases lands, reserving the timber, he may enter to show it to a purchaser (2 Roll. Abr. 74, 1, 41; 1 Roll. Abr. 109, 1, 5). So if a man grants to another certain trees in his wood, the grantee may go with carts over the grantor's lands to carry away the trees (Liford's Case, 11 Rep. 52 a; Vin. Abr. Incident). A man having a right to wreck thrown on another man's land, has necessarily a right of way over such land to take the wreck (Anon., 6 Mod. 149). Where at the time of the grant in respect of which a right of way was claimed, there was a way which continued to exist, another way could not be claimed as a way of necessity, on the ground of its being more convenient than the former way (Dodd v. Burchall, 1 H. & C. 113). As to a right of way by necessity to land which had escheated to the lord of the manor, see Proctor v. Hodgson, 10 Exch. 824.

nature of a way of necessity;

Where a grantee is entitled to a way of necessity over another tenement belonging to the grantor, and there exist to the tenement granted more ways than one, the grantee is entitled to one way only, which the grantor may select (Bolton v. Bolton, 11 Ch. D. 968). The grantee cannot in general claim a right of way over one particular defined road as a way of necessity (Brown v. Alabaster, 37 Ch. D. 500; Titchmarsh v. Royston Co., [1899] W. N. 256). A way of necessity once created must remain the same way as long as it continues at all (Pearson v. Spencer, 1 B. & S. 584; compare Deacon v. S. E. Ry. Co. (1899), W. N. 79; and Allport v. General Security Co., 11 T. L. R. 310, a staircase to a flat). The lessee of an inner close has by necessity a right of way suitable to the business for which the lease was made, over an outer close which belongs to the same landlord (Gayford v. Moffatt, 4 Ch. 133). So where land was taken compulsorily for sewage works, the local board acquired a way of necessity for all purposes connected with these works (Serff v. Acton, 31 Ch. D. 679). In general, however, a way of necessity is only such a right as will enable the owner of the close to enjoy it in the condition it was in at the time of the creation of the way (London v. Rigg, 13 Ch. D. 798).

A way of necessity is limited by the necessity which created it; and when such necessity ceases, the right of way also ceases; therefore if, at any subsequent period, the party formerly entitled to such way can approach the place to which it led by passing over his own land, by as direct a course as he would have done by using the old way, the latter will cease to exist (Holmes v. Goring, 2 Bing. 76; Reynolds v. Edwards, Willes, 282; but see Buckley v. Coles, 5 Taunt. 311, and the remarks of Parke, B., Proctor v. Hodgson, 10 Ex. 828; see also Pheysey v. Vicary, 16 M. & W. 491).

(c) Acquisition (based on user) by lost grant;

A private right of way may be claimed by lost grant. As to this mode of claim, see ante, p. 25. Such a grant may be presumed from long enjoyment, where its commencement cannot be accounted for, unless a grant has been made (Doe v. Reed, 5 B. & Ald. 237). The uninterrupted enjoyment of a right of way for twenty years, in the absence of evidence that it had been used by leave, or under a mistake, was held sufficient foundation for the presumption of a lost grant, although such grant must have been made within twenty-six years, as all former ways were at that time extinguished by Inclosure Act (Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294). So where there had been an absolute extinguishment of a right of way for many years by unity of possession, but the way had been used for thirty years preceding an action for its obstruction, the jury were directed to presume a grant (Keymer v. Summers, 3 T. R. 157; Livett v. Wilson, 3 Bing. 115). Though an uninterrupted user for twenty years and upwards be a bar to an action, yet the rule must be taken with this qualification, that the user was with the acquiescence of the person seised of an estate of inheritance (Roberts v. James, 89 L. T. 287). The mere knowledge of a tenant for years is not sufficient (Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372); but if the user has been for a great length of time, it may be presumed that the landlord was aware of it (Davies v. Stephens, 7 C. & P. 570; Jamieson v. Coulter, 21 W. R. 852; Gray v. Bond, 2 Brod. & Bing. 667; see Dawson v. Norfolk, 1 Price, 247). It has been held in Ireland that a grant may be presumed from one tenant to another (Timmons v. Hewitt, 22 L. R. Ir. 627).

by prescription at common law;

A private way may also be claimed by prescription at common law. As to this mode of claim, see ante, p. 224. A tenant for years claiming in this manner must, according to rules laid down before the Prescription Act, 1832, s. 5, ante, p. 17, have set forth the seisin in fee of the owner, and then have traced his own title from the owner of the fee (2 Salk. 562; Com. Dig. Chimin (D. 2); Cantrell v. Stephens, Styl. 300; Dawney v. Cashford, Carth. 432). A right of way could be claimed in respect of a dominant tenement which had been inclosed from a common within fifty years (Codling v. Johnson, 5 B. & C. 933). The user on which the prescription at common law is based must be uninterrupted. Locking a gate across the way is interruption, although the claimant is given a key (Barry v. Lowry, I. R. 11 C. L. 483; Guest's Estates v. Milner's Safes, 28 Times L. R. 59; compare Davies v. Stephens, 7 C. & P. 570). But a gate is not necessarily an obstruction to a private right of way (Pettey v. Parsons, [1914] 2 Ch. 653; compare Flynn v. Harte, [1913] 2 I. R. 322; Guilford v. St. George's Golf Club, 85 L. J. Ch. 664).

by prescription under Act;

A private right of way may also be claimed by prescription under the Prescription Act, 1832. As to this method of claim, see ante, p. 8.

A custom that every inhabitant of a certain village shall have a way over certain land, either to church or to market, is good, because it is only an easement, but not a profit (6 Rep. 60 b; Co. Litt. 110 b; Cro. Eliz. 180; see 2 H. Bl. 393). See, as to a church way, Batten v. Gedye, 41 Ch. D. 507; Brocklebank v. Thompson, [1903] 2 Ch. 344.

(d) Acquisition by statute.

An Act which extinguished all ways over land allotted to B, contained a proviso that nothing in the Act should deprive A of the right of access to a watercourse to cleanse the same; this reserved to A his right of way for the purposes mentioned (Adeane v. Mortlock, 5 Bing. N. C. 236). An Act authorising the appropriation of land as a way for the improvement of an estate and the accommodation of tenants authorised the creation of exclusive private rights of way (White v. Leeson, 5 H. & N. 53). Commissioners of partition may award a right of way over the lands of one party to the lands of another party (Lister v. L., 3 Y. & C. 140).

(3) Nature of right of way acquired by express grant.

Prima facie, the grant of a right of way is a grant having regard to the nature of the locus in quo over which it is granted and to the purpose for which it is intended to be used. Both these circumstances may be called in aid in determining whether it is a general right of way, or a footway, or a driftway (Cannon v. Villars, 8 Ch. D. 421; see Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761, ante, p. 76). On this principle, a way was held to be a footway in Cousens v. Rose, 12 Eq. 366; and a way for all purposes in Watts v. Kelson, 6 Ch. 166; see also Wood v. Stourbridge Co., 16 C. B. (N.S.) 222. On the construction of a lease the grant of a right of way was restricted to the way existing at the date of the lease (Collins v. Slade, 23 W. R. 199). Where a lease reserved to the lessor a right of way for the purpose of rebuilding erections on adjoining premises which belonged to the lessor, and the lessor erected a dispensary on those premises, the user of the way as an access to such dispensary was restrained (Ardley v. St. Pancras (1870), W. N. 203; 39 L. J. Ch. 871; see Sloan v. Holliday, 30 L. T. 757). Compare the ruling as to the extent of an easement to discharge drainage over another's land (Wood v. Saunders, 10 Ch. 582). The right of a landowner whose land had been severed by a railway to use a level crossing granted to him by the company was limited to what was intended at the date of the grant (G. W. Ry. v. Talbot, [1902] 2 Ch. 759). So the user of a level crossing as a means of access to a tennis club subsequently established was held excessive (Taff Vale Co. v. Gordon Canning, [1909] 2 Ch. 48). And under a verbal agreement for access by a gate of a specified width, the gate could not be widened (Grand Hotel v. White, [1913] 1 Ch. 113; affirmed in House of Lords, 84 L. J. Ch. 938).

Again, as regards additions to the dominant tenement, it has been laid down that if a man has a right of way to one close he cannot use the right for the purpose of going to another close adjoining the former (Harris v. Flower, [1904] W. N. 180; Colchester v. Roberts, 4 M. & W. 773). If a man has a right of way to a close called A, he cannot justify using the way to go to A, and from thence to another close of his own adjoining to A (1 Roll. Abr. 391, pl. 3; Howell v. King, 1 Mod. 191; Lawton v. Ward, 1 Ld. Raym. 75; and 1 Lutw. 111; Skull v. Glenister, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 81). As regards subdivisions of the dominant tenement, the right goes with every part (Newcomen v. Coulson, 5 Ch. D. 141), at least where the burden is not increased (Bower v. Hill, 2 Bing. N. C. 339).

On the other hand, where there is an express grant of a private right of way to particular land, to the unrestricted use of which land the grantee of the right of way is entitled, the grant is not to be restricted to access to the land for purposes for which access would be required at the time of the grant (Finch v. G. W. Ry. Co., 5 Ex. D. 254; see Harris v. Flower, [1904] W. N. 180; United Land Co. v. G. E. Ry. Co., 10 Ch. 586; Newcomen v. Coulson, 5 Ch. D. 133; S. E. Ry. Co. v. Cooper, [1924] 1 Ch. 211). In Allan v. Gomme (11 Ad. & E. 759), the grantee of a right of way was limited to the use of a way to a place which should be in the same predicament as it was at the time of the grant. This ruling, however, was not approved of by Parke, B. (Henning v. Burnet, 8 Exch. 192), and the case was treated by Stephen, J., as turning on the construction of the particular deed (Finch v. G. W. Ry. Co., 5 Ex. D. 259). The grant of a footway was not so limited (Sketchley v. Berger, 69 L. T. 754). A way over a private road to land abutting on the private road was not limited to a way through gates which existed at the time of the grant (South Metropolitan Co. v. Eden, 16 C. B. 42; compare the wide construction placed upon the grants of ways in Cooke v. Ingram, 68 L. T. 671; Sketchley v. Berger, 69 L. T. 754). A grant of a right of way for the grantee, his executors, administrators and assigns, undertenants and servants, extended to licensees (Baxendale v. North Lambeth Club, [1902] 2 Ch. 427). And a right for "visitors" included pupils (Thornton v. Little, [1907] W. N. 68).

Under a grant of a free and convenient horse and foot way, and for carts, &c., "to carry stones, timber, coals, and other things whatsoever," the grantee may lay a framed way across the land for carrying coals as being most convenient (Senhouse v. Christian, 1 T. R. 560). Where in 1630 land was granted excepting and reserving out of the grant all mines of coal with sufficient way-leave to the said mines the right was not confined to such ways as were in use at the time of the grant (Dand v. Kingscote, 6 M. & W. 174; see Newcomen v. Coulson, 5 Ch. D. 139; Durham Ry. Co. v. Walker, 2 Q. B. 940; Farrow v. Vansittart, 1 Ry. Cas. 614). Where, however, A granted land reserving a waggon or cart road of the width of eighteen feet, to be at all times thereafter kept in repair at his own cost, this reservation did not enable A to lay down a railroad for carrying coals from his neighbouring colliery (Bidder v. North Staffordshire Ry. Co., 4 Q. B. D. 412). Where a lease of premises described them as abutting on an intended way, thirty feet wide, not then set out, the soil of which was the property of the lessor: and the lessee granted an underlease, describing the premises as abutting on an intended way, without specifying the breadth: the sub-lessee was entitled to a convenient way only (Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96; see Espley v. Wilkes, L. R. 7 Ex. 298). The grant of a right of way which did not express the intention was rectified (Cowen v. Truefitt, [1899] 2 Ch. 309). Where a way was granted for a particular purpose, but the land had never been, and was not likely to be, used for that purpose, a declaration of right to the way was refused (Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. G. W. Ry. Co., 84 L. T. 333).

A grant of a right of way over a private road only confers a right to a reasonable use of such road, and not necessarily over the whole surface of the road (Clifford v. Hoare, L. R. 9 C. P. 362; see Sketchley v. Berger, 69 L. T. 754; Strick v. City Offices Co., 22 T. L. R. 667). So in the case of a private way over waste land (Hulton v. Hamboro, 2 F. & F. 218). Where a right of way is granted for the occupation of a dwelling-house, the grantee has everything needful for such occupation and may put down a flagstone in front of a door opening into the land over which the right exists (Gerrard v. Cooke, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 109). Where premises are conveyed with a right of way thereto, it may be a question for the jury what is a reasonable use of such right (Hawkins v. Carbine, 27 L. J. Exch. 44). Where a right of way was expressed to be "through the gateway of the plaintiff" (which gateway led to other premises of the plaintiff), and, at the time of the lease, carts could come in to load, but through subsequent alterations could not do so without trenching upon the plaintiff's premises, the defendant had, in the reasonable use of the right of way, a right to do this (ibid.).

The grant of the "exclusive use of a gateway" conferred on the grantee the ownership of the gateway as a corporeal hereditament (Reilly v. Booth, 44 Ch. D. 12); compare the grant of the exclusive right of drainage through a tunnel which gave the grantee possession of the tunnel (Holywell v. Halkyn, [1895] A. C. 117; see Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Fowler, [1893] A. C. 416).

Nature of right of way acquired by implied grant.

As to the nature of the right in the case of a way acquired by implied grant, it was said in one case that the nature of the right depends on the user (Milner's Co. v. G. N. & City Ry., [1907] 1 Ch. 220). See Gayford v. Moffatt, Serff v. Acton, London v. Rigg, all quoted, ante, p. 80.

(4) Nature of right of way acquired by user.

Where a right of way is acquired by user, the extent of the right must be measured by the extent of the user (Williams v. James, L. R. 2 C. P. 581; see Finch v. G. W. Ry. Co., 5 Ex. D. 258). Accordingly a prescriptive right of way acquired for agricultural purposes only did not give a right of way for mineral purposes (Bradburn v. Morris, 3 Ch. D. 812), nor a right to cart building materials (Wimbledon Conservators v. Dixon, 1 Ch. D. 363). If, however, the way is proved to have been used for a variety of purposes, the jury may be warranted in finding a way for all purposes (Cowling v. Higginson, 4 M. & W. 245; see Dare v. Heathcote, 26 L. J. Ex. 245; Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279; Jackson v. Stacey, Holt, N. P. C. 455; Higham v. Rabbett, 5 Bing. N. C. 622). When a way to a dwelling-house had been acquired by user, there was no excess of user by opening a small shop (Sloan v. Holliday, 30 L. T. 757).

(5) Right to deviate.

A person having a private way over the land of another cannot, when the way is become impassable by the overflowing of a river, justify going on the adjoining land, although such land, as well as the land over which the way runs, belongs to the grantor of the way (Taylor v. Whitehead, 2 Dougl. 475; Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387; 1 Wms. Saund. 322, a, n. (3); Duncombe's Case, Cro. Car. 366; see Robertson v. Gauntlett, 16 M. & W. 289). But where a private way has been obstructed by the grantor, the grantee may deviate over the grantor's land (Selby v. Nettlefold, 9 Ch. 111).

(6) Repair of way.

The grantee of a way has a right to repair it, as incident to the grant (Com. Dig. Chimin (D. 6); Godb. 53; Gerrard v. Cooke, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 108; Vin. Abr. Incidents (A.); Newcomen v. Coulson, 5 Ch. D. 143), and the grantor is not bound to repair (Com. Dig. Chimin (D. 6); Jones v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 637); unless by prescription or stipulation, express or implied (1 Saund. 322, a, n.; Rider v. Smith, 3 T. R. 766; Miller v. Hancock, [1893] 2 Q. B. 181). The grantee of a private way is to make it (Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 764). By common law, unless the grantor has bound himself to do so, he who has the use of a thing ought to repair it (Taylor v. Whitehead, 1 Dougl. 720; Pomfret v. Ricroft, 1 Wms.

Rights of Way.

Saund. 557; Miller v. Hancock, supra). This is not an obligation to which the grantee is subject; it is no more than this, that if he wants the way to be repaired he must repair it himself (Duncan v. Louch, 6 Q. B. 909, 910; see Ingram v. Morecraft, 33 Beav. 49). But in some cases the grantee might be liable for non-repair (Jones v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 638). As to rebuilding a bridge, see Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518.

Liability for negligence.

As to the liability for negligence attaching to a landowner who permits others to pass over his land, see Gallagher v. Humphrey, 10 W. R. 664; Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 556; Belch v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 736; Gautret v. Egerton, L. R. 2 C. P. 371; Gwinnell v. Eames, L. R. 10 C. P. 658; Tarry v. Ashton, 1 Q. B. D. 314.

(7) Extinction of rights of way:

by unity of seisin;

Where a person having a right of way over the land of another purchases such land, the right of way is extinguished by the unity of seisin and possession (Heigate v. Williams, Noy, R. 119; see James v. Plant, 4 Ad. & El. 761).

by abandonment;

A long forbearance to exercise a right of way may reasonably be accounted for by supposing a release of the right (Doe v. Hilder, 2 B. & Ald. 791; see Moore v. Rawson, 3 B. & C. 339). But a mere suspension of the exercise of a right is not sufficient to prove an intention to abandon it (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 482; James v. Stevenson, [1893] A. C. 162). It is the nature of the act done, or of the adverse act acquiesced in by the owner of the easement, and the intention thereby indicated, which are material (R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B. 519; Mulville v. Fallon, I. R. 6 Eq. 458). Where a right of way has been once established by clear evidence of enjoyment, it can be defeated only by distinct evidence of interruptions acquiesced in (Harvie v. Rogers, 3 Bligh (N.S.) 444—447; see Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 265; Norbury v. Meade, 3 Bligh, 211, 241).

The discontinuance for upwards of twenty years of the use of a right of way to a close, because the occupiers had a more convenient access, is not evidence of an intention to abandon (Ward v. Ward, 7 Exch. 838; where it was said, "The presumption of abandonment cannot be made from the mere fact of non-user. There must be other circumstances to raise that presumption. The right is acquired by adverse enjoyment. The non-user must be the consequence of something which is adverse to the user." Compare Cooke v. Ingram, 68 L. T. 671.) But where for fifty years a roadway over which a right of way had been granted was never made, the conduct of the parties entitled to the right was held to amount to abandonment (Swan v. Sinclair, [1925] A. C. 227). A parol agreement for the substitution of a new way for an old prescriptive way, and the consequent discontinuance to use the old way, afford no evidence of the abandonment thereof (Lovell v. Smith, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 120; see Hulbert v. Dale, [1909] 2 Ch. 570). It is always a question of fact, to be ascertained by a jury or by the Court from the surrounding circumstances, whether the act amounts to an abandonment or was intended as such (Cook v. Bath, 6 Eq. 179; Young v. Star Omnibus Co., 86 L. T. 41). The owner of closes A and B, connected by a right of way, who sold A without granting any right of way to the purchaser or reserving one to himself, was held to have abandoned the connecting way (Midland Ry. Co. v. Gribble, [1895] 2 Ch. 827). See also as to a release of a right of way, Poulton v. Moore, [1915] 1 K. B. 400. For the Scotch law as to substitution of ways, see Young v. Kinloch, [1910] A. C. 169.

Where the mode of enjoyment of an easement has been altered, and an attempt has been made to usurp a greater right than the party was entitled to, the previously-existing right will not be affected by acts of usurpation in the case of those easements which depend upon repeated acts of man, such as rights of way (see Luttrell's Case, 4 Rep. 86 a). Where a grant was implied of a right of way to a dominant tenement on which a warehouse was standing, and a railway station was substituted for the warehouse, it was said that under the existing circumstances the right was not exercisable at all (Milner's Co. v. G. N. & City Ry., [1907] 1 Ch. 227). If a right of way be granted for the purpose of being used as a way to a cottage, and the cottage is changed into a tan-yard, the right of way ceases; but if there is a general grant of all ways to a cottage, the right is not lost by the cottage being altered (Henning v. Burnet, 8 Exch. 192; see Sloan v. Holliday, 30 L. T. 757). Rights of Way.

By the Inclosure Act, 1801, ss. 8, 10 and 11, the commissioners are directed to set out private ways, and it is declared that all ways not set out shall be extinguished; but there is a proviso that no old or accustomed road shall be stopped up without the order of two justices. A private way, not set out by the commissioners, was held to have been extinguished, the proviso only applying to public roads (White v. Reeves, 2 Moore, 23; Holden v. Tilley, 1 F. & F. 650); compare sects. 62—68 of the Inclosure Act, 1845, Turner v. Crush, 4 App. Cas. 221; Hornby v. Silvester, 20 Q. B. D. 797. As to the construction of local Inclosure Acts giving powers to stop up roads, see Logan v. Burton (5 B. & C. 513); Harber v. Rand (9 Price, 58); R. v. Hatfield (4 Ad. & Ell. 156). by statute.

(8) Remedy for disturbance; by abatement.

The owner of a right of way may, after proper notice requesting the removal of an obstruction, himself remove it, even if the obstruction is a house which is inhabited (Lane v. Capsey, [1891] 3 Ch. 411). The refusal by the Court to grant a mandatory injunction would not interfere with such a right (ibid.); and leave was given to exercise the right where the house was in the possession of a receiver appointed by the Court (ibid.). Notice before abatement is unnecessary in case of emergency or where the person in possession of the land himself creates the nuisance (Lemmon v. Webb, [1894] 3 Ch. 13). It is doubtful whether the right to abate exists in case of nonfeasance (Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518).

Remedy by action; action by reversioner; companies; pleading;

An action lies for the disturbance of a right of way, created either by reservation, grant, or prescription (Com. Dig. Action on the Case for Disturbance (A. 2); 1 Roll. Abr. 109); and such disturbances may be either by absolutely stopping up the way, or by ploughing up the land through which the way passes (2 Roll. Abr. 140), or by damaging the way with carriages, so that it is of no use (Lawton v. Ward, 1 Lutw. 111). A reversioner cannot sue for the obstruction of a right of way unless the obstruction be such as either permanently injures the estate, or operates in denial of the right (Hopwood v. Scholfield, 2 M. & Rob. 34; see Young v. Spencer, 10 B. & C. 145; Baxter v. Taylor, 4 B. & Ad. 72; Jackson v. Pesked, 1 M. & S. 234; Alston v. Scales, 2 M. & Scott, 5; Mott v. Shoolbred, 20 Eq. 22; Kidgill v. Moor, 9 C. B. 364). There was such permanent injury from the obstruction of a siding by a railway company (Bell v. Midland Ry. Co., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 287). Compare Jones v. Llanrwst, [1911] 1 Ch. 393 (pollution by sewage).

The Railway Clauses Act, 1845, s. 53, takes away the common law right of action for an interference by a railway company under its powers with a private right of way, except when special damage has been sustained (Watkins v. G. N. Ry. Co., 16 Q. B. 961). As to compensation under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, see London School Board v. Smith, [1895] W. N. 37.

In all cases for disturbance of a way, the obstruction ought to be alleged as occurring in the way itself to which the party has a right (Tebbutt v. Selby, 6 Ad. & Ell. 786). Where in an action for wrongfully stopping up a way the precise locality of the way is material to the defence, the defendant is bound to show it in his pleadings (Ellison v. Iles, 11 Ad. & Ell. 665).

In an action brought since the Jud. Acts for obstructing a private way the pleading should, under the R. S. C., show the termini of the way and its course; and whether the plaintiff claims by prescription or grant (Harris v. Jenkins, 22 Ch. D. 481; compare Pledge v. Pomfret, [1905] W. N. 56). And where the defendant in an action of trespass pleads that the locus in quo was a highway, he must now state how it became a highway (Spedding v. Fitzpatrick, 38 Ch. D. 410; see under the old law, Williams v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & El. 331). As to variances under the old law, see Duncan v. Louch (6 Q. B. 904); Colchester v. Roberts (4 M. & W. 769).

actions in the Chancery Division.

Where a bill was filed by a lessee to establish a right of way, an objection for want of parties, because the plaintiff's lessor was not before the Court, was allowed under the Chancery practice before the Judicature Acts (Poore v. Clark, 2 Atk. 515). As to the certainty required in such bills, see Gell v. Hayward (1 Vern. 312); Cresset v. Mitton (3 Bro. C. C. 481; 1 Ves. jun. 449). As to the remedy in equity, in the case of a licence for a right of way which has been executed, and where expense has been incurred, see Mold v. Wheatcroft (27 Beav. 510), and the cases quoted, ante, p. 41.

As to the obstruction of a right of way by the acts of several persons, see Thorpe v. Brumfitt, 8 Ch. 650, and other cases quoted p. 130, post. Injunctions have been granted to restrain interference with the private access of the owner of property abutting on the highway to and from the highway (Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co., 1 App. Cas. 662; Original Hartlepool Co. v. Gibb, 5 Ch. D. 713; see Fritz v. Hobson, 14 Ch. D. 542). In a proper case a mandatory injunction will be granted (Krehl v. Burrell, 7 Ch. D. 551; 11 Ch. D. 146). The remedy of a parishioner in respect of a church way is in the Ecclesiastical Court (Batten v. Gedye, 41 Ch. D. 507). See further the forms of injunctions, Seton, 7th ed. 574 et seq.

Of Watercourses.

This note deals in the first instance with non-navigable streams. As to navigable streams, see post, p. 104.

Non-navigable streams flow through watercourses which are either natural or artificial. As regards the water of a non-navigable stream flowing through a natural watercourse, the channel may be either a defined channel or an undefined channel. And the defined channel may be either overground or underground. In this water flowing through a natural watercourse with a defined channel, riparian owners have by the general law certain rights called natural rights. And they may by prescription acquire other rights called prescriptive rights.

Different kinds of streams.

The natural rights of a riparian owner in water flowing through a natural watercourse with a defined channel may be said to be threefold: (1) the right of user, (2) the right of flow, (3) the right of purity. The rights of user and flow in overground streams have been described in the following cases: "The flow of a natural stream creates mutual rights and liabilities between all the riparian proprietors along the whole of its course. Subject to reasonable use by himself, each proprietor is bound to allow the water to flow on without altering the quantity or quality" (Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732). "By the general law applicable to running streams, every riparian proprietor has a right to what may be called the ordinary use of water flowing past his land; for instance, to the reasonable use of the water for domestic purposes and for his cattle; and this without regard to the effect which such use may have in case of a deficiency upon proprietors lower down the stream. But, further, he has a right to the use of it for any purpose, for what may be deemed the extraordinary use of it, provided he does not thereby interfere with the rights of other proprietors, either above or below him. Subject to this condition, he may dam up a stream for the purpose of a mill, or divert the water for the purpose of irrigation. But he has no right to intercept the regular flow of the stream, if he thereby interferes with the lawful use of the water by other proprietors, and inflicts upon them a sensible injury" (per Lord Kingsdown, Miner v. Gilmour, 12 Moo. P. C. 156; adopted ever since; John White v. White, [1906] A. C. 79; see Young v. Bankier Co., [1893] A. C. 696, 698).

(1) Natural rights in water in natural watercourse with defined channel.

(1) Rights of user and flow.

(a) Overground streams.

Again, Lord Cairns said: "The lower riparian owner is entitled to the accustomed flow of the water for the ordinary purposes for which he can use the water. That is quite consistent with the right of the upper owner also to use the water for all ordinary purposes (namely, as has been said, ad lavandum et ad potandum), whatever portion of the water may be thereby exhausted and may cease to come down by reason of that use. But further, there are uses no doubt to which the water may be put by the upper owner, namely, uses connected with the tenement of that upper owner. Under certain circumstances, and provided no material injury is done, the water may be used and diverted for a time by the upper owner for the purpose of irrigation. That may well be done; the exhaustion of the water which may thereby take place may be so inconsiderable as not to form a subject of complaint by the lower owner, and the water may be restored, after the object of irrigation is answered, in a volume substantially equal to that in which it passed before. Again, it may well be that there may be a use of the water by the upper owner for, I will say, manufacturing purposes, so reasonable that no just complaint can be made upon the subject by the lower owner. Whether such a use in any particular case could be made for manufacturing purposes connected with the upper tenement would, I apprehend, depend upon whether the use was a reasonable use. Whether it was a reasonable use would depend, at all events in some degree, on the magnitude of the stream from which the deduction was made for this purpose over and above the ordinary use of the water" (Swindon Co. v. Wilts Co., L. R. 7 H. L. 704). Again, Lord Macnaghten speaks of the "ways in which a person whose lands are intersected or bounded by a running stream may use the water to which the situation of his property gives him access. He may use it for ordinary or primary purposes, for domestic purposes, and the wants of his cattle. He may use it also for some other purposes—sometimes called extraordinary or secondary purposes—provided those purposes are connected with or incident to his land, and provided that certain conditions are complied with . . . In the ordinary or primary use of flowing water a person dwelling on the banks of a stream is under no restriction. In the exercise of his ordinary rights he may exhaust the water altogether. No lower proprietor can complain of that. In the exercise of rights extraordinary but permissible, the limit of which has never been accurately defined and probably is incapable of accurate definition, a riparian owner is under considerable restrictions. The use must be reasonable. The purposes for which the water is taken must be connected with his tenement, and he is bound to restore the water which he takes and uses for those purposes substantially undiminished in volume and unaltered in character" (M'Cartney v. Londonderry Co., [1904] A. C. 306).

As regards the ordinary use and extraordinary use to which under the above cases the riparian owner is entitled, it has been said that the user which may at one time have been extraordinary may, by changes in the condition, become ordinary; and also that a user which might be extraordinary in an agricultural district might not be extraordinary in a manufacturing district (per Lord Esher, in Ormerod v. Todmorden, 52 L. J. Q. B. 450; see 11 Q. B. D. 168).

According to Lord Cairns, the extraordinary use includes manufacturing purposes; as to which see Dakin v. Cornish, 6 Exch. 360; and irrigation; as to which Parke, B., said, if the irrigation takes place not continuously but at intermittent periods when the river is full and no damage is done thereby to the working of a mill on the stream, and the diminution of water is not perceptible to the eye, it is not prohibited (Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 372; see Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 603). But the right of a riparian owner to an extraordinary use does not enable him to divert water to supply a lunatic asylum and county jail (Medway Co. v. Romney, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 575; 30 L. J. C. P. 236). Or to supply a town (Swindon Co. v. Wilts Co., supra; Roberts v. Gwyrfai, [1899] 2 Ch. 612; Owen v. Davies (1874), W. N. 175). Nor did it enable a railway company who owned a tenement on a stream to divert water to a place outside that tenement and use it to supply locomotives along their line (McCartney v. Londonderry Co., [1904] A. C. 306).

In a case where a stream had from time to time changed its course, it was laid down that the accustomed course of a natural stream which a riparian owner is entitled to have preserved is the natural and apparently permanent course existing when the right is asserted or called in question (Withers v. Purchase, 60 L. T. 819).

Of Watercourses.

(b) Underground streams.

As regards the water of a natural stream flowing through a defined channel, where the course is subterranean but well known, as is the case with many, which sink underground a short space and then emerge again, the owner of the soil under which the stream flows can maintain an action for diversion, if it took place under such circumstances as would have enabled him to recover if the stream had been wholly above ground (Dickenson v. Grand Junction Co., 7 Ex. 300; Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 374; see Dudden v. Clutton Union, 1 H. & N. 630).

The above are the natural rights of user and flow possessed by a riparian owner in the water of a natural stream flowing through a defined channel (whether overground or underground), as laid down in modern authorities. The doctrine of appropriation referred to in the earlier cases is not now accepted (see Orr Ewing v. Colquhoun, 2 A. C. 854; Arkwright v. Gell, 5 M. & W. 220).

The rules regulating the right of flow laid down as to water flowing in an undefined channel (see below) differ from those above stated as to defined channels. And in the case of water flowing from surface springs, there is often a difficulty in distinguishing whether they fall under the rules as to defined or undefined channels (see Ennor v. Barwell, 2 Giff. 423; Briscoe v. Drought, 11 Ir. C. L. R. (N.S.) 250). Where a natural defined stream issued from a springhead, it was held that the "stream began at the springhead, and that the owner of the land could only take such water from either as was incident to his right as riparian owner (Dudden v. Clutton Union, 1 H. & N. 627; Bunting v. Hicks, 70 L. T. 458; Ewart v. Belfast, 9 L. R. Ir. 172). The same principle applied even where at some remote period the springhead had been built round (Mostyn v. Atherton, [1899] 2 Ch. 360).

(2) Right of purity.

A riparian owner has a right to the natural stream of water flowing through the land in its natural state; and if overground water is polluted by a superior owner, the inferior owner has a cause of action against the superior owner, unless the latter has gained by enjoyment or grant a right to pollute (Wood v. Waud, 3 Ex. 748; see Weeks v. Heward, 10 W. R. 557). The same rule applies, if the character of the water be altered (Young v. Bankier Co., [1893] A. C. 691). The natural right to purity extends to subterranean water when appropriated (Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 B. & S. 229; Turner v. Mirfield, 34 Beav. 390; Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. D. 115).

(2) Water flowing in undefined channels.

Turning to undefined channels, water flowing through these may be overground or underground. As regards such water when overground, it is settled that the right of a riparian owner does not extend to water flowing over or soaking through land previous to its arrival at such watercourse (Broadbent v. Ramsbottom, 11 Ex. 602). So the owner of land has an unqualified right to drain it for agricultural purposes in order to get rid of mere surface water, the supply of the water being casual and its flow following no regular definite course (Rawstron v. Taylor, 11 Exch. 369; see Van Breda v. Silberbauer, L. R. 3 P. C. 84).

(1) Rights of user and flow.

Overground water.

Underground water.

Underground water flowing through an undefined channel is governed by the same rule (Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 376). The last-mentioned case decided that every man has a right to divert or appropriate all water of this nature which he can find on his own land (Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. D. 123; Salt Union v. Brunner, [1906] 2 K. B. 822; English v. Metropolitan Board, [1907] 1 K. B. 602). And this right he can exercise notwithstanding that his neighbour's well may be thereby left dry (Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 353), or that the stream which the neighbour owns may be diminished in consequence of the diverted or appropriated water not coming into it (Bradford v. Pickles, [1895] A. C. 586). No action will lie against a man who, by digging in his own land, drains his neighbour's land either by intercepting the flow of the water percolating through the soil, or by causing water already collected on his neighbour's soil to percolate away (Ballacorkish Co. v. Harrison, L. R. 5 P. C. 60; see New River Co. v. Johnson, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 374; 7 W. R. 179; South Shields Co. v. Cookson, 15 L. J. Ex. 315; R. v. Metropolitan Board, 3 B. & S. 710).

The decision in Grand Junction Co. v. Shugar, 6 Ch. 483, which seems inconsistent with the rules last stated, must be explained as relating to a direct tapping of an overground stream flowing in a defined channel, and not to a mere withdrawal of percolating underground water (Jordeson v. Sutton Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 251; English v. Metropolitan Board, [1907] 1 K. B. 601).

As to the withdrawal of underground water support, see cases stated, post, p. 112.

In the case of underground water flowing through a channel defined but (as being only ascertainable by excavation) not known, the rule applicable to undefined channels was applied, and the lower riparian proprietor had no right of flow and could not restrain diversion (Bradford Corporation v. Ferrand, [1902] 2 Ch. 655).

(2) Right of purity.

Where water in an undefined channel is poisoned by a landowner, his neighbour, on appropriating the water, would it seems have a right of action (Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. D. 126).

In dealing with the natural or ordinary rights of a riparian proprietor, it may be convenient here to refer to the notes as to his right to divert flood-water, post, p. 98; as to his right to build on the bed, post, p. 98; and his right to fish, ante, p. 52.

(3) Prescriptive rights with regard to water; in natural stream; with defined channel.

In the case of water flowing through a natural watercourse with a defined channel, rights may be acquired by prescription which interfere with what would otherwise be the natural rights of other proprietors above and below (John White v. White, [1906] A. C. 80). A riparian owner may by user acquire a right to use the water in a manner not justified by his natural rights; but such acquired right has no operation against the natural rights of a landowner higher up or lower down the stream, unless the user affects the use such landowner has of the stream, or his power to use it, so as to raise the presumption of a grant, and so render the tenement above or below a servient tenement (Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 590). Before the Prescription Act, 1832, twenty years' exclusive enjoyment of water in any particular manner afforded a strong presumption of right in the party so enjoying it, derived from grant or Act of Parliament (Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208; Cox v. Matthews, 1 Vent. 237; 2 Wms. Saund. 113 b; see Dewhirst v. Wrigley, 1 C. P. Coop. 329). In Prescott v. Phillips (cited Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 213; Mason v. Hill, 5 B. & Ad. 23) it was ruled, "that nothing short of twenty years' undisturbed possession of water diverted from the natural channel, or raised by a weir, could give a party an adverse right against those whose lands lay lower down the stream, and to whom it was injurious. The right of diverting water, which in its natural course would flow over or along the land of a riparian owner, can be created only by grant, or enjoyment from which a grant may be presumed, or by statute. Such an easement exists for the benefit of the dominant owner alone, and the servient owner acquires no right to insist on its continuance (Mason v. Shrewsbury Ry. Co., L. R. 6 Q. B. 587). Previously to the Prescription Act, 1832, the acquiescence of lessees would not bind the landlord; similarly, the uninterrupted possession of the water for over fifty years, with the acquiescence of tenants for life, did not affect the reversioner (Bradbury v. Grinsell, 2 Wms. Saund. 516). Evidence of user for twenty years of a head-stock to pen up a rivulet was insufficient to raise the presumption of a grant to warrant its continuance to the injury of church land; for one vicar could not bind his successor (Wall v. Nixon, 3 Smith's R. 316; see Barker v. Richardson, 4 B. & Ald. 579). As to enjoyment since the Prescription Act during a life tenancy, see Bright v. Walker, 1 C. M. & R. 211. As between absolute owners, the right to pen back a stream may be acquired by prescription (Cooper v. Barber, 3 Taunt. 99). So an inferior riparian proprietor can acquire a right to place a hatch on the land of the superior proprietor to regulate the flow of water (Wood v. Hewett, 8 Q. B. 913; see Greenslade v. Halliday, 6 Bing. 379); or for the latter purpose to go on the land of the superior proprietor and open lock gates (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696). Again, the right to a fishing weir may be acquired in non-navigable rivers by grant from other riparian owners, or by enjoyment, or by any means by which such rights may be constituted (Rolle v. Whyte, L. R. 3 Q. B. 286; Leconfield v. Lonsdale, L. R. 5 C. P. 657; see Barker v. Faulkner, [1898] W. N. 69); and even in a navigable river a riparian proprietor can acquire an interest in its water power as derived from a reservoir artificially formed by a dam across its channel (Hamelin v. Bannerman, [1895] A. C. 237).

Of Watercourses.

to pen back;

to obstruct;

A right to pollute a stream can be acquired by prescription (Baxendale v. McMurray, 2 Ch. 790; see Eastwood v. Henley, [1901] 1 Ch. 645), but only through the continuance of perceptible injury for twenty years (Goldsmid v. Tunbridge, 1 Ch. 349; see Millington v. Griffiths, 30 L. T. 65; Murgatroyd v. Robinson, 7 E. & B. 391; Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 611; O'Brien v. Enright, I. R. 1 Ch. 718). And a grant in contravention of the Rivers Pollution Act, 1876, will not be presumed (Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 218). And there can be no prescriptive right to justify a public nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Barnsley (1874), W. N. 37).

A right to discharge sewage through a drain can be acquired by prescription (Att.-Gen. v. Dorking, 20 Ch. D. 601; Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 378; see Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77). Such a right may be binding on a local authority (R. v. Staines, 60 L. T. 261; Ogilvie v. Blything, 65 L. T. 338; Harrington v. Derby, [1905] 1 Ch. 219). But see Rochford v. Port of London, [1914] 2 Ch. 916. And statutory rights of drainage into the sewers of a local authority are not analogous to prescriptive rights, and are not a defence to a claim by a private person for an injunction to restrain nuisance from sewage (Jones v. Llanrwst, [1911] 1 Ch. 393). See as to discharging sewage into a tidal river, Somersetshire v. Bridgwater, 81 L. T. 732; or into the sea, Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 665, 678; Hobart v. Southend, 75 L. J. K. B. 305; and as to discharging noxious chemicals into sewers, Liverpool v. Coghill, [1918] 1 Ch. 307.

In the case of water which percolates in an undefined course, no right to the uninterrupted flow can be acquired by prescription, for no grant can be presumed in the case of such water (Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349, 370, 385). But an express grant of all streams of water that might be found in certain closes prevented the grantor and those claiming under him from working mines under adjoining land so as to divert underground water from wells in the closes (Whitehead v. Parkes, 2 H. & N. 870).

No prescription in water with undefined channel.

(4) Artificial watercourses:

The natural rights of a riparian proprietor are limited to natural streams, and do not attach in the case of artificial watercourses

Of Watercourses.

(Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 500). Prescriptive rights, however, may be acquired in artificial watercourses of a permanent character (Rameshur v. Koonj, 4 App. Cas. 126; Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 777; Blackburne v. Somers, 5 L. R. Ir. 1; see Bunting v. Hicks, 70 L. T. 455; Beeston v. Weate, 5 El. & Bl. 986; Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732; Ivimey v. Stocker, 1 Ch. 396; Powell v. Butler, I. R. 5 C. L. 309; and compare Bankart v. Tennant, 10 Eq. 141). The enjoyment must be as of right (Chamber v. Hopwood, 32 Ch. D. 349).

of a permanent character;

of a temporary character; no right to uninterrupted flow can be acquired by prescription against creator of stream;

But where the enjoyment of an artificial watercourse depends on temporary circumstances, no right to the uninterrupted flow of water can be acquired by prescription against the creator of of the stream. Thus, a party receiving water drained from a mine had no right to compel the owners of the mine to continue such discharge (Arkwright v. Gell, 5 M. & W. 203; see Magor v. Chadwick, 11 Ad. & Ell. 571). So in the case of a watercourse constructed for the purpose of a mill (Burrows v. Lang, [1901] 2 Ch. 502; but see Lewis v. Meredith, [1913] 1 Ch. 571, where permissive use of an artificial channel was held to have become a legal right under general words in a conveyance. A watercourse is constructed for a temporary purpose when it is constructed for a purpose which may within the reasonable contemplation of the parties come to an end ([1901] 2 Ch. 508). Further, it is more difficult to presume an agreement as to enjoyment when a watercourse is constructed entirely over the land of the creator than in the case of water pumped over another's land (ibid.; see M'Evoy v. G. N. Ry., [1900] 2 I. R. 325).

Where the owners of a colliery had suffered water pumped out of their colliery to flow along an artificial channel no action lay (in the absence of any grant or prescriptive title) by the owner of land through which the water had been so accustomed to flow against an owner of land above, and through whose land the sough likewise passed, for diverting such water; for the owners by discharging the water into such sough, could not be considered as giving it to one more than to others of the proprietors of the land through which such sough had been constructed, and the proprietor of the land below had no right to compel the owners above to permit the water to flow through their land for his benefit (Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748; see Wardle v. Brocklehurst, Ell. & Ell. 1058; Mason v. Shrewsbury Ry. Co., L. R. 6 Q. B. 584).

In ascertaining the rights in an artificial watercourse you must take into account, first, the character of the watercourse, whether it is temporary or permanent; secondly, the circumstances under which it was presumably created; and thirdly, the mode in which it has been used and enjoyed (Baily v. Clark, [1902] 1 Ch. 668). The conclusion may be that the watercourse was originally constructed upon the condition that the rights of owners abutting should be the same as they would have been had the watercourse been a natural one (ibid.; Whitmores v. Stanford, [1909] 1 Ch. 427; see Greatrex v. Hayward, 8 Exch. 291; Hanna v. Pollock, [1900] 2 I. R. 664; Holker v. Porritt, L. R. 8 Ex. 116; Roberts v. Richards, 44 L. T. 271; Sutcliffe v. Booth, 32 L. J. Q. B. 136; Nield v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., L. R. 10 Ex. 4).

Right to purity.

As regards purity, it seems that (apart from prescription) appropriation of water in an artificial watercourse by a person entitled to appropriate it gives such a person a right to insist that the water shall not be polluted to his injury (Whaley v. Laing, 2 H. & N. 476; 3 H. & N. 675; Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 779; but see Wood v. Sutcliffe, 21 L. J. Ch. 254; Magor v. Chadwick, 11 Ad. & Ell. 571).

Independently of the prescriptive rights mentioned above, which are mainly called in question between riparian owners, other miscellaneous rights may be mentioned. Thus a landowner can acquire by prescription the right to bring water to his house through pipes over his neighbour's land (Goodhart v. Hyatt, 25 Ch. D. 182); or the right to go on his neighbour's land and draw water there from a spring (Race v. Ward, 4 E. & B. 702); or from a pump (Polden v. Bastard, L. R. 1 Q. B. 156).

Of Watercourses.

Miscellaneous prescriptive rights.

To discharge water upon adjoining land.

As regards discharging water upon adjoining land, it has been laid down that an action may be maintained for the erection of a roof with eaves projecting over another's land, and discharging rain-water on to it, without proof that rain has actually fallen (Fay v. Prentice, 1 C. B. 828). The reversioner may sue (Tucker v. Newman, 11 Ad. & Ell. 40). Although, however, every one in building is bound not to overhang his neighbour's property, and to construct his roof in such a manner as not to throw rain-water upon the neighbouring land (11 Hen. 7, f. 257), yet a right by user for twenty years for the owner to project his wall or eaves over the boundary line of his property, or to discharge rain from the roof of his house upon the adjoining land, has been recognised (Thomas v. Thomas, 2 C. M. & R. 34; see Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 77; Lady Browne's Case, cited in Slaney v. Pigott, Palm. 446; Com. Dig. Action on Case for Nuisance (A.); Baten's Case, 9 Rep. 50, n. (b); Vin. Abr. Nuisance (G. 5)). Such a right will not be lost by raising the house (Harvey v. Walters, L. R. 8 C. P. 162). The occupier of a house who has a right to have the rain fall from the eaves of it upon another man's land, cannot by spouts discharge it upon such land in a body (Reynolds v. Clarke, Ld. Raym. 1399). For such an act trespass would not lie, but case (Reynolds v. Clarke, 1 Str. 634; 8 Mod. 272; Fort. 212). The flow of water for twenty years from the eaves of a house will not give a right to the neighbour to insist that the house shall not be altered so as to diminish the quantity of water flowing from the roof (Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748; Greatrex v. Hayward, 8 Exch. 293, 294; Arkwright v. Gell, 5 M. & W. 233). A legal origin was presumed for the right of discharging water from a highway through a pipe on to adjoining land (Att.-Gen. v. Copeland, [1902] 1 K. B. 690).

(5) Modes of acquisition of rights with regard to water.

Grant presumed from enjoyment.

Before the Prescription Act, 1832, twenty years' exclusive enjoyment of water in any particular manner afforded a strong presumption of right in the party so enjoying it derived from grant or Act of Parliament (Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208; Finch v. Resbridger, 2 Vern. 390; Gilb. Eq. C. 3). In Deeble v. Lineham, 12 Ir. C. L. (N.S.) 1, there was sufficient evidence of enjoyment to support the presumption of a grant. A grant, however, was not presumed where it would have been void by statute (Rochdale Co. v. Radcliffe, 18 Q. B. 287; Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., [1909] 1 Ch. 775; see Att.-Gen. v. Grand Junction Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 516), or where the user was precarious (Gaved v. Martyn, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 732), or where the owner of the dominant tenement was during the user tenant of the servient tenement (Outram v. Maude, 17 Ch. D. 391). And see Bradbury v. Grinsell, and Wall v. Nixon, quoted ante, p. 91. For the nature of the enjoyment requisite for obtaining under the Prescription Act acquired rights with regard to water, see the note to the Prescription Act, 1832, s. 2, ante, p. 8.

Acquisition under Prescription Act.

Acquisition by custom.

As to the acquisition by custom of a right to divert water in Devonshire, see Bastard v. Smith (2 M. & Rob. 129); and in Cornwall, Gaved v. Martyn (19 C. B. (N.S.) 732; 14 W. R. 62). For a customary right to pollute water, see Carlyon v. Lovering (1 H. & N. 784); and for a customary right to the use of water, see Harrop v. Hirst (L. R. 4 Ex. 43).

Of Watercourses.

Acquisition by express grant;

Water rights may be acquired by express grant. As to the construction of an express grant it has been laid down that the grant of a "watercourse" may mean (1) the right to the running of water; or (2) the drain which contains the water; or (3) the land over which the water flows (Taylor v. S. Helens, 6 Ch. D. 271; where the effect of the grant of an artificial watercourse was considered). The reservation of right to make a watercourse included the right to divert water and to use the water diverted (Remfry v. Natal, [1896] A. C. 558). A "spring of water" means a natural source of water of a definite and well-marked extent (Taylor v. S. Helens, 6 Ch. D. 273). A "stream" is water which runs in a defined course, so as to be capable of diversion (ibid.). The word did not include either the spring or water soaking through marshy ground (M'Nab v. Robertson, [1897] A. C. 129). In Northam v. Hurley (1 El. & Bl. 665), it was held on the construction of the grant of a watercourse from the land of the grantor to the land of the grantee, that the grantor could not alter the channel on his own land although no damage had occurred to the grantee. The effect of special words in an express grant or reservation of water was also considered in Rawstron v. Taylor, 11 Exch. 369; Lee v. Stevenson, 27 L. J. Q. B. 263; Finlinson v. Porter, L. R. 10 Q. B. 188. A grant (in pursuance of a statute) of the exclusive right of drainage through a watercourse gave the grantee not merely an easement but (for the purpose of rating) possession of the watercourse (Holywell v. Halkyn, [1895] A. C. 117). A watercourse may be vested in a corporation; as where there was a grant to the corporation of Carlisle of water to turn the city mills (Carlisle v. Blamire, 8 East, 487).

As to conveyances of land since 1881 carrying rights of water and watercourses, see the Law of Property Act, 1925, s. 62, post. Independently of that Act it was held that if land with a run of water upon it be sold, the water passes with the land (Canham v. Fisk, 2 Cr. & Jer. 126; see Hamelin v. Bannerman, [1895] A. C. 237). The rights, however, of a riparian proprietor cannot be granted apart from the land, so as to entitle the grantee as against the other riparian proprietors, even to the rights in respect of the ordinary use of water possessed by the grantor. The only right acquired by the grantee would be as against the grantor himself (Ormerod v. Todmorden Co., 11 Q. B. D. 155; Nuttall v. Bracewell, L. R. 2 Ex. 1; Stockport Co. v. Potter, 3 H. & C. 300; Jones v. Dorothea Co., 58 L. T. 80; see Insole v. James, 1 H. & N. 243; and compare the licence to a stranger given in Mostyn v. Atherton, [1899] 2 Ch. 360).

by implied grant;

By the grant of part of a tenement, there pass by implication to the grantee all those continuous and apparent easements over the other part which are necessary to the enjoyment of the part granted and have been used therewith (Wheeldon v. Burrows, 12 Ch. D. 31. Compare the cases as to light, post, p. 120). This principle was applied to a watercourse (Watts v. Kelson, 6 Ch. 166; see Pullan v. Roughfort, 21 L. R. Ir. 73; Key v. Neath, 95 L. T. 771). As a general rule, however, there is no corresponding implication in favour of the grantor (Wheeldon v. Burrows, supra, disapproving of Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 916, in which case the grant of a right to a drain by the grantee of land had been implied in favour of the grantor). Pyer v. Carter had been approved in Ewart v. Cochrane, 4 Macq. H. L. C. 117; Watts v. Kelson, supra; but had been disapproved by Lord Westbury in Suffield v. Brown, 33 L. J. Ch. 249. As to implying the reservation of an easement of necessity, see Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557; Ray v. Hazeldine, [1904] 2 Ch. 17. A grant of the right to pollute a stream was implied in Hall v. Lund (1 H. & C. 676), but see Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 218.

Of Watercourses.

As a general rule, it requires a deed to create a right and title to have a passage for water (Fentiman v. Smith, 4 East, 107; Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 233). As to creating rights with regard to water by parol licence, see Liggins v. Inge (7 Bing. 682), and the note on licences, p. 42, ante.

by licence.

(6) Extent of water rights acquired by express grant;

Where land and buildings were demised, together with the free passage of water and soil to a cesspool, the easement was restricted to a reasonable use for the purposes of the premises in the condition in which they were at the time of the demise, and was not extended to buildings subsequently erected (Wood v. Saunders, 10 Ch. 582; see New Windsor v. Stovell, 27 Ch. D. 665; Metropolitan Board v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., 17 Ch. D. 246). When a lease reserved the free running of water and soil through the demised premises from other contiguous lands, the reservation extended to water and soil coming from contiguous lands whether arising thereon or not, but was not extended to the refuse of tan pits (Chadwick v. Marsden, L. R. 2 Ex. 285).

Where by an inclosure award drains were set out, the occupiers of the land to keep the same of sufficient depth to carry off the water, the plaintiff was not thereby authorised to make an underdrain so as to cause increased water to pass into one of the awarded drains (Sharpe v. Hancock, 7 M. & Gr. 354). An inclosure Act empowering commissioners to set out ditches in the lands to be inclosed; and also to alter and improve any existing ditches: held, not to empower the commissioners to alter the drains in the common lands, so as to overload an ancient drain from another township (Dawson v. Paver, 5 Hare, 415).

The extent of a prescriptive right of taking water is defined by the user proved (Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Ry., [1909] 1 Ch. 779).

(7) Alteration in mode of enjoyment.

As to the mode of enjoyment of water rights; the enjoyment may vary slightly, but the burden on the servient tenement cannot be increased. If one has ancient pits which are supplied by a rivulet, he may cleanse them, but cannot change or enlarge them (Brown v. Best, 1 Wils. 174; see Wood v. Saunders, 10 Ch. 582; New Windsor v. Stovell, 27 Ch. D. 665). A millowner cannot alter his sluice so as to divert more water (Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 207), nor change the channels of a river to the prejudice of another owner (Duncombe v. Randall, Hetl. 32; see Fletcher v. Smith, 2 App. Cas. 781).

Scouring a river bed, however, so as to keep the stream in its accustomed course is not only permissible but obligatory on a riparian owner (Rhodes v. Airdale, 1 C. P. D. 392; see Withers v. Purchase, 60 L. T. 819). Again, a right to a watercourse is not destroyed by the owners slightly altering the course of the stream (Hall v. Swift, 4 Bing. N. C. 381). It is not necessary that the mode of enjoying a watercourse should always have been precisely the same (Saunders v. Newman, 1 B. & Ald. 258), where it was said that the owner is not bound to use the water in the same precise manner, or to apply it at the same mill; if he were, it would stop all improvement in machinery. If indeed the alterations made prejudiced the right of the lower mill, the case would be different (ibid.; see Luttrell's Case, 4 Rep. 87 a; Frechette v. La Compagnie, 9 App. Cas. 170; Greenslade v. Halliday, 6 Bing. 379). To destroy an easement the change must be material either in the nature or in the quantum of the servitude imposed (Harvey v. Walters, L. R. 8 C. P. 166). Compare the increased burden of support for a railway (G. W. Ry. v. Cefn Co., [1894] 2 Ch. 157). A right to a watercourse which had been used to supply cattle sheds was held not to be lost by the erection of cottages in the place of cattle sheds (Watts v. Kelson, 6 Ch. 165). Where a person, who had a right to send down clean water through a gutter, sent down foul water, so that it was impossible to stop the nuisance without altogether interfering with his enjoyment, the whole enjoyment might be obstructed (Cawkwell v. Russell, 26 L. J. Ex. 34; see Hill v. Cock, 26 L. T. 185). A person entitled to the use of a drain which communicated with a sewer, could where the sewer was lowered by public authority also lower his drain (Finlinson v. Porter, L. R. 10 Q. B. 188).

Extent of right to pollute.

Where a prescriptive right to foul a stream has been acquired, the fouling must not be considerably enlarged to the prejudice of other people (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 478; McIntyre v. McGavin, [1893] A. C. 268). Where town sewage had drained into a stream without perceptibly polluting it, but in consequence of the recent increase of the town, the stream became perceptibly polluted; an injunction was granted (Goldsmid v. Tunbridge, 1 Ch. 349; Att.-Gen. v. Barnsley (1874), W. N. 37; see Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 678). Where a right to pollute water by a certain manufacture had been acquired it was said that the right would not be destroyed by altering the materials used (Baxendale v. M'Murray, 2 Ch. 790). But the discharge of the refuse of a different manufacture was held unjustifiable (Clark v. Somersetshire, 36 W. R. 890; see Wood v. Saunders, 10 Ch. 582; compare Metropolitan Board v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., 17 Ch. D. 249; Att.-Gen. v. Acton Board, 22 Ch. D. 221).

(8) Repair of drains, &c.

The cleansing and repairing of drains and sewers is primâ facie the duty of him who occupies the premises, and does not devolve upon the owner merely as such (Brent v. Haddon, Cro. Jac. 555; Cheetham v. Hampson, 4 T. R. 319; Boyle v. Tamlyn, 6 B. & C. 329; Russell v. Shenton, 3 Q. B. 449; see R. v. Kerrison, 1 M. & S. 435; Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387; Tenant v. Goldwin, 1 Salk. 21, 360; 2 Salk. 770; Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. Bl. 349; R. v. Pedly, 1 Ad. & E. 822; see Smith v. Archibald, 5 App. Cas. 512). If the owner of land, on which is a house, construct on other part of the land a sewer, and let the house, and afterwards by reason of the original faulty construction of the sewer, and the continued use of it by the owner in such a faulty state, the house is injured, the owner is liable to his lessee for keeping and continuing the sewer so constructed (Alston v. Grant, 3 Ell. & Bl. 128). If a lease be made of a house and piece of land, except the land on which a pump stands, with the use of the pump, the lessee may repair the pump, but an action of covenant does not lie against the lessor for not repairing it (Pomfret v. Ricroft, 1 Wms. Saund. 320; see ante, p. 83, Buckley v. B., [1898] 2 Q. B. 608). Where an easement exists giving the owner of a house a right to bring water to his house through a pipe over adjoining land, such owner has the right to go on the adjoining land to repair the pipe (Goodhart v. Hyett, 25 Ch. D. 182; see Smith v. Archibald, 5 App. Cas. 512; Jones v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 638; Caldwell v. Kilkelly, [1905] 1 I. R. 434). The right, however, being only for such access as was reasonably necessary did not prevent the owner of the servient tenement from constructing an embankment thereon (Birkenhead v. L. N. W. Ry., 15 Q. B. D. 572). As to the obligation to repair drains, see further Tudor, L. C. Conv. 4th ed. 791.

(9) Extinction: by abandonment;

If the owner of a mill, formerly worked by a breast-shot wheel, which requires a high head of water, for twenty years discontinues the use of the breast-shot wheel, and uses a ground-shot wheel, he will lose his right to the high head of water (Drewett v. Sheard, 7 C. & P. 465; where see as to abandoning the right to keep a ditch opening into a stream). The right to have water flow into an old pond is not lost by discontinuing the use of such pond, and obtaining the same or a greater advantage from the use of three new ponds;

Of Watercourses.

a substitution of such a nature not being an abandonment of the right (Hale v. Oldroyd, 14 M. & W. 789). The mere suspension of the exercise of a prescriptive right is not sufficient to destroy the right without evidence of an intention to abandon it: but where dye-works had not been used for more than twenty years, and had been allowed to go to ruin, any right of fouling a stream attached to them was lost (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 478). As to non-user of a well, see Millington v. Griffiths, 30 L. T. 65. In a case depending on Roman Dutch law a prescriptive right to water was held not lost by the owner applying for a licence (Commrs. of French Hoek v. Hugo, 10 App. Cas. 336).

It seems that nothing of necessity to a building, e.g. a gutter in alieno solo, to carry off water, &c., is extinguished by unity of ownership (Pheysey v. Vicary, 16 M. & W. 484). As regards natural rights in water it was laid down in Shury v. Piggott (3 Bulstr. 339; Poph. 166; W. Jones, 145, which was an action on the case for stopping a watercourse) that the right to the flow of water in a natural stream is not extinguished by unity of ownership; in which respect it is distinguished from a way. Whitlock, J., says (3 Bulstr. 340), "There is a difference between a way, a common, and a watercourse. Bracton (lib. 4, fol. 221-2) calls them servitutes prædiales; those which begin by private right, by prescription, by assent, as a way or common, being a particular benefit to take part of the profits of the land. This is extinct by unity, because the greater benefit shall drown the less. A watercourse does not begin by prescription, nor yet by assent, but the same doth begin ex jure naturæ, having taken this course naturally, and cannot be averted" (see Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 916). As regards prescriptive rights in water, if the same person becomes absolute owner of the land from which a stream of water flows, and also of the land into which it flows, the easement which the latter might have claimed is extinguished (Ivimey v. Stocker, 1 Ch. 407).

(10) Remedies for disturbance of rights with regard to water;

Abatement.

A party entitled to a watercourse may legally enter the land of a person who has occasioned a nuisance to a watercourse, to abate it (2 Smith's R. 9; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 M. 41). Where there is excessive user by the owner of the dominant tenement, the owner of the servient tenement, if he abates the nuisance, is bound to do so in the most reasonable manner (Hill v. Cock, 26 L. T. 185). An abatement was held reasonable in Roberts v. Rose, L. R. 1 Ex. 82; Macartney v. Londonderry Co., [1904] A. C. 301. An individual cannot abate a nuisance if he be not otherwise injured by it than as one of the public (Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339).

Indictments.

When the injury from a nuisance in respect of water is an injury to all the King's subjects, the remedy is by indictment (R. v. Bristol Dock Co., 12 East, 429), or by information (Stoke v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277). When, however, the inhabitants of a district had by custom a right to water, one inhabitant could sue without proving individual damage, on the ground of interference with right (Harrop v. Hirst, L. R. 4 Ex. 47); but such an action cannot be brought by a parish council suing alone (Stoke v. Price, [1899] 2 Ch. 277. As to local authorities suing, see Tottenham v. Williamson, [1896] 2 Q. B. 353).

Action;

Proof of actual damage is not necessary to enable a riparian proprietor to maintain an action for the obstruction or diversion of a natural stream (Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 590; Harrop v. Hirst, L. R. 4 Ex. 43; Ormerod v. Todmorden, &c., Co., 11 Q. B. D. 159). For the older law, see Palmer v. Keblethwaite, 1 Show. 64; Glynne v. Nicholas, 2 Show. 507; Mason v. Hill, 5 B. & Ad. 26; Williams v. Morland, 2 B. & C. 915. It is sufficient to show violation of the right, and the law will presume damage (Embrey v. Owen, 6 Ex. 353; compare Young v. Bankier Co., [1893] A. C. 691). Where water was taken from a river and afterwards returned unpolluted and undiminished, it was held that the right of a lower riparian proprietor had not been interfered with, and an injunction was refused (Kensit v. G. E. R. Co., 27 Ch. D. 122).

Of Watercourses.

for diversion;

Diversion of water is actionable without proof of actual damage where the defendant might thereby acquire a right injurious to the plaintiffs (Wilts Co. v. Swindon Co., 9 Ch. 961; Harrop v. Hirst, supra; Roberts v. Gwyrfai, [1899] 2 Ch. 608), and will be restrained (ibid.).

for obstruction;

Obstruction is also actionable irrespective of actual damage (Norbury v. Kitchin, 15 L. T. 501; McGlone v. Smith, 22 L. R. Ir. 559); and will be restrained (Dewhirst v. Wrigley, 1 C. P. Coop. 319; see Elwell v. Crowther, 31 Beav. 163; Belfast Co. v. Boyd, 21 L. R. Ir. 560).

Right of riparian proprietor to place erections on bed,

The owner of both banks of a non-tidal river may build on the bed provided he do not alter the natural flow of the water above or below his property (Orr-Ewing v. Colquhoun, 2 App. Cas. 839). Again, the owner of one bank only cannot as against the opposite proprietor build on his own moiety of the bed in such a manner as to interfere with the natural flow of the stream; and was restrained, although there was no proof that damage had been sustained or was likely to be sustained (Bickett v. Morris, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 47). This principle has been extended to tidal navigable rivers (Att.-Gen. v. Lonsdale, 7 Eq. 377; Att.-Gen. v. Terry, 9 Ch. 423; see Exeter v. Devon, 10 Eq. 232).

As regards the rights of erection possessed by a riparian owner generally, it seems that he may erect a post for a ferry or for mooring a boat, or plant stakes to prevent poaching (Withers v. Purchase, 60 L. T. 821; compare Att.-Gen. v. Wright, [1897] 2 Q. B. 318); or place an erection on his own bank to protect it (Ridge v. Midland Co., 53 J. P. 55; see Bickett v. Morris, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 56; Maxey Board v. G. N. Ry. Co., 106 L. T. 429). So it has been laid down that a riparian owner has a right to raise the banks upon his own land, so as to prevent the water from overflowing his land, with this restriction, that he does not occasion injury to the property of others (R. v. Trafford, 1 B. & Ad. 874; 8 Bing. 204; 2 Cr. & Jerv. 265; Menzies v. Breadalbane, 3 Bligh. (N.S.) 414, 418; Att.-Gen. v. Lonsdale, 7 Eq. 377). Compare the easement of opening locks acquired by a corporation for the protection of their land (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 696). If an extraordinary flood is seen to be coming on land, the owner may protect his land from it without being responsible for consequences, although his neighbour may be injured (Nield v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., L. R. 10 Ex. 4; see Whalley v. Lancashire Ry. Co., 13 Q. B. D. 136, 140; Gerrard v. Crowe, 37 Times, L. R. 110. Compare the similar right on the seashore: R. v. Pagham, 8 B. & C. 355). But if the flood has already come, the owner must not, for the purpose of getting rid of the mischief, injure his neighbour (Whalley v. Lancashire Ry. Co., supra). As to the duties in respect of a river-wall incumbent on the owner of land on a tidal navigable river, see Nitro-Phosphate Co. v. London and S. Katharine's Docks, 9 Ch. D. 524; Burt v. Victoria Co., 47 L. T. 378.

A lower riparian proprietor cannot as against the owner of a fishery in the upper stream, erect a weir which will prevent trout from mounting (Barker v. Faulkner, [1898] W. N. 69; see as to salmon, Pirie v. Kintore, [1906] A. C. 484).

Action by reversioner;

If the nuisance be of a permanent nature, and injurious to the reversion, an action may be brought by the reversioner as well as by the tenant in possession, each of them being entitled to recover his respective loss (Bedingfield v. Onslow, 3 Lev. 209; Queen's College v. Hallett, 14 East, 489; 1 Wms. Saund. 567, ed. 1871; Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141; Com. Dig. Action on the case for Nuisance (B.); see Brown v. Mallett, 5 C. B. 599; Bell v. Twentyman, 1 Q. B. 766; Peter v. Daniel, 5 C. B. 568; Egremont v. Pulman, 1 Moo. & M. 403).

An action will lie for the continuance of a nuisance (Todd v. Flight, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 377; R. v. Bradford Navigation, 6 B. & S. 631); but the owners of the soil of a stream were not liable for the continuance of an obstruction which had been erected by another without their authority, and where they had offered permission to the plaintiff to remove it (Saxby v. Manchester R. Co., L. R. 4 C. P. 198).

damages and costs;

A right to take water from a well by reason of the occupation of a dwelling-house is an interest in land; and nominal damages having been recovered in an action for disturbing such a right, which were certified to be under forty shillings, the plaintiff was entitled to his full costs under 43 Eliz. c. 6, s. 2 (Tyler v. Bennett, 4 Ad. & E. 377; see 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24; Shuttleworth v. Cocker, 2 Sc. N. R. 47; Thompson v. Gibson, 5 Jur. 390). The expenses of the surveying to ascertain whether a weir had been improperly used will not be allowed on taxation (Ormerod v. Thompson, 16 M. & W. 860).

relief in the Chancery Division;

Before the Jud. Acts, a bill in equity would lie for the establishment of the enjoyment of a watercourse, and for the performance of a covenant to cleanse it (Holmes v. Buckley, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 27, pl. 4; 2 Vern. 390; Gilb. Eq. C. 3; New River Co. v. Graves, 2 Vern. 431). And a man who had been in possession of a watercourse sixty years might sue a mortgagee, who foreclosed, to be quieted in possession, although he had not established his right at law (Bush v. Western, Prec. Ch. 530; see Dorset v. Girdler, ibid., 531). The diversion of watercourses, or the pulling down their banks, and causing inundation, were nuisances against which a court of equity would grant an injunction (Martin v. Stiles, Mos. 144; see Anon., 1 Ves. sen. 476; Whitchurch v. Hide, 2 Atk. 391; Birch v. Holt, 3 Atk. 726; Anon., 1 Vern. 120, 129). An injunction might be granted on the ground of danger to property (Robinson v. Byron, 1 Br. C. C. 588; see Anon., 1 Ves. jun. 140; Crowder v. Tinkler, 19 Ves. 620); or on account of the irreparable injury (Chalk v. Wyatt, 3 Mer. 688). Injunctions may now be granted by any Court whenever it appears just or convenient; Jud. Act, 1925, s. 45. Forms of injunctions as to water rights are given, Seton, 7th ed. 582. An injunction which directs the defendant to perform an act, may, under special circumstances, be granted before trial (Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Navigation, 1 M. & K. 154; see Von Joel v. Hornsey, [1895] 2 Ch. 774). Such orders in actions relating to water have been made before trial to enforce a covenant (Mexborough v. Bower, 7 Beav. 127); or to prevent irreparable damage (Westminster Co. v. Clayton, 36 L. J. Ch. 476). Such orders should now be made in a direct mandatory form (Jackson v. Normanby Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 438).

As to the effect of laches and acquiescence in depriving parties of their remedy by injunction, see Weller v. Smeaton (1 Br. C. C. 572; 1 Cox, 102); Birmingham Canal Co. v. Lloyd (18 Ves. 515; Coop. C. C. 77, 193); Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Navigation (1 M. & K. 154); where the action is by the Attorney-General see Att-Gen. v. Grand Junction Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 505; Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board, [1910] 1 Ch. 48.

Whenever the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction to entertain an application for an injunction against a breach of any agreement, or against the commission or continuance of any wrongful act, it might award damages, either in addition to, or in substitution for, such injunction (21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, s. 2). This Act has been repealed by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 49, but the repeal has not affected the jurisdiction of the Chancery Division (Sayers v. Collier, 28 Ch. D. 103); as to which see now Elmore v. Pirrie, 57 L. T. 333, and the cases quoted p. 126, post.

(11) Pollution. Action for damages.

A riparian proprietor has a right of action for pollution of the water of a stream, unless a right to pollute has been acquired by user (Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748; Magor v. Chadwick, 11 Ad. & Ell. 571; see Moore v. Webb, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 673). And it is no defence that the pollution arises from a trade carried on in a reasonable and proper manner (Stockport Co. v. Potter, 7 H. & N. 160; see Bamford v. Turnley, 3 B. & S. 66). As to whether a person having permission from an owner of land on the bank of an artificial watercourse to take water thereout, can sue for pollution, see Whaley v. Laing (2 H. & N. 476; 3 H. & N. 675). An action may be maintained for the pollution of underground water (Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 B. & S. 229; Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. D. 115).

Injunctions to restrain pollution;

Having regard to the nature of the injury caused by pollution of water, an injunction, rather than damages, is the appropriate remedy (Pennington v. Brinsop, &c., Co., 5 Ch. D. 769). For the general grounds upon which such an injunction will be granted, see the remarks of Kindersley, V.-C., in Wood v. Sutcliffe, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 165. A quia timet action to restrain an apprehended pollution may be maintained on proof of imminent danger of a substantial kind, or that the apprehended injury would be irreparable (Fletcher v. Bealey, 28 Ch. D. 688). A riparian proprietor can maintain an action to restrain actual pollution without showing that the fouling is injurious to him (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 478; Lingwood v. Stowmarket Co., 1 Eq. 79; see Elmhirst v. Spencer, 2 Mac. & G. 45). The fact that the stream is fouled by others is not a defence to a suit to restrain the fouling by one (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 478; Blair v. Deakin, 57 L. T. 522; see Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748; Att.-Gen. v. Leeds, 5 Ch. 583; compare Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board [1910] 1 Ch. 48). The grantee of a right of fishing can obtain an injunction to restrain pollution (Fitzgerald v. Firbank, [1897] 2 Ch. 96). Where there is jurisdiction to grant an injunction damages in substitution therefor may be given for injury which has occurred, whether before or since the commencement of the action (Chapman v. Auckland Union, 23 Q. B. D. 298; Warwick Co. v. Burman, 63 L. T. 673).

actual injury not necessary;

previous pollution no justification;

A public body exercising its statutory powers so as to create or increase a nuisance by means of the sewage of a town may be made liable in damages or restrained by injunction in the same manner as an individual, unless it can show a statutory justification (Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Commissioners, 1 Ch. 349; Holt v. Rochdale, 10 Eq. 354; Att.-Gen. v. Basingstoke, 24 W. R. 817; Att.-Gen. v. Acton, 22 Ch. D. 221; and see Glossop v. Heston Board, 12 Ch. D. 111). The principles applicable to the construction of a statute in such a case are stated by the C. A. in Price's Co. v. London C. C., [1908] 2 Ch. 543. Where the plaintiff has proved his right the court will grant an injunction at once, it being the duty of the defendant to find his own way out of the difficulty, whatever inconvenience or expense it may put him to. But the operation of the injunction may be suspended (Att.-Gen. v. Colney Hatch, 4 Ch. 146; Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, 4 K. & J. 528; and see the orders made in Att.-Gen. v. Richmond, 2 Eq. 306; Att.-Gen. v. Acton, 22 Ch. D. 221; Islington

v. Hornsey, [1900] 1 Ch. 695). An injunction against a local authority may be enforced by sequestration (R. S. C., Ord. XLII. r. 31; see Selous v. Croydon Board, 53 L. T. 209; Spokes v. Banbury, 1 Eq. 42; Att.-Gen. v. Walthamstow (1878), W. N. 90). An injunction to restrain pollution by the sewage of a town will not in general be granted, unless serious injury is proved (Att.-Gen. v. Kingston, 34 L. J. Ch. 481; Lillywhite v. Trimmer 15 W. R. 763; Att.-Gen. v. Gee, 10 Eq. 131; Att.-Gen. v. Cockermouth, 18 Eq. 172). In determining whether the injury is serious or not, regard must be had to all the consequences which may flow from it (Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Commissioners, 1 Ch. 355). Where, however, no serious damage was proved injunctions were granted, on the ground that the defendants, by their pleading, claimed a right to continue a wrongful act (Att.-Gen. v. Acton, 22 Ch. D. 221); or that they were acting in violation of a statute (Att.-Gen. v. Cockermouth, 18 Eq. 172; see Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury Co., 21 Ch. D. 752).

Where a sewage nuisance has been created by the acts of others, and a local authority is subsequently constituted, but does no act to create or increase the nuisance, it cannot be made liable in damages or restrained by injunction (Glossop v. Heston Board, 12 Ch. D. 102; Att.-Gen. v. Dorking, 20 Ch. D. 595; Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell, [1891] 3 Ch. 527, cf. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board, [1912] A. C. 788). But the jurisdiction to grant an injunction and give damages arises as soon as the local authority begins to alter the sewers (Warwick Co. v. Burman, 63 L. T. 673), or itself commits acts bringing about a nuisance (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 648; and see Jones v. Llanrwst, [1911] 1 Ch. 393; Att.-Gen. v. Lewes, [1911] 2 Ch. 495). The court will not interfere by injunction to compel a local authority to perform its statutory duty of effectual drainage (Glossop v. Heston Board, 12 Ch. D. 115; Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell, [1891] 3 Ch. 527; Harrington v. Derby, [1905] 1 Ch. 205; compare Stretton's Co. v. Derby, [1894] 1 Ch. 431; the appropriate remedy in such a case is by complaint to the Local Government Board under sect. 299 of P. H. Act, 1875; see Robinson v. Workington, [1897] 1 Q. B. 619; Pasmore v. Oswaldtwistle, [1898] A. C. 387). Nor will the court interfere by injunction to compel a local authority to take proceedings against others (Att.-Gen. v. Dorking, 20 Ch. D. 609; Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell, supra).

Where a nuisance arises from connections with the sewer of a local authority, made in the past by third parties, and which the local authority has no right to stop up, no injunction will be granted against the authority (Att.-Gen. v. Acton, 22 Ch. D. 232; Att.-Gen. v. Clerkenwell, [1891] 3 Ch. 527; Brown v. Dunstable, [1899] 2 Ch. 378); secus, in the case of connections which the authority has the right to stop up (Charles v. Finchley, 23 Ch. D. 767). As regards connections to be made in the future which the authority has no right to prevent, injunctions have been granted restraining the authority from "directing or authorising" them (Att.-Gen v. Acton, supra; Brown v. Dunstable, supra), but not from permitting them (ibid.).

Under the Public Health Act, 1875, local authorities have statutory powers of discharging their sewers into streams (sects. 15, 16, and 17). See Durrant v. Branksome Council, [1897] 2 Ch. 291; Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board, [1908] 2 Ch. 551.

Several forms of injunctions in the case of pollution of water are given in Seton, 7th ed. 605.

The right of a riparian proprietor to immediate relief by injunction is not interfered with by the month's notice required by Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 106 (Att.-Gen. v. Hackney, 20 Eq. 626; Bateman v. Poplar Board, 33 Ch. D. 360); or Public Health

Of Water-courses.

Act, 1875, s. 264 (Flower v. Low Leyton, 5 Ch. D. 347; Chapman v Auckland Union, 23 Q. B. D. 294; where damages were given in substitution).

The doctrine of acquiescence, as applied to the right of riparian proprietors to restrain the pollution of a stream by sewage, was considered in Att.-Gen. v. Halifax (17 W. R. 1088); and as to delay in such a case, see Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Canal (2 Eq. 71); Att.-Gen. v. Leeds (5 Ch. 583). A public body was not bound by acquiescence where their acts were held to have been ultra vires (Islington v. Hornsey, [1900] 1 Ch. 695).

Statutory remedies.

The Rivers Pollution Act, 1876, provides a summary means of preventing the pollution of rivers (see Yorkshire v. Holmfirth, [1894] 2 Q. B. 842; River Ribble v. Halliwell, [1899] 2 Q. B. 385; Yorkshire Rivers Board v. Linthwaite, [1915] 2 K. B. 436, cf. Rochford v. Port of London, [1914] 2 K. B. 916; see also Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 68—70).

(12) Action for escape of water.

Where in the ordinary and proper working of the defendant's mine water, which was naturally present there, flowed from his mine into the plaintiff's, the defendant was not liable (Smith v. Kenrick, 7 C. B. 564; Clegg v. Dearden, 12 Q. B. 576; compare Wilson v. Waddell, 2 App. Cas. 95; West Cumberland, &c., Co. v. Kenyon, 11 Ch. D. 782). On the other hand, where the defendant, the owner of an upper mine, pumped water into his mine which flooded a lower mine belonging to the plaintiff, it was held, that the defendant was liable (Baird v. Williamson, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 376; see Young v. Bankier Co., [1893] A. C. 697). These decisions were followed by the House of Lords in a case which arose as to liability for the escape of water from a mine; and it was laid down, that where the owner of land without wilfulness or negligence uses his land in the ordinary manner of its use, though mischief should thereby be occasioned to his neighbour, he will not be liable in damages. But if he brings upon his land anything which would not naturally come upon it, and which is in itself dangerous, and may become mischievous if not kept under proper control, though in so doing he may act without personal wilfulness or negligence, he will be liable in damages for any mischief thereby occasioned (Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. 3 H. L. 330; see Carstairs v. Taylor, L. R. 6 Ex. 217; Nichols v. Marsland, 2 Ex. D. 1; Box v. Jubb, 4 Ex. D. 78; Hurdman v. N. E. Ry. Co., 3 C. P. D. 168; Whalley v. Lanc. & Yorkshire Ry. Co., 13 Q. B. D. 131; Snow v. Whitehead, 27 Ch. D. 588; Greenock v. Caledonian Ry. Co., [1917] A. C. 556). Where a landowner brought water upon his land in a goit, and his neighbour subsequently acquired from him a right to use the water in the goit (and to repair the goit for that purpose), this did not affect the original obligation of the landowner to keep the goit in repair (Buckley v. Buckley, [1898] 2 Q. B. 608). For the case, however, where the neighbour assents to the water being on the landowner's premises, see further Gill v. Edouin, 72 L. T. 579, and Blake v. Woolf, [1898] 2 Q. B. 426.

The occupier of the upper floor of a house was held not liable to the occupier of the lower floor for escape of water (Ross v. Fedden, L. R. 7 Q. B. 661; see Anderson v. Oppenheimer, 5 Q. B. D. 602).

(13) Actions in respect of water rights arising by contract.

Where an injunction was granted against heating water contrary to agreement, it was laid down that where the construction of a contract is clear and the breach clear, it is not a question of damage; but the mere circumstance of the breach of covenant affords sufficient ground for the court to interfere by injunction (Tipping v. Eckersley, 2 K. & J. 264; Dickenson v. Grand Junction Co., 15 Beav. 260). "There is a manifest distinction between cases depending on nuisance and those depending on contract. Where there is a contract the court cannot attach the same importance to the question whether the damage is serious or not, as it does in mere cases of nuisance; the main point is whether the contract has been broken" (Att.-Gen. v. Mid Kent Ry. Co., 3 Ch. 104; compare the language of Lord Cairns in Doherty v. Allman, 3 App. Cas. 720; and see, as to damages, Lord Manners v. Johnson, 1 Ch. D. 679; Richards v. Revitt, 7 Ch. D. 224). Injunctions were granted to restrain breaches of agreements as to sewage in Wood v. Harrogate, [1874] W. N. 132, 225; Nuneaton v. General Sewage Co., 20 Eq. 127. As to specific performance of a contract to purchase the right to divert the water of a river, see Wright v. Howard, 1 S. & Stu. 190; Shackleton v. Sutcliffe, 1 De G. & S. 609; and of a contract to erect a pump and reservoir and supply water, see Cooke v. Chilcott, 3 Ch. D. 694.

Of Watercourses.

(14) Statutory powers.

Those who obtain from the legislature powers to interfere with rights of property are bound not to exceed those powers (Westminster Corporation v. L. N. W. Ry., [1905] A. C. 430; Liverpool v. Chorley Co., 2 D. M. & G. 852; Dawson v. Paver, 5 Hare, 415); and are also bound to act reasonably (ibid.; Southwark Water Co. v. Wandsworth, [1898] 2 Ch. 611). Further, a public body which has powers given it by a statute for the performance of a particular object, is responsible for injury caused by it in the exercise of its powers, unless the act done was absolutely necessary for the object of the statute (Att.-Gen. v. Colney Hatch, 4 Ch. 146; Metropolitan District v. Hill, L. R. 6 H. L. 193; Truman v. L. B. & S. C. Ry. Co., 29 Ch. D. 108; compare Vernon v. St. James', 16 Ch. D. 449; Att.-Gen. v. Hackney, 20 Eq. 626; Ogston v. Aberdeen Co., [1897] A. C. 111). A corporation empowered by statute to improve the navigation of the river were not liable to clear away weeds, which were no detriment to navigation (Parrett Co. v. Robins, 10 M. & W. 593; Cracknell v. Thetford, L. R. 4 C. P. 629). But the statutory powers may be so framed as to throw on the corporation an obligation to take care that no injury shall be caused to adjoining lands (Gaddis v. Bann Reservoir, 3 App. Cas. 430).

Where water is diverted in a manner, or to an extent not authorised by statutory powers, the diversion will not be restrained except at the instance of the Att.-Gen. (who need not prove damage), or of an individual who can show special damage (Liverpool v. Chorley Co., 2 D. M. & G. 852; Ware v. Regent's Canal Co., 3 De. G. & J. 212; London Association v. London & India Docks Committee, [1892] 3 Ch. 270). As to the duty of the Att.-Gen. in such a case, see Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry. Co. (11 Ch. D. 449; Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board, [1910] 1 Ch. 48); and as to private injury, see Pudsey Co. v. Bradford (15 Eq. 167).

A penalty for suffering washings to flow into and foul a well was held recoverable from a gas company in Pipkins v. Birmingham Gas Co. (5 H. & N. 74; 6 H. & N. 250). A power for a navigation company to alter a dam was held to continue, although the compensation commission had become extinct (Kennet Co. v. Witherington, 18 Q. B. 581). The funds of conservators of river banks were allowed to be applied in opposing a Bill for a project likely to be injurious to the banks (Bright v. North, 2 Ph. 216).

Waterworks companies.

The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, consolidates the provisions usually contained in Acts authorising the making of waterworks for supplying towns with water. This Act places the taking of streams upon the same footing as the taking lands under the L. C. C. Act, 1845; and a waterworks company was restrained from diverting a stream belonging to the plaintiff, without first complying with the provisions of the latter Act (Ferrand v. Bradford, 21 Beav. 412; see Purnell v. Wolverhampton Co., 10 C. B. 576; Hildreth v. Adamson, 8 W. R. 470; Busby v. Chesterfield Co., 1 El. Bl. & El. 176). As to compensation, see Bush v. Trowbridge Co., 10 Ch. 459. A waterworks company was restrained from polluting a river, its Act not authorising the pollution (Clowes v. Staffordshire Co., 8 Ch. 125). The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863, consolidates additional clauses frequently inserted in Acts relating to waterworks.

Of Watercourses.

(15) Navigable rivers.

Whether a river be navigable or not is a question of fact for the jury (Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & Ald. 662). The test in French law is, the possible use of the river for transport in some practical and profitable manner (Bell v. Quebec, 5 App. Cas. 84). The flux or reflux of the tide is evidence of a navigable river (Miles v. Rose, 5 Taunt. 705; Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 373; see Ilchester v. Raishleigh, 61 L. T. 477). Proof of the fact of navigation is decisive (Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 687). Instances of persons going up a creek on parties of pleasure, without the consent of the person claiming exclusive property in the creek, are evidence of a public navigable river (Miles v. Rose, 1 Marsh. 313; 5 Taunt. 705; 4 M. & S. 101).

The public right over a navigable river is a right to use the river for the purposes of navigation, similar to the right the public have to passage along a public road or footpath through a private estate (Orr-Ewing v. Colquhoun, 2 App. Cas. 839; Original Hartlepool Co. v. Gibb, 5 Ch. D. 713; Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 689, n.; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 168). But the analogy between a navigable river and a public road is not complete (Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 687; [1904] A. C. 509). Windermere is a public highway (Dixon v. Curwen (1877), W. N. 4); as to public rights on the Norfolk Broads, see Micklethwaite v. Vincent, 67 L. T. 225. As to a piece of water which is a cul de sac, see Bourke v. Davis, 44 Ch. D. 110. The public have a right to use steam power in navigating public canals, provided it occasions no more than the ordinary injury to it (Case v. Midland R. Co., 27 Beav. 247). An artificially navigable river may be dedicated as a public highway (Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 709, 716; see Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 494). The liberty of passage on a public navigable river is not suspended when the tide is too low for vessels to float. It is no trespass if a vessel remains aground till the tide serves, although, by custom or agreement, a fine may be payable to the lord of the soil for such grounding (Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339). Such right is not strictly an easement (Hawkins v. Rutter, [1892] 1 Q. B. 668). There is also a public right to fix moorings in the soil of navigable waters, such being an ordinary incident of navigation (Att.-Gen. v. Wright, [1897] 2 Q. B. 318). The same right, if enjoyed immemorially in a locality, might also be supported by presuming a grant from the Crown subject to the right (ibid.). But there is no right as an incident of navigation to keep a raft moored to the bank or bed, or to attach to them pleasure boats for hire (Campbell's Trustees v. Sweeney, [1911] S. C. 1319). The public right of navigating a river may be connected with a right of access to a particular part of the bank, which latter is a private right (Lyon v. Fishmongers' Co., 1 App. Cas. 662; Bell v. Quebec, 5 App. Cas. 84). In general, a riparian proprietor on a navigable river has (subject to the public right of navigation) the same rights of access to the river as such a proprietor on a non-navigable river (ibid.; North Shore R. Co. v. Pion, 14 App. Cas. 612). This right of access extends over a portion of the bed left dry even when vested in another (Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 30). The reasonable limits of the right of a riparian owner to moor a vessel alongside his wharf are stated in Original Hartlepool Co. v. Gibb, 5 Ch. D. 713. As to acquiring prescriptive rights in a navigable river, see Hamelin v. Bannerman, [1895] A. C. 237.

Extinction of right of navigation.

Although adverse enjoyment for twenty years is, as against a private individual, evidence of a grant by him, yet it is otherwise in the case of a public navigable river: for no such obstruction will bar a public right (Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & Ald. 662; Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 195). A public right of navigation may be extinguished either by an Act of Parliament, a writ ad quod damnum and inquisition, or, under certain circumstances, by commissioners of sewers, or by natural causes, such as the recess of the sea, or accumulation of silt or mud (R. v. Montague, 4 B. & C. 598). Where by any natural cause the channel becomes choked up the river ceases to be navigable, at least until such causes are by some means counteracted (Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 374). Where water which is a highway changes its course, the new channel becomes a highway (Carlisle v. Graham, L. R. 4 Ex. 367).

Obstructions to navigation.

An action will lie for the special damage occasioned to a party conveying goods along a navigation, by its obstruction by a barge moored across, whereby he was compelled to unload and carry his goods overland (Rose v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101). Where the defendant wrongfully placed timber in a navigable river, whereby the access to the plaintiff's public-house was obstructed, an action lay for the particular injury (Rose v. Groves, 5 M. & G. 613; Dobson v. Blackmore, 9 Q. B. 991).

A weir appurtenant to a fishery, obstructing the whole or part of a navigable river, is legal, if granted by the Crown before the commencement of the reign of Edward the First. Such a grant may be inferred from evidence of its having existed before that time. Where the Crown had no right to obstruct the whole passage of a navigable river, it had no right to erect a weir obstructing a part, except subject to the rights of the public; and therefore in such a case the weir would become illegal upon the rest of the river being so choked that there could be no passage elsewhere (Williams v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & Ell. 314; Rolle v. Whyte, L. R. 3 Q. B. 286; Leconfield v. Lonsdale, L. R. 5 C. P. 657). It is not competent either to the Crown or to a subject, to use the soil of a navigable river for any purpose amounting to a nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Johnson, 2 Wils. C. C. 87). Where the defendant, as grantee of the Crown, was entitled to the soil of a navigable river, such ownership did not justify him in constructing a jetty which interfered with the navigation (Att.-Gen. v. Lonsdale, 7 Eq. 377; Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 14 Ch. D. 69; Liverpool Co. v. Mersey Co., [1908] 2 Ch. 460). A corporation, being the conservators of a river, and the owners of the soil between high and low water mark, cannot authorise their lessee to erect a wharf there which produces inconvenience to the public in the use of the river for the purposes of navigation (R. v. Grosvenor, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 511).

As regards an owner of land at the side of a public navigable river who is not the owner of the soil of the river, it was said that he cannot, for the benefit of his own trade, erect on such soil any structure, whether an obstruction to navigation or not (Att.-Gen. v. Terry, 9 Ch. 423; see White v. Phillips, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 245). But he may moor to his bank a floating wharf which is no obstruction (Booth v. Ratte, 15 A. C. 188).

The liability of wharfingers in respect of the soil of a navigable river adjoining their jetty is dealt with in The Moorcock, 14 P. D. 64; The Calliope, [1891] A. C. 11. And the liability of the owner of a sunken wreck in a navigable river in Brown v. Mallett, 5 C. B. 599; The Snark, [1900] P. 105. And as to the right of persons entitled to land from a navigable river on the bank adjoining, to pass over permanent obstructions, see Eastern Counties Ry. Co. v. Dorling, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 821; Marshall v. Ulleswater Co., L. R. 7 Q. B. 166. Navigators were liable for injuring oysters placed in the channel of a navigable river (Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; Hawkins v. Rutter, [1892] 1 Q. B. 668; The Swift, [1901] P. 168).

Conservators empowered by statute to remove obstructions to navigation were not liable for damage to a barge injured by an obstruction, as being unpaid public trustees with a discretionary power, but no compulsory duty, of removing obstructions (Forbes v. Lea Board, 4 Ex. D. 116; see also Jolliffe v. Wallasey Board, L. R. 9 C. P. 62, where a public body was held guilty of negligence in the performance of a public duty with regard to navigation). A corporation empowered by statute to improve navigation was held entitled to sue in respect of abstraction of water without proof of actual damage to navigation (Medway Co. v. Romney, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 575). The Attorney-General can restrain interference with the public right of navigation without showing actual injury (Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury Co., 21 Ch. D. 752; compare Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Board, [1910] 1 Ch. 61). As to purpresture and the remedy in that case, see Att.-Gen. v. Johnson (2 Wils. C. C. 87).

(16) Ownership of soil of tidal waters.

The presumption as to the ownership of the soil of rivers depends on whether they are tidal or non-tidal (see Orr-Ewing v. Colquhoun, 2 App. Cas. 847). In the case of navigable tidal waters (including rivers, estuaries, and arms of the sea), the presumption is that the soil is vested in the Crown (Gann v. Free Fisheries of Whitstable, 11 H. L. C. 192; Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 14 Ch. D. 69; Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 649). But the soil if tidal waters may be vested in a subject (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, supra; Neil v. Devonshire, 8 App. Cas. 135), e.g. where he can claim it as included in an adjoining manor (Le Strange v. Rowe, 4 F. & F. 1048; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 139); or where he is the owner of a several fishery (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, supra; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 139). A title to the foreshore on a tidal navigable river was established as against the Crown by acts of possession on the part of an adjoining owner, subject to the public right of navigation (Lord Adv. v. Blantyre, 4 App. Cas. 770; see Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, supra). The city of London has been stated to own the soil of the Thames (Dav. 56, b; Com. Dig. Navigation (B.)); see, however, Att.-Gen. v. London, 2 Mac. & G. 247; Att.-Gen. v. Johnson, 2 Wils. C. C. 87. See further as to the bed of the Thames and the powers of the conservators, Thames Conservators v. Port of London, [1894] 1 Q. B. 647; Thames Conservators v. Smeed, [1897] 2 Q. B. 334; Palmer v. Thames Conservators, [1902] 1 Ch. 163. As to the duties of an owner of land abutting on a tidal navigable river, in respect of a river wall, see Nitro-Phosphate Co. v. London and St. Katharine's Docks (9 Ch. D. 524); Burt v. Victoria Co. (47 L. T. 378).

Soil of non-tidal waters (whether navigable or non-navigable);

In the case of a non-tidal navigable lake, the Crown has no de jure right to the soil (Bristowe v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas. 641). It is, however, doubtful whether the riparian owners are entitled ad medium filum (ibid., 666; see Mackenzie v. Bankes, 3 App. Cas. 132, n.). In the case of non-tidal navigable rivers, the presumption is that the soil is the property of the owners on each side to the middle of the river, and if a man owns the land on both sides, the presumption is that the whole bed of the river belongs to him (Blount v. Layard, [1891] 2 Ch. 689, n). The same presumptions apply in the case of a non-navigable river (Hale, De Jure Maris, Cap. I.; Carter v. Murcot, 4 Burr. 2162; Harg. L. Tracts, 5; Davies, R. 155; R. v. Wharton, 12 Mod. 510; Bickett v. Morris, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 58). Where a non-tidal river was divided by an island, the medium filum was drawn between the island and one bank (Great Torrington v. Moore Stevens, [1904] 1 Ch. 347; see Zetland v. Glover, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 70). But in each case the ownership of the soil is a question of fact. Thus the soil may form part of the waste of a manor (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 110). Again, the owner of the land on one side of a river only may be entitled to the whole bed (Jones v. Williams, 2 M. & W. 326). See the evidence of acts of ownership in the last-mentioned case, and in Smith v. Andrews, [1891] 2 Ch. 678; Blount v. Layard, ibid., 681, n.; Lord Advocate v. Blantyre, 4 App. Cas. 770, 791. The above presumption prima facie applies to the ownership of the bed of an artificial channel (Whitmores v. Stanford, [1909] 1 Ch. 427). The relation of the ownership of the soil to the ownership of the fishery is stated, ante, p. 54.

Of Watercourses.

As to pleadings in an action to establish title to the soil of a watercourse, see Pledge v. Pomfret, [1905] W. N. 56.

when soil of river passes by conveyance of bank.

The right of ownership of the moiety of the soil of a non-tidal river passes, according to a legal presumption, under a conveyance of land on one bank, whether the land is freehold, copyhold, or leasehold (Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98); and this even where the conveyance points to a boundary which would not include any part of the bed (Crossley v. Lightowler, 3 Eq. 279); or where the quantity specified in the deed and the colouring on the map, excludes the bed (Micklethwait v. Newlay Co., 33 Ch. D. 133; Mellor v. Walmesley, [1905] 2 Ch. 179); or where the river is of more than ordinary breadth (Dwyer v. Rich, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 144). The presumption apples also where the grantor is owner of both banks of the river (Micklethwait v. Newlay Co., supra). The presumption may be rebutted by surrounding circumstances (Devonshire v. Pattinson, 20 Q. B. D. 263); but not by reason of subsequent circumstances not contemplated at the time of the grant (Micklethwait v. Newlay Co., supra). It is doubtful whether the presumption applies when the bank is acquired by statutory award made under an Inclosure Act (Ecroyd v. Coulthard, [1897] 2 Ch. 567; Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 9. See the cases quoted ante, pp. 54, 71).

Rights of navigation proprietors in the soil of river;

An Act of Parliament, passed to make navigable a natural river, does not vest in the undertakers of the navigation the bed of the river, but gives them the privilege of cleansing it, which is a mere easement (R. v. Mersey Navigation, 9 B. & C. 114; R. v. Thomas, ibid., 95). The proprietors of a navigation have no property either in the soil over which the water flows or in the adjoining banks under an Act of Parliament allowing them the use of the land through which the river passes (Hollis v. Goldfinch, 1 B. & C. 221). A right to the use of flowing water does not necessarily depend upon the ownership of the soil covered by such water (Lord v. Sydney, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 473).

The fee simple in the towing-path by the River Lee remains in the adjoining owner, subject to the rights of the conservators in connection with navigation (Lee Conservators v. Button, 6 App. Cas. 685). And a conveyance of land adjoining a towing-path included it (Thames Conservators v. Kent, [1918], 2 K. B. 272). As to the liability of conservators for the condition of a towing-path, see Winch v. Thames Conservators (L. R. 9 C. P. 378). The public are not entitled at common law to tow on the banks of ancient navigable rivers; the right must be founded on statute or on usage (Ball v. Herbert, 3 T. R. 256; see 1 Lord Raym. 725; Bull. N. P. 90; 6 Mod. 163, contra; see also Pierce v. Falconberge, 1 Burr. 292).

Of Water-courses.

As to fishing from a towing-path, see Staffordshire, &c. Navigation v. Bradley, [1912] 1 Ch. 91.

The use of the banks of the river for more than twenty years by fishermen, who occasionally levelled them, is evidence of a grant of a right of landing by the owner of the soil, although both fishery and landing-place once belonged to the same person, and there was no evidence to show that the owners knew of the user (Gray v. Bond, 2 Brod. & Bing. 667). As to repairing the banks of non-navigable rivers, see Long v. Gowlett, [1923] 2 Ch. 177.

(17)

Rights as to the seashore.

Foreshore.

Definition.

Primâ facie title of Crown.

Apart from usage, the Crown is entitled to the "littus maris," as well as to the soil of the sea adjoining the coast (Att.-Gen. v. Chambers, 4 D. M. & G. 213); its right landward being limited primâ facie by the line of the medium high tide between the springs and the neaps (ibid., 218). The land between medium high and low water marks is ordinarily referred to as "the foreshore" (Mellor v. Walmsley, [1905] 2 Ch. 164; see the definitions of "sea-shore" quoted by Romer, L.J., ibid., 177). As to the landward limits of the foreshore prescribed by the law of Scotland, see Musselburgh v. M., [1905] A. C. 494, 495. The Crown is entitled to the area of the sea within three miles of the shore (Secretary of State for India v. Sri Raja, 85 L. J. P. C. 222). Subject to the rights mentioned below, the Crown's title is a beneficial one (Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 325).

Title against the Crown.

As against the Crown a title to the foreshore can be acquired by proving either an express grant from the Crown or facts from which such grant may be presumed (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 653). The ownership of a several fishery over the foreshore raises a presumption that the soil is vested in such owner (ibid., 649).

Lord of Manor.

Again, the foreshore may be shown to be parcel of the adjoining manor (Constable's Case, 5 Rep. 107; Harg. Law Tracts, 12), e.g. where the lord has the franchise of taking wreck (Hale De Jure Maris, Cap. 6). It was treated as such in Att.-Gen v. Hanmer, 27 L. J. Ch. 837; Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 14 Ch. D. 18; Truro v. Rowe, [1902] 2 K. B. 709; Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 313; Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 648. As to evidence in support of the lord's title, either in the shape of entries on the court rolls, or previous decisions, see Tomline, Ex parte, 21 W. R. 475; Le Strange v. Rowe, 4 F. & F. 1048; Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 659. Where by an ancient Crown grant of a manor its limits were not defined, modern usage was admissible to show that the foreshore was parcel of the manor (Beaufort v. Swansea, 3 Ex. 413; Att.-Gen. v. Jones, 2 H. & C. 347; Calmady v. Rowe, 6 C. B. 861; Alston, Ex parte, 28 L. T. 337). Crown grants of wreck coupled with usage may also support as against the Crown, a title to foreshore (Chad v. Tilsed, 2 Brod. & Bing. 403; see Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 660; Healey v. Thorne, Ir. Rep. 4 C. L. 495; Hamilton v. Att.-Gen., 5 L. R. Ir. 555).

Title by possession.

Foreshore in Cornwall belonged to the Duke of Cornwall (Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114). As against the Crown, a title to foreshore in Scotland may be acquired by prescriptive possession (Lord Adv. v. Blantyre, 4 App. Cas. 770; Lord Adv. v. Young, 12 App. Cas. 544). In other parts of the United Kingdom a title to foreshore may be acquired by possession; as against the Crown under the Nullum Tempus Act (Alston, Ex parte, 28 L. T. 337); and as against a subject of the Crown under the ordinary Statutes of Limitation (see Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114; Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 658; Truro v. Rowe, [1902] 2 K. B. 715). Erecting piles on the foreshore was an act of ownership only as regards the site of the piles (Beaufort v. Aird, 20 T. L. R. 603).

The title of the Crown and of those claiming under it to foreshore is subject to an obligation to protect the realm from the inroads of the sea by maintaining natural barriers (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 14 Ch. D. 58; West Norfolk v. Archdale, 16 Q. B. D. 754 distinguished in Nesbitt v. Mablethorpe, [1918] 2 K. B. 1; see Musselburgh v. M., [1905] A. C. 491) and the destruction of natural barriers by removing shingle was restrained (ibid.). Such title is also subject to other rights of the public (Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 325), which are as follows:—

Public rights controlling Crown's title.

When the foreshore is covered with water, every subject of the King has a right of navigation, and has also prima facie a common of fishery (ibid. 315; Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 139). When the foreshore becomes dry there is for purposes of navigation a common law right to cross the foreshore in case of peril or necessity; and for the purpose of fishing, there may be a right to launch a boat ([1904] 2 Ch. 316). As to drawing up fishing boats on the shore, see Ilchester v. Rashleigh, 61 L. T. 478. There is also a right to get shell-fish on the dry foreshore (Bagott v. Orr, 2 Bos. & P. 472; Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 327). There is not, however, prima facie a public highway along the foreshore (Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 324), nor a right of entry either for taking seaweed (Howe v. Stowell, 1 Alcock & Napier, 348), or for shooting wild duck (Fitzhardinge v. Purcell, [1908] 2 Ch. 139), or for holding religious services (Llandudno v. Woods, [1899] 2 Ch. 705). Nor is there any common law right to bathe in the sea, and as incident thereto to cross the foreshore on foot or with bathing machines (Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268; Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 313; Mace v. Philcox, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 600), or any common law right to appropriate foreshore for storing oysters to the exclusion of others (Truro v. Rowe, [1902] 2 K. B. 715). Nor is there any common law right to discharge sewage into the sea so as to cause a nuisance (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 665, 689; Hobart v. Southend, 75 L. J. K. B. 305). The owner of a tenement adjoining the sea was held to have the same right of access to the sea as a riparian proprietor has to a tidal river (Att.-Gen. Straits Settlement v. Wemyss, 13 App. Cas. 192).

Occupier of foreshore.

A person in possession of foreshore may maintain trespass against a wrongdoer without displacing the Crown's title (Hastings v. Ivall, 19 Eq. 558). So, irrespectively of title, trespass was maintained by the occupier of oyster ponds on the foreshore (Foster v. Warblington, [1906] 1 K. B. 648).

Grant of foreshore.

As to what words in the grant will pass the soil of the foreshore, see Scratton v. Brown, 4 B. & C. 485; Hastings v. Ivall, 19 Eq. 558; Mellor v. Walmsley, [1905] 2 Ch. 164, where the land was described as "situate on the sea-shore"; Nesbitt v. Mablethorpe, [1918] 2 K. B. 1 (sandhills adjoining the shore).

A grant by the Crown (as lord of a manor adjoining an estuary) of minerals within the waste was held to pass minerals under the foreshore (Att.-Gen. v. Hanmer, 27 L. J. Ch. 837). The effect of a lease by the Crown of minerals below low water mark was considered in Lord Adv. v. Wemyss, [1900] A. C. 48. Acts of user of foreshore by the grantee were relevant to explain a Crown grant of land adjoining the sea (Van Diemen Co. v. Table Board, [1906] A. C. 92). Crown grants of non-manorial lands were shown by usage to include foreshore (Brew v. Haren, I. R. 11 C. L. 198; Daly v. Murray, 17 L. R. Ir. 185; Re Belfast Dock Act, I. R. 1 Eq. 128). The Courts have presumed grants by the Crown of a licence to discharge sewage over foreshore (Somersetshire v. Bridgwater, 81 L. T. 732), of a several fishery in tidal waters (Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 633). An express grant of fishing over the foreshore of Canada was considered, Cabot v. Att.-Gen. of

Of Water-courses.

Quebec, [1907] A. C. 511. Possession by the Crown of foreshore after a grant thereof by it to another created a presumption against the grant (Parmeter v. Att.-Gen., 1 Dow. 328). A modern grant of foreshore by the Crown was dealt with, Liverpool Co. v. Mersey Co., [1909] 1 Ch. 209. As to management of the Crown's foreshore and disputes in relation thereto, see Crown Lands Act, 1906, ss. 2 and 3.

Where a parish lies on the seashore or extends up to a tidal river, the land between medium high water and low water mark is prima facie extra-parochial (Bridgwater v. Bootle-cum-Linacre, L. R. 2 Q. B. 4; see Smart v. Suva, [1893] A. C. 301).

(18) Accretions and alluvium.

Gradual accretions of land from the sea belong to the owner of the land gradually added to (R. v. Yarborough, 3 B. & C. 91; 5 Bing. 163; 2 Bligh, (N.S.) 147; Doe v. East India Co., 10 Moo. P. C. 140; Mellor v. Walmsley, [1904] 2 Ch. 530; see Scratton v. Brown, 4 B. & C. 485, where a grant of foreshore was held to pass the foreshore as it shifted from time to time). Similarly in the case of gradual accretions from a non-navigable river (Ford v. Lacey, 30 L. J. Ex. 351; Zetland v. Glover, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 70). As to accretions which are not gradual, see Att.-Gen. v. Reeve, 1 T. L. R. 675. Conversely land gradually encroached upon by water ceases to belong to the former owner (Re Hull and Selby Ry. Co., 5 M. & W. 327). This law is based on the impossibility of identifying from day to day small additions to or subtractions from land caused by the constant action of running water (see Foster v. Wright, 4 C. P. D. 446). In the case of a river, it was doubted whether the doctrine of accretion would apply where the original bank remained clearly defined (Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 27, 28). The question whether accretions passed by a conveyance of land "bounded by the seashore" was discussed: Mellor v. Walmsley, [1904] 2 Ch. 530; [1905] 2 Ch. 164. Land added by accretion becomes subject to any custom affecting the land to which it is added (Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 538).

The title to alluvium, arising from artificial causes, does not differ as to the rights of landowners from the title to alluvium arising from natural causes, where the artificial causes arise from a fair use of the land adjoining the seashore, and not from acts done with a view to the acquisition of the seashore. Where the acts of ownership relied on consisted merely of turning cattle upon a marsh which crossed the invisible line of boundary separating the marsh from the seashore, and the cattle were allowed to stray without interruption, Lord Chelmsford, C., said "the effect of acts of ownership must depend partly upon the acts themselves, and partly upon the nature of the property upon which they are exercised. If cattle are turned upon enclosed pasture ground, and placed there to feed from time to time, it is strong evidence that it is done under an assertion of right; but where the property is of such a nature that it cannot be easily protected against intrusion, and if it could it would not be worth the trouble of preventing it, there, mere user is not sufficient to establish a right, but it must be founded upon some proof of knowledge and acquiescence by the party interested in resisting it, or by perseverance in the assertion and exercise of the right claimed in the face of opposition" (Att.-Gen. v. Chambers, 4 De G. & J. 65; and see Re Hainault Forest Act, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 648, and Lord Blackburn's remarks in Lord Adv. v. Blantyre, 4 App. Cas. 791; Hindson v. Ashby, [1896] 2 Ch. 24; Hanbury v. Jenkins, [1901] 2 Ch. 421; Re Vernon, [1901] 1 I. R. 1).

(19) Ferries.

A ferry is the exclusive right to carry passengers and goods across a river or arm of the sea either (1) from one vill to another, or

Of Water-courses.

(2) to connect a continuous highway leading from one township or vill to another (Newton v. Cubitt, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 32; Cowes Council v. Southampton Co., [1905] 2 K. B. 295). It is not a servitude imposed upon a large area of land and is wholly unconnected with the ownership or occupation of land (ibid.; see Matthews v. Peache, 5 E. & B. 546). A ferry is not a monopoly to carry by any means whatever, but only to carry by means of a ferry (Dibden v. Skirrow, [1908] 1 Ch. 47).

A disturbance of a ferry may arise from the establishment of a new ferry in proximity to an ancient ferry (Newton v. Cubitt, supra; Huzzey v. Field, 2 Cr. M. & R. 432; General Estates Co. v. Beaver, [1914] 3 K. B. 918). But there was no disturbance where a new ferry was established to provide for a new traffic (Cowes Council v. Southampton Co., [1905] 2 K. B. 287; Hammerton v. Dysart, [1916] 1 A. C. 57); or where a new bridge was made (Hopkins v. G. N. Ry., 2 Q. B. D. 224; Dibden v. Skirrow, [1908] 1 Ch. 41).

A ferry forms part of the highway, and its owner, in consideration of the monopoly, is bound under pain of indictment to have his ferry always ready (Letton v. Goodden, 2 Eq. 131; Anon., 1 Ves. sen. 476). All ancient ferries had their origin in royal grant or in prescription which presumes a royal grant (Simpson v. Att.-Gen., [1904] A. C. 490). Thirty-five years' usage was sufficient to show a legal origin (Trotter v. Harris, 2 Y. & J. 285). A ferry is a matter of public interest, and accordingly evidence in support of the right may be given in the form of reputation or of a judgment of a competent Court (Pym v. Currell, 6 M. & W. 234). A custom of keeping a ferry boat was alleged by a parish (Pain v. Patrick, 3 Mod. 289, 294).

VI.—Right of Support.

(1) Support for Land in its Natural Condition...111.
(2) Support for Incumbered Land or Excavated Land...113.
(3) Support for one Building by another...113.
(4) When Right of Action arises...114.

(1) Support for land in its natural condition: from land. Prima facie rules.

Certain rights in respect of support have been held to be easements within sect. 2 of the Prescription Act, 1832 (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 798; Lemaitre v. Davis, 19 Ch. D. 291; see Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 709). And the right to damage surface by withdrawing support has also been held to be an easement (Sitwell v. Londesborough, [1905] 1 Ch. 465; Rowbotham v. Wilson, 8 H. L. C. 348; see Richards v. Harper, L. R. 1 Exch. 199). Accordingly a short note is here added as to support.

First, as to land in its natural condition, unincumbered by building and unexcavated.

Questions as to support arise where the title to land A has been severed from the title to land B, which is subjacent to land A vertically; or from the title to land C, which is adjacent to land A laterally. It is settled that, independently of the result of any facts or instruments connected with the severance, and also of custom, the owner of land A is of common right entitled to have it supported vertically by land B (Humphries v. Brogden, 12 Q. B. 739), and laterally by land C (Hunt v. Peake, John. 705; Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 808); the right to lateral support extending only over "that portion of land the existence of which in its natural state is necessary for the support of " land A (Birmingham v. Allen, 6 Ch. D. 289). The surface owner's right of support is a right, not to an easement, but to the ordinary enjoyment of his land (West Leigh Co. v. Tunnicliffe, [1908] A. C. 30).

Further, as regards instruments effecting the severance. Where the owner of the surface and subsoil severs them, and the instrument contains no provision bearing on support, the prima facie rule is, that the right of support is attached as of common right to the surface; not only where the surface is granted and the subsoil retained (Proud v. Bates, 34 L. J. Ch. 412), but also where the surface is retained and the subsoil is granted (Davis v. Treharne, 6 App. Cas. 460). This prima facie rule is explained in Butterley v. New Hucknall, [1910] A. C. 381. The rule holds good whether the instrument is a lease, or a grant, or reservation, or Inclosure Act or award (Butterknowle Co. v. Bishop Auckland Co., [1906] A. C. 313).

Exceptions to prima facie rule.

The prima facie rule may, however, be altered by the express words of the instrument of severance or necessary intendment therefrom (ibid.; Aspden v. Seddon, 10 Ch. 401; Davis v. Treharne, 6 A. C. 467; Dixon v. White, 8 A. C. 843; Jones v. Consolidated Collieries, [1916] 1 K. B. 123; Beard v. Moira Colliery, [1915] 1 Ch. 257; Davies v. Powell, &c., Co., [1917] 1 Ch. 488). As to the meaning in such an instrument of the words " mines " and " minerals " see Glasgow v. Farie, 13 A. C. 687, 689.

Words of instrument. Inclosure Act.

Again, where the title to the surface and the underlying minerals is severed in pursuance of an Inclosure Act, while the above rule giving the surface owner a right to support ordinarily applies (Love v. Bell, 9 App. Cas. 297; Thomson v. St. Catharine's College, [1919] A. C. 468), the right may be expressly or impliedly limited by the Act (Bell v. Dudley, [1895] 1 Ch. 186; Consett Co. v. Ritson, 22 Q. B. D. 318, 702; 43 W. R. 122; Butterknowle Co. v. Bishop Auckland Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 424; [1906] A. C. 305; Welldon v. Butterley Co., [1920] 1 Ch. 130).

Railways Clauses Act, 1845.

Again, the prima facie rule may, in the case of a purchase by a railway company, be altered by the provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. For where under that Act a railway company purchases the surface without the underlying minerals, the owner of the minerals, when not compensated therefor, may after notice so work them (working properly) as to let down the surface (Pountney v. Clayton, 11 Q. B. D. 820); even in the case of minerals gotten by open workings (Midland Ry. Co. v. Robinson, 15 App. Cas. 19; see G. W. Ry. v. Blades, [1901] 2 Ch. 625). But the provisions of the Act do not apply to mines outside the limit of forty yards from the railway (Howley Park Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., [1913] A. C. 11). See, generally, as to the statutory provisions which limit or extend the prima facie right, L. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 16; and Bell v. Dudley, [1895] 1 Ch. 182, and cases there referred to.

Custom.

Again, the prima facie rule may be altered by custom, e.g., a custom that the lord may, by working his own subjacent minerals, let down the surface of a copyholder, making, however, compensation (Aspden v. Seddon, 1 Ex. D. 510).

Support from subterranean water.

It has been said that at common law there is no right of support from subterranean water (Popplewell v. Hodgkinson, L. R. 4 Ex. 248; Elliot v. N. E. Ry. Co., 10 H. L. C. 333; English v. Metropolitan Board, [1907] 1 K. B. 588; see, however, the judmgents in Jordeson v. Sutton Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 217). But where land is supported by a bed of wet sand or running silt, an adjoining owner who, by excavating and pumping, withdraws this support is liable in damages (Jordeson v. Sutton Co., supra). So also in the case of a bed of semi-fluid pitch (Trinidad Asphalte Co. v. Ambard, [1899] A. C. 594). See also the Brine Pumping (Compensation for Subsidence) Act, 1891; and Salt Union v. Brunner, [1906] 2 K. B. 822. Right of Support.

(2) Support for incumbered land.

Secondly, as to land incumbered by buildings, &c.

Where the title to land A, on which a building has been or is about to be erected, is severed from the title to the subjacent or adjacent land, the right to have such building supported by the subjacent or adjacent land is not of common right, but must be acquired (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App Cas. 792, 809). When acquired the right is precisely the same as that of support for land (ibid.). The right may be acquired by grant, whether express (ibid.) or implied (ibid.). And the implication may be made not only where at the time of the severance land A had buildings standing on it (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 792), but also where it was conveyed expressly with a view to the erection of buildings (Caledonian Co. v. Sprot, 2 Macq. H. L. C. 449; Rigby v. Bennett, 21 Ch. D. 559). A reservation of such a right will not generally be implied in favour of the grantor (Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 300; [1902] 2 Ch. 557). Right may arise under grant; express; or implied;

When a statute gives the right to make and maintain something requiring support, e.g., a canal, and provision is made for compensation to landowners, the requisite right of support is also given (L. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 16). or under statute;

The right of support may be acquired by enjoyment for buildings which have in fact been standing for twenty years (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 740; see Jordeson v. Sutton Co., [1898] 2 Ch. 625). And even where buildings are in an infirm condition damages may be recovered from the owner of the servient tenement, if the injury has resulted from his acts (Dodd v. Holme, 1 A. & E. 506). The enjoyment, however, must not be clam. Thus, no right of support for dock sides from underground rods was acquired by twenty years' enjoyment which had not been open and visible (Union Co. v. London Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557). or by enjoyment;

Where buildings have been standing for less than twenty years, damages may be recovered on proof that the unincumbered land would have sunk (Hamer v. Knowles, 6 H. & N. 454; 30 L. J. Ex. 102; see Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301).

Apparently, the right of support for buildings may also be acquired by lost grant (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 811). by lost grant.

As regards acquiring a right of support for excavated land, see Partridge v. Scott, 3 M. & W. 220; Birmingham v. Allen, 6 Ch. D. 284. Excavated land.

(3) Support for one building by another.

Further, as to support for one building by an adjacent building, see Sack v. Jones, [1925] Ch. 235. This right is similar to the right of support for a building by land (Lemaitre v. Davis, 19 Ch. D. 290). The right may be claimed by implied grant or reservation on the severance of two houses erected by the same owner (Richards v. Rose, 9 Ex. 218; see Howarth v. Armstrong, 77 L. T. 62). Where the owner of building A and building B (which is subjacent to A and supports it) demises A the lessor cannot withdraw the support but there is no covenant implied by him to repair B (Colebrook v. Girdlers Co., 1 Q. B. D. 234). In the case of houses belonging to different owners, the right may be claimed by prescription (Lemaitre v. Davis, 19 Ch. D. 281; see Waddington v. Naylor, 60 L. T. 480); in which case the enjoyment must have been as of right (see Tone v. Preston, 24 Ch. D. 739), and therefore open (Lemaitre v. Davis, supra; Solomon v. Vintners' Co., 4 H. & N.

Right of Support.

601—603; Gately v. Martin, [1900] 2 I. R. 269; see Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 740). As to adjoining buildings in London, see London Building Act, 1894. As to party walls see Law of Property Act, 1925, s. 38, post.

(4) When right of action arises.

The right called the right of support is not a right on the part of the landowner to have the adjoining soil remain in its natural state (Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 808), but a right to have his own land remain in its natural condition unaffected by any act done in the neighbouring land (Bonomi v. Backhouse, E. B. & E. 657; 28 L. J. Q. B. 381). Accordingly, if on the working of the subjacent soil a subsidence can be prevented by the use of artificial means of support, no cause of action arises (Bower v. Peat, 1 Q. B. D. 327); but if an actual subsidence takes place, a cause of action arises by reason of the injury to the right, even though there is no pecuniary loss (Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 311; Mitchell v. Darley Main Co., 14 Q. B. D. 137).

The Statute of Limitations only runs from the date of the subsidence (Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. C. 503; see Spoor v. Green, L. R. 9 Ex. 99); and each successive subsidence gives rise to a separate cause of action (Darley Main Co. v. Mitchell, 11 App. Cas. 127; Crumbie v. Wallsend, [1891] 1 Q. B. 503; West Leigh Co. v. Tunnicliffe, [1908] A. C. 27). A lessee of mines, however, is not liable for subsidence occurring during his lease, but caused by the acts of his predecessors (Greenwell v. Low Beechburn Co., [1897] 2 Q. B. 165; Hall v. Norfolk, [1900] 2 Ch. 493).

In addition to damages, a person whose right to support is infringed may claim an injunction (Mundy v. Rutland, 23 Ch. D. 81; see Seton, 7th ed. 563).

VII.—Of the Right to Pews and Vaults.

(1) Rights in regard to Pews...114.
(2) Proof of Prescriptive Rights to Pews...115.
(3) Voting in respect of Pews and Mortgage of Pew Rents...117.
(4) Chancels...117.
(5) Remedies for Disturbance of Pews...117.
(6) Vaults...119.

Lord Penzance expressed an opinion that a prescriptive right to a pew in the nave of a parish church cannot be claimed under sect. 2 of the Prescription Act (Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15; see Halliday v. Phillips, 23 Q. B. D. 54; Proud v. Price, 62 L. J. Q. B. 490). It is clear, however, that the right to a pew or vault can be claimed as a prescriptive easement annexed to an ancient house in the parish (Mainwaring v. Giles, 5 B. & Ald. 361; Stileman Gibbard v. Wilkinson, [1897] 1 Q. B. 749; Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 288). Accordingly a note is added on the right to pews and vaults.

(1) General right with regard to pews.

Of common right, the soil and freehold of the church is the parson's; the use of the body of the church, and the repair of it, common to the parishioners; and the disposing of the seats therein the right of the ordinary (Hob. 69; Gibs. Cod. tit. 9, c. 4).

According to the common law the rector, whether endowed or spiritual only, is entitled to the chief seat in the chancel, unless some other person be in a condition to prescribe for it from time immemorial. The Ecclesiastical Court, in the exercise of its ordinary authority, would allot to him such sitting and protect him against the disturbance of such right (Spry v. Flood, 2 Curt, 357). By the general law, and of common right, all the pews in a parish church are the common property of the parish; they are for the use in common of the parishioners, who are all entitled to be seated orderly and conveniently, so as best to provide for the accommodation of all. The distribution of seats rests with the churchwardens, as the officers, subject to the control of the ordinary (12 Rep. 105; 3 Inst. 202; Halliday v. Phillips, 23 Q. B. D. 53; Blake v. Usborne, 3 Hagg. Eccl. R. 733; Claverley v. C., [1909] P. 213). The churchwardens have a discretionary power to appropriate the pews in the church amongst the parishioners, and may remove persons intruding on seats already appropriated (Reynolds v. Monkton, 2 M. & Rob. 384; Asher v. Calcraft, 18 Q. B. D. 607; Taylor v. Timson, 20 Q. B. D. 676); and, in allotting seats in a church built under the Church Building Acts, may give preference to subscribers to church expenses (St. Saviour, Westgate-on-Sea, Vicar of, [1898] P. 217).

The general right then being in the parish and the ordinary, any particular rights in derogation of these are stricti juris; it is the policy of the law that few of these exclusive rights should exist, because it is the object of the law that all the inhabitants should be accommodated; and it is for the general convenience of the parish that the occupation of pews should be altered from time to time, according to circumstances. Mere possession is not good against the churchwardens and the ordinary (Halliday v. Phillips, 23 Q. B. D. 53). The churchwardens may displace, and make new arrangements, but they ought not without cause to displace persons in possession; if they do, the ordinary would reinstate them: the possession therefore will have its weight,—the ordinary would give a person in possession, cæteris paribus, the preference over a mere stranger (1 Phill. R. 324). The churchwardens are not justified in dispossessing any one of a sitting which he has enjoyed for a time, without giving notice of their intention, and offering an opportunity for explanation (Horsfall v. Holland, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 278). Mere possession, however, is sufficient to maintain a suit against a mere disturber (Spry v. Flood, 2 Curt. 356). The fact of possession implies either the actual or virtual authority of those having power to place. The disturber may show that he has been placed there by this authority, or must justify his disturbance by showing a paramount right,—a right paramount to the ordinary himself; namely, a faculty by which the ordinary has parted with the right; or if there be no proof of a faculty, there may be proof of prescription, and such immemorial usage as presumes the grant of a faculty (1 Phill. R. 324). Such a grant may be presumed although there may be evidence that the pew was originally acquired under circumstances which would not confer a legal right (Halliday v. Phillips, [1891] A. C. 228). Where the prescription is interrupted, the jury are not bound to presume a faculty from long undisturbed possession (Morgan v. Curtis, 3 M. & R. 389). On the expiration of a faculty, as where one was granted for ninety-nine years, the right of the parishioners to the use of the pew revives (3 Hagg. Eccl. R. 733). A faculty (for annexing a pew to a messuage) obtained by surprise and undue contrivance may be revoked (2 Hagg. Eccl. R. 417).

(2) Prescriptive right to pews, how proved.

It was laid down in 1 Phillim. 325, that a prescriptive right must be clearly proved; the facts must not be left equivocal; and they must be such as are not inconsistent with the general right. In the first place, it is necessary to show that the use and occupation of the seat have been from time immemorial appurtenant to a certain messuage, not to lands; the ordinary himself cannot grant a seat appurtenant to lands. Secondly, it must be shown that if any acts have been done by the inhabitants of such messuage they maintained and upheld the right. At all events, if any repairs have been required within memory, it must be proved that they have been made at the expense of the party setting up the prescriptive right (compare Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15). The onus and beneficium are supposed to go together. The possession must be ancient, and going beyond memory, though on this subject the high legal memory, even before the Prescription Act, 1832, was not required (1 Hagg. Cons. R. 322). As against the ordinary, mere occupancy of the pew does not prove the right (Proud v. Price, 63 L. J. Q. B. 61; Stileman Gibbard v. Wilkinson, [1897] 1 Q. B. 749). But the uniform and exclusive possession of the pew by the inhabitants of a particular messuage connected with the burthen of maintaining and repairing the seat is evidence sufficient to establish a prescriptive title. To exclude the jurisdiction of the ordinary, the strongest evidence is the building and repairing time out of mind; but mere repairing for thirty or forty years will not exclude the ordinary (Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 428; Walter v. Gunner, 1 Hagg. 322). The evidence was considered (Halliday v. Phillips, 23 Q. B. D. 54; [1891] A. C. 228). Evidence of repair to a pew claimed by prescription is not absolutely necessary, as no repair may have been done within the period of anyone living (Knapp v. Willesden, 2 Rob. Ec. Rep. 358; see Stileman Gibbard v. Wilkinson, [1897] 1 Q. B. 759, where evidence of other acts of user was held sufficient). Twenty years' adverse possession seems to bar the right to a pew (1 Phill. R. 328).

Where the members of a corporation have as such occupied a particular pew in the parish church, the repairs of it may be properly charged on the borough fund (R. v. Warwick, 10 Jur. 262; 15 L. J. Q. B. 306).

Extra-parochial persons.

Extra-parochial persons cannot establish a claim to seats in the body of a parish church without proof of a prescriptive title (Byerly v. Windus, 5 B. & C. 1; as to prohibition against granting a faculty, see Hallack v. Cambridge, 1 Q. B. 593). A pew in the body of the church may be prescribed for as appurtenant to a house out of the parish (Davis v. Witts, Forr. R. 14; Lonsley v. Hayward, 1 Y. & J. 583). A pew in an aisle or chancel may belong to a non-parishioner, for the case of an aisle or chancel depends upon, and is governed by, other considerations (2 Addams, R. 427). A man may prescribe for a chancel or for an aisle, or for a pew in an aisle, or even in the nave of a church, if he prescribes for that he and those whose estate he has, have always had it, and have always repaired it, even though the estate or house in question be out of the parish (per Kindersley, V.-C., Churton v. Frewen, 2 Eq. 656).

Prescriptive right to pew cannot be severed from occupancy of messuage.

A pew annexed by prescription to a certain messuage cannot be severed from the occupancy of the house, but passes with the messuage to the tenant for the time being (1 Hagg. Cons. R. 319; Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 430; 3 M. & R. 334; 2 Ad. 428); and the pew cannot be sold nor let without a special Act of Parliament (1 Hagg. Eccl. R. 319, 321); or under the provisions of the Church Building Acts (see 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 65, 66, 75—79; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, ss. 26, 32; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 11). Where an occupier of a pew ceases to be an inhabitant of the parish, he cannot let the pew with and thus annex it to his house, but it reverts to the disposal of the churchwardens (1 Hagg. Eccl. R. 34). A person who has permission from the churchwardens to sit in a pew temporarily, and in order to carry into effect the conditions of sale of a house with a pew, cannot bring a suit for perturbation of seat against a mere intruder, such permission being illegal, as confirming the sale of the pew (Blake v. Usborne, 3 Hagg. Eccl. R. 726). Customs pleaded, "that pews are appurtenant to certain houses, and are let by the owners to persons who are not inhabitants of the parish," are bad (1 Hagg. Cons. R. 317). But if a house to which a pew is appurtenant be let to a parishioner, in that character he is clearly entitled to the pew (2 Add. 428). Custom, "that persons who had not pews appurtenant pay rent for seats, which is applied in payment of the parish rate," is a practice which has been constantly reprehended by the Ecclesiastical Courts, and discouraged as often as set up (1 Hagg. Cons. R. 317).

32 & 33 Vict. c. 94 contains provisions for the surrender of pews which are private property, or subject to any trust, to the bishop of the diocese or the ecclesiastical commissioners. And by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 49, provision is made for the free use of seats in certain churches.

(3) Right to vote in respect of pews.

On the construction of private Acts it was held that the proprietors of pews did not acquire such a freehold interest in the soil of the church as entitled them to a county vote; but only a right to sit in it to hear divine service, which right was of the nature of an easement (Hinde v. Chorlton, L. R. 2 C. P. 104; Brumfitt v. Roberts, L. R. 5 C. P. 224; Greenway v. Hockin, ibid. 235).

Mortgage of pew rents.

A mortgage of pew rents made by a vicar of a district church is void under 13 Eliz. c. 20 (Ex parte, Arrowsmith, 8 Ch. D. 96), where it was said that the pew rents resembled the payment which the lord of the manor received for stallage in a market.

(4) Chancels.

The rector is entitled to the principal pew in the chancel, but the ordinary may grant permission to other persons to have pews there (Clifford v. Wicks, 1 B. & A. 498; see Stileman Gibbard v. Wilkinson, [1897] 1 Q. B. 749). A pew in a chancel may legally belong to a party in respect of the ownership of a house (Parker v. Leach, 4 Moore, P. C. C. 180). The above rules as to claiming pews by prescription were applied in the case of a pew in the chancel (Stileman Gibbard v. Wilkinson, supra).

Immemorial repair of a chapel or lesser chancel, which is part of a parish church, coupled with other acts of ownership, is evidence of a freehold of inheritance in it. Such a freehold may be vested in a private person; and the enjoyment of such a chapel or chancel, and the right to its exclusive use is not necessarily annexed to a dwelling-house (Chapman v. Jones, L. R. 4 Ex. 273). Immemorial occupation, coupled with reparation, may entitle the lord of the manor to the exclusive use of the chancel without the freehold, and such a right may be appendant to an estate or house not situate in the parish (Churton v. Frewen, 2 Eq. 634). On the question whether a building forms part of the chancel of a parish church, or is private property, see Norfolk v. Arbuthnot, 5 C. P. D. 390. As to church buildings, partly parochial and partly formerly conventual, see Fowke v. Berrington, [1914] 2 Ch. 308.

(5) Remedy for disturbance of pews by action.

Where a pew is claimed as annexed to a house by faculty or prescription, the Courts of common law exercise jurisdiction, on the ground of the pew being an easement to the house, and the proper remedy for a disturbance is an action (Mainwaring v. Giles, 5 B. & Ald. 361). So where the pew is in a chancel, the freehold of an individual (May v. Gilbert, 2 Bulstr. 151). The Ecclesiastical Court has jurisdiction in all suits respecting pews; but where prescriptive rights come in question, prohibition will be granted on the application of either party, for the purpose of having the prescription tried by a jury (Report of Eccl. Commrs., p. 49; see Re Bateman, 9 Eq. 660). So if a man claim title by prescription to an aisle, chancel, &c., as his freehold (see 1 Burn's Eccl. Law, 8th ed., 366, 367; Witcher v. Cheslam, 1 Wils. 17; Corwen v. Pym, 12 Rep. 105; Jacob v. Dalton, 2 Raym. 1755; Boothby v. Bailey, Hob. 69; Francis v. Lee, Cro. Evidence.

The uninterrupted possession of a pew in a church for twenty years affords presumptive evidence of a legal title by prescription or by a faculty against a wrongdoer (Darwin v. Upton, 2 Wms. Saund. 506, ed. 1871). But if the right was claimed as appurtenant to an ancient messuage the claim would, before the Prescription Act, 1832, be rebutted by proof that the pew began to exist within time of legal memory (Griffith v. Matthews, 5 T. R. 296; see Crisp v. Martin, 2 P. D. 15). In an action for disturbing the possession of a pew of which there had been uninterrupted enjoyment for thirty-six years, but which had been an open pew before that period, the jury were directed to presume a title after so long a possession (Rogers v. Brookes, 1 T. R. 431, n.; see Halliday v. Phillips, [1891] A. C. 228; see, however, Morgan v. Curtis, 3 M. & R. 389). A pew in a parish church was claimed in respect of an ancient messuage; and it was proved that, so far as living memory extended, the pew had been one of three pews adjoining all claimed under one and the same claim of right, viz., in respect of the said ancient messuage; it was held, that proof of repairs done to one of the pews, not that in question, was evidence as to all (Pepper v. Barnard, 12 L. J. Q. B. 361). The pew must be claimed as appurtenant to a messuage in the parish, otherwise a bare possession of the pew for sixty years and more is not sufficient title to maintain an action for disturbing the enjoyment thereof, but a prescriptive right or faculty must be proved (Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 428). Where the action is brought against a stranger, the plaintiff is not bound to state in his declaration that he has repaired the pew, though it is otherwise when the action is brought against the ordinary; in which case a title or consideration must be shown in the declaration and proved, as the building or repairing of the pew (Kenrick v. Taylor, 1 Wils. 326; Ashley v. Freckleton, 3 Lev. 73; see Fiske v. Rovitt, Lofft, 423; Com. Dig. Action upon the Case for Disturbance (A. 3); Gibs. 197, 198).

Who can sue.

The grant of part of the chancel of a church by a lay impropriator to A, his heirs and assigns, is not valid in law, and therefore such grantee cannot maintain trespass for pulling down his pews there erected (Clifford v. Wicks, 1 B. & Ald. 498). But the churchwardens have not, as against the incumbent of a church, a joint possession of it, so as to disable him from maintaining trespass against them for pulling down pews; and a chapelwarden of a parochial chapelry has not, by virtue of his office, any authority to enter the chapel and remove the pews without the consent of the perpetual curate (Jones v. Ellis, 2 Y. & J. 265). The perpetual curate of an augmented parochial chapelry may maintain trespass for breaking and entering the chapel and destroying the pews (ibid.).

Priority in a pew.

As well priority in a seat as a seat itself in the body of a church may be claimed by prescription, as belonging to a house, by the inhabitants of it, who have repaired the seat time out of mind (Carleton v. Hutton, Noy, 78; Gibs. 221). The right to sit in a pew may be apportioned (Harris v. Drewe, 2 B. & Ad. 164). As to a licence by a pew owner to the churchwarden to divide the pew, see Adams v. Andrews (15 Q. B. 284).

Remedy in the Chancery Division.

It seems that a bill in equity would not lie to be quieted in the possession of a pew, though there was a decree for it before the ordinary (Baker v. Child, 2 Vern. 226). See Cardinall v. Molyneux

(7 Jur. (N.S.) 854), as to proceedings against an incumbent who removed pews and substituted chairs in the church. Of the Right to Pews.

A man may prescribe that he is tenant of an ancient messuage, and ought to have a separate burial in a particular vault within the church (Com. Dig. Cemetery (B.)). It seems that the same rules are applicable to vaults as to pews (Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 293; see Francis v. Ley, Cro. Jac. 366; Gibs. Cod. 542). As to faculties for the exclusive use of family vaults, see Kellett v. St. John's, Burscough Bridge, 32 Times L. R. 571. (6) Vaults.

(1) Creation by statute.

A right to light may be created by statute. The right may also arise as an adventitious advantage from a statute not dealing with the creation of easements (Boyce v. Paddington, [1903] 1 Ch. 115).

(2) Acquisition by express grant.

A right to light may also be acquired by express grant (Booth v. Alcock, 8 Ch. 667). A conveyance since 1881 of land with buildings thereon, includes a grant of "light" (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 62, sub-s. 2). At law such an easement can only be granted by deed (McManus v. Cooke, 35 Ch. D. 689). But in equity a verbal agreement for such a right may be enforced when there has been part performance. (Ibid. 681.) See now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 52, post.

Cases as to contracts.

An equitable right to light claimed under a contract did not bind a purchaser for value without notice of the servient tenement (Prinsep v. Belgravia, [1896] W. N. 39). But such an equitable right, of which an intending purchaser of the servient tenement had notice, was an objection to title (Pemsel v. Tucker, [1907] 2 Ch. 191). The mere fact of there being windows in an adjoining house which overlook a purchased property is not constructive notice of any agreement giving a right to the access of light to them (Allen v. Seckham, 11 Ch. D. 790). A contract for the sale of a house with windows looking over the land of a third person implies no representation that the windows are entitled to light over that land (Greenhalgh v. Brindley, [1901] 2 Ch. 324; Smith v. Colbourne, [1914] 2 Ch. 533).

Cases as to express grants.

A, owning Blackacre, with lights overlooking Whiteacre, and also owning Whiteacre, demised Blackacre and its lights to B, and subsequently demised Whiteacre to C; it was held that A could not have blocked the lights, and that C was in no better position (Davies v. Marshall, 1 Dr. & Sm. 557); similarly, where A subsequently conveyed Whiteacre to C in fee (Richardson v. Graham, [1908] 1 K. B. 39). The words of a grant, however, must be restricted to what a grantor has power to grant at the time; thus, where A demised a house with lights to B for twenty-one years, having at the time the servient tenement for a shorter term, and subsequently acquired the fee of the servient tenement, A could after the expiration of the shorter term obstruct B's lights (Booth v. Alcock, 8 Ch. 663; Godwin v. Schweppes, [1902] 1 Ch. 932; compare Davis v. Town Properties [1903] 1 Ch. 797).

Acquisition of right to light by implied grant.

The rule that a man may not derogate from his grant is a rule of law, and does not depend on the implication of a covenant (Cable v. Bryant, [1908] 1 Ch. 264). Under this rule the grantor of land for a particular purpose expressed or referred to in the deed cannot do anything on his adjoining property which would prevent the purpose (Aldin v. Latimer [1894] 2 Ch. 437; see Grosvenor Co. v. Hamilton, [1894] 2 Q. B. 836).

Implied grant of right to light upon sale of house by owner of adjoining land;

As a man cannot derogate from his own grant, it is established, that where the same person possesses a house with lights, and also the adjoining land, and sells the house retaining the land, there, although the lights be new, neither the vendor nor any one claiming under him can build upon the adjoining land, so as to obstruct those lights (Palmer v. Fletcher, 1 Lev. 122; Robinson v. Grave, 29 L. T. 7; Key v. Neath, 95 L. T. 771). The principle was applied where the vendor was a mortgagee selling under his statutory power of sale (Born v. Turner, [1900] 2 Ch. 211). The same principle applies where at the time of the grant the erection of a particular building is contemplated by both parties, though no building has been actually erected (Bailey v. Icke, 64 L. T. 789; Fred. Betts v. Pickfords, [1906] 2 Ch. 87); but not where there is merely an intention on the part of the purchaser to build which is known to the vendor (Blanchard v. Bridges, 4 Ad. & Ell. 176; see Robinson v. Grave, 29 L. T. 9). The principle was held not to apply where the vendor had contracted to sell the adjoining land before the sale of the house (Beddington v. Atlee, 35 Ch. D. 317, 328; see Davies v. Thomas, [1899] W. N. 244), or where the vendor had no right in the adjoining land except a builder's right of entry (Quicke v. Chapman, [1903] 1 Ch. 659). A, the owner of two adjoining houses, granted a lease of one of them to B, and afterwards leased the other to C, there then existing in it certain windows. After that B accepted a new lease of the house from A; it was held, that B could not alter his tenement, so as to obstruct the windows existing in C's house at the time of his lease from A, though the windows were not twenty years old at the time of the alteration (Coutts v. Gorham, 1 M. & M. 396; see Cox v. Matthews, 1 Ventr. 237; Jacomb v. Knight, 11 W. R. 585; Warner v. Macbride, 36 L. T. 360; Riviere v. Bower, 1 Ry. & M. 24). The extent of the implied grant of light must be measured by circumstances existing at date of the lease and known to both parties (Birmingham Banking Co. v. Ross, 38 Ch. D. 295; Corbett v. Jonas, [1892] 3 Ch. 137; Godwin v. Schweppes, [1902] 1 Ch. 926). And where A on taking a lease of a building knew that the adjoining land was being laid out for building and stipulated for a passage twenty feet wide adjoining the demised building, there was no implied grant (Birmingham Banking Co. v. Ross, supra). But the mere reference in A's conveyance to the adjoining land as "building land" would not alone prevent an implied grant. The burden of setting limits to the right lies on the grantor (Broomfield v. Williams, [1897] 1 Ch. 602; see Pollard v. Gare, [1901] 1 Ch. 834; Mellor v. Walmsley, [1905] 2 Ch. 176; and see note to sect. 62 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post).

On a sale by a railway company of surplus land with a house thereon, the company can only obstruct the lights by railway constructions, not by a hoarding (Myers v. Catterson, 43 Ch. D. 470). So in the case of a lease of part of a building estate, the lessor's right of obstructing lights on the demised premises is confined to building on the adjoining land. He cannot erect a hoarding (Wilson v. Queen's Club, [1891] 3 Ch. 522).

sale of land by owner of adjoining house;

Where a person owning a house with ancient lights, and also owning the adjoining land, sells the land retaining the house, the purchaser may obstruct the lights, there being no implied reservation in favour of the vendor (Curriers' Co. v. Corbet, 2 Dr. & Sm. 360; White v. Bass, 7 H. & N. 722; see Tenant v. Goldwin, 2 Ld. Raym. 1093; Rosewell v. Prior, 6 Mod. 116; Canham v. Fisk, 2 Cr. & J. 128; Ellis v. Manchester, &c., Co., 2 C. P. D. 13; Master v. Hansard, 4 Ch. D. 718). To enable a reservation to be implied, the easement must be one of necessity (Ray v. Hazeldine, [1904] 2 Ch. 17; Wheeldon v. Burrows, 12 Ch. D. 57; Union Co. v. London Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557). If, however, on a sale of land adjoining a house to be built by the vendor, it is agreed that a wall of the house may stand within the lands sold with windows overlooking such lands, and if the house be erected accordingly, the purchaser cannot obstruct (Russell v. Watts, 10 App. Cas. 602).

Where a person owning a house with lights looking over adjoining land and also owning such land, at the same time sells the house to A and the land to B, both purchasers being aware of the simultaneous conveyances, B cannot obstruct the lights of A (Allen v. Taylor, 16 Ch. D. 355; see Rigby v. Bennett, 21 Ch. D. 567; Compton v. Richards, 1 Price, 27; Swansborough v. Coventry, 9 Bing. 305). The same principle was applied to the devise in a will of the house to A, and the adjoining land to B (Phillips v. Low, [1892] 1 Ch. 47; Barnes v. Loach, 4 Q. B. D. 494); and to successive mortgages of plots of land comprised in one building scheme, the mortgagees having notice of the scheme (Russell v. Watts, 10 App. Cas. 590).

Nature of the right to light acquired by grant express or implied.

As to the nature of the right to light acquired by express grant, it is clear that a special right to light may be created by express covenant or grant, in which case an injunction would be granted without regard to damage (Leech v. Schweder, 9 Ch. 474). It is a question of the construction of the deed, which may be controlled by a collateral agreement (Salaman v. Glover, 20 Eq. 444). Or, again, a restrictive covenant may cease to be applicable according to the intent and spirit of the contract (Bedford v. British Museum, 2 M. & K. 552). A grant of "lights" among the general words of a deed carries nothing but a right similar to the ordinary right acquired by prescriptive user (Leech v. Schweder, 9 Ch. 473. As to the nature of this prescriptive right, see below). And the ordinary covenant for quiet enjoyment does not enlarge such grantee's rights (ibid.; see Potts v. Smith, 6 Eq. 311). As regards implied grants, the grant usually implied on a disposition by the owner of two tenements carries nothing but a right similar to the ordinary right acquired by prescriptive user (Leech v. Schweder, 9 Ch. 472). In the case of leases the Court has protected special light required for the business of a diamond merchant so described in the lease (Herz v. Union Bank, 2 Giff. 686), but not special light required for a business (that of a woolbroker) not immediately contemplated at the date of the lease (Corbett v. Jonas, [1892] 3 Ch. 137).

(3) Prescriptive right to light.

Mode of acquisition.

A prescriptive right to light may be acquired by user. Before the Prescription Act, 1832, the modes of acquiring by user the easement of light were (1) by prescription at common law, (2) by presuming a lost grant. The Act has provided an additional mode, but the former modes still exist (Aynsley v. Glover, 10 Ch. 283; Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1903] A. C. 238). As to the method of claiming light under the Act, see the note to sect. 3 (ante, p. 11); as to the method of claim by prescription at common law or lost grant, see the note, ante, p. 24. The old doctrine of acquiring light by common law prescription was stated in Moore v. Rawson,

Rights to Light.

3 B. & C. 340; and was discussed in Cross v. Lewis, 2 B. & C. 686; Darwin v. Upton, 2 Wms. Saund. 507.

The acquisition by user of a prescriptive right may be prevented by the servient owner erecting a hoarding during the period of enjoyment. Such a hoarding may be erected by a railway company (Bonner v. G. W. Ry. Co., 24 Ch. D. 1; Foster v. L. C. D. Ry., [1895] 1 Q. B. 718, 723; see Myers v. Catterson, 43 Ch. D. 470), or by a local authority (Paddington v. Att.-Gen., [1906] A. C. 1).

Nature of prescriptive right to light acquired by user.

The nature of the prescriptive right to light acquired by user has been considered in the House of Lords, where it was laid down that generally speaking an owner of ancient lights is entitled to sufficient light according to the ordinary notions of mankind for the comfortable use and enjoyment of his house as a dwelling-house if it is a dwelling-house, or for the beneficial use and occupation of the house if it is a warehouse, shop or other place of business (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 208, 204). The test of the right according to the House of Lords is whether the obstruction complained of is a nuisance ([1904] A. C. 185, 204, 210). In considering the question whether a case of nuisance is established, regard may, it seems, be had not only to the present use of his light by the plaintiff, but also to any ordinary uses to which the tenement is adapted ([1904] A. C. 202, 211; see the rulings as to possible future user in Moore v. Hall, 3 Q. B. D. 183; Dicker v. Popham, 63 L. T. 379). Whether in dealing with this question the Court can have regard to the previous condition of the premises and compare the present with the past, see the judgments in Higgins v. Betts, [1905] 2 Ch. 210; Kine v. Jolly, [1905] 1 Ch. 480, [1907] A. C. 1; and see Paul v. Robson, 83 L. J. P. C. 304. The direction from which the light comes may be altered if the quantum is not diminished (Davis v. Marrable, [1913] 2 Ch. 421).

The nature of the prescriptive right to light acquired by user was not altered by the Prescription Act, which was only concerned with the conditions or length of user (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 183, 199). The nature of the right to light is the same whether it be claimed by prescription at common law, or under the statute (ibid.), or by lost grant (Leech v. Schweder, 9 Ch. 463), or by grant implied on a disposition by the owner of the two tenements (ibid.).

The nature of the prescriptive right to light enjoyed in respect of a building may differ according as the building is situate in town or country (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 183, 185). In the case of nuisances other than obstructions to light the question varies with locality (Rushmer v. Polsue, [1906] 1 Ch. 250; [1907] A. C. 123).

Light for special purpose.

As to acquiring by user a prescriptive right to an extraordinary amount of light for a special purpose, it has (since the decision in Colls v. Home Stores) been held that such a right cannot be acquired by twenty years' enjoyment, even where the owner of the servient tenement was aware of the enjoyment (Ambler v. Gordon, [1905] 1 K. B. 417). Before Colls v. Home Stores the question of special light had been considered in many cases; see Mackey v. Scottish Widows Co., I. R. 11 Eq. 541 (a seed merchant); Cartwright v. Last (1876), W. N. 60 (a dentist); Theed v. Debenham, 2 Ch. D. 165 (a sculptor); Parker v. First Avenue Hotel Co., 24 Ch. D. 282 (a photographer); Warren v. Brown, [1902] 1 K. B. 15 (a hosier). See also on this question Moore v. Hall (3 Q. B. D. 178); Att.-Gen. v. Queen Anne's Co., 60 L. T. 761; Lazarus v. Artistic Co., [1897] 2 Ch. 214.

Rule of 45°.

As to the rule sometimes suggested that a person who has 45 degrees of light left to him cannot complain, it was said by Lord Lindley, "There is no rule of law that if a person has 45 degrees of unobstructed light through a particular window left to him he cannot maintain an action for a nuisance caused by diminishing the light which formerly came through that window (Theed v. Debenham, 2 Ch. D. 165). But experience shows that it is, generally speaking, a fair working rule to consider that no substantial injury is done to him where an angle of 45 degrees is left to him, especially if there is good light from other directions as well." Cotton, L.J., pointed this out in Eccl. Commrs. v. Kino (14 Ch. D. 228); see also Parker v. First Avenue Hotel Co. (24 Ch. D. 282); Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 210. The decision in the latter case has not abrogated the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain actions quia timet in cases of obstruction of ancient lights (Litchfield-Speer v. Queen Anne's Gate Syndicate, [1919] 1 Ch. 407).

(4) Alterations of ancient lights.

The owner of an ancient light may pull down the building with a view to restoration without interfering with his right to light (Eccl. Commrs. v. Kino, 14 Ch. D. 213); and may change the purpose for which the building is to be used (Scott v. Pape, 31 Ch. D. 569). Such an owner may also make alterations in the framework and glazing of his windows without losing his right (Turner v. Spooner, 1 Dr. & Sm. 467). With regard to an alteration in the plane of the window it has been laid down by the C. A. that no such alteration will destroy the right so long as the owner of the dominant tenement can show that he is using through the new apertures in the new building the same or a substantial part of the same light which passed through the old apertures into the old building (Scott v. Pape, 31 Ch. D. 554; see Newson v. Pender, 27 Ch. D. 71; National Co. v. Prudential Co., 6 Ch. D. 757; Blanchard v. Bridges, 4 Ad. & Ell. 176; Barnes v. Loach, 4 Q. B. D. 494; Bullers v. Dickinson, 29 Ch. D. 155). Reference may also be made to some older cases in which a plaintiff who obscured the light and air to his own dwelling but left a substantial part unaffected was held not to be thereby disentitled to an injunction (Arcedeckne v. Kelk, 2 Giff. 683; Staight v. Burn, 5 Ch. 163; Bourke v. Alexandra Co. (1877), W. N. 30; see also Dyers' Co. v. King, 9 Eq. 438).

The above decisions were before Colls v. Home Stores, where Scott v. Pape was criticised. But since Colls v. Home Stores the main decision in Scott v. Pape has been followed by Neville, J., who has laid down that in the case of an alteration of the dominant tenement, the preservation of the right to light depends on identity of light, not on identity of aperture (Andrews v. Waite, [1907] 2 Ch. 500; a case in which the alterations were made during the currency of the statutory period). The rule, however, laid down in Colls v. Home Stores, that the plaintiff must prove a nuisance renders the proof of his case (where the dominant tenement has been altered) a matter of difficulty, having regard to the necessity of showing that what is a nuisance under present conditions would have been a nuisance under former conditions (Andrews v. Waite, [1907] 2 Ch. 510). This difficulty proved fatal to a plaintiff since Colls v. Home Stores (Ankerson v. Connelly, [1907] 1 Ch. 678, applied in Bailey v. Holborn and Frascati, [1914] 1 Ch. 598, where it was held that the acquiescence of the owner of the dominant tenement in the abstraction of light did not entirely negative his right to the light over other adjoining property in respect of the same openings, though he could not prevent the erection on that other property of a building which he could not have prevented had he not assented to the prior abstraction of light. See also the older case of Raper v. Fortescue (1886), W. N. 78).

In the case of an alteration, accurate evidence as to the position, &c., of the old lights should be preserved (Fowlers v. Walker, 42 L. T. 356; 51 L. J. Ch. 443; Scott v. Pape, 31 Ch. D. 554; see Pendarves

v. Monro, [1892] 1 Ch. 611). But evidence of the owner's intention to preserve ancient lights is not necessary (Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 138).

Where there is an ancient light and other lights are added, and an obstruction is raised against the added lights, which from their position cannot be obstructed without also obstructing the ancient light, the House of Lords, overruling older cases, decided that such obstruction is illegal (Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290; see Frechette v. La Compagnie, 9 App. Cas. 185).

(5) Effect of unity of ownership.

Where the easement of light has been acquired, and the ownership of the dominant and servient tenements subsequently becomes united for different estates, the union does not extinguish the easement, but suspends it: upon a severance of the ownership the easement revives (Simper v. Foley, 2 J. & H. 555).

(6) Abandonment of right.

The abandonment of an easement is a question of intention to be decided on the facts of each case (Crossley v. Lightowler, 2 Ch. 482; James v. Stevenson, [1893] A. C. 167; Swan v. Sinclair, [1925] A. C. 227). Certain acts will clearly amount to abandonment of light, e.g., shutting up windows with bricks and mortar for above twenty years (Lawrence v. Obee, 3 Camp. 514). And it was said that if a man pulls down his house and does not use the site for two or three years or converts it into tillage, he may be taken to have abandoned his right (Moore v. Rawson, 3 B. & C. 341). As to the onus of proof, see on the one hand the opinion of Abbott, C.J., that the burden of proving an intention of resuming the use of light lies on the party who has discontinued it (ibid.). See, on the other hand, the opinion of Stirling, J., that in the case of rebuilding, evidence on the part of the owner of his intention to preserve ancient lights is unnecessary (Smith v. Baxter, [1900] 2 Ch. 142). In general it seems clear that the mere pulling down of a building does not destroy the right (Eccl. Commrs. v. Kino, 14 Ch. D. 223), and the necessity of proving an intention to abandon has been insisted on (Greenwood v. Hornsey, 33 Ch. D. 471). Supposing the owner of a dominant tenement to have communicated to the owner of the servient tenement an intention to abandon the right, it was doubted in one case whether such a communication would destroy the right until it was acted upon by the servient owner (Stokoe v. Singers, 8 E. & B. 37; see Moore v. Rawson, supra; Cook v. Bath, 6 Eq. 179).

(7) Remedies for disturbance of right to light.

Abatement.

As a general rule, a person who is injured by a private nuisance may abate it (Jenk. Cent. 260, Cent. 6, Case 57; Penruddock's Case, 5 Rep. 100 b); but no more of a house which is erected as a nuisance can be pulled down than is necessary to abate such nuisance (James v. Hayward, 1 W. Jones, 221, 222). If a person builds a house so near that of another that it stops his lights, the person injured may enter upon the owner's soil and pull the house down (R. v. Rosewell, 2 Salk. 459; Lane v. Capsey, [1891] 3 Ch. 411; see Perry v. Fitzhowe, 8 Q. B. 757; Thompson v. Eastwood, 8 Exch. 69). As to the necessity of giving notice before abatement, see Lemmon v. Webb, [1894] 3 Ch. 13.

Action: by whom actions may be brought;

When a party has acquired a right to light, an action lies for obstructing it (Aldred's Case, 9 Rep. 58; Bury v. Pope, 1 Leon. 168). A reversioner may sue (Shadwell v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & Ad. 97). The ground upon which a reversioner is allowed to sue is, that if the obstruction were acquiesced in it would become evidence of abandonment (Bower v. Hill, 1 Bing. N. C. 555; see 1 Wms. Saund. 346 b, n.; Raine v. Alderson, 4 Bing. N. C. 702). If anything be done to destroy the evidence of title, an action is maintainable by the reversioner (Young v. Spencer, 10 B. & C. 145; Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141; see Metrop. Assoc. v. Petch, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 504). And if the obstruction be continued, a new action may be maintained, notwithstanding the former recovery (Shadwell v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & Ad. 97).

Rights to Light.

The Court will restrain the interference with ancient lights, although the plaintiff does not occupy or intend to occupy the house interfered with (Wilson v. Townend, 1 Dr. & Sm. 324). A tenant from year to year may obtain an injunction (Simper v. Foley, 2 J. & H. 555; compare Inchbald v. Robinson, 4 Ch. 395); but the injunction will be limited to his tenancy (Simper v. Foley, supra). A tenant from year to year under notice to quit may apply (Jacomb v. Knight, 11 W. R. 812). And a tenant whose lease had expired, but who had agreed for a renewal (Gale v. Abbott, 10 W. R. 748). But where a tenant under an agreement for a lease sued to restrain his lessor from obstructing ancient lights, but did not ask to have the agreement specifically performed, an injunction was refused (Fox v. Purssell, 3 Sm. & Giff. 242). An injunction will not be granted where the title to the property sought to be protected has not been accepted by the plaintiff (Heath v. Maydew, 13 W. R. 199). An executor can recover damages for an obstruction to the light of a house of his testatrix (Jones v. Simes, 43 Ch. D. 607).

against whom actions may be brought;

The owner of the inheritance of a house may maintain an action against his own lessee for obstructing lights (Thomlinson v. Brown, Say. R. 215; see also 4 Burr. 2141; 3 Leon. 109). Such an action may be brought not only against the party who first erected the nuisance, but also against his lessee or assignee for continuing it (Rosewell v. Prior, 12 Mod. 635; S. C., 2 Salk. 460; 1 Ld. Raym. 713; see also Carth. 456; 1 Keb. 994; Clarke v. Midland G. W. Ry., [1895] 2 I. R. 294); but after damages have been recovered from the lessor the right of action against the lessee will be barred, as but one satisfaction will be given (12 Mod. 640; Carth. 455) unless there is a continuance of the nuisance. Not only the person who erected the obstruction, and the occupier of the premises where it is erected, but even the workmen and the clerk who superintended the works are liable to an action (Wilson v. Peto, 6 B. Moore, 47). As to making occupiers defendants, see White v. Jameson (18 Eq. 303); Broder v. Saillard (2 Ch. D. 692). Under the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 2, an action could be maintained against the executors of the person obstructing (Jenks v. Clifden, [1897] 1 Ch. 694). See now the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 26, post.

Compensation can be recovered, under the L. C. C. Act, 1845, from corporations for diminution of light: Eagle v. Charing Cross Ry. Co., L. R. 2 C. P. 638; Badham v. Marris, 45 L. T. 579; R. v. Poulter, 20 Q. B. D. 132; see Re Harvey and London Council, [1909] 1 Ch. 528 (as to compensation for inchoate rights to light, see Barlow v. Ross, 24 Q. B. D. 381; Re London, Tilbury &c., Ry. Co., ibid. 326). Injunctions against corporations were accordingly refused (Clark v. London Board, 9 Ch. 120; Bedford v. Dawson, 20 Eq. 353; Wigram v. Fryer, 36 Ch. D. 87; see London Board v. Smith, [1895] W. N. 37). On the construction of an Act a company was held liable in damages for obstructing light, the plaintiff not being bound to come in under the compensation clause (Turner v. Sheffield, &c., Ry. Co., 10 M. & W. 425).

Form of relief.

Damages or injunction.

As to the form of relief in an action for obstructing light, the question whether the Court shall grant damages or an injunction is a matter for judicial discretion: Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 192, where Lord Macnaghten laid down the rule as follows: "In some cases, of course, an injunction is necessary—if, for instance, the injury cannot fairly be compensated by money; if the defendant has acted in a high-handed manner; if he has endeavoured to steal a march upon the plaintiff, or to evade the jurisdiction of the court. . . . But if there is really a question as to whether the obstruction is legal or not, and if the defendant has acted fairly and not in an unneighbourly spirit, I am disposed to think that the court ought to incline to damages rather than to an injunction. It is quite true that a man ought not to be compelled to part with his property against his will, or to have the value of his property diminished, without an Act of Parliament. On the other hand, the court ought to be careful not to allow an action for the protection of ancient lights to be used as a means of extorting money."

21 & 22 Vict. c. 27.

Before Colls v. Home Stores, the form of relief, depending as it did largely on 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, had been discussed in many cases, the effect of which was stated in Cowper v. Laidler, [1903] 2 Ch. 339, as follows: The Act gives jurisdiction to substitute damages for an injunction (1) where the plaintiff asks for a mandatory injunction, or (2) for an injunction to restrain a continuing nuisance. But (3) where an injunction is asked to restrain a threatened injury, the jurisdiction was doubtful (Martin v. Price, [1894] 1 Ch. 376; Dreyfus v. Peruvian Co., 43 Ch. D. 316). But it has been decided by the House of Lords that the Court can award damages in lieu of an injunction in cases in which an injury is threatened (Leeds Industrial Society v. Slack, [1924] A. C. 851). The cases before Colls v. Home Stores also laid down the following principles as to the form of relief. When a legal right has been established the plaintiff is prima facie entitled to an injunction (Martin v. Price, [1894] 1 Ch. 285; Shelfer v. City of London Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287; Jordeson v. Sutton Co., [1899] 2 Ch. 217; see Cowper v. Laidler, [1903] 2 Ch. 341). And in cases of continuing actionable nuisance the jurisdiction to award damages ought only to be exercised under very exceptionable circumstances (Shelfer v. City of London Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 316). Damages may be given in substitution for an injunction where the following requirements exist, viz., where the injury to the plaintiff's legal right (1) is small, (2) capable of being estimated in money, (3) can be adequately compensated by a small money payment, and (4) where the case is one in which it would be oppressive to the defendant to grant an injunction (ibid. 322). And the conduct of the parties may make damages the more appropriate remedy (ibid.; Senior v. Pawson, 3 Eq. 330). The rules laid down in Shelfer v. City of London Co. are unaffected by Colls v. Home Stores (Slack v. Leeds Industrial Society, [1924] 2 Ch. 475). As to the measure of damages, see Griffith v. Clay, [1912] 2 Ch. 291.

Form of prohibitory injunction.

Where a prohibitory injunction is granted, the proper form of it was suggested by Lord Macnaghten in Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 194. And this form has since been adapted by the Court to varying circumstances (Higgins v. Betts, [1905] 2 Ch. 218; Anderson v. Francis, [1906] W. N. 160; Andrews v. Waite, [1907] 2 Ch. 510).

Mandatory injunction.

An injunction may also be granted in mandatory form ordering the pulling down of anything erected after the commencement of an action, or after notice given to the defendant that his erecting it will be objected to (Smith v. Day, 13 Ch. D. 651; Kelk v. Pearson, 6 Ch. 809), even where the erection was completed before writ issued (Lawrence v. Horton, 62 L. T. 749), and may be granted on interlocutory application (Daniel v. Ferguson, [1891] 2 Ch. 27; Von Joel v. Hornsey, [1895] 2 Ch. 774). An undertaking in such a case is not essential (Smith v. Day, supra; Mackey v. Scottish Widows, I. R. 10 Eq. 113). On the question of granting such an injunction it is important to see if the defendant knew he was doing wrong (Smith v. Smith, 20 Eq. 503—505). But there must be no acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff (Gaskin v. Balls, 13 Ch. D. 324; Baxter v. Bower, 23 W. R.

805). In form a mandatory injunction should in direct words order the building to be pulled down (Jackson v. Normanby Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 438). See also Puddephatt v. Leith, [1916] 1 Ch. 200. Rights to Light.

An injunction may be granted on an interlocutory application. As to the considerations of convenience and otherwise affecting this, see Newson v. Pender, 27 Ch. D. 43. On such injunction the plaintiff should in general give an undertaking as to damages (Graham v. Campbell, 7 Ch. D. 494), on which the defendant may obtain an inquiry even where the plaintiff has been guilty of no default in obtaining the injunction (Griffith v. Blake, 27 Ch. D. 474; see Smith v. Day, 21 Ch. D. 421). A cross undertaking by the plaintiff must also be given where the defendant gives an undertaking in lieu of an injunction (Practice note, [1904] W. N. 208). As to the effect of the plaintiff's undertaking where the action is subsequently dismissed, see remarks of Jessel, M.R. (Memorandum (1879), W. N. 74). Interlocutory injunction.

In Leech v. Schweder (22 W. R. 292), Jessel, M.R., gave reasons for refusing to inspect, as a judge, an alleged obstruction to light (see also Jackson v. Newcastle, 3 D. J. & S. 275). At the trial a surveyor was appointed to report (Leech v. Schweder, 9 Ch. 463; Kelk v. Pearson, 6 Ch. 810; Cartwright v. Last (1876), W. N. 60); but the appointment before trial was refused in Stokes v. City Offices (13 W. R. 537); Baltic Co. v. Simpson (24 W. R. 390). Lord Macnaghten approved the Court's calling in a competent adviser to report (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 192). See now R. S. C., Ord. 50, rr. 3, 4; Ord. 55, r. 19. Inspection by judge; report by surveyor;

In Dann v. Spurrier (7 Ves. 235), the Court laid down the doctrine that it will not permit a man knowingly, though passively, to encourage another to lay out money under an erroneous opinion of title. This doctrine was applied in the case of an obstruction to light in Cotching v. Bassett, 32 Beav. 101. A plea of acquiescence was a good defence to an action for damages for obstruction of light (Davies v. Marshall, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 697). An injunction to restrain the obstruction of ancient lights was refused on the ground of delay (Cooper v. Hubbuck, 30 Beav. 160; Cocks v. Romaine, 14 L. T. 390). As to the difference between the acquiescence which will justify the refusal of an interlocutory and of a perpetual injunction, see Johnson v. Wyatt, 2 D. J. & S. 18; Turner v. Mirfield, 34 Beav. 390. Where the plaintiff had submitted for six years to interference with an ancient light, an injunction was refused (Gaunt v. Fynney, 8 Ch. 8). Acquiescence and delay.

The law does not recognise any easement of prospect or privacy (Browne v. Flower, [1911] 1 Ch. 219). The opening of a window, whereby the plaintiff's privacy is disturbed, is not actionable; the only remedy is to build upon the adjoining land, opposite the offensive window (Chandler v. Thompson, 3 Camp. 80; see 9 Rep. 58 b; Cotterell v. Griffiths, 4 Esp. N. P. C. 69; Turner v. Spooner, 1 Dr. & Sm. 467; Re Penny and South Eastern Ry. Co., 7 Ell. & Bl. 660; Tapling v. Jones, 11 H. L. C. 290; compare Roberts v. Macord, 1 M. & Rob. 230; Potts v. Smith, 6 Eq. 311). But a covenant for the protection of privacy was enforced (Manners v. Johnson, 1 Ch. D. 673). An injunction was refused where the application proceeded on a particular right to a long enjoyment of a prospect (Att.-Gen. v. Doughty, 2 Ves. sen. 453; see Squire v. Campbell, 1 M. & C. 459; Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 824). So the building of a wall which merely intercepts the prospect of another, without obstructing his lights, is not actionable (Knowles v. Richardson, 1 Mod. 55; 2 Keb. 611, 642). A covenant, however, not to obstruct a prospect will be enforced in equity (Piggott v. Stratton, 1 D. F. & J. 33; Western v. Macdermott, 2 Ch. 72; compare Murray v. Dunn, [1907] A. C. 283). Privacy. Prospect.

Rights to Light.

The erection of a building will not be restrained because it injures the plaintiff by obstructing the view of his place of business (Smith v. Owen, 35 L. J. Ch. 317; Butt v. Imperial Gas Co., 2 Ch. 158).

IX.—Of Rights in Regard to Air, and of Nuisances.

Rights with regard to air.

As regards a general right to the access of air passing over the unlimited surface of neighbouring land, it was held that this could not be acquired by prescription either where the claim was for such access of air to a windmill (Webb v. Bird, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 263; 13 C. B. (N.S.) 841), or to the chimneys of a building (Bryant v. Lefever, 4 C. P. D. 172, 180), or to a structure for storing timber (Harris v. De Pinna, 33 Ch. D. 250, 259). But a right to the access of air to a defined aperture in a building can be claimed by prescription, not only where such access is claimed through a defined channel over the servient tenement (Bass v. Gregory, 25 Q. B. D. 481), but also, it seems, where there is no such defined channel (Cable v. Bryant, [1908] 1 Ch. 264; Aldred's Case, 9 Co. 58; Gale v. Abbot, 10 W. R. 748; Dent v. Auction Mart Co., 2 Eq. 252; Chastey v. Ackland, [1895] 2 Ch. 400; [1897] A. C. 155).

As regards a claim under the Prescription Act to the access of air, it is clear that the claim made in that method cannot succeed where the access cannot be interrupted by the owner of the servient tenement (Webb v. Bird, supra; Bryant v. Lefever, supra; Harris v. De Pinna, supra). But where such access could be interrupted, it might, it seems, be an easement within sect. 2 (Simpson v. Godmanchester, [1897] A. C. 709; Dalton v. Angus, 6 A. C. 798).

A covenant not to intercept the access of air sufficient for the purposes of a slaughter-house was implied from thirty years' user (Hall v. Lichfield Co., 43 L. T. 380). When land is expressly granted for a particular purpose the grantor cannot interrupt air so as to interfere with that purpose (Aldin v. Latimer, [1894] 2 Ch. 437; Tebb v. Cave, [1900] 1 Ch. 642). But the Court will only interfere in special cases (City of London Brewery v. Tennant, 9 Ch. 221; Baxter v. Bower, 33 L. T. 41).

Remedies for pollution of air, at law and in equity.

An action will lie for pollution of air (St. Helens Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. C. 642). And the pollution will be restrained (Tipping v. St. Helens Co., 1 Ch. 66; Crump v. Lambert, 3 Eq. 409; see Swaine v. G. N. Ry. Co., 12 W. R. 391). There may be a difference between town and country (Colls v. Home Stores, [1904] A. C. 183, 185). The owner of a house has a right at common law to untainted air, unless the business which creates a nuisance has been carried on for such a time as will raise a presumption of grant from neighbouring owners (Elliottson v. Feetham, 2 Bing. N. C. 134). Nothing less than a user of twenty years will afford such presumption (Bliss v. Hall, 5 Scott, 500; Crump v. Lambert, 3 Eq. 413; Flight v. Thomas, 10 Ad. & El. 590). There can be no prescription, however, to justify a public nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Barnsley (1874), W. N. 37).

Nuisance.

What constitutes a private nuisance was thus defined by Knight-Bruce, V.-C.: "Ought this inconvenience to be considered in fact as more than fanciful, more than one of mere delicacy or fastidiousness, as an inconvenience materially interfering with the ordinary comfort physically of human existence, not merely according to elegant or dainty modes and habits of living, but according to plain and sober and simple notions among the English people?" (Walter

v. Selfe, 4 De G. & Sm. 322, adopted in Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 133; Crump v. Lambert, 3 Eq. 413; Bellamy v. Wells, 63 L. T. 635; Fleming v. Hislop, 11 A. C. 691; see Bosworth-Smith v. Gwynnes, 89 L. J. Ch. 368). What would be a nuisance in one locality might not be so in another (Rushmer v. Polsue, [1906] 1 Ch. 250). See as to how far permission to carry on a business authorises a nuisance, Pwllbach Colliery Co. v. Woodman, [1915] A. C. 634.

Where a man, by burning bricks, causes so much annoyance to a neighbouring tenement, as to amount prima facie to a cause of action, it is no answer that the act was done in a proper and convenient spot, and was a reasonable use of the land (Bamford v. Turnley, 3 B. & S. 66, overruling Hole v. Barlow, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 334). See Shotts Iron Co. v. Inglis, 7 App. Cas. 528; Cavey v. Ledbitter, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 470; Luscombe v. Steer, 15 W. R. 1191; and St. Helens Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. C. 642, where Lord Westbury distinguishes the cases where material injury is done to property, and those where personal discomfort is produced. As to the defence of reasonable user, see the views expressed on the one hand in Broder v. Saillard, 2 Ch. D. 692; Reinhardt v. Mentasti, 42 Ch. D. 68; and Att.-Gen. v. Cole, [1901] 1 Ch. 205; and on the other hand in Gaunt v. Fynney, 8 Ch. 8; Ball v. Ray, ibid., 467; and Sanders Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions, [1900] 2 Ch. 373. An injunction was granted to restrain brick burning (Beardmore v. Tredwell, 3 Giff. 683; Walter v. Selfe, 4 De G. & Sm. 315; Boreham v. Hall (1870), W. N. 57; Roberts v. Clarke, 18 L. T. 49); and the emission of noxious vapours (Imperial Gas Co. v. Broadbent, 7 H. L. C. 600). The fact of the plaintiff having come to the nuisance, does not disentitle him to relief (Tipping v. St. Helens Co., 1 Ch. 66). As to how far the delicate nature of the plaintiff's trade can be taken into consideration, see Cooke v. Forbes, 5 Eq. 166; Robinson v. Kilvert, 41 Ch. D. 88. The plaintiff must prove damage, visible, substantial, and actual (Salvin v. North Brancepeth Co., 9 Ch. 709). As to restraining alleged future nuisances, see Rapley v. Smart, [1894] W. N. 2; Att.-Gen. v. Manchester, [1893] 2 Ch. 87; Att.-Gen. v. Nottingham, [1904] 1 Ch. 673.

The right, however, to cause what would otherwise be a private nuisance may be acquired by prescription, e.g., a right to pollute water (Baxendale v. McMurray, 2 Ch. 790; but see Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 218); or air (Crump v. Lambert, 3 Eq. 413); or to annoy a neighbour by noise (Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 863), or by discharging coal dust (Royal Mail Co. v. George, [1900] A. C. 480). But the nuisance must not be increased (ibid.).

Actions to restrain.

A weekly tenant can obtain an injunction (Jones v. Chappell, 20 Eq. 539), and tenants were added as co-plaintiffs by amendment at the trial (House Property Co. v. H. P. Horsenail Co., 29 Ch. D. 190). As to joining as co-plaintiffs the occupiers of several houses affected by the nuisance, see Truman v. L. B. & S. C. Ry. Co., 29 Ch. D. 89; Umfreville v. Johnson, 10 Ch. 580; Hudson v. Maddison, 12 Sim. 416. A reversioner can sue (Shelfer v. City of London Electric Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287; Colwell v. St. Pancras, [1904] 1 Ch. 707; Jones v. Llanrwst, [1911] 1 Ch. 393; but see White v. London General Omnibus Co., 58 S. J. 339). As to liability of occupiers, see White v. Jameson, 18 Eq. 303; Broder v. Saillard, 2 Ch. D. 692.

The acts of two or more persons may, taken together, constitute such a nuisance that the Court in separate actions will restrain each of them from doing the acts constituting the nuisance, although the act of one taken alone would not amount to nuisance (Lambton v. Mellish, [1894] 3 Ch. 163, where there were several actions; Blair v. Deakin, 57 L. T. 522, where there was one action against one such person).

Under the old practice such an injunction was granted in one action against several independent persons (Thorpe v. Brumfitt, L. R. 8 Ch. 650). Whether under the present practice one action for an injunction can be maintained against several acting independently is doubtful (Sadler v. G. W. Ry. Co., [1896] A. C. 450). But damages cannot be recovered in one action against separate tortfeasors (ibid.).

Acquiescence

Acquiescence in the erection of noxious works while they produce little injury does not warrant the subsequent extension of them to an extent productive of great damage (Bankart v. Houghton, 27 Beav. 425). See also, as to the effect of acquiescence in such a case, Williams v. Jersey, Cr. & Phil. 91; Savile v. Kilner, 26 L. T. 276; Sanders v. Manley (1878), W. N. 181.

Where a nuisance ceases after writ, but before trial, an injunction may still be granted (Chester Chapter v. Smelting Corporation, [1901] W. N. 179; 85 L. T. 67; correcting Dunning v. Grosvenor Dairies, [1900] W. N. 265).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

Be it enacted, that the words and expressions hereinafter mentioned, which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this Act, except where the nature of the provision or the context of the Act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows; (that is to say,) the word "land" (a) shall extend to manors, messuages, and all other corporeal hereditaments whatsoever (b), and also to tithes (c) (other than tithes belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole) (d), and also to any share, estate or interest in them or any of them, whether the same shall be a freehold or chattel interest (e), and whether freehold or copyhold, or held according to any other tenure; and the word "rent" (f) shall extend to all heriots (g), and to all services and suits for which a distress may be made (h), and to all annuities and periodical sums of money charged upon or payable out of any land (i) (except moduses or compositions (k) belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole); and the person through whom another person is said to claim shall mean any person by, through or under or by the act of whom, the person so claiming became

(1) Construction of statutes of limitation generally.

The object of all statutes of limitation is to prevent claims at great distances of time when evidences are lost (Dundee v. Dougall, 1 Macq. H. L. C. 321). These statutes all rest upon the principle that persons who have at some anterior time been rightfully entitled to land or other property have by neglect on their part to assert their rights slept upon them so long as to render it inequitable that they should disturb an enjoyment to which they have been tacit parties, (Adnam v. Sandwich, 2 Q. B. D. 489). These statutes being all in pari materia ought to receive an uniform construction notwithstanding variation in phrase, the object being the same (Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 215). Being statutes of repose, they are to be liberally and beneficially expounded (Tolson v. Kaye, 6 Moore, 558; 3 Bro. & B. 217; compare Roddam v. Morley, 1 D. G. & J. 23). See the maxims "Interest reipublicæ ut sit finis litium" and "Vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt" (Broom's Legal Maxims, 7th ed. 672). Sect. 12 of the Law of Property Act, 1925, post, provides that nothing in Part I. of that Act affects the law of limitation of actions or proceedings relating to land. For the application of the Limitation Acts to registered land see sect. 75 of the Land Registration Act, 1925, post.

(2) "Land," meaning of word.

(a) "Land" refers to specific land, and did not include a right to have dower assigned, or land partitioned (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 726). Turnpike tolls are not within "land" (Mellish v. Brooks, 3 Beav. 22). Nor is an advowson in gross (Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519). Land extends under sect. 1 to corporeal hereditaments and also to any share, estate or interest in them. Where land was devised on trust for sale and a beneficiary mortgaged his interest under the will, the property for the purpose of the mortgage was regarded as land within this statute (Kirkland v. Peatfield, [1903] 1 K. B. 756; Re Hazeldine, [1908] 1 Ch. 34; Re Fox, [1913] 2 Ch. 75). See further as to this question, the argument in Re Lloyd, L. v. L., [1903] 1 Ch. 389, 395; the decisions on the words of sects. 40 and 42, post, "money payable out of land," in Bowyer v.

Land given on trust for sale.

Hereditaments.

(b) Hereditament is a very comprehensive term, including whatever may be inherited, be it corporeal or incorporeal, real, personal or mixed (Co. Litt. 6 a; 3 Rep. 2; Shep. Touch. 91). The word sometimes denotes not the quantum of interest in the subject-matter, but the subject-matter itself of an inheritance (Tomkins v. Jones, 22 Q. B. D. 602; Moor v. Denn, 2 Bos. & P. 247). There may be hereditaments entirely personal (Re Christmas, Martin v. Lacon, 33 Ch. D. 338). In a will the word has been held to include money held in trust for investment in land (Re Gosselin, G. v. G., [1906] 1 Ch. 120). Hereditaments are usually divided into two classes: corporeal, consisting wholly of substantial and permanent objects; all of which may be comprehended under the general denomination of land (Co. Litt. 4; 2 Bl. Com. 17); and incorporeal, which are rights issuing out of a thing corporate (whether real or personal) or concerning, or annexed to, or exercisable within the same (ibid. 20; see Re Brotherton, B. v. B., [1907] W. N. 230). "Incorporeal hereditaments" include a dignity which descends to heirs, whether it does or does not concern land (Re Rivett Carnac, 30 Ch. D. 139; Cowley v. Cowley, [1900] P. 310), but did not include certain harbour dues (Re Christmas, Martin v. Lacon, supra). Many incorporeal hereditaments are not within this Act. Periods for the acquisition of several incorporeal rights are prescribed by the Prescription Act, 1832 (ante, pp. 1, 4, 11).

Tithes.

(c) The word "tithes" has an ambiguous meaning, signifying either the estate in the tithes or the chattel itself, the fruits of the estate. Tithes (other than tithes belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole) are included in the word "land," which in its proper sense applies only to cases in which there are two parties, each claiming an estate in the land adverse to each other. It has been held, that the statute does not prevent the tithe-owner from recovering tithes as chattels from the occupier, although none had been set out for twenty years, but that the operation of the statute is confined to cases where there are two parties, each claiming an adverse estate in the tithes. Therefore a person who has received no tithes for the statutory period cannot recover the possession of them from another, who has for the same period received those tithes from the terre-tenant (Ely v. Cash, 15 M. & W. 617; Ely v. Bliss, 2 D. M. & G. 459; see Shannon v. Hodder, 2 Ir. L. R. 223). The effect of time as between tithe-owner and occupier is determined by the Tithe Act, 1832 (see Salkeld v. Johnston, 1 Mac. & G. 242, where Lord Cottenham thought that under that Act the proof of the enjoyment of the discharge claimed for the prescribed time is a sufficient answer to a demand for tithes: see S. C., 2 Ex. 256; 2 C. B. 749). The cases on that Act are collected, Shelford, Tithes, 391, 3rd ed., and Supplement, 47, see Leach's Tithe Acts, 6th ed.

As regards payments for tithe imposed in London by 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, an action for their recovery was brought by a lay impropriator, and the defendant pleaded the Tithe Act, 1832. Held by House of Lords, affirming the C. A. (52 L. T. 532), who had reversed Kay, J. (ibid. 530), that these payments were not within that Act, which only applies to tithes in kind (Payne v. Esdaile, 13 App. Cas. 613). The defence of non-payment apart from statute was also held bad in H. L. (ibid.), affirming Kay, J. (53 L. T. 21). Lastly, the defendant relied on the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, which the C. A. held did not apply (54 L. T. 705). This was reversed by H. L., who held that these payments fell within the words "periodical sums of money charged upon land" (Payne v. Esdaile, 13 App. Cas. 613).

Tithes, moduses or compositions, belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole, are excepted from the operation of the present Act. The time for recovering lands belonging to such a corporation is prescribed by sect. 29, post, p. 204. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

"Land."

Tithe rent-charge not belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole is "rent" within sect. 2, and the right thereto will be extinguished by non-payment for the statutory period (Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 14; Irish Commission v. Ryan, [1900] 2 I. R. 565). Tithe rent-charge, belonging to a spiritual corporation sole, is not a "modus or composition" within sect. 1 but rent, and therefore falls within the general operation of the Act (Asplen v. Pullin, [1917] 1 K. B. 187). And the same was held as to a tithe rent-charge belonging to a spiritual corporation sole, and which arose under the Tithe Rent-charge (Ireland) Act, 1838 (Irish Commission v. Grant, Irish Commission v. Ryan, supra; see Connolly v. Gorman, [1898] 1 I. R. 20). Tithe rent-charge.

As to the recovery of arrears of tithes and tithe rent-charge, see note to sect. 42, post, p. 229. Arrears of tithes.

(d) Spiritual corporations are those of which not only the members composing it are spiritual persons, but of which the object of the institution is also spiritual, such as bishops, some deans, and prebendaries, all archdeacons, parsons, and vicars, which are sole corporations; deans and chapters at present, and formerly prior and convent, abbot and monks, and the like, bodies aggregate (Co. Litt. 150 a; 1 Bl. Com. 471; 1 Kyd on Corporations, 22). Corporations.

Eleemosynary corporations are such as are constituted for the perpetual distribution of the free-alms or bounty of the founder of them to such persons as he has directed (1 Bl. Com. 471). These are of two general descriptions; hospitals for the maintenance and relief of poor and impotent persons, and colleges for the promotion of learning, and the support of persons engaged in literary pursuits, of which the greater number are within the universities, and form component parts of these larger corporations; and others are out of the universities, and not necessarily connected with them. Between hospitals having a common seal, and colleges in the universities or out of them, there is no difference in legal consideration, the difference is only in degree; for where in an hospital the master and poor are incorporated, it is a college having a common seal by which it acts, although it have not the name of a college (per Holt, Skinn. 484). There are many hospitals not incorporated in which the succession is kept up by trustees (10 Rep. 31, 35). There are other corporations which may be classed under the head of eleemosynary, as their object is, by means of trustees or governors incorporated, to carry into execution some public charity; such is the corporation created in the reign of Queen Anne, under the name of "The Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the Poor Clergy" (2 Anne, c. 11; 5 Anne, c. 24; 6 Anne, c. 27; 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10; 3 Geo. 1, c. 20). And such are many corporations of trustees or governors of free schools (see 1 Kyd on Corporations, 25—27). All these eleemosynary corporations are, strictly speaking, lay and not ecclesiastical, even though composed of ecclesiastical persons (1 Lord Raym. 6), and although they, in some things, partake of the nature, privileges and restrictions of ecclesiastical bodies (1 Bl. Com. 471). Each university of Oxford and Cambridge is a lay corporation and not eleemosynary, as particular colleges are, although some salaries are attached to some of their officers (R. v. Cambridge, 3 Burr. 1652; see Tudor's Charitable Trusts, 4th ed.).

Corporations aggregate consist of many persons, of which kind are the mayor and commonalty of a city, the head and fellows of a college, the master and brethren of a hospital, the dean and chapter of a cathedral church (10 Rep. 29 b; 11 Rep. 69 b).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

"Land."

Corporations sole consist of one person only and his successors, in some particular station, who are incorporated by law, in order to give them some legal capacities and advantages, particularly that of perpetuity, which in their natural persons they could not have had. In this sense the King is a corporation sole (Co. Litt. 43). So are archbishops, bishops, deans and prebendaries, distinct from their several chapters; and so is every parson and vicar (10 Rep. 29 b; Wood's Inst. 109; 1 Bl. Com. 470; 1 Kyd on Corporations, 20). Corporations are as liable to the operation of prescription as private persons (Dundee v. Dougall, 1 Macq. H. L. C. 317). See also as to corporations, sects. 74, 180 and 181 of L. P. Act, 1925, post.

Meaning of the term "freehold."

(e) The term freehold, as denoting an estate of a given quantity, or rather of a peculiar quality, is opposed to the term chattel (Co. Litt. 43 b; 1 Burr. 108). An estate of freehold may be defined to be "an estate in possession, remainder, or reversion, in corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments, held for life, or some uncertain interest, created by will, or some other mode of conveyance, capable of transferring an estate of freehold, which may last the life of the devisee or grantee, or of some other person" (Watk. Conv. 63; 1 Prest. on Estates, 200—203; see 2 Jur. 459). All interests in land for a shorter period than a life, or, more properly speaking, all interests for a definite space of time, measured by years, months, or days, are deemed chattel interests (1 Prest. Estates, 203), which may subsist in both corporeal and incorporeal hereditaments (Noy's Maxims, 142, 357; Bac. Abr. Executors (H. 3)). See now as to estates in land, sect. 1 of L. P. Act, 1925, post.

By the common law no estate of inheritance or freehold is comprehended under the word chattels. Chattels real are so-called, not as being real estate, but because they are extractions out of the real (Ridout v. Pain, 3 Atk. 492). They are real because they concern the realty, as terms for years of lands or tenements, wardships, the interest of tenant by statute-staple, by statute merchant, by elegit and such like (Co. Litt. 118 b). See as to estates by elegit, Johns v. Pink, [1900] 1 Ch. 296. So "chattels real" include the next presentation to a church (Dyer, 135 a), and a rent issuing out of land held for a term of years (Re Fraser, Lowther v. F., [1904] 1 Ch. 115).

(3) "Rent." Payments within the definition of rent.

(f) The following have been held to fall within the definition of rent in sect. 1, viz.: Quit rents payable in respect of freeholds (De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Ex. 166), or in respect of copyholds (Howitt v. Harrington, [1893] 2 Ch. 497); rent-charges granted by deed (Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572); the yearly sum payable under the Land Tax Act, 1802, s. 123, by way of interest on money paid for redeeming land tax (Skene v. Cook, [1901] 2 K. B. 7; [1902] 1 K. B. 682); annuities charged on land by will (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 544), or by deed (Hughes v. Coles, 27 Ch. D. 231; overruled however in Re Jordison, Raine v. J., [1922] 1 Ch. 440; see note to sect. 10 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, p. 242); annuities charged on real and personal estate by deed (Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140); or by will (Dower v. Dower, 15 L. R. Ir. 275); payments for tithe imposed in London by 37 Hen. 8, c. 12 (Payne v. Esdaile, 13 App. Cas. 613); tithe rent-charge (Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 31); certain services not involving pecuniary render (Doe v. Benham, 7 Q. B. 981). Rent in sect. 2 means rent of inheritance (Ely v. Bliss, 2 D. M. & G. 472). It was said in an early case that the word in sect. 2 was confined to rents existing as an inheritance distinct from the land, and for which before the statute the party entitled might have had an assize, such as ancient rent service, fee farm rents or the like (Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 122). In a later and wider interpretation, it was said that if by statute a periodical payment charged upon land is created, and is a property distinct from the land, though not real property, it is "rent" within sect. 2 (Skene v. Cook, [1901] 2 K. B. 14; [1902] 1 K. B. 682; a case where interest on money paid to redeem income tax had not been paid for twenty years). "Rent" in sect. 2 does not include ordinary interest upon a mortgage (Skene v. Cook, [1901] 2 K. B. 14) or a conventional rent reserved by a lease (Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 A. C. 26). But the words "arrears of rent" in sect. 42 do include such a reserved rent (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 375; see Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 120, 125). See generally as to the use of the word "rent" in the statute, Doe v. Angell, 9 Q. B. 328. And as to annuities see further, p. 141, post.

(g) Heriots are usually divided into two sorts, heriot service and heriot custom. Heriot service consists in the lord's right to seize the best beast or chattel of a tenant upon the tenant's death. It may arise from a tenure created before the Statute Quia Emptores; in which case heriot service becomes due upon the death of a tenant in fee. But it may, it seems, also be reserved on a lease for lives, or years determinable on lives, if such heriot be reserved payable during the term (Lanyon v. Carne, 2 Wms. Saund. 485). A right to heriot service could not, it seems, exist in the case of copyholds (Western v. Bailey, [1897] 1 Q. B. 86). Heriot service may be recovered either by seizure (Plowd. 96; Cro. Eliz. 589; 1 And. 298; Gouldsb. 191; 1 Salk. 356; 1 Show. 81; Willes, 192), or by distress within the manor (Plowd. 96 a; Cro. Car. 260; Bro. Har. 2; Kich. 133 b; 3 Bl. Comm. 15; Gilbert's Distresses, 10, 11). Any goods belonging to another, found upon the lands charged with heriot service, may be distrained (Bro. Har. 6; Cro. Car. 260; Austin v. Bennet, 1 Salk. 356).

Heriots: heriot service;

Heriot custom depends on immemorial usage (Co. Cop. s. 24). It consists in the lord's right to seize a certain chattel belonging to a tenant upon his death or upon alienation by him of land held of the manor (2 Watk. Cop. c. 6). Heriot custom was usually an incident of copyholds, but it might exist in the case of customary freeholds (Damarell v. Protheroe, 10 Q. B. 20; Copestake v. Hoper, [1908] 2 Ch. 10). It might be payable on the death or alienation of a tenant of an estate of inheritance or for life or years (Keilway, 80), or at will (Hix v. Gardiner, 2 Bulst. 195). Where there was a custom of a manor giving right to a heriot upon the death of a tenant solely "seised" of customary freeholds, and such a tenant executed a legal mortgage but remained in possession and died while in possession, he was not so "seised" as to entitle the lord to a heriot (Copestake v. Hoper, supra). The chattel which the lord could seize under heriot custom might consist of the best beast or the second best or other animal (Elton Cop. 200). Such beast might be seized outside the manor although it had never been within it (Western v. Bailey, [1897] 1 Q. B. 86). As the property of it vested immediately in the lord on the death or alienation of the tenant, the lord might seize the identical thing, though he could not distrain any other chattel for it (Cro. Eliz. 590; Keilw. 82 a, 84 b, 167 a; Br. Har. 2, 6, 7; Parker v. Gage, 1 Show. 81). The property in any particular beast did not vest in the lord before selection of it (Abington v. Lipscomb, 1 Q. B. 776). See further, as to heriots, 2 Watk. Cop. c. 6; Cruise heriot custom;

Dig. tit. X., c. 4, ss. 49—63; Com. Dig. Copyhold (K. 18), (K. 27); Scriven, Cop. 244, 7th ed.; Elton, 198, 2nd. ed; and as to compensation for their extinguishment on the abolition of copyhold and customary tenure, Part VI., and Sched. 13 of L. P. Act, 1922.

In a case of heriot service, a manor had been settled on A for life, remainder to B. In 1824 a heriot became due to A which was not paid. In 1847, B's remainder having fallen into possession, it was held that his right to seize another heriot was not barred by sects. 2 and 3, owing to the non-payment of the heriot in 1824 (Chichester v. Hall, 17 L. T. (o.s.) 121). In Zouch v. Dalbiac (L. R. 10 Ex. 172), a case of heriot custom, where it was admitted that more than twenty years before the heriot in question became due, a previous heriot had become due which the lord had not seized, the lord's right of seizure was not barred under this statute. Opinions were expressed that neither heriot custom nor heriot service were within sects. 2 and 3 (ibid., 182); and that if rent did anywhere in the statute include heriots, it might be in sect. 42 (ibid., 179). Bramwell, B., doubted whether it was the general intention of the statute to bar not merely the right to a particular heriot, but the title generally (ibid., 180). See the relation of the statute to heriots discussed in Owen v. De Beauvoir, 16 M. & W. 566; De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Exch. 166; Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 2nd ed. 280.

In the absence of evidence adverse to the lord, the Court would not presume enfranchisement of land shown to have been copyhold more than a century ago, from mere negligence by the lords in exacting small fines. It was said not to be a case to which any stat. lim. applied (Turner v. West Bromwich, 9 W. R. 155; Chichester v. Hall, 17 L. T. (o.s.) 121). See the enfranchisement presumed in Re Lidiard, 42 Ch. D. 254; Ecc. Commrs. v. Parr, [1894] 2 Q. B. 432. The lord's right to a single fine was barred in six years (Monckton v. Payne, [1899] 2 Q. B. 63), and his right to a copyhold quit rent as a whole was barred in twelve years (Howitt v. Harrington, [1893] 2 Ch. 497).

"Services and suits for which distress may be made."

Different kinds of rents:

(h) A rent (reditus) is properly a sum of money, or other thing to be rendered periodically, in consequence of an express reservation in a grant or demise of lands or tenements, the reversion of which is in the grantor or person demising (2 Bl. Comm. 31; Gilb. on Rents, 9, &c.). There are at common law three sorts of rents: rent-service, rent-charge, and rent-seck (Litt. s. 213).

rent-service;

Rent-service is so called because it hath some corporeal service incident to it, as at least fealty or the tenant's feodal oath of fidelity (Co. Litt. 142). And for these, in case they be in arrear, the lord may distrain of common right, without reserving any special power of distress; provided he hath in himself the reversion or future estate of the lands, after the lease or particular estate of the lessee or grantee is expired (Litt. s. 215).

rent-charge;

A rent-charge is where the owner of the rent hath no future interest or reversion expectant in the land; as where a man by deed maketh over to others his whole estate in fee-simple, with a certain rent payable thereout, and adds to the deed a covenant or clause of distress if the rent be in arrear. In this case the land is liable to distress, not of common right, but by virtue of the clause in the deed, and therefore it is called a rent-charge, because in this manner the land is charged with a distress for the payment of it (Co. Litt. 143; see Re Gerard and Beecham, [1894] 3 Ch. 308). A rent for equality of partition is not a rent-service, but a rent-charge of common right, and may be distrained for (Litt. s. 253). Rent-seck (reditus siccus), or barren rent, is, in effect, nothing more than a rent reserved by deed, but without any clause of distress (2 Bl. Comm. 42; see Dodds

v. Thompson, L. R. 1 C. P. 133). Either a rent-service disconnected from the reversion (Ards v. Watkin, Cro. Eliz. 637, 691) or a rent-charge might be divided by will or by deed operating under the Statute of Uses (repealed by L. P. Act, 1925, post), so as to make the tenant liable without attornment to several distresses by the devisees or cestuis que use. It seems that since the stat. 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9, a rent-charge may be so divided by a conveyance of any kind (Rivis v. Watson, 5 M. & W. 255; see Colborne v. Wright, 2 Lev. 239).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

There are also other species of rents, which are reducible to these three. Rents of assize are the certain established rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of a manor (2 Inst. 19), which cannot be departed from or varied. Those of the freeholders are frequently called chief rents (reditus capitales); and both sorts are indifferently denominated quit-rents (quieti reditus), because thereby the tenant goes quit and free of all other services. A fee-farm rent is a rent-charge issuing out of an estate in fee, of at least one-fourth of the value of the lands at the time of its reservation (Co. Litt. 143 b; see Bradbury v. Wright, Dougl. 627, n. 1).

The above are the general divisions of rent; but the difference between them (in respect of the remedy for recovering) is now abolished. By the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730, s. 5, the same remedy was given by distress, in cases of rents-seck, rents of assize, and chief rents, as in case of rent reserved upon lease. Unless the case was brought within this section, a rent-seck could not formerly be recovered by distress (Bradbury v. Wright, Dougl. 627; Musgrave v. Emerson, 10 Q. B. 326). A rent-charge granted by deed containing no power of distress is within sect. 5 (Dodds v. Thompson, L. R. 1 C. P. 133). Whenever land is sold reserving a rent, that rent may properly be called a rent-charge, for under sect. 5 the right of distress is incident to it (Re Gerard and Beecham, [1894] 3 Ch. 311).

Remedy by distress for recovering rents-seck given by 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 5.

Now by L. P. Act, 1925, s. 121, post, where an annual sum is, by an instrument coming into operation after 1881, charged on land or the income thereof, whether by way of rent-charge or otherwise, and which annual sum is not a rent incident to a reversion, such annual sum can be recovered by means of (1) a distress, (2) an entry, (3) a demise of the land charged.

Distress for rents.

As a general rule, a person who has parted with the reversion cannot distrain (Parmenter v. Webber, 8 Taunt. 593; Langford v. Selmes, 3 K. & J. 226; Lewis v. Baker, [1905] 1 Ch. 46; see as to a mortgage, Trent v. Hunt, 9 Exch. 14). So a lessee who has parted with his whole term (which amounts to an assignment, Beardman v. Wilson, L. R. 4 C. P. 57; Hyde v. Warden, 3 Ex. D. 83; Lewis v. Baker, supra), reserving a rent, cannot distrain (——— v. Cooper, 2 Wils. 375). Under certain circumstances, however, the rent reserved may amount to a rent-charge (see Williams v. Hayward, 1 E. & E. 1040), to which, apparently, the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730, s. 5, would apply.

It is laid down in Co. Litt. 142 a, that "rent may as well be in delivery of hens, capons, roses, spurs, bows, shafts, horses, hawks, pepper, comine, wheat, or other profit that lieth in render, office, attendance, and such like, as in payment of money"; and that for these things there may be a distress. So in Co. Litt. 96 a, it is said, "A man may hold of his lord to shear all the sheep depasturing within the lord's manor; and this is certain enough, albeit the lord hath sometime a greater number and sometime a lesser number there; and yet this uncertainty being referred to the manor, which is certain, the lord may distrain for this uncertainty." So in

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

Litt. s. 137, it is laid down, that if land be holden by the service of singing a mass every Friday, the lord may distrain for not doing it (Doe v. Benham, 7 Q. B. 982). The keeping up of a grindstone upon land for the convenience of the parish, was held not rent, or "profits of land" within the third section of the Act (Doe v. Hinde, 2 M. & Rob. 441; Doe v. Benham, 7 Q. B. 978).

Right of executors to distrain.

As to the powers of executors and administrators in regard to distress, see sect. 26 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post.

Since the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1709, s. 6, rent accruing before the expiration of a tenancy can be distrained for within six months after the tenancy expires, and while the tenant continues in occupation.

Action of debt for rent-charge.

Since the abolition of real actions, a rent-charge in fee may be recovered in an action of debt from the terre-tenant entitled to a freehold interest, either under a covenant binding him (Varley v. Leigh, 2 Exch. 446), or independently of one (Thomas v. Sylvester, L. R. 8 Q. B. 368; Re Blackburn, Ex parte Graham, 42 Ch. D. 343; Searle v. Cooke, 43 Ch. D. 519; Swift v. Kelly, 24 L. R. Ir. 107); and that, whether he has or has not received rents and profits equal to the amount of rent-charge claimed (Pertwee v. Townsend, [1896] 2 Q. B. 129). A road authority was liable in such an action (Foley v. Dudley, [1910] 1 K. B. 317), but not a tenant for years (Re Herbage Rents, Charity Commrs. v. Green, [1896] 2 Ch. 811); nor a liquidator (Graham v. Edge, 20 Q. B. D. 683). The rule as to suing the freeholder does not apply when the land is situate out of England (Whitaker v. Forbes, 1 C. P. D. 51). See as to the old law, Webb v. Jiggs (4 M. & S. 112).

Rents not in general issuable out of incorporeal hereditaments;

Rent cannot as a general rule issue out of an incorporeal hereditament, so as to warrant a distress (Gardiner v. Williamson, 2 B. & Ad. 339). A rent cannot, strictly speaking, be reserved out of an advowson in gross, tithes, or any other incorporeal hereditament (Co. Litt. 47 a, 142 a; Gilb. on Rents, 20, 22; Re Alms Corn Charity, [1901] 2 Ch. 759). Nor can a rent be reserved out of a rent (2 Roll. Abr. 446; Keilw. 161); but part of a rent may be granted (2 Ves. sen. 178). Nor, at common law, can a rent be reserved by a subject out of a mere privilege or easement in land (Buzzard v. Capel, 8 B. & C. 141; Re Gerard and Beecham, [1894] 3 Ch. 315; see Gardner v. Hodgson's Co., [1901] 2 Ch. 217; Batten Pooll v. Kennedy, [1907] 1 Ch. 268); but payment of money in respect of an easement may be secured by covenant (Hastings v. N. E. Ry. [1898] 2 Ch. 674), and such a payment may sometimes be called rent (Att.-Gen. v. Emerson, [1891] A. C. 659). And see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 122.

exceptions to the rule;

The King, however, may reserve a rent out of an incorporeal hereditament, as well as out of lands, because by his prerogative he may distrain for such rent on all the lands of his tenant (Co. Litt. 47 a; 2 Inst. 132; 5 Rep. 4; Gilb. on Rents, 22). And the grantee of fee-farm rents from the Crown might exercise the same power (Att.-Gen. v. Coventry, 1 P. Wms. 306). And a subject may, by statute, reserve a rent out of an easement (Re Gerard and Beecham, [1894] 3 Ch. 315). A rent may be reserved upon a grant of an estate in remainder or reversion, for the remedy by distress will arise when the lessee comes into possession (Co. Litt. 47 a) for all the arrears (2 Roll. Abr. 446).

A lease by a bishop of tithes only, rendering the ancient rent, was void against the successor, because there was no remedy by distress or assize (Tanlintine v. Denton, Cro. Jac. 111; Windsor v. Gover, 2 Wms. Saund. 230). But by 5 Geo. 3, c. 17, all leases for one, two, or three lives, or for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, of any tithes, tolls, or other incorporeal hereditaments without any lands by any bishop, college or hall, dean and chapter, precentor, prebendary, hospital, or any other person who is enabled by statute to make such leases of any corporeal hereditaments, are as effectual against the lessors and their successors as any leases of corporeal hereditaments are by virtue of 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, and an action of debt against the lessee is given for the recovery of such rent. In point of law, tithes, being an incorporeal hereditament, cannot pass by parol, but by deed only (Gardiner v. Williamson, 2 B. & Ad. 336).

By stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, s. 4 (10 Car. 1, sess. 2, c. 6, Irish), no person should make any avowry or cognisance for any rent, suit, or service, and allege any seisin of any rent, suit, or service in the same avowry or cognisance, in the possession of his or their ancestors or predecessors, or in his own possession, or in the possession of any other whose estates he shall pretend or claim to have, above fifty years next before the making of the said avowry or cognisance. This provision was held to apply only where it was necessary to allege seisin, and not where rent was expressly created by deed (Co. Litt. 115 a; 8 Rep. 64), or by Act of Parliament (Faulkner v. Bellingham, Cro. Car. 80), or by will (Collins v. Goodall, 2 Vern. 235). As to such rents there was no prescribed period of limitation, either at law or in equity (Cupit v. Jackson, M'Clel. 495; 13 Price, 721; see White v. James, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1214; Foster's Case, 8 Rep. 128; De Beauvoir v. Owen, 19 L. J. Exch. 182). So that arrears for any number of years might have been recovered unless there was evidence to raise a presumption of payment (Stackhouse v. Barnston, 10 Ves. 467). Mere length of time, short of the statutory period of fifty years, was not sufficient ground to presume a release of a quit rent (Eldridge v. Knott, Cowp. 214). A lost grant, however, was presumed when a quit rent had for 120 years been paid by a person not apparently liable (Bomford v. Neville, [1904] 1 I. R. 474; compare Foley v. Dudley, [1910] 1 K. B. 317). And a release of rent secured by covenant in a long lease was presumed from non-payment for thirty-five years (Tennent v. Neil, I. R. 5 C. L. 418; see Lefroy v. Walsh, 1 Ir. C. L. R. 311; Gibson v. Doeg, 2 H. & N. 615; Gibbon v. Payne, 23 T. L. R. 250).

Old limitation Act as to rents.

(i) An annuity is a thing very distinct from a rent-charge, with which it is frequently confounded; a rent-charge being a burthen imposed upon and issuing out of lands, whereas an annuity is a yearly sum chargeable only upon the person of the grantor (2 Bl. Comm. 40). The material distinction between an annuity and a rent is, that the former is a charge on the personal estate only, and the latter on the real (Co. Litt. 2 a; 114 b, 20 a). There may, however, be a personal annuity secured by a special charge on particular land (Re Trenchard, T. v. T., [1905] 1 Ch. 82).

Annuities:

An annuity not charged upon land and given by will is a legacy (Re Ashwell, Johns. 112). Lord St. Leonards thought that such an annuity would be extinguished if no payment were made for twenty years (R. P. Stat. 138, 2nd ed., and see the opinion of Wood, V.-C., in Re Ashwell, supra). But the contrary view has been expressed in Dower v. Dower (15 L. R. Ir. 275; see Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 171, 182, 2nd ed.). And it seems that twelve years' arrears can be recovered at any time; sect. 42 (post) not applying (Roch v. Callen, 6 Hare, 531, but see Re Turner, [1917] 1 Ch. 422). If such an annuity be secured by bond or covenant, time runs, under Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 3 (post), against each instalment as it becomes due (Amott v. Holden, 18 Q. B. 593). Six years' arrears were recoverable of a pension given by a benefit society (Edwards v. Warden, 9 Ch. 505).

Annuities not charged on land;

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

charged on land.

An annuity may be charged on land. If so charged, it is by sect. 1 included in the word "rent" in the Act (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 544), and may be extinguished as a whole by non-payment (ibid.; Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572). So an annuity charged on both real and personal estate (Dower v. Dower, 15 L. R. Ir. 275; Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140). Under sect. 42, six years' arrears only of such an annuity can be recovered in a proceeding against the land (Francis v. Grover, 5 Hare, 39; Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140). Where such an annuity was secured by specialty, twenty years' arrears could be recovered under the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 3, in an action on the specialty (Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & El. 536). For the present law on this point see pp. 230, 231, post. A gross sum of money charged upon land, to be paid by yearly instalments, and secured by power of distress, is within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, ss. 40 and 42 (Uppington v. Tarrant, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 262).

Raising annuity by distress or sale.

It has been decided, that a distress may be taken for arrears of a rent-charge created by will, although the testator does not in terms give a power to distrain, such power being a consequence drawn by law from the rent-charge (Rodham v. Berry, Watk. Conv. 243, n. (a)). So in the case of annuities charged on land by wills containing no power of distress, the annuitant can distrain under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 5 (Buttery v. Robinson, 3 Bing. 392; Roper v. Roper, 3 Ch. D. 720); and a receiver will not be appointed (Sollory v. Leaver, 9 Eq. 22); except, perhaps, where the rents are not sufficient, or the annuity has been long in arrear (Kelsey v. Kelsey, 17 Eq. 500). In the case of an annuity created since 1881, see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 121, post. As to raising arrears by sale, see Re Tucker, T. v. T., [1893] 2 Ch. 323; Hambro v. H., [1894] 2 Ch. 564; Blackburne v. Hope Edwards, [1901] 1 Ch. 419.

Compositions.

(4)

Person through whom another claims.

Appointee.

Escheat.

(l) As to the meaning and operation of the words "issue in tail" in this clause, see Abergavenny v. Brace, L. R. 7 Ex. 152, post, p. 149. See also Vandeleur v. Sloane, [1919] 1 I. R. 116.

(m) Whether the word "appointee" (in the definition of person through whom another claims) includes the case where the power of appointment is not in substance created by the appointor himself, quære (Re Devon Settled Estates, [1896] 2 Ch. 572; where Chitty, J., draws a further distinction between a general power and a special power).

(n) An escheat was in its nature feodal. A feud was the right which the tenant had to enjoy lands, rendering to the lord the duties and services reserved to him by contract. After a grant made, a right remained in the lords, called a seigniory, consisting of services to be performed by the tenant, and a right to have the land returned on the expiration of the grant as a reversion, called an escheat (Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 191).

Escheat was founded on the principle that the blood of the person last seised in fee was by some means utterly extinct and gone; and since none could inherit his estate but such as were of his blood and consanguinity, it followed as a regular consequence that the inheritance must fail (2 Inst. 64; Wright's Ten. 115). Escheat might happen from default of heirs, as where the tenant died without any relations on the part of any of his ancestors, or where he died without any relations on the part of those ancestors from whom the estate descended, or where, until the Inheritance Act, 1833, s. 9 (see post), he died without any relations of the whole blood. An escheat also arose from the corruption of the tenant's blood, consequent upon an attainder for treason or felony, by which he became incapable of inheriting, and of transmitting anything by heirship (see the Inheritance Act, 1833, s. 10, and note, post). On the subject of escheat, see 2 Bl. Comm. 241—257; Cruise's Dig. tit. XXX.; Harg. Co. Litt. 18 b, n. (2); Henchman v. Att.-Gen. (2 Sim. & Stu. 498; 3 M. & K. 492); Intestates' Estates Act, 1884, s. 4; Re Wood, Att.-Gen. v. Anderson, [1896] 2 Ch. 596; Re Hartley, [1899] P. 40; and the note to Att.-Gen. v. Sands, Tudor, L. C. Conv., 4th ed. 211. Escheat is abolished in the case of deaths after 1925 by Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 45 (1) (d), post, p. 470. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

(5) Persons.

(o) The poor of a parish are a class of persons within the meaning of the word "person" in this section, in a case where the rents of property are applicable for the benefit of such poor (Magdalen College v. Att.-Gen., 6 H. L. C. 189). The Attorney-General, whether suing ex officio, or at the relation of others, is not a "person" having a right to bring an action or suit in equity to recover land within the meaning of this Act; he is only part of the machinery by which the rights of others are sought to be enforced (ibid.; see Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 18 Beav. 223; sect. 24, post). A statutory corporation was held to fall within the definition of "person" (Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572). Where tenants holding leases under a parish vestry had occupied and enjoyed the soil of a lane for more than a century, it was held that the above statute vested the title in the churchwardens and overseers under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 17 (Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 19).

(6) Crown, when bound by Acts of Parliament.

Where an Act of Parliament is made for the public good, the advancement of religion and justice, and to prevent injury and wrong, the King is bound, though not particularly named (Plowd. 136, 137; 11 Rep. 68 b; 5 Rep. 14; 7 Rep. 32; see Bac. Abr. Prerogative (E.)). But where a statute is general, the King having the prerogative of not being included within the words "person or persons, bodies politic or corporate," used whether affirmatively or negatively in a statute (11 Rep. 68), is not bound in his public capacity by the general words of the statute, unless named (7 Rep. 32; 11 Rep. 68; Plowd. 240; 1 Str. 516; 1 Show. 464; Show. P. C. 185; Hall v. Maule, 4 Ad. & Ell. 284; R. v. Wright, 1 Ad. & Ell. 434; Re Cuckfield Board, 19 Beav. 153, and the cases cited in the note thereto; Re Bevan, 14 W. R. 147).

Thus the Crown is not bound by the R. P. Lim. Act, 1883 (Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 18 Beav. 246), or by the Lim. Act, 1623 (Rustomgee v. The Queen, 1 Q. B. D. 491, 496; Re J., [1909] 1 Ch. 547; Works, &c. Commrs. v. Pontypridd, [1920] 2 K. B. 233; and see Att.-Gen. v. Howley, [1914] 1 Ir. R. 124; see, however, Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 76 J. P. 253, as to actions by the Attorney-General suing at the relation of individuals), or by sect. 3 of the Prescription Act (Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 618), or by the Real Estate Charges Act, 1854 (Dacre v. Patrickson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 191), or by the Companies Act, 1862 (Re Henley, 9 Ch. D. 481. But see now as to Crown debts in liquidation, Re Wood & Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 369), or by the Locomotives Act, 1865 (Cooper v. Hawkins, [1904] 2 K. B. 164; Chare v. Hart, 88 L. J. K. B. 833), or by the Apportionment Act, 1870 (Rochester v. Lefanu, [1906] 2 Ch. 518), or by sect. 150 of the P. H. Act, 1875 (Hornsey v. Hennell, [1902] 2 K. B. 73), or by sect. 35 of the Trustee Act, 1893 (Re Taylor, [1904] 2 Ch. 741; see Re

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

Pratt, 55 L. T. 313), or by sect. 1 of the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (Re Hartley, [1899] P. 40). On the other hand, the Crown being named is within the Tithe Act, 1832, and also within sects. 1 and 2 of the Prescription Act, 1832 (Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 64), and the Trustee Act, 1925, sect. 1 (4) and (5) of the S. L. Act, 1925, and, subject to the exceptions named in sect. 208, within the L. P. Act, 1925, post.

Statutes of limitation as to rights of Crown to realty.

21 Jac. 1, c. 2.

9 Geo. 3, c. 16.

Nullum Tempus Act.

By stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 2, the King was disabled from claiming any manors, lands, or hereditaments, except liberties and franchises, under a title accrued sixty years before the then session of Parliament, unless within that time there had been a possession under such title; but this provision becoming daily more ineffectual by lapse of time, a permanent limitation was introduced (see Co. Litt. 119 a, n. (1); 3 Inst. 188). And by the Crown Suits Act, 1769, it is provided that the King shall not sue, &c., any persons, &c., for any lands, &c. (except liberties and franchises) on any title which has not first accrued within sixty years before the commencement of such suit, unless he has been answered the rents within that time, or they have been in charge, or stood insuper of record; and the subject shall quietly enjoy against the King, and all claiming under him, by patent, &c. This statute was extended to Ireland by 48 Geo. 3, c. 47, as to which see Tuthill v. Rogers, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 429; 1 J. & Lat. 36. It applies to N. S. Wales (Att.-Gen. for N. S. Wales v. Love, [1898] A. C. 679; where the provision as to rents being in charge is explained; and see 3 Inst. 189). In the case of tithes where none had been received, it was held, that the accounts of the auditors of the revenue, in which the tithes had been entered and returned nil, were sufficient proof that they had been "duly in charge" (Att.-Gen. v. Eardley, 8 Price, 73). This was doubted (Tuthill v. Rogers, 1 J. & Lat. 82) and was corrected by the Crown Suits Act, 1861, s. 1, which provided that the Crown shall not sue for real property (other than liberties or franchises) of which the profits have been taken by the space of sixty years, by reason only that the rents have been in charge to the Crown, or stood insuper upon record within the said space of sixty years. The Crown shall not be deemed to have been answered the rents of real property by reason only of the same real property having been parcel of any manor of which the rents shall have been answered to the Crown, or of any manor which shall have been duly in charge to the Crown or stood insuper of record (sect. 3). See as to Ireland, Nullum Tempus (Ireland) Act, 1876. The last-mentioned Acts were said not to apply in case of a quit rent (Re Maxwell, 28 L. R. Ir. 356). But this has been altered as to Ireland (Crown Lands Act, 1906, s. 9).

24 & 25 Vict. c. 62.

Adverse possession against the Crown.

Where a manor has been in charge to the Crown within sixty years, acts done in different parts of it by different persons, although continued for sixty years, do not displace the title of the Crown to the district (Doe v. Roberts, 13 M. & W. 520). Adverse possession was established against the Crown (Att.-Gen. for British Honduras v. Bristowe, 6 A. C. 143).

The Crown Suits Act, 1769, extinguishes the Crown's title and transfers it to the subject (Tuthill v. Rogers, 1 J. & Lat. 62). But possession of Crown lands for less than sixty years was not sufficient to support the plaintiff's title in ejectment (Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 495; see Riddifard v. R., [1905] A. C. 147).

21 Jac. 1, c. 14.

By stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 14, s. 1, it was in effect provided that a person who had been in adverse possession of Crown lands for twenty years might, on information of intrusion, plead the general issue, and might retain possession until trial. Although the King can never be put out of possession in point of law by the wrongful entry of a subject, yet there may be an adverse possession in fact against the Crown. After such an adverse possession for twenty years, the Crown could only recover by information of intrusion, and ejectment would not lie at the suit of the grantee of the Crown (Doe v. Morris, 2 Bing. N. R. 189). See further as to intrusion, 28 & 29 Vict. c. 104, s. 31 et seq.; 3 Chitty's Statutes, 6th ed., 700 et seq. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1.

Practice in Crown suits.

The title of the Crown may be tried in the information of intrusion itself, and need not be first found by inquest of office, the only effect of the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 14, being to throw the onus of proving title in the first instance, in such a case, on the Crown (Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 M. & W. 23). As to inquests of office, see now 28 & 29 Vict. c. 104, s. 52. See, as to evidence in Crown suits, Doe v. Roberts, 13 M. & W. 520.

Chose in action vested in the Crown.

Although the Stat. Lim. does not bind the Crown, yet where the claim of the Crown is only a derivative right it must stand in the same situation as its principal. Therefore, the statute may be pleaded to a scire facias issued by the Crown against the drawer of a bill of exchange, which was barred in the hands of the Crown debtor (R. v. Morrall, 6 Price, 24). But where a right has vested in the Crown before the statute has run against the former owner, the rights of the Crown are not barred or affected by the statute, as the Crown is not within its operation (Lambert v. Taylor, 4 B. & C. 138). See Taylor v. Att.-Gen., 8 Sim. 413, as to course of proceeding by a subject to enforce a claim of property against the Crown; see also Re Robson, 2 Phil. 64; Re De Bode, ibid. 85. And as to petitions of right and the orders thereon, see Petition of Right Act, 1860; Seton, 7th ed. 381—3.

With respect to the personal estate of a deceased, proceedings on the part of the Crown cannot now be instituted, nor can a petition of right be presented, except within the same time, and subject to the same rules of law and equity, as in the case of an action by or against a subject (Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 30 (2), post).

Claim of Crown to duties.

Under the Customs Act, 1889, ss. 12 and 14, the claim of the Crown to legacy and succession duty in specified cases cannot be enforced after specified periods. These sections have been made applicable to estate duty by the Finance Act, 1894, s. 8 (2).

Statutes of Limitation to rights of Duke of Cornwall.

The Stat. Lim. which affect the rights of the Duke of Cornwall are 7 & 8 Vict. c. 105, ss. 71—88; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 53; and Crown Suits Act, 1861; as to which, see Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 523, 2nd ed.; Brown's Law of Limitation, 251, 415.

Presumption of grants from the Crown.

But though the Crown is not bound by the ordinary Stat. Lim., yet a grant from it may be presumed from great length of possession, not because the Court really thinks a grant has been made, but it presumes the fact for the purpose and from a principle of quieting the possession (Hull v. Horner, Cowp. 102, 215). Thus grants of lands from the Crown have been presumed after an uninterrupted enjoyment of twenty years (Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East. 490; Holcroft v. Heel, 1 Bos. & Pull, 400; Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294). So a grant by the Crown of a several fishery in tidal waters was presumed (Goodman v. Saltash, 7 App. Cas. 633), and of a manor (Merttens v. Hill, [1901] 1 Ch. 851); and see Att.-Gen. v. Wright, [1897] 2 Q. B. 318. The right of a corporation to discharge sewage into a tidal river was based by the H. L. on a lost grant by the Crown of a licence exercisable over the foreshore (Somersetshire v. Bridgwater, 81 L. T. 732). It was said to be immaterial that the grant was not of record (ibid.). So an enfranchisement of a copyhold might be presumed against the Crown (Roe v. Ireland, 11 East, 280). So where the title of a family to an advowson was evidenced by deeds for nearly 140 years, and there had been three presentations by them and none by the Crown, a grant from the Crown might be presumed (Gibson v. Clark, 1 Jac. & W. 159; see 3 T. R. 158). Letters patent from the Crown have been presumed (Picking v. Stamford, 2 Ves. jun. 282). A grant from the Crown of undefined shares in land will not be held void for uncertainty after long modern possession, for a supplementary grant may be presumed (Des Barres v. Shey, 29 L. T. 592). Enjoyment of property for 110 years by a parish, although no conveyance appeared in evidence, was held conclusive proof of ownership against the Crown (Att.-Gen. v. Hotham, 1 T. & R. 210; see Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 19). An objection to a title that two fee-farm rents created by letters patent by James I., were not shown to have been extinguished, was overruled, it being proved that no claim had been made by the Crown of the rent from the year 1706, and no proof of any previous claim (Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. 609; see Flower v. Hartopp, 12 L. J. Ch. 507). A lost surrender to the Crown of one of two differing charters was presumed in Att.-Gen. v. Simpson, [1901] 2 Ch. 716. In a case where Charles I. had granted the soil between high and low-water marks, but the Crown remained in possession for 150 years after the grant, this created a presumption against the grant (Parmeter v. Att.-Gen., 1 Dow. 316). A grant from the Crown will not be presumed where it would have been against a statutory provision of a public nature (Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 495). Nor where the enjoyment has been, not against the Crown itself, but against a lessee from the Crown (Wheaton v. Maple, [1893] 3 Ch. 62; see ibid. 56 as to modern enjoyment against the Crown). It would seem that a Crown grant to an intruder will not be presumed where he has only been in possession long enough to bar a private owner (Riddiford v. Rex, [1905] A. C. 159).

Presumption of inrolments and registration.

Where port duties are claimed under a Crown grant alleged to have been inrolled, but not produced, such grant ought not to be presumed upon mere evidence of usage (Brune v. Thompson, 4 Q. B. 543; as to the presumption that a claim for port duties had a legal origin, see Foreman v. Whitstable, L. R. 4 H. L. 266, and cases there cited). There seems to be no instance of presuming inrolment of a deed which was made essential by statute (Doe v. Waterton, 3 B. & Ald. 149, 151; Wright v. Smythies, 10 East, 409). It might be otherwise if foundation were laid for raising a presumption by showing that there was a chasm in the records (Allen v. Walker, 1 Jac. & W. 619). The registry of a deed of lands in a register county will not be presumed (Doe v. Hirst, 11 Price, 475). However, where the usage of paying tithe was shown, an inrolment of a decree directing such payment was presumed (Macdougall v. Purrier, 4 Bligh, (N.S.) 433; see R. v. Buckby, 7 East, 45; Hebbert v. Purchas, L. R. 3 P. C. 643; Att.-Gen. v. Moor, 20 Beav. 119; Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 31). As to presuming the inrolment at Quarter Sessions of a certificate of justices, see Leigh Council v. King, [1901] 1 Q. B. 755, but this case was disapproved in H. L. (Cahabé v. Walton-upon-Thames, [1914] A. C. 102).

Presumption of an Act of Parliament.

After long possession the Court will even presume an Act of Parliament in order to protect a right (Att.-Gen. v. Evelme Hospital, 17 Beav. 366), but not the passing of an Act of Parliament within the last 250 years, on an important subject of the most general interest, of which no vestige can be found (R. v. Exeter, 12 Ad. & Ell. 532, 533). Jessel, M.R., refused to presume an Act of Parliament as an origin for an alleged right (Chilton v. London, 7 Ch. D. 735). See Neaverson v. Peterborough Council, [1902] 1 Ch. 574; Lopez v. Andrew, 3 M. & R. 329.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

2.—Period of Limitation fixed, and when Right first accrues.

[Sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been repealed and the following substituted, viz.:]

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 1.] After the commencement of this Act [Jan. 1, 1879] no person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action or suit, to recover any land or rent, but within twelve years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action or suit, shall have first accrued to some person through whom he claims; or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twelve years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action or suit, shall have first accrued to the person making or bringing the same.

No land or rent to be recovered but within twelve years after the right of action accrued.

By sect. 9 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (post), sect. 1 of the last-mentioned Act has been substituted for sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act 1833; and under the same 9th sect. the provisions of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (except the repealed sections, but including the provisions substituted for such repealed sections), are to be construed together with the R. P. L. Act, 1874. Sect. 1 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, fixes the period of limitation at twelve instead of twenty years, and expressly includes "suits," but in other respects is identical with sect. 2 of the Act of 1833, which has accordingly been omitted.

The following note embodies the decisions under both sections.

(1) Effect of the section...147.
(2) Old law and adverse possession...149.
(3) Nature of possession necessary to give title under the section...152.

(1) Effect of section.

The words "to recover any land" mean "to obtain any land by judgment of the Court." They are not limited to obtaining possession (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 730).. The words apply accordingly not only to ejectment, but to an action for foreclosure (ibid.; Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539; Hugill v. Wilkinson, 38 Ch. D. 480; compare Re Stead, 2 Ch. D. 718; Re Witham, [1922] 2 Ch. 413). But the words did not apply to actions for the assignment of dower or to an action for partition where plaintiff was in possession; such actions being proceedings to obtain a delimitation of parcels under which for the first time a title to specific land will be obtained (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 722, 726). The words did include a partition action where plaintiff was out of possession for twelve years (ibid. 731; Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 143; see sects. 1 and 12).

Where the claim is to the possession of land, the real right is the right of entry, and the right of action is only given to enforce this (Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 8 Ch. D. 727). Speaking generally, time does not commence to run against a man until he is put to his right of entry (Re Nisbet and Potts, [1906] 1 Ch. 401). But, unless an entry be made within the statutory period, from then this right is taken away (Holmes v. Newlands, 11 Ad. & El. 44; 8 Q. B. 679).

This section governs cases not included among instances in section 3.

James v. Salter.

Sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was held to govern cases which fell within its general words, even though not included among the instances given in sect. 3 (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 553; Pugh v. Heath, 7 App. Cas. 235). A testator charged a life annuity on land, with a power of distress. The testator died in 1804, and in 1835 the annuitant distrained for twenty-nine years' arrears, the right to make a distress having first accrued in April, 1805. The claim was held barred. Tindal, C.J., said "that the case must have been governed by the second section, if that section had stood alone, cannot be doubted; and upon a more close examination of the third section, the object and intent of it seems to us to be no more than this: to explain and give a construction to the enactment contained in the second clause, as to 'the time at which the right to make a distress for any rent shall be deemed to have first accrued,' in those cases only in which doubt or difficulty might occur; leaving every case which plainly falls within the general words of the second section, but is not included amongst the instances given by the third, to be governed by the operation of the second" (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 553; approved, Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 27; see Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 8 Ch. D. 727). In such a case it was not merely the right of the annuitant to arrears that was barred. His title to the annuity as a whole was extinguished (see 3 Bing. N. C. 555; Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572; Langton v. L., 18 Jur. 928).

Landlord and tenant; void lease;

Where a lessee entered under a lease granted by a charitable corporation in 1783 (held to have been void), and in 1876 the corporation sued for possession, the lessees were taken to have been in possession from 1783 without any title whatever, and the rights of the corporation were barred by sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 4 App. Cas. 324; see Webster v. Southey, 36 Ch. D. 9). In the Courts below, the same lease was treated as voidable only; and according to the Court of Appeal time ran from the granting of the lease (8 Ch. D. 709).

valid lease;

A person must have an effective right to enter in order that time may run against him, and an intended lessor had not such a right where the intended lessee entered under a valid agreement for a lease (Warren v. Murray, [1894] 2 Q. B. 658).

Where a lessor permitted his lessee during the lease to pay no rent for the statutory period, time ran against the lessor's right to recover the land from the determination of the lease, his right of action accruing under the fourth branch of sect. 3 (Doe v. Oxenham, 7 M. & W. 131). As to a lessor being barred through a stranger wrongfully receiving the reserved rent, see sect. 9, post. The case of a lease being surrendered and renewed is discussed in the note to sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, p. 163.

As regards the landlord's right to recover rent reserved, the right to recover proper arrears is not barred by non-payment for however long a time, so long as the relation of landlord and tenant subsists as a legal relation (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 360; Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; Re Turner, 11 Ir. Ch. R. (N.S.) 304; Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 26; see Blaiberg v. Keeves, [1906] 2 Ch. 182. See, however, as to rents not exceeding one pound per annum, the L. P. Act, 1925, s. 153, (4), (5), post). But where a tenant from year to year holds for twelve years without paying rent the landlord loses not only the land but also any right to recover past rent (Re Jolly, Gathercole v. Norfolk, [1900] 2 Ch. 616).

Rent within this section.

The word "rent" in the above section is confined to rents existing as an inheritance distinct from the land, and for which before 1833 the party entitled might have had an assize, such as ancient rents service, fee-farm rents, or the like (Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113;

Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 A. C. 26; Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572). The word means in the section rent which is a charge on land (Paget v. Foley, 2 Bing. N. C. 688). It has been held to include an annuity charged on land by deed (Hughes v. Coles, 27 Ch. D. 231; but see Re Jordison, [1922] 1 Ch. 440, where Hughes v. Coles was overruled, cited in note to sect. 10 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, p. 243), and interest on land tax redemption money, charged by statute on land, and being distinct from the land, though not itself real property (Skene v. Cook, [1902] 1 K. B. 682). The word in the section does not include rents reserved on leases for years (Grant v. Ellis, supra), or an additional penal rent payable by a tenant (Daly v. Bloomfield, 5 Ir. L. R. 65). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

The various cases in which the provisions of this section as to rent (as interpreted by sect. 1) have been held to apply are given ante, p. 136. As to the use of the word "rent" in the statute generally, see ibid., and post, p. 171.

The first section interpreting the person through whom another person is said to claim as meaning any person by, through, or under, or by the act of whom the person so claiming became entitled to the estate or interest claimed "as issue in tail," an ordinary tenant in tail would lose his right after want of possession for the statutory period in the time of his ancestor (Abergavenny v. Brace, L. R. 7 Ex. 152, 172). But a statutory entail (as that of the Abergavenny estates) is not within these words (ibid. 155, 172). Tenant in tail.

An action by a lord of a manor to enforce his right to seize quousque was within this section (Ecclesiastical Commrs. v. Parr, [1894] 2 Q. B. 420; Re Lidiard, 42 Ch. D. 254; Beighton v. Beighton, 64 L. J. Ch. 796). So also a suit by a copyhold tenant to compel admittance by the lord (Walters v. Webb, 5 Ch. 531). The lord's right to enter for forfeiture was within sects. 3 and 4 (see note to sect. 4, post, p. 161). Copyhold fines were dealt with by the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 3 (see Monckton v. Payne, [1899] 2 Q. B. 603). Copyholds.

As regards a possessory title to land forming part of a manor, a squatter on copyhold land who had acquired a good title under the statute against the copyholder was held to have no title to the freehold against the lord; but time began to run against the lord only from the date at which after proclamation or notice the squatter failed to come in and be admitted (Ecclesiastical Commrs. v. Parr, [1894] 2 Q. B. 420; see Re Nisbet & Potts, [1905] 1 Ch. 400). On the other hand, where A under licence from the lord enclosed waste, and after the expiration of his licence had adverse possession thereof for forty years, the effect of the licence was to give A not a copyhold, but a common law holding, the lord having the freehold reversion; and by adverse possession A acquired a freehold title (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 157). Copyhold and customary tenure were abolished as from January 1, 1926, by L. P. Act, 1922, Part V., Part VI., and Sched. 13, dealing with compensation for fines.

(2) Old law.

By common law there was no fixed period within which it was necessary to commence actions. Afterwards certain events were from time to time selected, as the return of King John from Ireland, and the coronation of Henry the Third. A certain period was limited by stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, which enacted that no person should maintain any writ of right, or make any prescription, title or claim of, to or for any manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, commons, pensions, portions, corodies, or other hereditaments of the possession of his or their ancestor or predecessor, and declare and allege any further seisin or possession of his or their ancestor or predecessor, but within sixty years next before the teste of the 32 Hen. 8, c. 2.

said writ, or next before the said prescription, title or claim so made. Actions upon the possession of the ancestor of the party claiming were limited to fifty years; and those upon the seisin or possession of the party himself to thirty years; and formedons in remainder or reverter were required to be sued within fifty years. The writ of intrusion came within the stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, and not within the Limitation Act, 1623, and the limitation of time for suing out such writ was fifty years (see Peircey v. Gardner, 3 Bing. N. C. 748). Dignities were not within the stat. lim. (Re Willoughby of Parham, Lords' Journ. vol. 31, p. 350; see 3 Cru. Dig. 202). But offices with fees and profits were within them (Lords' Journ. vol. 36, p. 295). An annuity was not within the stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, for the plaintiff did not declare upon a seisin, but upon his grant (Bro. St. Lim. 26; see ante, p. 141). So that statute did not extend to a corporation aggregate, as mayor and commonalty, nor to a dean and chapter. But it was otherwise as to a corporation sole; for if a bishop or other sole corporation sued upon a seisin of his predecessor, he was barred if the seisin was not within sixty years (Bro. St. Lim. 33; Bac. Abr. Limitation of Actions (B)).

Limitation of right of entry.

21 Jac. 1, c. 16.

The Limitation Act, 1623, ss. 1 and 2 (repealed by 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125), limited the period for all writs of formedon to twenty years, and enacted that no persons should make any entry into any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, but within twenty years next after his title should first descend or accrue to the same. [The provisions of the statutes 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, and the Limitation Act, 1623, were extended to Ireland by the Irish stat. 10 Car. 1, sess. 2, s. 6.]

As to the rights of issues in tail under the Lim. Act, 1623, see Tolson v. Kaye, 3 Brod. & B. 217; 3 B. & A. 738; 6 M. & G. 536; Doe v. Woodroffe, 16 M. & W. 769.

Under the Lim. Act, 1623, the period of twenty years ran against the rights of persons entitled in possession from the time when the wrongdoer acquired possession adversely to the owner; and in many cases it was very difficult to ascertain what would constitute such possession.

Adverse possession necessary under above statutes.

To constitute adverse possession, it was formerly necessary that there should be an ouster of the seisin in one of five modes, called disseisin, abatement, intrusion, discontinuance, and deforcement. Disseisin is where the person in possession of the freehold is evicted. Abatement is where a wrongdoer enters on the vacant possession, after the death of the owner, instead of the heir or devisee. Intrusion is where a wrongdoer enters on the vacant possession, after the death of the tenant for life, instead of the remainderman or reversioner. Discontinuance was where a tenant in tail in possession aliened by a tortious conveyance, as feoffment or fine, which did not bar the entail. Deforcement was considered to include the other four terms, and any holding over after the determination of an estate, or other wrongful withholding of the freehold from the right owner (see 1 Real Prop. Rep. 494; 3 Bl. Comm. 167—173). When a party entered by colour of a void grant, he was a disseisor (Buckler's Case, 2 Rep. 55 b; Cro. Eliz. 451; Cro. Car. 306, 388; Litt. Rep. 298, 373; Cro. Jac. 660; 1 Jones, 316). But where a grant was according to the rules of law, but required to be perfected by a subsequent ceremony, as if a feoffee entered before livery of seisin, he was not a disseisor (2 Rep. 55). Wherever there was a disseisin, the possession of the disseisor was considered adverse, and the party was bound to pursue his remedy within twenty years from the act constituting the disseisin (Butl. Co. Litt. 330 b, n). There might be an unlawful possession which did not amount to a disseisin (Doe v. Gregory, 9 Ad. & Ell. 14; 4 Nev. & M. 308; see 2 M. & W. 904). As to disseisin, see Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 108; Doe v. Lynes, 3 B. & C. 388; Williams v. Thomas, 12 East, 141; Roscoe on Real Actions, 61—63; 2 Prest. Abst. 284 et seq. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

At the passing of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the question whether possession was or was not adverse, was to be decided by inquiry whether the circumstances of that possession were sufficient to evince its incompatibility with a freehold in the claimant (note to Nepean v. Doe, 2 Smith's L. C.; see Des Barres v. Shey, 22 W. R. 273). If they were, the claimant's interest was reduced to a right of entry; and the Lim. Act, 1623, applied so as to bar such interest in twenty years, the possession being considered adverse. If they were not the Act did not apply, the possession being considered as non-adverse. Question of adverse possession before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.

The possession of a lessee could not be adverse (1 Wils. 176; 3 Wils. 521; Roe v. Ferrars, 2 Bos. & P. 542; 2 D. & R. 38), until the end of the tenancy (Fishar v. Prosser, Cowp. 218). So in the case of a husband of a tenant for life holding on after her death (Doe v. Gregory, 4 Nev. & M. 308; see Doe v. Blakeway, 5 C. & P. 563). Joint possession with the real owner was held not adverse (Reading v. Rawsterne, 2 Ld. Raym. 829; 1 Salk. 242).

Possession was not adverse in some cases if there was a possible explanation consistent with the plaintiff's title; as when possession might have been, under a custom, for a husband to hold for life his deceased wife's copyhold (Doe v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583); or might have been in respect of dower (Doe v. Haslewood, 6 Ad. & Ell. 167; see Doe v. Pettet, 5 B. & Ald. 223; Doe v. Harbrow, 1 Ad. & Ell. 67, n.; Doe v. Langfield, 16 M. & W. 497); or might have been under an agreement for partition by deed, which was never executed (Doe v. Millett, 11 Q. B. 1036). Where a person held land, intended to be but not in fact, conveyed to him on trust, his possession was not adverse while in accordance with the trust (Doe v. Hulse, 3 B. & C. 757). But where copyholds had been granted to A for the lives of herself and B, and in reversion to C for other lives, and A died, having devised to B, who entered and kept possession for more than twenty years, C could not, after B's death, maintain ejectment, as C's right of possession accrued on the death of A, when his interest terminated, inasmuch as there could be no general occupant of copyhold land (Doe v. Scott, 4 B. & C. 706). Possession by a woman was held adverse to her brother, who was entitled as heir (Doe v. Lawley, 13 Q. B. 954). So possession by the mother of the heir was adverse unless it was by his permission (Doe v. Jauncey, 8 C. & P. 99). Where a party was let into possession with the consent of the owner, and did acts importing that he continued in possession only with the owner's permission, such acts prevented the possession being adverse (see Litt. s. 70). So where a person was let into possession under a contract for purchase, and for some years paid interest on the purchase-money, but never completed, his possession was not adverse (Doe v. Edgar, 2 Bing. N. C. 498). A woman, living apart from her husband, obtained a demise of property for a term: possession, if adverse to the wife, was adverse to the husband, and not otherwise (Roe v. Wilkins, 4 Ad. & Ell. 86). The solitary act of entry and attornment, followed by no assertion of right for upwards of thirty years, was no evidence of a possession not being adverse (Doe v. Edwards, 5 Ad. & Ell. 95).

If a cottage was built upon waste in defiance of a lord of a manor, and quiet possession had been had of it for twenty years, it was within the Lim. Act, 1623; but if it were built at Adverse possession before 3 & 4 first by the lord's permission, or any acknowledgment had been since made (though it were 100 years since), that statute would not run against the lord (Doe v. Wilkinson, 3 B. & C. 414; Doe v. Clarke, 8 B. & C. 717; R. v. Cuddington, 2 New Sess. C. 10; 14 L. J. M. C. 182; R. v. Woburn, 10 B. & C. 846). A mere licensee is in this respect on the same footing as a tenant (Doe v. Baytup, 3 Ad. & Ell. 188). As to licence for an encroachment on a common given by a commoner, see Harvey v. Reynolds, 1 C. & P. 141; or by the lord, see Doe v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 332; Doe v. Wilson, 11 East, 56; Doe v. Heakin, 6 Ad. & Ell. 495.

Will. 4, c. 27, in the case of encroachments from waste.

Possessory title before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, if no other title appeared, possession for twenty years was strong presumptive evidence of a fee (Denn v. Barnard, Cowp. 595); and though gained by manifest wrong, and though liable to be defeated by the entry of the rightful owner, was a title as against strangers (Doe v. Webber, 1 Ad. & Ell. 119; Doe v. Parke, 4 Ad. & Ell. 816); and conferred on the possessor, on ouster or trespass by a stranger, the ordinary remedies for such injuries (see 3 Man. & Ry. 112, n.). Where a plaintiff in ejectment proved twenty years' possession immediately preceding possession for ten years by defendant, the former was entitled to recover, his earlier possession prevailing (Doe v. Cooke, 7 Bing. 346; see Stokes v. Berry, 2 Salk. 421). Possession of land for any term less than twenty years by a feoffee was not presumptive evidence of livery of seisin (Doe v. Cleveland, 9 B. & C. 864; Doe v. Davies, 2 M. & W. 503).

Non-claim on fines.

4 Hen. 7, c. 24.

By stat. 4 Hen. 7, c. 24, a fine with proclamations was made a bar to all persons if they did not claim within five years after the proclamations made, or after their rights of entry accrued, or after the removal of their disabilities (see Davies v. Lowndes, 5 Bing. N. C. 177, 178; Runcorn v. Doe, 5 B. & C. 701; Doe v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 271; Doe v. Gregory, 2 Ad. & Ell. 14). For the case of married women, see Doe v. Pett, 11 Ad. & Ell. 853; Doe v. Plumtre, 3 B. & Ald. 474. It seems that the adverse possession necessary to make a fine with proclamations operate by way of bar, was the same as the adverse possession necessary for the purpose of barring a right of entry (note to Nepean v. Doe, 2 Smith's L. C. 10th ed., 636).

(3) Nature of possession requisite under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2.

Shortly after the passing of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the change in the law was thus described by Lord St. Leonards: "Adverse possession is no longer necessary in the sense in which it was formerly used; mere possession may be and is sufficient under many circumstances to give a title adversely; although perhaps now no better expression than adverse possession can be used, yet it is not adverse in the sense in which that phrase was used before this Act was passed" (Ely v. Bliss, 2 D. M. & G. 476, 477; see Nepean v. Doe, 2 M. & W. 911; Culley v. Doe, 11 Ad. & Ell. 1008; Doe v. Barton, 3 P. & Dav. 198; Jack v. Walsh, 4 Ir. L. R. 254). It has been said that under the present statute all possession is adverse. Thus at the end of the statutory period the possession of a tenant from year to year who pays no rent becomes adverse during the whole time. The landlord retains no right to recover any rent (Re Jolly, Gathercole v. Norfolk, [1900] 2 Ch. 619).

Some of the principles, however, laid down in the old cases on adverse possession have been acted on in cases since this Act (see Scott v. Scott, 4 H. L. C. 1085). Thus, in Thomas v. Thomas, (2 K. & J. 83), where a father, entering on the estate of his infant children, was held to have been in possession as a bailiff for them, Wood, V.-C., applied the principle (Doe v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583) that possession is never considered adverse if it can be referred to a lawful title (see Wall v. Stanwick, 34 Ch. D. 763; Re Hobbs, Hobbs v. Wade 36 Ch. D. 553; Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9). Where a purchaser entered into possession of land, an undivided share in which was vested in a trustee for an infant who did not join in the conveyance, the purchaser, having notice of the infant's rights, was treated as a bailiff for the infant (Young v. Harris, 65 L. T. 45; see Quinton v. Frith, 2 Ir. Eq. 396; Allen v. Sayer, 2 Vernon, 368; M'Mahon v. Hastings, [1913] 1 I. R. 395). Secus where a stranger entered who had no notice (Lambert v. Browne, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 218). Where a father seised of land made a will invalid as to real estate whereby he appointed his brother, to whom he was indebted, executor, and died leaving two infant daughters, and the uncle entered upon the land and paid interest on a mortgage, and laid out sums on improvements, his possession was not adverse to his nieces (Pelly v. Bascombe, 4 Giff. 394; 13 W. R. 306). As to a person entering on an infant's land being a bailiff for him, see Crowther v. Crowther, 23 Beav. 305; Howard v. Shrewsbury, 17 Eq. 398; even after the infant has attained his majority, Tinker v. Rodwell, 69 L. T. 591. But as against children who had attained majority and left the land time was held to run (Re Maguire, [1907] 1 I. R. 383, distinguished in Rice v. Begley, [1920], 1 I. R. 243). See, further, the note on account of rents in equity, post, p. 234. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

Possession obtained by a person as trustee cannot be set up as adverse to the cestui que trust (Stone v. Godfrey, 5 D. M. & G. 76). Before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the possession of a cestui que trust was not at law adverse to the title of the trustee (Smith v. King, 16 East, 283); and the same has been held since the Act (Drummond v. Sant, L. R. 6 Q. B. 763; see Warren v. Murray, [1894] 2 Q. B. 648). It was said that in the case of a mortgagee the doctrine of adverse possession had been revived by the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837 (Doe v. Eyre, 17 Q. B. 366). The occupation of a school by a schoolmaster for more than the statutory period did not give him an adverse right against the owner; for his occupation was the occupation of the owner, he being in the situation of a servant (Moore v. Doherty, 5 Ir. L. R. 449, see Ellis v. Crawford, 5 Ir. L. R. 404; Montmorency v. Walsh, 4 Ir. L. R. 254; Gibson v. Wise, 35 W. R. 409). Charitable trustees, however, acquired title by possession under a void grant, although one of their number was the person entitled to dispute the grant (Churcher v. Martin, 42 Ch. D. 312; see Re Lacey, [1899] 2 Ch. 149). As to the result where possession of leaseholds was taken by the next-of-kin of a deceased leaseholder, see M'Cormack v. Courtney, [1895] 2 Ir. 97; Rankin v. McMurtry, 24 L. R. Ir. 297; Coyle v. McFadden, [1901] 1 I. R. 298; Smith v. Savage, [1906] 1 I. R. 469; by his representative, Reed v. Fenn, 35 L. J. Ch. 464; Re Lacey, Royal Association v. Kydd, [1899] 2 Ch. 149; and by a stranger, Tichborne v. Weir, 67 L. T. 735; Doe v. Evans, 1 C. B. 717. See further the note as to possession, p. 157, post.

Where a husband was in possession of land which really belonged to his wife but was erroneously supposed to belong to the heir of a deceased person, and he accounted for the rents to such heir, the possession was held to be the possession of the heir (Hounsell v. Dunning, [1902] 1 Ch. 512).

Receipt of rents by agent.

A principal may acquire a possessory title to real estate by receiving the rents through an agent, although that agent is the person really entitled to the estate (Williams v. Pott, 12 Eq. 149). And see as to receipt of rents by an agent, Smith v. Bennett, 30 L. T. 100. An owner in fee who had received rents through an agent died intestate. The agent, who continued to receive, stating at first that he was receiving for the heir, did not dispossess the heir, who subsequently ratified (Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437). Where a solicitor received the rents of a mortgaged property, his possession was that of the client, and time did not run against the client (Ward v. Carttar, 1 Eq. 29).

Encroachments by tenant presumed to be annexed to holding.

If a tenant encroaches on land not originally part of his holding, the presumption is, that the encroachment must be considered as annexed to the holding, unless it clearly appears that the tenant made it for his own benefit (Kingsmill v. Millard, 11 Ex. 318; Doe v. Rees, 6 C. & P. 610). The presumption applied where the encroachment was made with the verbal assent of the landlord (Whitmore v. Humphries, L. R. 7 C. P. 1); and where the land encroached upon did not belong to the landlord (Andrews v. Hailes, 2 E. & B. 349; 22 L. J. Q. B. 409—the presumption in that case applying only as between landlord and tenant). It was said that the presumption only applies where the land encroached upon is waste, and is adjacent to the original holding (Hastings v. Saddler, 79 L. T. 355), and accordingly did not apply where the encroachment was upon enclosed land half a mile distant (ibid.). It applied, however, where the encroachment was separated from the original holding by a small river (Lisburne v. Davies, L. R. 1 C. P. 265), or by a road (Doe v. Jones, 15 M. & W. 580). The presumption may be rebutted (Berney v. Bickmore, 8 L. T. 353), e.g. by acts done at the time (Doe v. Rees, 6 C. & P. 610), or by subsequent acts either of the landlord: e.g. if there be a subsequent grant by the landlord to the tenant of the original holding which does not include the encroachment (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 160), or of the tenant: e.g. if the tenant conveys the encroachment to another person and the conveyance is communicated to the landlord (Kingsmill v. Millard, 11 Ex. 318). The presumption was applied to the case where two adjoining leasehold properties held under the same landlord were settled on different trusts, and the cestui que trust of one property encroached on the other (East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 318). Where a tenant occupied adjoining land belonging to his landlord for twelve years, he was entitled to retain it as part of the holding during the remainder of the term (Tabor v. Godfrey, 64 L. J. Q. B. 245). See, further, as to the above presumption between landlord and tenant, Doe v. Davies, 1 Esp. 461; Brian v. Winwood, 1 Taunt. 208; Doe v. Morris, 2 Bing. N. C. 189; Doe v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 332; Doe v. Murrell, 8 C. & P. 134; and the cases quoted, ante, pp. 56, 152.

The owner of A and B, adjacent closes, demised A to a tenant who built upon B without leave of the landlord. The tenant having occupied both A and B for twenty years, paying rent to the landlord under the demise of A, but not expressly in respect of B, could insist, as against the landlord, on a sufficient possession of B within the statute (Doe v. Massey, 17 Q. B. 373). One who occupies as his own land belonging to another, and afterwards becomes tenant to the latter of land adjacent to the land so occupied, does not thereby change the character of his possession, but can, whilst he remains tenant, acquire as against his landlord a possessory title to the land first occupied (Dixon v. Baty, L. R. 1 Ex. 259; compare Smith v. Stocks, 10 B. & S. 701).

Tenant for life when estopped from disputing his grant or devise.

Where A, who has no title, purports by deed to grant land to B for life with remainder over, and B enters under the deed, and afterwards acquires title by possession against the true owner, B and his privies are estopped as against the remainderman from disputing the validity of the deed (Dalton v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 2 Ch. 86). The same principle applies where B enters under a devise by a testator who had a defective title (Board v. Board, L. R. 9 Q. B. 48; Hawksbee v. Hawksbee, 11 Hare, 230; Calder v. Alexander, 16 T. L. R. 294; compare Asher v. Whitlock, L. R. 1 Q. B. 1; Yem v. Edwards, 1 De G. & J. 598; Molony v. Molony, [1894] 2 I. R. 1). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

The Courts have refused to apply estoppel to the cases where B entered under a devise which was invalid (Re Stringer, 6 Ch. D. 10; Re Anderson, Pegler v. Gillatt, [1905] 2 Ch. 77; Re Tennent's Estate, [1913] 1 I. R. 280); or which did not comprise the particular land (Paine v. Jones, 18 Eq. 320; contra, Anstee v. Nelms, 1 H. & N. 225; 26 L. J. Ex. 5; Kernaghan v. M'Nally, 12 Ir. Ch. Rep. 89). The last case was considered inconsistent with Scott v. Nixon (3 Dr. & W. 388) by the C. A. in Dalton v. Fitzgerald, supra; where see also remarks on Paine v. Jones, supra.

Rights of claimant to take possession.

Every claimant who has such a right of possession as would entitle him to maintain ejectment against a wrongdoer is still competent to take possession, of his own authority, if he can do so without committing a breach of the peace (Taylor v. Cole, 3 T. R. 292; Taunton v. Costar, 7 T. R. 431; R. v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 357; Rogers v. Pitcher, 6 Taunt. 202; Turner v. Meymott, 1 Bing. 158; Co. Litt. 245 b; 1 M. & R. 221, n. (c); 5 Nev. & M. 164; R. v. Newlands, 4 Jurist, 322; Perry v. Fitzhowe, 8 Q. B. 757); but he cannot turn out the wrongdoer with violence (Edwick v. Hawkes, 18 Ch. D. 199). As to damages in case of a forcible entry by the rightful owner, see Beddall v. Maitland, 17 Ch. D. 174.

A landlord cannot lawfully acquire possession by a forcible entry after the expiration of the term (Newton v. Harland, 1 M. & G. 644; Jones v. Foley, [1891] 1 Q. B. 732); even under a licence from the tenant to that effect (Edwick v. Hawkes, 18 Ch. D. 199).

When the right shall be deemed to have first accrued:

3. In the construction of this Act, the right to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued at such time as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say,) when the person claiming such land or rent, or some person through whom he claims, shall, in respect of the estate or interest claimed, have been in possession or in receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent, and shall, while entitled thereto, have been dispossessed, or have discontinued such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time of such dispossession or discontinuance of possession, or at the last time at which any such profits or rent were or was so received (p); and when the person claiming such land or rent shall claim the estate or interest of some deceased person who shall have continued in such possession or receipt in respect of the same estate or interest until the time of his death, and shall have been the last person entitled to such estate or interest who shall have been in such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time of such death (q); and when the person claiming such land or rent shall claim in respect of an estate or interest in possession granted, appointed or otherwise assured by any instrument (other than a will) to him, or some person through whom he claims, by a person being, in respect of the same estate or interest, in the possession or receipt of the profits of the land, or in the receipt of the rent, and no person entitled under such instrument shall have been in such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which the person, claiming as aforesaid, or the person through whom he claims, became entitled to such possession or receipt by virtue of such instrument (r); and when the estate or interest claimed shall have been an estate or interest in reversion or remainder, or other future estate or interest, and no person shall have obtained the possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or the receipt of such rent in respect of such estate or interest, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which such estate or interest became an estate or interest in possession (s); and when the person claiming such land or rent, or the person through whom he claims, shall have become entitled by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued when such forfeiture was incurred, or such condition was broken (t).

(1) Dispossession and discontinuance of possession of land.

(p) The first branch of sect. 3 deals with cases of dispossession and discontinuance of possession of land and discontinuance of receipt of rent. Dispossession is where a person comes in and drives out the others from possession: discontinuance of possession is where the person in possession goes out and is followed into possession by the other persons (per Fry, J., Rains v. Buxton, 14 Ch. D. 539). To dispossess a former owner, acts must be done which are inconsistent with his enjoyment of the soil for the purposes for which he intended to use it (Leigh v. Jack, 5 Ex. D. 264, 273). As regards equivocal acts the intention is all-important (Littledale v. Liverpool College, [1900] 1 Ch. 19; Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114). In cases of discontinuance and also of dispossession regard must be had to the nature of the property (Leigh v. Jack, 5 Ex. D. 272; Marshall v. Taylor, [1895] 1 Ch. 645). Small acts are sufficient to show there is no discontinuance (Leigh v. Jack, 5 Ex. D. 272; see Solling v. Broughton, [1893] A. C. 556; Re Vernon, [1901] 1 I. R. 1). There must be both absence of possession by the person who has the right and actual possession by another, whether adverse or not, to be protected, to bring the case within the statute (Smith v. Lloyd, 9 Exch. 562; Kingston v. Kingston, [1897] A. C. 515; M'Donnell v. M'Kinty, 10 Ir. L. R.

514; see Rimington v. Cannon, 12 C. B. 1). And if, before the statutory period has expired, the intruder abandons possession and the possession is vacant, the rightful owner is in the same position in all respects as before the intrusion (Trustees' Co. v. Short, 13 App. Cas. 793; Willis v. Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 554). To bring a case within the statute, possession must be by the person wishing to assert the statute, and not by third persons, or by the custody of the law (Howlin v. Sheppard, 19 W. R. 253). As to possession by a series of independent trespassers, see the note to sect. 34, post, p. 210. And as to the party upon whom the onus lies of proving the commencement of the wrongful possession, see Poole v. Griffith, 15 Ir. C. L. R. 239, 277. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3.

What possession is sufficient.

Where the soil of a road was vested in A, user of the road by the public on foot was held sufficient enjoyment to preserve A's title to the soil as against acts of ownership committed by B (Reilly v. Thompson, 11 I. R. Ch. 238). From the last-mentioned case it appears that the Irish decision to the contrary effect in Tottenham v. Byrne (12 Ir. C. L. R. 376) was reversed on appeal (11 I. R. C. L. 247). The erection and locking of gates was not alone sufficient to show dispossession (Littledale v. Liverpool College, [1900] 1 Ch. 19). As to possession by the erection of a fence, see Worssam v. Vandenbrande, 17 W. R. 53.

As to acts constituting possession of a ditch, see Searby v. Tottenham Ry. Co., L. R. 5 Eq. 409; Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., 13 Ch. D. 268; Marshall v. Taylor, [1895] 1 Ch. 645, followed in Kynoch v. Rowlands, [1912] 1 Ch. 527. Of a boundary wall, Phillipson v. Gibbon, 6 Ch. 428; Waddington v. Naylor, 60 L. R. 10; e.g. by granting a lease, Van Diemen's Co. v. Table Board, [1906] A. C. 92; or by placing piles on the foreshore (Beaufort v. Aird, 20 T. L. R. 602; Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114). As to possession by overhanging trees, see Lemmon v. Webb, [1895] A. C. 6. Title to the soil of a lane was acquired by letting the grazing (Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 31). Acts of the other party which are relied on as negativing possession may be attributed to an easement (Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., supra; Marshall v. Taylor, supra; see Grose v. West, 7 Taunt. 42; Philpot v. Bath, [1905] W. N. 114). Acts done on part of the land may be evidence of possession of the whole where there is a common character of locality (Jones v. Williams, 2 M. & W. 326; Bristow v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas. 641; Lord Advocate v. Blantyre, 4 App. Cas. 791; Clark v. Elphinstone, 6 App. Cas. 164; Lord Advocate v. Wemyss, [1900] A. A title to an underground cellar may be acquired by possession, of which the owner of the surface is ignorant (Rains v. Buxton, 14 Ch. D. 537). Where a rector built on a piece of land a school, which was placed under a committee of which he was a member, the possession was not such as to give the rector a statutory title to the land as glebe (Gibson v. Wise, 35 W. R. 409; see Churcher v. Martin, 42 Ch. D. 312; and compare the title acquired by churchwardens and overseers as trustees for a parish. Haigh v. West, [1893] 2 Q. B. 31). A stranger may acquire by possession a title to land of a railway company, whether superfluous (Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co., 13 Ch. D. 268) or not superfluous (Bobbett v. S. E. Ry., 9 Q. B. D. 424), and to the surface of land situate vertically over a tunnel used by the company (Midland Ry. Co. v. Wright, [1901] 1 Ch. 738; see Rosenberg v. Cook, 8 Q. B. D. 166). In the last cases the title was acquired not to the surface only, but also usque ad coelum. And a possessory title may be acquired even though the true owner is under a statutory prohibition against letting or selling (Brighton v. Brighton Guardians, 5 C. P. D. 368). No actual possession was acquired of a disused railway (Re Duffy, [1897] 1 I. R. 307).

Possession of mines and minerals:

In order to prove possession in an ejectment for mines, it is not sufficient to show that the plaintiff was lord of the manor (Rich v. Johnson, Str. 1142); or to show a verdict for the plaintiff in trover for lead dug out of a mine (Bull. N.P. 102; Adams on Ejectment, 4th ed., 263). Where title to mines is founded on adverse possession, the title will be limited to the area of which actual possession has been enjoyed (Clegg v. Rowell, [1909] 1 Ch. 678; a case in which the working and possession of mines under a small area did not give a statutory title to the mines under a larger area; Lord Advocate v. Wemyss, [1900] A. C. 68). So where a man has taken possession of one seam of coal and by lapse of time has acquired title, the law will not assume that his possession extends to other seams lying under that seam (Lowmoor Co. v. Stanley Coal Co., 34 L. T. 186). So possession of a portion of minerals did not justify a presumption of possession of the whole (M'Donnell v. M'Kinty, 10 Ir. L. R. 514). On the other hand, constructive possession of a wider area may in some cases be inferred from actual possession of a limited area (see Taylor v. Parry, 1 M. & Gr. 615; Wild v. Holt, 9 M. & W. 675). Thus where a lessor allows his intended lessee to take possession, the latter must be considered as constructively in possession of all which the lessor has bound himself to demise (Davis v. Shepherd, 1 Ch. 415). So a man who had entered and worked two seams of coal was held to have taken possession of seven seams under the same lands (Lowmoor Co. v. Stanley Coal Co., supra). But as a general rule, the inference will only be made where it is necessary to give effect to contractual obligations or to preserve the good faith and honesty of a bargain (Glyn v. Howell, [1909] 1 Ch. 678).

No statutory title arose from the mere wrongful getting of neighbouring coal by a mine owner who worked such neighbouring coal in the bona fide belief that he had a title thereto (Ulleswater Co. v. Hickman, [1907] 1 Ch. 562; Ashton v. Stock, 6 Ch. D. 726); nor from acts of working coal of which the owner of the coal mine was ignorant (Dartmouth v. Spittle, 24 L. T. R. 67; compare Rains v. Buxton, 14 Ch. D. 537).

effect of possession of surface;

When the defendant, being entitled to a right of way over land which adjoined his farm, used for more than twenty years such adjoining land as part of his farm, he acquired by possession of the surface a good title to the subjacent minerals (Seddon v. Smith, 36 L. T. 168). A lessee, under a lease in which mines were not reserved, who was in possession of the surface, was held to be in possession of the mines (Keyse v. Powell, 2 Ell. & Bl. 132). But where an owner in fee conveyed the surface to A. excepting the minerals, and reserving liberty to enter and work, and such right of entering had not been exercised for forty years, but no other person had worked the mines, the owner was not barred (Smith v. Lloyd, 9 where title to surface and minerals is not severed; is severed.

Exch. 562; see M'Donnell v. M'Kinty, 10 Ir. L. R. 514; Seaman v. Vawdrey, 16 Ves. 390). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3.

Lord St. Leonards was of opinion that the expression "in receipt of the profits of any land," is used in the Act, in conjunction with the words "in possession of the land," to denote not the receipt of rent from a tenant, but the receipt of the actual proceeds of the land (R. P. Stat. 47). By sect. 35 (post), the receipt of the rent payable by any tenant from year to year, or other lessee, is, against such lessee or any person claiming under him (but subject to the lease), the receipt of the profits of the land for the purposes of this Act. Compare S. L. Act, 1925, s. 117, sub-s. 1 (xix), post; where "possession" includes receipt of rents and profits. As to receipt of rents by agent, see note, ante, p. 153. "Receipt of profits of land."

The statutory provisions divesting the rights of an owner of a rent who has discontinued the receipt thereof only apply where such owner, while knowing that payment has not been made, omits to enforce his remedies, and may accordingly be held guilty of some neglect or default (Adnam v. Sandwich, 2 Q. B. D. 490). Where accordingly land belonging to A which was subject to a fee farm rent in favour of B was, without B's knowledge, conveyed by A to C; and for sixty years A and his successors paid the rent, B's right as against C to distrain on the land was not barred (ibid.; Irish Commission v. White, [1896] 2 I. R. 410; see Bomford v. Neville, [1904] 1 I. R. 474). A rent-charge is entire and issues out of every portion of the premises charged. Where accordingly an old rent-charge charged on Blackacre and Whiteacre had always been paid by the occupier of Blackacre, and Whiteacre had for more than the statutory period belonged to a separate owner who had never paid the rent, the right to distrain on Whiteacre was not barred (Woodcock v. Titterton, 12 W. R. 865; Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 251; see Laybourn v. Gridley, 61 L. J. Ch. 353; Conolly v. Gorman, [1898] 1 I. R. 20). Discontinuance of receipt of rent: point from which time runs.

Where a party has been in receipt of rent and afterwards discontinues such receipt, the statute fixes the point from which time is to run at the day on which the last payment of rent was made, and such party has not the option of calculating from the time when he discontinued the receipt of rent (Owen v. De Beauvoir, 16 M. & W. 547; 5 Exch. 166; see Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 27). Under R. P. Lim. Acts, a person disseised of rent has only twelve years from the last payment; and so, if an annual rent has been paid on the day on which it became due, and afterwards unjustly withheld, the party aggrieved has only eleven years during which he can bring his action or distrain; for during the first year he has no right of distress or action at all (16 M. & W. 565). The case where judgment has been recovered for arrears is dealt with, Irish Commission v. Junkin, 24 L. R. Ir. 40; Irish Commission v. Ryan, [1900] 2 Ir. L. R. 565.

Where the rents of mines are reserved by means of payment of produce in specie, time will run under the statute from the receipt and not from the sale of such produce by the lessor (Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & Coll. 42; see M'Donnell v. M'Kinty, 10 Ir. L. R. 514).

Where a copyhold tenant had not paid his fine, and the lord seized quousque, time ran against the tenant from the seizure (Walters v. Webb, 5 Ch. 531). The statute did not run against the lord's right to seize quousque until the time at which, after proclamation and notice, the tenant had failed to come in and be admitted (Eccl. Commrs. v. Parr, [1894] 2 Q. B. 420; Beighton v. Beighton, 64 L. J. Ch. 796). As to negligence in exacting fines and quit rents see ante, p. 138. Seizure quousque.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3.

(2) Wrongful possession commencing on death.

(q) The second branch of sect. 3 deals with cases where wrongful possession commenced on the death of a rightful owner. "Thus where A, seised in fee in possession dies either intestate, leaving B his heir, or having devised to B in fee or for a less estate (sed qu., James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 544), and C, a stranger, first obtains possession after the death of A, the time runs against B from A's death, and not from C's entry" (1 Hayes, Conv. 248).

Lord St. Leonards seems to be of opinion that a rent newly created by will (as in James v. Salter, 3 Bing N. C. 544) would fall within this second branch of sect. 3 (R. P. Stat. 22). But this opinion is questioned (Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim., 2nd ed., 308).

A let land to B by parol from year to year, reserving rent payable in March and November. The last payment of rent was in March, 1846: A died in December, 1846; time ran, under sect. 8, from the last payment of rent, and not from A's death, under sect. 3 (Baines v. Lumley, 16 W. R. 674).

(3) Wrongful possession commencing on alienation by rightful owner.

(r) The third branch of sect. 3 deals with cases where wrongful possession commenced on alienation in favour of the claimant by a rightful owner. On the construction of the words "other than a will" in this branch, see James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 544.

It was held in the Common Pleas (differing from Doe v. Phillips, 10 Q. B. 130) that the case of a cestui que trust holding land under a trustee does not fall within this clause (Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 231).

(4) Future interests.

(s) The fourth branch of sect. 3, together with sect. 20, and sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (post, p. 162), which has been substituted for sect. 5 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, deal with future interests. As to these see the note to sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (post, p. 163).

(5) Forfeiture or breach of condition.

(t) The fifth branch of sect. 3 and sect. 4 deal with rights arising on forfeitures and breaches of conditions, as to which see note to sect. 4.

Continuous running of time.

As to the rule that where when once time has commenced to run against the owner of land the running cannot be suspended, see Garner v. Wingrove, [1905] 2 Ch. 233; Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 533; Re Bermingham, 5 Ir. R. Eq. 147, and post, p. 179. The rule as regards this in the case of personal estate is stated in the note to sect. 3 of the Lim. Act, 1623, post.

When forfeiture is not taken by remainderman, he shall have a new right when his estate comes into possession.

4. Provided always, that when any right to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover any land or rent by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition, shall have first accrued in respect of any estate or interest, in reversion or remainder, and the land or rent shall not have been recovered by virtue of such right, the right to make an entry or distress or bring an action to recover such land or rent shall be deemed to have first accrued, in respect of such estate or interest, at the time when the same shall have become an estate or interest in possession, as if no such forfeiture or breach of condition had happened.

(1) Meaning of section.

The fifth branch of sect. 3 lays down a rule as to forfeitures or breaches of condition which was applied in Re Orchard St. Schools (1878), W. N. 211.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4.

Sect. 4 is a proviso upon the fifth branch. So if a lessee for years subject to a condition of re-entry breaks the condition, time runs against the reversioner in respect of his right of re-entry from the breach; but a bar to this right of re-entry will not affect the reversioner's right to enter on the expiration of the term (1 Hayes Conv. 252). The words "forfeiture" and "breach of condition" are to be read in their largest sense, and include forfeitures which give a right to land under a conditional limitation. So where land was limited to A in tail with remainder to B, and there was a name and arms clause providing that in the event of a breach (which happened) A's estate should cease, B's right accrued upon A's death without issue, notwithstanding that more than the statutory period had elapsed since the breach (Astley v. Essex, 18 Eq. 290). Where land was given over to B upon A remarrying and receiving £50, B's right only accrued upon A who had remarried receiving the money (Connolly v. Leahy, [1898] 2 I. R. 344). Sect. 4 preserves the old law under which a remainderman was not bound to enforce a forfeiture, and his right to enter upon the expiration of the particular estate was not affected by his having failed to do so (Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. sen. 278; Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 759; Doe v. Blakeway, 5 Car. & P. 563).

On the question whether notice must be proved of a condition alleged to work a forfeiture, it has been laid down that a person who under a will takes a gift to which a condition is attached cannot plead want of knowledge of the contents of a will as an excuse for not complying with its provisions. A forfeiture will occur whether he has notice or not (Astley v. Essex, 18 Eq. 290; compare Re Lewis; L. v. L., [1904] 2 Ch. 656; Porter v. Fry, 1 Vent. 199; 1 Mod. 86). It was held in early cases that the rule did not apply to a devisee who was the testator's heir and so could have entered under another title; and that in such a case there must have been notice of the condition before there could be a forfeiture (Fraunce's Case, 8 Rep. 89 A; Shepp. Touch. 148; Mallon v. Fitzgerald, 3 Mod. 29; Skin. 125; Doe v. Beauclerk, 11 East, 657; Doe v. Crisp, 8 Ad. & El. 779; Murphy v. Broder, Ir. Rep. 9 Ch. 123). But the rule has been recently applied where the devisee was the heir (Horrigan v. H., [1904] 1 I. R. 271); and see sect. 3 of the Inheritance Act, 1833, post, providing that an heir shall take as devisee.

Clause of re-entry for non-payment of rent.

With regard to express clauses of re-entry for non payment of rent, it is settled that in Ireland a landlord is not barred from recovering rent by non-payment for the statutory period (Cosbie v. Surgrue, 9 Ir. L. R. 17; Parke v. McLoughlin, 1 Ir. C. L. R. 186; Spratt v. Sherlock, 3 Ir. C. L. R. 69; overruling Doe v. Bingham, 3 Ir. L. R. 456). In the case of an English lease containing such a clause, it has been suggested that (so far as the recovery of the land is concerned) a fresh right to re-enter accrues every time a fresh default in payment of rent is made (Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 2nd ed. 338; see Doe v. Bliss, 4 Taunt. 725; Macher v. Foundling Hospital, 1 Ves. & B. 191). As to recovering arrears of rent, see sect. 42, post.

As regards the construction of clauses of forfeiture in leases, it is settled that even where a clause declares the lease shall be void on breach of condition by lessee, the lease is voidable only at the option of the lessor (Davenport v. R., 3 App. Cas. 128). See further the notes to Dumpor's Case, 1 Smith, L. C.

Entry for forfeiture of copyholds.

In the case of copyholds, the fifth branch of sect. 3 applied to forfeitures, and the lord's right of entry was barred where the statutory period had elapsed since the forfeiture (Whitton v. Peacock, 3 M. & K. 325). As regards forfeiture of copyholds generally the rule was that where the lord died before entry or seizure for forfeiture, the reversioner or remainderman could never take advantage of the forfeiture done or committed before their time (Montagu's Case, Cro. Jac. 301; Co. Cop. s. 60; Doe v. Hellier, 3 T. R. 162; see Doe v. Trueman, 1 B. & Ad. 744; Doe v. Bousfield, 6 Q. B. 492); unless the act of forfeiture destroyed the estate (3 T. R. 173). As to seizure quousque, see ante, p. 159; as to fines and quit rents see p. 138; and generally as to the forfeiture of copyholds, see Scriven, 208 et seq., 7th ed., Elton, 223.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4.

[Sect. 5 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been repealed and the following substituted, viz.]

Provision for case of future estates (i).

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, sect. 2.] A right to make any entry or distress, or to bring an action (a) or suit to recover any land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued in respect of an estate or interest in reversion (β) or remainder, or other future estate or interest, at the time at which the same shall have become an estate or interest in possession, by the determination of any estate or estates in respect of which such land shall have been held, or the profits thereof or such rent shall have been received, notwithstanding the person claiming such land (γ) or rent, or some person through whom he claims, shall at any time previously to the creation of the estate or estates which shall have determined, have been in the possession or receipt of the profits of such lands, or in receipt of such rent (k): But if the person last entitled to any particular estate on which any future estate or interest was expectant shall not have been in the possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent, at the time when his interest determined, no such entry or distress shall be made, and no such action or suit shall be brought, by any person becoming entitled in possession to a future estate or interest, but within twelve years next after the time when the right to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit, for the recovery of such land or rent, shall have first accrued to the person whose interest shall have so determined, or within six years next after the time when the estate of the person becoming entitled in possession shall have become vested in possession, whichever of those two periods shall be the longer, and if the right of any such person (l) to make such entry or distress, or to bring any such action or suit, shall have been barred under this Act, no person (m) afterwards claiming to be entitled to the same land or rent in respect of any subsequent estate or interest under any deed, will, or settlement, executed or taking effect after the time when a right to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit, for the recovery of such land or rent, shall have first accrued to the owner of the particular estate whose interest shall have so determined as aforesaid, shall make any such entry or distress, or bring any such action or suit, to recover such land or rent. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 2.

Time limited to six years when person entitled to the particular estate out of possession, &c.

(i) By sect. 9 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, the above section has been substituted for sect. 5 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833; and the case of future estates and interests now depends upon the above section construed together with the fourth branch of sect. 3 and sect. 20 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, ante, p. 156, post, p. 184 (Re Devon Settled Estates, [1896] 2 Ch. 567).

Cases within the fourth branch of sect. 3.

The fourth branch of sect. 3 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, must be read with sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874; as to which see Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 538, quoted below. The words of the fourth branch "or other future estate or interest" were said to comprehend all executory devises (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. M. 554; see Doe v. Liversedge, 11 M. & W. 517, for a "future estate"). Thus where land is limited to A for life with remainder to B, or to A in fee with an executory limitation in the event of A dying under twenty-one to B, and A dies or dies under twenty-one, time runs against B from A's death (1 Hayes Conv. 251). Executory limitations.

Husband and wife.

If husband and wife, being seised in fee in right of the wife, convey to a purchaser by a conveyance not operative to bind her, the wife, if she survives, and if not, her heir, may, on the husband's death, recover the land notwithstanding the purchaser may have been in possession for forty years. The right of the wife in such a case is within the fourth branch of sect. 3 as being a future estate or interest (Jumpsen v. Pitchers, 13 Sim. 327; see Hounsell v. Dunning, [1902] 1 Ch. 512; Price v. Copner, 1 Sim. & Stu. 347). The case would be different if the husband and wife simply discontinued possession (Sugden, R. P. Stat. 83; see also Cannon v. Rimington, 12 C. B. 1).

Mortgagees.

Where a mortgagee had an equitable charge on a contingent reversionary interest in land, time ran against his right to foreclose from the date when the interest fell into possession (Hugill v. Wilkinson, 38 Ch. D. 482; see Re Owen, [1894] 3 Ch. 220; Re Conlan, 29 L. R. Ir. 199; Re Witham, Chadburn v. Wingfield, [1922] 2 Ch. 413). In a case relating to a second mortgage of land the existence of the first mortgage did not make the mortgagor's interest a "future interest" so that time should run against him only from the satisfaction of the first mortgage (Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 537). Even where the first mortgagee took possession (ibid.; but see Re Bermingham, 5 Ir. R. Eq. 147). Johnson v. Brock was approved by the C. A. in Wakefield &c. Bank v. Yates, [1916] 1 Ch. 452. Second mortgagee.

Landlord and tenant.

In the case of leaseholds where a lessee retains possession but pays no rent for the statutory period, the landlord's right to recover the land accrues under the fourth branch of the 3rd section upon the expiration of the term (Doe v. Oxenham, 7 M. & W. 131). Where a trespasser has obtained possession of demised land, the landlord's right accrues upon the expiration of the term; and if a new lease be subsequently granted to the old lessee, this will not, as between the landlord and the trespasser, affect the running of time in any case where possession is not taken under the new lease (Kennedy v. Woods, I. R. 1 C. L. 76; 2 C. L. 436). Where during the term a trespasser has obtained possession of demised land, and the lessee surrenders his lease while time is running in favour of the trespasser (as between him and the lessee), the right to recover the land accrues to the landlord upon the surrender (Eccl. Comrs. v. Rowe, 5 A. C. 741). But where at the date of the surrender, time had run in favour of the trespasser (as between him and the lessee), the right to recover the land did not accrue to the landlord on the surrender, but only on the expiration of the term (Walter v. Yalden, [1902] 2 K. B. 304). Where the same trustee held leases of Blackacre and Whiteacre (adjoining properties) on different trusts, and a person entitled as c. q. t. to possession of Whitacre and by reason of such possession obtained possession of Blackacre, and during such possession the trustee surrendered the lease of Blackacre and obtained a new lease, it was held that the possession in law of Blackacre at the date of the surrender was in the trustee, and that the surrender and new lease being accordingly valid, the landlord's right to recover only accrued on the expiration of the new lease (East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 318). So where during the existence of a sub-lease (under which the sub-lessee was in possession) the head lease was surrendered and a new head lease was granted (which was valid under the 6th section of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730; see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 150, post), the landlord's right to recover the land did not accrue until the expiration of the new head lease (Eccl. Comrs. v. Treemer, [1893] 1 Ch. 166).

Effect of surrenders.

Possession at the time by trespasser.

No possession at the time by trespasser.

Tenant for life and remainderman.

The provision contained in the fourth branch of sect. 3 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was applied where there was a tenancy for life during which time did not run against the remainderman (Gery v. Redman, 1 Q. B. D. 161). So where A, a tenant for life, alienated in fee, time did not run against the remainderman until the death of A (Doe v. Rolfe, 8 Ad. & El. 850; see Scott v. Scott, 4 H. L. C. 1084). In one case the effect of a resettlement was considered, and the owner of a new future estate was held to have the same time for suing as the owner of the old estate (out of which the new future estate had been carved) would himself have had (Doe v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295).

Sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874.

Sect. 5 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been replaced by sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. The language of the former section has been repeated in the part of the latter section (above) which precedes (k), with the addition, however, of the following words in the following places, viz. at (α) "or suit"; at (β) "or remainder or other future estate or interest"; at (γ) "or rent."

Sect. 2 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, deals with the case where the persons interested in the right of action for the recovery of land are more than one; for example, a tenant for life and remainderman. For the purpose of ascertaining in such a case the statutory periods necessary to extinguish the right, the section gives the remainderman or reversioner a separate and distinct right of action. This view is indicated by the marginal note to sect. 5 (repealed), "reversioner to have a new right" (Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 538).

Sect. 5 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was held to apply only to cases where a person other than the reversioner was entitled to the particular estate (Doe v. Mousdale, 16 M. & W. 689, see p. 698). The saving of the section was applied to a term to secure an annuity (Re Bermingham, I. R. 5 Eq. 147).

Proviso in sect. 2.

(k) The proviso which follows here did not occur in R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 5. The reversion in fee expectant on a term of years has been held not to be a "future estate or interest expectant on a particular estate" within the meaning of the proviso (Walter v. Yalden, [1902] 2 K. B. 304). Where A, tenant for life, aliened, and the alienee entered, and seventeen years afterwards A died, and the remainderman brought ejectment more than six but less than twelve years after A's death, the action was not barred. The proviso did not apply, inasmuch as the alienee and not A was held to be "the person last entitled to the particular estate." And under the earlier part of the section the plaintiff had twelve years from A's death (Pedder v. Hunt, 18 Q. B. D. 565). Land was limited to A for life, remainder to B for life, remainder in fee to C, whose estate arose under the exercise of a general power of appointment vested in A by the settlement. Possession by a stranger had barred A's title at his death in 1888. B died in 1891 without having recovered possession. In 1896 it was held that C's title was not then barred, the case falling within the above proviso. The Court declined to hold that sect. 1 of the Act of 1874 barred C as being a person claiming under A, or to hold that the general power of appointment was another "right" of A so as to bring the case within sect. 20 of the Act of 1833 (Re Devon Settled Estates, [1896] 2 Ch. 562). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 2.

(l) This seems to mean the person becoming entitled in possession to a future estate or interest.

(m) This provision seems intended to apply only to persons claiming under the person barred under the earlier part of the section.

The various cases (1) where the owner of an estate in possession grants out of it a particular estate with reversion or remainders following, after time has commenced to run against him; (2) where the owner of an estate in remainder deals with it after time has commenced to run against the first particular estate; and (3) where a tenant for life and remainderman deal with the estate while time is running against the tenant for life, are discussed in relation to these sections in Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 318 et seq.

6. For the purposes of this Act an administrator claiming the estate or interest of the deceased person of whose chattels he shall be appointed administrator, shall be deemed to claim as if there had been no interval of time between the death of such deceased person and the grant of the letters of administration. An administrator to claim as if he had obtained the estate without interval after death of deceased.

(1) Old Rule...165.
(2) Cases on the Section...165.
(3) Distinction between Executor and Administrator and Administrator's Rights...165.

(1) Old rule that time ran from grant of administration.

Under the law before this Act time only ran from the grant of administration. Hence a right to a chattel interest in lands might, notwithstanding adverse possession, have been kept alive to the expiration of the term, however long (see Stanford's Case, Cro. Jac. 61; cited in Cary v. Stephenson, 2 Salk. 421; S. C., Carth. 335; Skinn. 555; 4 Mod. 376; Fairclaim v. Little, cited in 5 B. & Ald. 214). The object of this section was to make time with respect to chattels real run from the time when the right of entry arose (see 1st Real Prop. Rep. p. 48).

(2) Cases on the section.

As regards leaseholds time runs under this section against the administrator from the death of the intestate (Davies v. Williams, 34 Ch. D. 558). As regards freeholds vested in an administrator by the Land Transfer Act, 1897, or the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, it seems that the same rule will apply (L. T. Act, 1897, s. 1, sub-s. 1; s. 2, sub-s. 2; Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 1, sub-s. 1, post). The above section of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, applies to cases arising in respect of charges on land, as well as to cases arising under the earlier part of the Act (Re Bonsor and Smith, 34 Ch. D. 560, n.).

(3) Distinction between administrator and executor.

The distinction between an administrator and an executor is, that an administrator derives his title wholly from the Probate Court, and has none until administration is granted, and the property and rights of the deceased vest in him only upon the grant (Woolley v.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 6.

Clark, 5 B. & Ald. 744; Pratt v. Swain, 8 B. & C. 287). The title of an administrator, however, though it does not exist till the grant, relates back to the time of the death of the intestate (Re Pryse, [1904] P. 305); so as to entitle him to recover against a wrongdoer who has seized or converted the goods of the intestate after his death in an action of trespass or trover (Tharpe v. Stallwood, 5 M. & G. 760; Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 233; Welshman v. Sturgess, 13 Q. B. 522; see Hill v. Curtis, 1 Eq. 100). The grant has the effect of vesting leaseholds in the administrator by relation, so as to enable him to sue for all matters affecting such leaseholds subsequent to the death, and to render him liable to account for rent and profits from the death (R. v. Horsley, 8 East, 410). But this doctrine of relation exists only in cases where the administrator's act is for the benefit of the estate (Morgan v. Thomas, 8 Exch. 302; see Re Watson, 19 Q. B. D. 234). Nor does relation back divest any right legally vested in another between the death and the grant, so as to enable an administrator, who had obtained administration after an execution, issued against the intestate's tenant, to call on the sheriff to pay one year's rent, pursuant to 8 Anne, c. 17 (Waring v. Dewberry, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 223, cited in 1 Str. 97; Fortesc. 360; S. C., Vin. Abr. Executors (Q)).

Where a grant of administration was obtained by suppressing a will containing no appointment of executors and the grant was subsequently revoked, a previous sale of leaseholds by the administratrix was upheld (Boxall v. B., 27 Ch. D. 220). But where the suppressed will appointed an executor, a grant of administration was wholly void and dispositions of the assets by the supposed administrator were treated as void also, with the exception of acts which the administrator was compellable to do (Ellis v. Ellis, [1905] 1 Ch. 613; compare Craster v. Thomas, [1909] 2 Ch. 348, a decision under the Indian Succession Act, 1865; Re West, West v. Roberts, [1909] 2 Ch. 180). But see now s. 37 of Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post.

An executor.

On the other hand an executor derives his title from the will itself, the property vesting in him from the testator's death (Hickman v. Walker, Willes, 27). An executor before probate can do almost anything incident to his office. But if the legal validity of acts done before probate is challenged, probate must be produced (Att.-Gen. v. New York Co., [1898] 1 Q. B. 216; Re Stevens, Cook v. Stevens, [1897] 1 Ch. 429). Probate is only evidence, not the source of an executor's title. Before probate he can even sell property (Sykes v. S., L. R. 5 C. P. 118). He can give a good receipt for money (Re Masonic Co., 32 Ch. D. 374; Re Stevens, supra). He can assign leaseholds (Re Pawley and London Bank, [1900] 1 Ch. 64), and can enter on land demised (R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 298; see Fenton v. Clegg, 9 Ex. 680). The power, rights and duties of representatives in respect of chattels real are further stated in the note to L. T. Act, 1897, s. 2, sub-s. 2 (post).

An executor or administrator is not deemed to be in possession of things immoveable, as leases for years or houses, before entry (Went. Off. Ex. 228, 14th ed.); although a reversion of a term, which the testator granted for part of the term, is in the executor immediately on the testator's death (Trattle v. King, T. Jones, 170).

In the case of a tenant at will, the right shall be deemed to

7. When any person shall be in possession or in receipt of the profits of any land, or in receipt of any rent, as tenant at will, the right of the person entitled subject thereto, or of the person through whom he claims, to make an entry or distress or bring an action to recover such land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued either at the determination of such tenancy, or at the expiration of one year next after the commencement of such tenancy, at which time such tenancy shall be deemed to have determined: provided always, that no mortgagor or cestui que trust shall be deemed to be a tenant at will, within the meaning of this clause, to his mortgagee or trustee.

have accrued at the end of one year.

(2) Proviso as to Mortgagors and cestui que trusts...168.

(1) Tenancies within the section;

This section did not apply to cases where the tenancy at will had been determined before the passing of the Act (Doe v. Page, 5 Q. B. 767, see p. 772; Doe v. Thompson, 6 Ad. & Ell. 721; Doe v. Bold, 11 Q. B. 127). But where the tenancy was subsisting at the passing of the Act, time ran from the expiration of one year after the expiration of the tenancy (Doe v. Moore, 9 Q. B. 555).

Where a bargainee took possession of land included in an indenture of bargain and sale which was not enrolled, this operated to make the bargainee a tenant at will, and time began to run in his favour from the end of the first year (Low Moor Co. v. Stanley Co., 34 L. T. 186). The occupation for twenty-six years by guardians of public offices belonging to a corporation without payment of rent was held to be a tenancy at will, the guardians acquiring a title under this section (Brighton v. Brighton Guardians, 5 C. P. D. 368; compare Kingston v. K., [1897] A. C. 507). Persons were held to occupy as guests of the true owner, not tenants at will within this section (Peakin v. P., [1895] 2 I. R. 359).

A tenancy at will of the waste of a manor was held to be created by a licence from the lord (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 150, 157), even where a yearly rent was reserved (Hodgson v. Hooper, 3 Ell. & Ell. 149; 29 L. J. Q. B. 222); in which last case it was said that each successive payment of rent was a fresh acknowledgment that the land was held by permission of the lord. As to the effect of such a payment consider also sect. 35, post. Where a lessee, with the verbal consent of the lessor, enclosed land adjoining his holding (which land was in fact waste belonging to the lessor as lord of a manor), this did not create such a tenancy as is referred to in sect. 7 (Whitmore v. Humphries, L. R. 7 C. P. 1).

Tenancy determined after expiration of one year;

no new tenancy created;

Where, after the expiration of one year from the commencement of a tenancy at will, the tenancy has been determined, and no new tenancy has been created, time runs not from the determination, but from the expiration of the year (Doe v. Carter, 9 Q. B. 863; Doe v. Turner, 7 M. & W. 226). But where a new tenancy has been created time runs from the determination of such new tenancy, or from the expiration of one year after the commencement thereof, without regard to the original tenancy (Locke v. Matthews, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 753; 11 W. R. 343; Turner v. Doe, 9 M. & W. 643; see Doe v. Rock, 4 M. & Gr. 30; Thorp v. Facey, 35 L. J. C. P. 349).

New tenancies were held to have been created in Locke v. Matthews and Turner v. Doe, supra; and see Jarman v. Hale, [1899] 1 Q. B. 994. Where time has begun to run after the expiration of one year from the commencement of a tenancy at will, the question of a subsequent determination of the original tenancy is only relevant so far as it may be preliminary to the creation of a fresh tenancy at will after the determination of the first, and within the period of limitation (Day v. Day, L. R. 3 P. C. 761; Wimbledon v. Nicol, 10 T. L. R. 247).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7.

Resumption of possession.

Where parish overseers determined a pauper's tenancy at will by turning him out, and he subsequently resumed possession, no new tenancy at will being created, time ran against the overseers from the pauper's subsequent resumption of possession without any regard to the original tenancy (Randal v. Stevens, 2 E. & B. 641). And where B's occupation of the land began by the permission of the owner A, and A from time to time came on the land and gave B directions as to cutting trees and repairs, it was said that every time A came on the land, time commenced afresh to run against him (Allen v. England, 3 F. & F. 49; see Doe v. Groves, 10 Q. B. 486; Woodhouse v. Hooney, [1915] 1 I. R. 296). On the other hand see Lynes v. Snaith, [1899] 1 Q. B. 486, where the landlord entered to do repairs, but it was not shown that the repairs were done against the tenant's will and the result was different.

See, as to the creation and determination of tenancies at will, the notes to Richardson v. Langridge (Tudor, L. C. Conv. 11, 4th ed.); and Clayton v. Blakey (2 Smith, L. C. 124, 10th ed.); Woodfall, 21st ed., 280; Foa, 6th ed., 651.

(2) Proviso as to mortgagors and cestui que trusts.

The proviso as to mortgagors and cestui que trusts was introduced to prevent the title of the mortgagee or trustee from being barred in twenty-one years in those cases in which a mortgagor or c. q. t. in possession was held to be tenant at will to the mortgagee or trustee.

Relation between mortgagee and mortgagor in possession.

The relation between mortgagee and mortgagor in possession is perfectly anomalous and sui generis (Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 183). The mortgagor is only like a tenant at will to the mortgagee, his legal interest being inferior to that of a strict tenant at will (Doug. 22, 282, 283; but see now L. P. Act, 1925, ss. 85 et seq., pp. 676 et seq., post). The mortgagor is not entitled to the growing crops after the will is determined, as in the case of a tenant at will (Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 383; see Coote on Mortgages, 7th ed., 679; Walmesley v. Milne, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 133). "It is now established, that a mortgagor only holds the possession of the land, and receives the rent of it, by the will or permission of the mortgagee, who may by ejectment, without giving notice, recover against him or his tenant. In this respect, the estate of a mortgagor is inferior to that of a tenant at will" (Bird v. Wright, 1 T. R. 378; see 4 Bligh, 97; Partridge v. Bere, 5 B. & Ald. 604; Hitchman v. Walton, 4 M. & W. 415; Doe v. Olley, 12 Ad. & Ell. 481). The legal interest of the mortgagor after default is not more than that of a tenant by sufferance, and he may be treated as such or as a trespasser, at the election of a mortgagee (Doe v. Maisey, 8 B. & C. 767; see Wheeler v. Montefiore, 1 Gale & D. 493). And this is so, even where by the mortgage deed the mortgagor attorned to the mortgagee as tenant at a quarterly rent, which was stated to be done for the purpose of securing the principal and interest, and in contemplation and part discharge thereof (Doe v. Tom, 4 Q. B. 615). A mortgagor may be tenant at will to the mortgagee notwithstanding the reservation of a yearly rent by the mortgage deed (Doe v. Davies, 7 Exch. 89; Doe v. Cox, 11 Q. B. 122; Walker v. Giles, 6 C. B. 662; see the Metropolitan Co. v. Brown, 4 H. & N. 428). The receipt of rent may prevent the mortgagee from treating the mortgagor as a trespasser (Doe v. Hales, 7 Bing. 322). The mere receipt, however, of interest from the mortgagor is not a recognition by the mortgagee that the mortgagor is in lawful possession (Scobie v. Collins, [1895] 1 Q. B. 375; see Doe v. Cadwallader, 2 B. & Ad. 473). In Doe v. Barton (11 Ad. & Ell. 314), Denman, C.J., said, "It is very dangerous to attempt to define the precise relation in which mortgagor and mortgagee stand to each other in any other terms than those very words; but thus much is established by the cases of Partridge v. Bere (5 B. & Ald. 604), and Hitchman v. Walton (4 M. & W. 409), that the mortgagee may treat the mortgagor as being rightfully in possession, and himself as reversioner; so that, as long as he be not treated as a trespasser, his possession is not hostile to, nor inconsistent with, the mortgagee's right." 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7.

A mortgagor in possession may, as against a mortgagee, grant leases in certain cases (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 99, post); and where the mortgagee has not given notice of his intention to take possession or enter into receipt of rents, the mortgagor may sue for rent or possession (ibid., s. 98, post).

See further, as to the relation between a mortgagee and a mortgagor in possession, the note to Keech v. Hall (1 Smith, L. C.), and Tudor, L. C. Conv. 13, 4th ed. Laws of England, vol. 10, p. 375, note.

Where a mortgagor in possession fails to pay principal or interest, the rule of limitation is laid down by R. P. Lim. Act, 1837 (post), read in connection with the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 9 (post). Under these provisions a mortgagee may bring an action to recover the land within twelve years after the last payment of principal or interest.

Meaning of the proviso as to cestui que trusts.

The proviso as to cestui que trusts is equivalent to saying, that the right of entry of a trustee against his cestui que trust shall not be deemed to have first accrued at the expiration of one year next after the commencement of the tenancy; and the exception seems to be introduced in order to prevent the necessity of any active steps being taken by the trustee to preserve his estate from being destroyed, as in the case of an ordinary tenancy at will, by mere lapse of time (Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 231).

Relation between trustee and cestui que trust in possession.

According to the decisions before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the possession of the c. q. t. was not adverse to the trustee, if such possession was consistent with the deed and the object of the trust (Keene v. Deardon, 8 East, 248; Smith v. King, 16 East, 283). And a c. q. t. in possession with the acquiescence of the trustee was treated as his tenant at will (4 Bac. Abr. 198; Smith v. Pierce, 3 Mod. 195; Focus v. Salisbury, Hard. 400; Freeman v. Barnes, 1 Vent. 55, 80; 1 Lev. 270; Pomfret v. Windsor, 2 Ves. sen. 472, 481; Grce v. Rolle, 1 Lord Raymond, 716). In a case since this Act, a c. q. t. let into possession by the trustee became a tenant at will, and while the estate at will remained, time did not run against the trustee (Garrard v. Tuck, supra; see Jones v. Phipps, L. R. 3 Q. B. 567). Again the proviso applied so as to preserve a trustee's estate in a case where a c. q. t. was in possession (East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 318, 334). On the other hand, in Re Cussons, 73 L. J. Ch. 296, the legal estate of a bare trustee holding upon an express trust was held to have been destroyed by the possession of the c. q. t. for twelve years.

As to the question whether the proviso includes implied trusts, the word "express" which occurs in sect. 25 (post) does not occur in the proviso. It was the opinion of Kay, L.J., that the proviso includes implied trusts (Warren v. Murray, [1894] 2 Q. B. 657). And the proviso was extended to an intended lessee who entered and remained in possession under an agreement for lease, no lease being granted (Ibid.; Drummond v. Sant, L. R. 6 Q. B. 763). The contrary opinion has been held by other judges (Doe v. Rock, 4 M. & Gr. 32; Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 618). Thus, where a mortgage was paid off, but no re-conveyance was executed, and the mortgagor remained in possession for thirteen years, it was held that the legal estate in the mortgagee had been extinguished (Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 614). Fry, J., said that the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee no longer subsisted; and further that the mortgagee was not a trustee, and the mortgagor was not a c. q. t. within the proviso (Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 618; see Teevan v. Smith, 20 Ch. D. 730).

The doctrine that a c. q. t. in possession by the acquiescence of the trustee must be regarded as tenant at will, only applies where the c. q. t. is the actual occupant. If he is only allowed to receive the rents of land occupied by a tenant he is merely a bailiff of the trustees. And if the actual occupier holds for the statutory period without paying rent, the trustees lose their title (Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652). Again where some c. q. t. in spite of the trustees and to the exclusion of the other c. q. t. received the whole rents the others were barred (Burroughs v. M'Creight, 1 J. & Lat. 290). So where some beneficiaries held for the statutory period a wrongful possession of the land, the trustees' legal estate was extinguished, and thereby the trusts affecting that estate were also extinguished (Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9).

No person after a tenancy from year to year to have any right but from the end of the first year or last payment of rent.

8. When any person shall be in possession or in receipt of the profits of any land, or in receipt of any rent, as tenant from year to year or other period, without any lease in writing, the right of the person entitled subject thereto, or of the person through whom he claims, to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover such land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued at the determination of the first of such years or other periods, or at the last time when any rent payable in respect of such tenancy shall have been received (which shall last happen)

Cases under this section;

The 8th section applied to tenancies from year to year, created before and existing at the passing of the Act (Doe v. Sumner, 14 M. & W. 39).

lease in writing;

The lease in writing referred to in this section by which a case would be taken out of its operation, must be not merely an instrument which was evidence of the conditions of holding but one passing an interest (Doe v. Gower, 17 Q. B. 599).

payment of rent;

The reservation and receipt of any rent, however small, will create the legal relation of tenancy from year to year for the purposes of the Act (Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 4 App. Cas. 324). The rent may be any service for which distress may be made (sect 1, ante), and accordingly includes cleaning the parish church and ringing the bell (Doe v. Benham, 7 Q. B. 976). Where the tenancy is disputed, the circumstances connected with the annual payments are very important, for if the person paying makes the payment expressly or impliedly on account of something else than rent of land of which he is tenant, that would not be a payment of rent within this section (Att.-Gen. v. Stephens, 6 D. M. & G. 146). Payment of rent within this section may be proved by parol admission (Doe v. Beckett, 4 Q. B. 601).

date from which time runs.

Where after the expiration of twenty years during which no rent had been paid, the tenant within five years before action paid some arrears, time ran under this section from the last payment of rent; and sect. 34 did not extinguish the title of the reversioner (Bunting v. Sargent, 13 Ch. D. 330; see, however, as to this last point, Sanders v. S., 19 Ch. D. 373, and cases quoted post, p. 210).

Where A let land to B by parol from year to year, reserving rent payable in March and November, the last payment of rent was in March, 1846. A died in December of the same year, and B retained possession. Time ran from the last payment of rent, and not from the death of A (Baines v. Lumley, 16 W. R. 674). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8.

Where a tenant from year to year remains in possession without paying rent, on the expiration of the statutory period the right of the landlord is barred not only to the land, but also to any arrears of rent (Re Jolly, Gathercole v. Norfolk, [1900] 2 Ch. 618).

As to the creation and determination of a tenancy from year to year, see Foa, "Landlord and Tenant," 118-19, 666 sq., 6th ed.

9. When any person shall be in possession or in receipt of the profits of any land, or in receipt of any rent (charge), by virtue of a lease in writing, by which a rent amounting to the yearly sum of twenty shillings or upwards shall be reserved, and the rent reserved by such lease shall have been received by some person wrongfully claiming to be entitled to such land or rent (charge) in reversion immediately expectant on the determination of such lease, and no payment in respect of the rent reserved by such lease shall afterwards have been made to the person rightfully entitled thereto, the right of the person entitled to such land or rent (charge), subject to such lease, or of the person through whom he claims to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action after the determination of such lease, shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which the rent reserved by such lease was first so received by the person wrongfully claiming as aforesaid; and no such right shall be deemed to have first accrued upon the determination of such lease to the person rightfully entitled.

Where rent amounting to 20*s.* reserved by a lease in writing shall have been wrongfully received, no right to accrue on the determination of the lease.

(1) Cases under sect. 9...171.
(2) Old Law...172.

(1) Cases under sect. 9.

According to the judgment of Lord Denman, C.J., in Doe v. Angell (9 Q. B. 356), this section is to be read as if the word "charge" in italics had been interposed as above (see Baines v. Lumley, 16 W. R. 675).

Doe v. Angell.

In Doe v. Angell (9 Q. B. 328) there was an adverse receipt of rent which would have barred an action under this section. In that case Lord Denman discussed the meaning of the word "rent" in the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, pointing out that it meant rent-charge in sects. 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8 and 9 (see Baines v. Lumley, 16 W. R. 675).

When time begins to run.

The right to recover land subject to a lease is to be considered under this section as having accrued from the time when the person claiming under a lease pays rent to a party claiming wrongfully in reversion immediately expectant on such lease (Chadwick v. Broadwood, 3 Beav. 316; see Cholmondeley v. Clinton, T. & R. 107). There must be payment to a third party (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 381), and such third party must be properly described as claiming the reversion wrongfully (Sloane v. Flood, 5 Ir. C. L. 75). The true owner is excluded by wrongful receipt of rent; which does not occur where rent is received by a person claiming to receive on behalf of the true owner (Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 460). There was no wrongful claim of the reversion either in the case of a widow who was presumed to have received on behalf of her children the rent of settled land (Shaw v. Keighron, I. R. 3 Eq. 574); or where Blackacre and Whiteacre were leased at one rent, and subsequently Blackacre was sold and conveyed without apportionment of the rent, and the whole rent continued to be paid to the owner of Whiteacre (Laybourn v. Gridley, 61 L. J. Ch. 353). A person claiming without any real title to be entitled to land is a person "wrongfully" claiming within this section, although the claim may be put forward under a mistake, and without improper intention to deprive others of their property (Williams v. Pott, 12 Eq. 149). For the bearing of this section on the case where there is a lease and a sub-lease and the parties claiming under the sub-lease pay their rent directly to the head landlord, see Drew v. Lord Norbury (3 J. & Lat. 306; Hayes v. Woodley, 3 Ir. Ch. R. 142; Twiss v. Noblett, I. R. 4 Eq. 60). As to the effect of a severance of a reversion with no apportionment of rent, see Mitchell v. Mosley, [1914] 1 Ch. 438.

Wrongful receipt of rent within this section.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 9.

(2) Law before the statute.

The rule of law before this statute was, that where there was a subsisting lease, the right of entry was preserved until the determination of the lease although no rent had been received (Orrell v. Maddox, Runn. Eject. App. No. 1). And the adverse receipt of rent for more than twenty years did not deprive the party of such right of entry (Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299; see Bushby v. Dixon, 3 B. & C. 304). But in such a case a bill in equity for discovery was dismissed (Cholmondeley v. Clinton, T. & R. 107). A void lease or an attendant term did not prevent time running (Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 60).

The mere receipt of rent by a stranger was not evidence of adverse possession, even although the stranger made a lease by indenture, reserving rent, unless he made an actual entry (Bull. N. P. 104; 1 Roll. Abr. 659; and see Smith v. Parkhurst, Andr. 324; Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 326). So if a tenant at will made a lease for years, and the lessee entered, though the estate at will did not warrant the lease, it was only a disseisin at election (Blunden v. Baugh, Cro. Car. 302). For where a person gains a possession under a title consistent with that of the person having right, it is but a disseisin at election (see Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 622; 1 Taunt. 599).

The real property commissioners observed, "Where rent is reserved on a lease, we consider it more reasonable that the limitation should run from the time when the rent began to be received by a person claiming adversely, so that there shall not be a new period of limitation from the expiration of the lease. The receipt of rents and profits is equivalent to the occupation of the soil: the person who is in the receipt of them can do nothing more to establish his right, and the person to whom they are demised is virtually dispossessed. Where no rent or only a nominal rent is reserved, very slight negligence can be imputed to the reversioner in merely not requiring a recognition of his title from the tenant, and in such cases, till the expiration of the lease, we think there should not be a commencement of adverse possession to bar the landlord. Any rent less than 20s. a year may for this purpose be considered nominal" (1 Real Prop. Rep. 47).

On disclaimer of the landlord's title, see Woodfall's L. & T. 387 et seq., 16th ed.

A mere entry not to be deemed possession.

10. No person shall be deemed to have been in possession of any land within the meaning of this Act merely by reason of having made an entry thereon.

By the Limitation Act, 1623, it was enacted, that no entry should be made by any man upon lands, unless within twenty years after his right should accrue. By the stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16, s. 14, it was enacted, that no entry upon lands should be of force to satisfy the Limitation Act, 1623, or to avoid a fine levied of lands, unless an action were thereupon commenced within one year after, and prosecuted with effect (see 1 Wms. Saund. 319, n. (1); 10 B. & C. 848).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 10.

Old law.

The section applies to a mere entry, as for the purpose of avoiding a fine, which may be made by stepping on any corner of the land in the night-time and pronouncing a few words, without any attempt or intention or wish to take possession (Randall v. Stevens, 2 E. & B. 652; compare Solling v. Broughton, [1893] A. C. 556, where the entries were made animo possidendi).

Cases on section.

The defendant being in adverse possession of a hut and land, the lord of the manor entered, in the absence of the defendant but in the presence of his family, and said he took possession in his own right, and he caused a stone to be taken from the hut, and a portion of the fence to be removed. These acts were not sufficient to disturb the defendant's possession (Doe v. Combes, 9 C. B. 714). But where the only adverse possession taken by the defendant consisted in the erection of a fence, and the plaintiff entered and wholly destroyed the fence, the defendant's possession was disturbed (Worssam v. Vandenbrande, 17 W. R. 53).

Acts sufficient to interrupt adverse possession.

11. No continual or other claim upon or near any land shall preserve any right of making an entry or distress or of bringing an action.

No right to be preserved by continual claim.

Previously to the enactment in this and the preceding section an actual entry made by one who had a legal right to enter on an estate, or by his agent duly authorised by power of attorney, if made peaceably and repeated once in the space of every year and a day (which was called continual claim), was deemed sufficient to prevent the right of entry from being tolled by a descent cast or discontinuance, or barred by the Statute of Limitations (Litt. ss. 414, 415; Runn. Eject. 51, 52, 2nd ed.; Ad. Eject. 101, 3rd ed.; Ford v. Grey, 1 Salk. 285). Actual entry was sufficient to keep alive the right of a person disseised; but a mere demand, without process or acknowledgment, was not sufficient against the Statute of Limitations (Hodle v. Healey, 1 Ves. & B. 540).

12. When any one or more of several persons entitled to any land or rent as coparceners, joint tenants, or tenants in common, shall have been in possession or receipt of the entirety, or more than his or their undivided share or shares of such land, or of the profits thereof, or of such rent, for his or their own benefit, or for the benefit of any person or persons other than the person or persons entitled to the other share or shares of the same land or rent, such possession or receipt shall not be deemed to have been the possession or receipt of or by such last-mentioned person or persons, or any of them.

Possession of one coparcener, &c., not to be the possession of the others.

(1) Old Law as to Coparceners...174.
(2) Cases under sect. 12...174.
(3) Occupation by Co-owners...174.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12.

By sect. 34 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, p. 622, an undivided share in land is not capable of being created after 1925, except as provided by the S. L. Act, 1925 (see sect. 36 of that Act, post, p. 895), or as provided by sect. 34 of the L. P. Act; and Sched. I., Part 4, of the latter Act (post, p. 804) deals with holdings in undivided shares existing at the end of 1925. The following note relates to the law apart from these enactments.

(1) How coparceners, &c., were affected by old statutes of limitation.

Coparceners, joint tenants, and tenants in common, having a joint possession and occupation of the whole estate, it was a settled rule of law that the possession of any one of them was the possession of the others or other of them, so as to prevent the Statutes of Limitation from affecting them; nor did the bare receipt of all the rents and profits by one operate as an ouster of the other (Co. Litt. 243 b. n. (1), 373 b; Ford v. Grey, 1 Salk. 285; 6 Mod. 44; Br. Coparceners; 1 Moore, 868; Burton's Compendium, 395 et seq; see Doe v. Keen, 7 T. R. 386; Doe v. Pearson, 6 East, 173; O'Sullivan v. M'Swiney, 1 Long. & T. 111; Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. Ex. 42). But the possession of one heir in gavelkind was held not to be that of the other, where he entered with an adverse intent to oust the other (Davenport v. Tyrrel, 1 Bl. R. 675).

(2) Effect of sect. 12.

This section makes the possession of one coparcener, joint tenant, or tenant in common, who has been in possession of the entirety, separate from the time of his coming into possession (Culley v. Doe, 11 Ad. & Ell. 1008; O'Sullivan v. M'Swiney, 1 Long. & T. 118, 119; Doe v. Horrocks, 1 Car. & K. 566). Consequently, the entry of one coparcener cannot have the effect of vesting the possession in the other (Woodroffe v. Doe, 15 M. & W. 792; 2 H. L. C. 833). One coparcener was held barred by the receipt of the whole rents by another coparcener and his widow for more than the statutory period, although an estoppel enabled him to succeed in another right (Weeks v. Birch, 69 L. T. 759). Where there was a parol partition and separate possession for more than twenty years it could not be questioned (Paine v. Ryder, 24 Beav. 151).

Lands were conveyed in trust for five tenants in common. For more than twenty years four had been in the exclusive receipt of the rents, the trustee never having interfered. The title of the fifth was barred; the case not being within the saving of the 25th section (Burroughs v. M'Creight, 1 J. & Lat. 290; Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9). And where a father was in receipt of the whole rents of a property one undivided share of which belonged to an infant child, and another to an adult child, the adult was barred after the statutory period, although, as regards the infant's share, the father was considered as the infant's bailiff (Re Hobbs, H. v. Wade, 36 Ch. D. 553). A presumption that one tenant in common had accounted to his co-tenant for a share of the rents was raised in Saunders v. S. (19 Ch. D. 373). This section applies, not only where one of several joint tenants has been in possession of the entirety of the whole of the lands held jointly, but also where such tenant has been in possession of the entirety of any portion of such lands (Murphy v. M., 11 Ir. C. L. R. 205, where Tidball v. James, 29 L. J. Ex. 91, is explained). The owner of one undivided moiety of land was barred by the sole possession of the owners of the other (Thomas v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 143). Similarly one tenant in common of minerals was barred by the possession of another to the extent to which such possession had been actual (Glyn v. Howell, [1909] 1 Ch. 666).

(3) Occupation by co-owners.

Where two persons were in lawful possession of a copyhold, and the title under which they held came to an end, but they continued in possession for twenty-one years, it was decided that they held on as joint tenants; and inasmuch as they had done nothing to sever their tenancy, the interest of the one who died first determined on his death (Ward v. W., 6 Ch. 789; Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9; see Williams v. W., 2 Ch. 294; Smith v. Savage, [1906] 1 Ir. R. 469).

Where one tenant in common as tenant at sufferance occupied the whole property after the expiration of a lease granted to him by his co-tenant, he was liable for rent to his co-tenant in an action for use and occupation (Leigh v. Dickeson, 15 Q. B. D. 60). In partition actions tenants in common have been charged with an occupation rent (Pascoe v. Swan, 27 Beav. 508; Teasdale v. Sanderson, 33 Beav. 534; Hill v. Hickin, [1897] 2 Ch. 579). In general, however, independently of a lease, mere occupation by one of several tenants in common, if unaccompanied by exclusion, did not make him liable for rent (M'Mahon v. Burchell, 2 Phil. 127; 1 Coop. 457). Nor could an action for money had and received be maintained, the remedy being an action of account under 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 27 (Thomas v. T., 5 Exch. 28; Henderson v. Eason, 2 Phil. 308; 17 Q. B. 701; Shirton v. Richardson, 13 M. & W. 17; Gorley v. G., 1 H. & N. 144; Murray v. Hall, 7 C. B. 441; Birkin v. Smith, [1909] 2 K. B. 120; nor in the absence of ouster could trespass be maintained (Jacobs v. Seward, L. R. 5 H. L. 464). As to the working of minerals by tenants in common, see Job v. Potton, 20 Eq. 84; Hexter v. Pearce, [1900] 1 Ch. 341. Where one tenant in common of a wall excluded the other by means of an obstruction, the remedy was to remove the obstruction (Watson v. Gray, 14 Ch. D. 192).

One tenant in common of a house who spent money in ordinary repairs had no right of action against his co-tenant for contribution (Leigh v. Dickeson, 15 Q. B. D. 60; Johnson v. Wild, 44 Ch. D. 146; and see as to the relation between tenants in common, Kennedy v. De Trafford, [1897] A. C. 180). But on a sale in a partition action the expenses of permanent repairs were borne rateably by tenants in common (Re Jones, Farrington v. Forrester, [1893] 2 Ch. 461; Re Cooke, Lawledge v. Tyndall, [1896] 1 Ch. 923). See now, L. P. Act, 1925, ss. 34—36, and notes, post.

Possession of a younger brother not to be the possession of the heir.

13. When a younger brother or other relation of the person entitled as heir to the possession or receipt of the profits of any land, or to the receipt of any rent, shall enter into the possession or receipt thereof, such possession or receipt shall not be deemed to be the possession or receipt of or by the person entitled as heir.

The effect of this section is illustrated in the judgment of the Court in Jones v. J., 16 M. & W. 712.

Prior state of the law.

If a man, seised of certain lands in fee, had issue two sons, and died seised of such land, and the younger son entered by abatement into the land, the Statute of Limitations did not operate against the elder son (Litt. s. 396; Sharington v. Shrotton, Plowd. 306). So where a sister entered (Page v. Selby, Bull. N. P. 102; 2 Stark. on Ev. 220, 2nd ed.; Co. Litt. 242; Plowd. 298, 306; see Dowdall v. Bryne, Batty's Ir. R. 373).

A was possessed of lands for more than twenty years, and died in 1817. His widow had possession from that time until her death in 1838. B was the eldest son of A and his wife. It was held, that although B could not recover in ejectment as the heir of his father, because more than twenty years had elapsed from the death of his father, yet that the jury might infer that the property belonged to B's mother, and survived to her on the death of his father, and descended to B as heir on her death in 1838 (Doe v. Long, 9 C. & P. 773; see Doe v. Lawley, 13 Q. B. 954).

Acknowledgment in writing given to the person entitled, or his agent, to be equivalent to possession or receipt of rent.

14. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that when any acknowledgment of the title of the person entitled to any land or rent shall have been given to him or his agent, in writing, signed by the person in possession, or in receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent, then such possession or receipt, of or by the person by whom such acknowledgment shall have been given, shall be deemed, according to the meaning of this Act, to have been the possession or receipt of or by the person to whom, or to whose agent such acknowledgment shall have been given at the time of giving the same, and the right of such last-mentioned person, or any person claiming through him, to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued at and not before the time at which such acknowledgment, or the last of such acknowledgments, if more than one, was given.

(1) Different sections as to acknowledgments in the Limitation Acts...176.
(2) Cases under sect. 14...177.

(1) Different sections as to acknowledgments in the statutes of limitation.

The requiring an acknowledgment in writing to take a case out of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was by analogy to the Statute of Frauds Amdt. Act, 1828, adopted in this section, in the 42nd section of this Act, in the 5th section of the Civil Proc. Act, 1833, and in sects. 7 & 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. A difference occurs in the language of these sections. Thus, under the 14th section, the acknowledgment is to be given to the party entitled to land or rent, or his agent, signed by the person in possession. By sect. 7 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, twelve years' possession by a mortgagee will bar the right of redemption, unless an acknowledgment in writing of such right shall have been given to the mortgagor or some person claiming his estate, or to the agent of such mortgagor or person, signed by the mortgagee, or the person claiming through him. By sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, money charged upon land and legacies cannot be recovered after the end of twelve years, unless in the meantime some part of the principal, or some interest thereon, shall have been paid, or some acknowledgment of the right thereto, shall have been given in writing, signed by the person by whom the same shall be payable, or his agent, to the person entitled thereto, or his agent. By the 42nd section, no arrears of rent or interest are to be recovered but within six years after the same shall have become due, or next after an acknowledgment of the same shall have been given to the person entitled thereto, or his agent, signed by the person by whom the same was payable, or his agent. In the four cases above mentioned, therefore, the acknowledgment is binding if given to the party entitled or his agent; but an acknowledgment of title under the 14th section, or of a right to redeem under sect. 7 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, cannot be given by an agent; whilst, in the case of money charges, and of arrears of rent or interest, an acknowledgment by an agent will be effectual. The cases as to acknowledgments under the above-mentioned sections, and under the Statute of Frauds Amdt. Act, 1828, are collected in the subsequent notes. By the 5th section of the Civil Proc. Act, 1833 (limiting the time within which actions on specialties are to be brought), any acknowledgment either by writing signed by the party liable by virtue of a specialty, or his agent, or part payment or part satisfaction on account of any principal or interest due thereon, will take a case out of that Act. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 14.

(2) By whom acknowledgment must be made under sect. 14.

Sect. 14 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, provides that the acknowledgment must be signed by the person in possession; therefore, an acknowledgment signed by an agent will be insufficient (Ley v. Peter, 3 H. & N. 101; 27 L. J. Ex. 234). An unaccepted proposal for a lease made by A, who was unable from illness to write, was evidence of an acknowledgment by A (Dublin v. Judge, 11 Ir. L. R. 9).

To whom.

The acknowledgment must be given to the person entitled or his agent (see Fursden v. Clegg, 10 M. & W. 572; Goode v. Job, 28 L. J. Q. B. 1).

What is an acknowledgment.

Whether a writing amounts to an acknowledgment of title within this section is a question for the judge, and not for the jury to decide (Doe v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295; Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 402; but see Incorp. Soc. v. Richards, 1 D. & War. 290; Sugd. R. P. Stat. 67).

A deed which purported to bear date more than twenty years before action, but which was in fact executed by the defendant within twenty years, and which contained a recital of the plaintiff's title, was a sufficient acknowledgment (Jayne v. Hughes, 10 Exch. 430). A correspondence by a party in possession of property, by which he professed to hold the estates until an account on the foot of charges, to which he was entitled, should be closed, was a sufficient acknowledgment (Incorp. Soc. v. Richards, 1 D. & War. 258). So a proposal to purchase (Johnston v. Smith, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 82). A letter was a sufficient acknowledgment in Fursden v. Clegg, 10 M. & W. 572, but not in Doe v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295. An acknowledgment in an answer sworn to a bill in Chancery filed by the plaintiff in reference to the same property was sufficient (Goode v. Job, 28 L. J. Q. B. 1). The acknowledgment must be in writing; but where the contents of the written document can properly be proved by parol such parol evidence would not be excluded (Haydon v. Williams, 7 Bing. 168; Read v. Price, [1909] 2 K. B. 724).

When time runs after an acknowledgment.

Where a statutory title has accrued by the expiration of the requisite period it cannot be defeated or the extinguished title revived by a subsequent acknowledgment. See note to sect. 34, post.

The moment after an acknowledgment of title, within the meaning of the 14th section, is made, the time begins to run against the person to whom it is made (Burroughs v. M'Creight, 1 J. & L. 304; Scott v. Nixon, 3 D. & War. 404). See, however, Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 381, 2nd ed.

Where possession is not adverse at the time of passing the Act, the right shall not be barred until the end of five years afterwards.

15. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that when no such acknowledgment as aforesaid shall have been given before the passing of this Act, and the possession or receipt of the profits of the land, or the receipt of the rent, shall not at the time of the passing of this Act have been adverse to the right or title of the person claiming to be entitled thereto, then such person, or the person claiming through him, may, notwithstanding the period of twenty years, hereinbefore limited, shall have expired, make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or interest (u), at any time within five years next after the passing of this Act (x).

(u) The word "interest," which is in the Parliament Roll, appears to be a mistake for "rent" (per Lord Denman, C.J., Doe v. Angell, 9 Q. B. 360).

(x) For cases on this section, see Holmes v. Newlands, 11 Ad. & Ell. 44; Culley v. Doe, 11 Ad. & Ell. 1008; O'Sullivan v. M'Sweeny, 2 Ir. L. R. 95, 96; Doe v. Williams, 5 Ad. & Ell. 296; Scott v. Nixon, 3 D. & War. 388; Incorporated Society v. Richards, 1 D. & War. 289; Doe v. Thompson, 5 Ad. & Ell. 532; Ex parte Hasell, 3 Y. & Coll. 617.

3. Savings in Case of Disabilities.

Person under disability of infancy, lunacy, coverture, or beyond seas, and their representatives, to be allowed ten years from the determination of their disability or death.

16. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that if at the time at which the right of any person to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent, shall have first accrued as aforesaid, such person shall have been under any of the disabilities hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say,) infancy, coverture, idiotcy, lunacy, unsoundness of mind, or absence beyond seas, then such person, or the person claiming through him, may, notwithstanding the period of twenty years hereinbefore limited shall have expired, make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or rent, at any time within ten years next after the time at which the person to whom such right shall have first accrued as aforesaid shall have ceased to be under any such disability, or shall have died (which shall have first happened).

[Sect. 16 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been repealed and the following substituted, viz.:]

In cases of infancy, coverture, or lunacy at the time when the right of action accrues, then six years to be allowed from the termination of the disability or previous death.

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 3.] If at the time at which the right of any person to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit, to recover any land or rent, shall have first accrued as aforesaid, such person shall have been under any of the disabilities hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say), infancy, coverture, idiotcy, lunacy, or unsoundness of mind, then such person, or the person claiming through him, may, notwithstanding the period of twelve years, or six years, (as the case may be,) hereinbefore limited shall have expired, make an entry or distress, or bring an action or suit, to recover such land or rent, at any time within six years next after the time at which the person to whom such right shall first have accrued shall have ceased to be under any such disability, or shall have died (whichever of those two events shall have first happened).

[R. P. Lim. Act, s. 4.] The time within which such entry may be made, or any such action or suit may be brought as aforesaid, shall not in any case after the commencement of this Act be extended or enlarged by reason of the absence beyond seas during all or any part of that time of the person having the right to make such entry, or to bring such action or suit, or of any person through whom he claims.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 3.

No time to be allowed for absence beyond seas.

Legislation.

By sect. 9 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, ss. 3 and 4 of the last-mentioned Act have been substituted for sect. 16 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833. And under the same 9th sect. the provisions of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (except the repealed sections, but including the provisions substituted for such repealed sections) are to be construed together with R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. Sect. 3 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, substitutes the period of six years for the period of ten years mentioned in sect. 16 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, and does not provide for absence beyond seas, but in other respects is similar to the last-mentioned section. The disability of absence beyond seas is abolished by sect. 4 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874.

(1) Cases under the above sections...179.
(2) Presumption of death...180.

(1) Cases under the sections.

Sect. 16 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, did not apply to a mortgagor redeeming, such an action not being an action to recover land (Kinsman v. Rouse, 17 Ch. D. 104; see Forster v. Patterson, ibid., 132).

Disability of infancy.

As regards infancy, where an infant's property has been in the possession of his parent, such parent has been treated as a bailiff, and time has not run (Thomas v. T., 2 K. & J. 79; Wall v. Stanwick, 34 Ch. D. 763; Re Hobbs, Hobbs v. Wade, 36 Ch. D. 553). Similarly where an uncle has been in possession (Pelly v. Bascombe, 4 Giff. 390; on appeal, 13 W. R. 306). Where a father remained in possession after the infant attained twenty-one, time did not run against the infant until the father's death (Tinker v. Rodwell, 69 L. T. 591).

Coverture.

As regards coverture. This disability has been abolished in the case of actions falling within M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 1, sub.-s. 2 (see Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. D. 667; Weldon v. Neal, 51 L. T. 289, cases decided under Lim. Act, 1623, s. 7). For cases where such disability depending on the old law was alleged, see Kennedy v. Lyell, 15 Q. B. D. 498; Hounsell v. Dunning, [1902] 1 Ch. 517.

Lunacy.

As regards lunacy, see Fulton v. Creagh, 3 J. & Lat. 329.

Successive disabilities in the same person,

As regards successive disabilities in the same person, it was held under R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 16, that when the person to whom the right to bring an action for the recovery of land accrued was under a disability, and before the removal of that disability the same person fell under another disability, his right to bring an action was preserved until ten years after the removal of the latter disability (Borrows v. Ellison, L. R. 6 Ex. 128; see Supple v. Raymond, 1 Hayes, Ir. Rep. 6; 2 Prest. Abstr. 340; Blansh. Lim. 21, 22). But where time had once begun to run no subsequent disability on the part of the person to whom the right first accrued, or of any one claiming under him, would stop the running of time (see Doe v. Jones, 4 T. R. 310; Sturt v. Mellish, 2 Atk. 610—614; Str. 556; 1 Wils. 134; Cotterell v. Dutton, 4 Taunt. 826; Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 80; decided under Lim. Act, 1623, s. 2, the wording of which was very similar; and see Goodall v. Skerratt, 3 Drew. 216). So where time once begins to run against a tenant in tail, and there is not then any disability on his part, it does not cease to run by reason of subsequent disability on his part or on the part of issue in tail claiming under him (Murray v. Watkin, 62 L. T. 796; Garner v. Wingrove, [1905] 2 Ch. 233). It was also decided under Lim. Act, 1623, s. 2, that where an estate descended to parceners, one of whom was under a disability, the disability of the one did not preserve the title of the other (Doe v. Rowlston, 2 Taunt. 441).

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 3.

For the bearing of the above sections upon the construction of the first branch of sect. 3, see Owen v. De Beauvoir (16 M. & W. 567); De Beauvoir v. Owen (5 Exch. 166).

As to successive disabilities in different persons, see sect. 18, post, p. 183.

(2) Presumption of death where person has not been heard of for seven years:

Where a person has not been heard of for many years, the presumption of the duration of life ceases at the end of seven years, a period which has been fixed from analogy to the Statute of Bigamy (1 Jac. 1, c. 11, s. 2; see now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57; R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168), and the statute concerning leases determinable on lives (19 Car. 2, c. 6). Compare the statutory rule in Scotland (44 & 45 Vict. c. 47). Thus, upon a plea of coverture, where the husband had gone abroad twelve years before, the defendant was called upon to prove that he was alive within the last seven years (Hopewell v. De Pinna, 2 Campb. 113). Where a tenant for life had not been heard of for fourteen years by a person residing on the estate, it was held to be presumptive evidence of his death (Doe v. Deakin, 4 B. & Ald. 433; see 2 Id. 386). It was held, that where no account could be given of a person within the exception of the Lim. Act, 1623, s. 2, he would be presumed to be dead at the expiration of seven years from the last account of him (Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 84). It is now settled that if a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead (Re Phene, 5 Ch. 139; Nepean v. Doe, 2 M. & W. 894; see Re Winstone, [1898] P. 143; Re Hurlston, ibid., 27). The presumption of death, however, does not arise where the other circumstances of the case render it probable that he would not be heard of though alive Watson v. England, 14 Sim. 28; Bowden v. Henderson, 2 Sm. & G. 360; M'Mahon v. M'Elroy, I. R. 5 Eq. 1). Further, in order to raise the presumption, there must have been an inquiry and search made for the man amongst those who if he were alive would be likely to hear of him (Prudential Co. v. Edmonds, 2 App. Cas. 509; Doe v. Andrew, 15 Q. B. 751; Re Creed, 1 Drew, 235). See as to the presumption being made after a less period, Re Matthews, [1898] P. 17.

no presumption as to time of death;

But although, if a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead; at what time within that period he died is not a matter of presumption but of evidence. And the onus of proving that the person survived any particular period within the seven years lies upon those who claim a right, to the establishment of which that fact is essential (Re Phene, 5 Ch. 139, where the cases are collected; see Nepean v. Doe, 2 M. & W. 894; Doe v. Nepean, 5 B. & Ad. 86; R. v. Harbourne, 2 Ad. & Ell. 540; R. v. Twyning, 2 B. & Ald. 386). Where, accordingly, a legatee has not been heard of for seven years, his death will be presumed. The onus of proving that he survived the testator lies upon those who claim under him. In the absence of such proof the legacy will be paid to the residuary legatee, or the next of kin of the testator (Re Lewes, 6 Ch. 356; Re Walker, 7 Ch. 120). See form of order in Re Benjamin, Neville v. Benjamin, [1902] 1 Ch. 726. See also Re Green, 1 Eq. 288, a case of next of kin; and Rhodes v. R., 36 Ch. D. 586, where the Court remained in doubt whether a fund should be paid to the next of kin ascertained at the beginning or the next of kin ascertained at the end of the period. A legatee for life who survived the testator was held (in the absence of contrary evidence) to have died at the date when he was last heard of (Re Aldersey, Gibson v. Hall, [1905] 2 Ch. 181). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 3.

After seven years, having got the fact of death, you have a right to look back and inquire into all the circumstances and ascertain when the man died (Hickman v. Upsall, 4 Ch. D. 149; Re Beasney, 7 Eq. 498; and see the judgment of Lush, J., in R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. 196; R. v. Willshire, 6 Q. B. D. 366).

In Sillick v. Booth (1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 117), the Court concluded that a party died at a particular time within the seven years after he had been last heard of, the particular time being the hurricane months, and the party having sailed from Demerara before the expiration of such hurricane months (see also Webster v. Birchmore, 13 Ves. 362). The Court concluded that a young sailor, who was last seen in the summer of 1840 going to Portsmouth to embark, survived his grandmother, who died in March, 1841 (Re Tindall, 30 Beav. 151). A son, first tenant in tail in remainder, left this country on April 11, 1858, and was never afterwards heard of. His father, tenant for life, died on May 30, 1858. The Court concluded, in 1872, that the son survived the father (Pennefather v. P., I. R. 6 Eq. 171; see Lakin v. L., 34 Beav. 443). Where a testator died in 1829, leaving a will in favour of his children, one of whom went abroad in 1809, and had not been heard of since 1815; both before and after the testator's death unsuccessful attempts to procure information were made, by inquiries and advertisements. He was presumed to have died before the date of the will (Rust v. Baker, 8 Sim. 443). The certificate of a master, stating that a legatee had been abroad twenty-eight years, and not been heard of for twenty-seven years, and his opinion that he died in the lifetime of the testator, was the foundation of a decree (Lee v. Willock, 6 Ves. 606; Reg. lib. 1791, fol. 315; see also 13 Ves. 362). Where a trust was declared by deed in favour of A, A, although he had not been heard of for five years before the date of the deed, was presumed to have been then in existence (Re Corbishley, 14 Ch. D. 846). In some doubtful cases the Court has handed over property on security to refund being given (Dowling v. Winfield, 14 Sim. 277; Cuthbert v. Purrier, 2 Phil. 199; Re Mileham, 15 Beav. 507).

practice in Probate Court;

Before granting probate or administration, the Probate Division requires evidence of the date of the death. And where no direct proof is forthcoming, the practice is to lay the available evidence before the Court on motion, and take its directions. In such cases the rule as to seven years' absence is applied (Re Howe, 1 Sw. & Tr. 54; 27 L. J. Prob. 37); but as a rule advertisements are directed (Re Robertson, [1896] P. 8; see Re Saul, [1896] P. 151). As to the grounds on which the Probate Court will presume the death of parties who embarked in vessels lost at sea or not afterwards heard of, see Re Norris (1 Sw. & T. 6); Re Main (1 Sw. & T. 11); Re Smyth (28 L. J. Prob. 1).

commorientes;

In cases such as that of a testator and his wife being shipwrecked and drowned at sea, one wave sweeping both of them together into the water, after which they were never seen again, the question of survivorship was till 1926 matter of evidence, and not of positive regulation and enactment (varying according to the ages and sex of the persons dying in the same shipwreck), as in the French Code, and in the absence of evidence there was no conclusion of law on the subject (Wing v. Angrave, 8 H. L. C. 183; see, further, Gen.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 3.

Stanwix's Case, Fearne's Post. Works, 38; R. v. D. Hay, 1 Wm. Bl. 640; Swinburn, part 7, s. 33; Wright v. Netherwood, 2 Salk. 593, n.; Hitchcock v. Beardsley, West's Rep. t. Hardwicke, 445; Bradshaw v. Toulmin, 2 Dick. 633; Mason v. M., 1 Mer. 308; Taylor v. Diplock, 2 Phill. Ecc. C. 261; Re Selwyn, 3 Hagg. Ecc. R. 741; Colvin v. King's Proctor, 1 Hagg. Ecc. 92; Re Alston, [1892] P. 142; Re Beynon, [1901] P. 141; Re Good, 24 Times L. R. 493). But as to all deaths in such circumstances on and after January 1, 1926, see sect. 184 of the Law of Property Act, 1925, post, p. 772.

As to reduction into possession in cases of this kind, see Scrutton v. Pattillo (23 W. R. 379); Wollaston v. Berkeley (2 Ch. D. 213).

In establishing a title upon a pedigree, it is sufficient to show that the person has not been heard of for many years, to put the opposite party upon proof that he still exists (Rowe v. Hasland, 1 W. Bl. 404; see Fitz. N. B. 196, A. L.).

Where a man died long ago and there is nothing to show whether he died with issue or without issue, there is no presumption either way (Greaves v. Greenwood, 2 Exch. D. 295). Proof by one of a family, that many years before a younger brother of the person last seised had gone abroad, and that the repute of the family was that he had died there, and that the witness had never heard in the family of his having been married, is prima facie evidence of his death without issue to entitle the next claimant by descent to recover in ejectment (Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293). The Court concluded that a man had died without issue (Rawlinson v. Miller, 1 Ch. D. 52; see Re Pople, 40 Ch. D. 589; Re Hanby, 25 W. R. 427); and without leaving a widow (Re Westbrook (1873), W. N. 167; see Re Benjamin, Neville v. B., [1902] 1 Ch. 726). Letters written from Australia by a son of the testator were held sufficient evidence that the son had predeceased the testator without issue (Re Jackson, J. v. Ward, [1907] 2 Ch. 354).

But no action, &c., shall be brought beyond forty years after the right of action accrued.

17. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that no entry, distress or action shall be made or brought by any person who, at the time at which his right to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover any land or rent shall have first accrued, shall be under any of the disabilities hereinbefore mentioned, or by any person claiming through him, but within forty years next after the time at which such right shall have first accrued, although the person under disability at such time may have remained under one or more of such disabilities during the whole of such forty years, or although the term of ten years, from the time at which he shall have ceased to be under any such disability, or have died, shall not have expired.

[Sect. 17 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been repealed and the following has been substituted, viz.:]

Thirty years utmost allowance for disabilities.

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 5.] No entry, distress, action, or suit shall be made or brought by any person who at the time at which his right to make any entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit, to recover any land or rent, shall have first accrued, shall be under any of the disabilities hereinbefore mentioned, or by any person claiming through him, but within thirty years next after the time at which such right shall have first accrued, although the person under disability at such time may have remained under one or more of such disabilities during the whole of such thirty years, or although the term of six years from the time at which he shall have ceased to be under any such disability, or have died, shall not have expired. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 5.

Legislation.

By sect. 9 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, sect. 5 of the last-mentioned Act has been substituted for sect. 17 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833. And under the same 9th section the provisions of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (except the repealed sections, but including the provisions substituted for such repealed sections), are to be construed together with R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. Sect. 5 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, substituted the respective periods of thirty years and six years for the periods of forty years and ten years mentioned in sect. 17 of R. P. Lim Act, 1833, but in other respects is similar to the last-mentioned section.

Vendor and purchaser.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the period during which a vendor of land on an open contract was bound to show title was sixty years, and sect. 17 of the Act did not alter this rule (Cooper v. Emery, 1 Ph. 388; Moulton v. Edmonds, 1 D. F. & J. 250). By V. and P. Act, 1874, s. 1, the period was forty years, and this was the period required where the title was a possessory one (Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858). But by L. P. Act, 1925, s. 44, post, the period has since January 1, 1926, been thirty years.

Husband and wife.

Where a feme sole seised in fee married, and she and her husband discontinued possession of land, and more than forty years later the wife's heir brought ejectment, the heir was barred by the 17th section (Doe v. Bramston, 3 Ad. & Ell. 63). Compare the case of a conveyance by the husband alone (Jumpsen v. Pitchers, 13 Sim. 327; see Hounsell v. Dunning, [1902] 1 Ch. 512, quoted in note to sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, p. 163).

Lease by a lunatic.

Where a lease was made by a lunatic for lives renewable for ever, the lessee for more than forty years held part of the land, paying the entire reserved rent, and died in possession, being himself the last life in the lease, it was held, that he had not acquired either the fee-simple, subject to a perpetual rent equal to the rent reserved, or a right to a renewal (Fulton v. Creagh, 3 J. & Lat. 329).

As to the application of the section to money paid into Court under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 79, see Ex parte Chamberlain (14 Ch. D. 323).

No further time to be allowed for a succession of disabilities.

18. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that when any person shall be under any of the disabilities hereinbefore mentioned at the time at which his right to make an entry or distress or to bring an action to recover any land or rent shall have first accrued, and shall depart this life without having ceased to be under any such disability, no time to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover such land or rent beyond the said period of twenty years next after the right of such person to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover such land or rent shall have first accrued, or the said period of ten years next after the time at which such person shall have died, shall be allowed by reason of any disability of any other person.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 18.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57.

Since 1878 this section is to be read substituting the periods of twelve years and six years respectively for the periods of twenty years and ten years mentioned in the section (R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 9, post, p. 214).

Sect. 18.

As to how far sect. 18 was retrospective, see Devine v. Holloway, 14 Moore, P. C. C. 290. As to successive disabilities in the same person, see note to sect. 16, ante, p. 179.

Scotland, Ireland, and the adjacent islands not to be deemed beyond seas.

19. No part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nor the Islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney or Sark, nor any islands adjacent to any of them (being part of the dominions of his Majesty), shall be deemed to be beyond seas within the meaning of this Act.

See sect. 16, ante, p. 178, and Mercantile Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 12, post, p. 280; Ex parte Hasell, 3 Y. & Coll. 617; Battersby v. Kirk, 2 Bing. N. C. 603; Lane v. Bennett, 1 M. & W. 70; Ruckmaboye v. Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. C. 4. No time is now allowed for absence beyond seas (R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 4, ante, p. 179).

4. Concurrent Rights.

When the right to an estate in possession is barred, the right of the same person to future estates shall also be barred.

20. When the right of any person to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent to which he may have been entitled for an estate or interest in possession, shall have been barred by the determination of the period hereinbefore limited, which shall be applicable in such case, and such person shall, at any time during the said period, have been entitled to any other estate, interest, right or possibility, in reversion, remainder or otherwise, in or to the same land or rent, no entry, distress or action shall be made or brought by such person, or any person claiming through him, to recover such land or rent, in respect of such other estate, interest, right or possibility, unless in the meantime such land or rent shall have been recovered by some person entitled to an estate, interest or right which shall have been limited or taken effect after or in defeasance of such estate or interest in possession.

Cases on the construction of this section.

This section, so far as applicable to future estates and interests, must be read in connection with the fourth branch of sect. 3 (ante, p. 156) and sect. 2 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (ante, p. 162, where see note).

This section is in derogation of the old maxim, borrowed from the civil law, "quando duo jura concurrunt in unâ personâ equum est ac si essent in diversis" (4 Rep. 118; 7 Rep. 2 b, 14 b; Plowd. 368). Under the Lim. Act, 1623, s. 1, a party might have pursued his right of entry twenty years after it attached, although in the meantime the party might have had a different right, of which he was barred by more than twenty years' adverse enjoyment (Hunt v. Bourne, 1 Salk. 339; 2 Id. 421; 4 Br. P. C. 66). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 20.

Where A was entitled to a leasehold interest in land for lives as heir of B, and to the reversion fee as heir of C, adverse possession during the lease barred his original right of entry, and he had no new right of entry on the determination of the lease (Doe v. Moulsdale, 16 M. & W. 689). A testator devised lands to A, with a gift over to B in case either of two events should happen. Both events having happened, sect. 20 deprived the plaintiff of the benefit of the new right of action which accrued on the happening of the second event (Clarke v. Clarke, I. R. 2 C. L. 395). A general power vested in a tenant for life of appointing the fee in remainder did not fall within the words "other estate, interest, right, or possibility"; so that a barring of the life estate did not affect the claim of the appointee (Re Devon Settled Estates, [1896] 2 Ch. 562). Where a mortgagee was also entitled to a beneficial interest in the equity of redemption which gave no right of entry, the barring of the latter interest did not affect her title as mortgagee (Ludbrook v. L., [1901] 2 K. B. 100). For a case where the final proviso as to a recovery "in the meantime" was applied, see Doe v. Liversedge, 11 M. & W. 517.

The above section deals with the case of the same person being entitled to successive interests in real estate. Where a person was entitled to successive life interests in personal estate, and she sued for a breach of trust as regards the corpus of the estate, it was held, under sect. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888 (post, p. 283), that she could, in respect of her second interest, maintain the action, although an action in respect of the first would have been barred (Mara v. Brown, [1895] 2 Ch. 69, 96).

5. Operation of the Statute in Cases of Estates Tail.

21. When the right of a tenant in tail of any land or rent to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action to recover the same, shall have been barred by reason of the same not having been made or brought within the period hereinbefore limited, which shall be applicable in such case, no such entry, distress or action shall be made or brought by any person claiming any estate, interest or right, which such tenant in tail might lawfully have barred. Where tenant in tail is barred, remainderman whom he might have barred shall not recover.

Land was devised to the father of the plaintiff in tail general. The plaintiff's father received the rents and profits from 1799 to 1807, at which time he was succeeded by a person through whom the defendant claimed. Held, in an action of ejectment brought in 1853, that under this section, since the tenant in tail was barred, the issue in tail were also barred (Austin v. Llewellyn, 9 Exch. 276). An estate tail was limited to A, remainder in tail to B, remainder to C. A dies, then B dies within twenty years, and C becomes entitled in possession, being at the time under disability. Under the 21st and 22nd sections of this Act time commenced running against C. from the death of A; and, having commenced to run, C was not saved from its operation under the 16th section by being under disability (Goodall v. Skerratt, 3 Drew. 216). The 21st section does not apply to the case where the tenant in tail has conveyed away his own right to another and put it out of his Cases under this section.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 21.

power to enter (Cannon, dem., Rimington, ten., 12 C. B. 1, 18). In this last case the estate of a tenant in tail in possession is considered as coming within this section (12 C. B. 34). But it has been said by Bramwell, B., that the sects 21 and 22 refer only to estates in remainder and reversion, the estate of the tenant in tail which descends to his issue being provided for by sect. 2 (Abergavenny v. Brace, L. R. 7 Ex. 149, 173). See further, pp. 148, 149, ante.

Possession adverse to a tenant in tail shall run on against the remainderman whom he might have barred.

22. When a tenant in tail of any land or rent, entitled to recover the same, shall have died before the expiration of the period hereinbefore limited, which shall be applicable in such case, for making an entry or distress, or bringing an action to recover such land or rent, no person claiming any estate, interest or right which such tenant in tail might lawfully have barred shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or rent but within the period during which, if such tenant in tail had so long continued to live, he might have made such entry or distress or brought such action.

Under the Lim. Act, 1623, where an estate was limited to one in tail, with remainder to another in fee, the remainderman might, at any time within twenty years after the failure of the issue in tail, have recovered the estate (Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 60).

R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, sect. 6.

In case of possession under an assurance by a tenant in tail which shall not bar the remainders, they shall be barred at the end of twelve years after that period at which the assurance, if then executed, would have barred them.

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 6.] When a tenant in tail of any land or rent shall have made an assurance thereof which shall not operate to bar the estate or estates to take effect after or in defeasance of his estate tail, and any person shall by virtue of such assurance at the time of the execution thereof, or at any time afterwards, be in possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or in the receipt of such rent, and the same person or any other person whosoever (other than some person entitled to such possession or receipt in respect of an estate which shall have taken effect after or in defeasance of the estate tail) shall continue or be in such possession or receipt for the period of twelve years next after the commencement of the time at which such assurance, if it had then been executed by such tenant in tail, or the person who would have been entitled to his estate tail if such assurance had not been executed, would, without the consent of any other person, have operated to bar such estate or estates as aforesaid, then, at the expiration of such period of twelve years, such assurance shall be, and be deemed to have been, effectual as against any person claiming any estate, interest, or right to take effect after or in defeasance of such estate tail.

Sect. 6 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, has by sect. 9 of the same Act been substituted for sect. 23 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833. Sect. 6 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, fixes the period of limitation at twelve years, but is in other respects substantially similar to sect. 23 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, which has accordingly been omitted. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 6.

As to the law before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, see Doe v. Pike (3 B. & Ad. 742); Woodroffe v. Doe (15 M. & W. 769; 2 H. L. C. 811); Doe v. Woodroffe (10 M. & W. 608). Old law.

The proposition of the R. P. Commrs. was, "That on any alienation by tenant in tail, by an assurance not operating as a complete bar to the estate tail, and all estates, rights and interests limited to take effect on the determination or in derogation of the estate tail, possession under such assurance shall have the same effect in barring the estate tail, and all estates, rights and interests limited to take effect on the determination or in derogation of the estate tail, as if such possession had been adverse to the said estate tail, or to the said estates, rights or interests" (1 Real Prop. Rep. 79, pl. 15; and see ibid., p. 46). Remarks of Real Property Commissioners.

The section applies to cases where (1) a tenant in tail executes a deed enrolled under the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, which, for want of the consent of the protector, operates only to create a base fee, and (2) the tenant in tail subsequently acquires the right to bar without any consent. See sect. 1 of the Fines and Recov. Act, 1833, post, pp. 306, 307; note on statutory base fees. The "possession by virtue of such assurance," mentioned in the section, must be a possession by virtue of an assurance which turns an estate tail into a base fee. And where a conveyance comprised a base fee and also a preceding life estate, time did not commence to run in favour of the possession taken under such conveyance until the determination of the life estate (Mills v. Capel, 20 Eq. 692). In the last-mentioned case, Hall, V.-C., referred to the remark of Sugd. R. P. Stat., 2nd ed. 86, that the 23rd section carried into effect the above proposition of the R. P. Commissioners. It was intended, said the V.-C., to legislate for the case of possession under a base fee. "The assurance referred to is the one made by the tenant in tail. The operation of the clause therefore is not strictly to make time a bar but to make time give a full operation to the assurance executed by the tenant in tail" (Sugd. R. P. Stat. 86).

The object of this section was to give effect to acts of a tenant in tail against remainderman and reversioners, and to give effect to assurances, which, although they were effectual to bar the issue, were ineffectual to bar those entitled in remainder. There are prior clauses in the statute which show what the operation is as to the issue, and those clauses [qu. this clause] seem to be studiously worded so as to be confined only to the case of persons entitled after the expiration of the estate tail (Penny v. Allen, 7 D. M. & G. 426; Morgan v. Morgan, 10 Eq. 99). Cases under the above sections.

As to whether the section extends to fines and recoveries previous to the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, see 1 Hayes' Conv., 5th ed., 264; Sugd. R. P. Stat. 89; and the argument in Anderson v. A. (30 Beav. 207).

6. Limitation of Time as to Suits in Equity.

24. No person claiming any land or rent in equity shall bring any suit to recover the same but within the period during which, by virtue of the provisions hereinbefore con- No suit in equity to be brought after the time

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 24.

tained, he might have made an entry or distress, or brought an action to recover the same respectively, if he had been entitled at law to such estate, interest or right in or to the same as he shall claim therein in equity.

when the plaintiff, if entitled at law, might have brought an action.

Since 1878 the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, has prescribed fresh periods of limitation, which, by the express terms of the Act, were extended to "suits."

How far Courts of equity bound by Statutes of Limitation.

Prior to the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, Courts of equity had acted in obedience to the Statutes of Limitation in the case of legal demands, and by analogy to the rules laid down by those statutes in other cases (Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 629; Smith v. Clay, 3 Bro. C. C. 639, n.; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 156; Baker v. Courage, [1910] 1 K. B. 62). The R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was intended to put an end to the the discretion of Courts of equity where they had acted by analogy to the time limited at law (Berrington v. Evans, 1 Y. & C. 439). But sect. 24 only barred equitable rights so far as they would have been barred if legal (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 360).

Independently of statute, time is a bar in equity to stale demands where there has been improper delay (Harcourt v. White, 28 Beav. 303; Forster v. Thompson, 4 Dr. & War. 318; Coppin v. Gray, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 205; Blair v. Ormond, 1 De G. & Sm. 428). An action to foreclose an equitable mortgage of an advowson in gross (which was not "land" within the statute) where no payment had been made for forty-eight years, was barred by laches (Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519). See further, post, p. 197.

As to the proceedings under the old practice in equity sufficient to prevent the operation of the statute, see Coppin v. Gray (supra); Purcell v. Blennerhassett (3 J. & Lat. 24); and as to amended bills, see Byron v. Cooper (11 Cl. & Fin. 556); Plowden v. Thorpe (7 Cl. & Fin. 164); Blair v. Ormond (1 De G. & Sm. 428); Att.-Gen. v. Hall (11 Price, 760).

Foreclosure actions.

A foreclosure action is an action for the recovery of land within sects. 2 and 24 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, and not an action for the recovery of the mortgage money within sect. 40 (Heath v. Pugh, 6 Q. B. D. 340, 7 App. Cas. 235; Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539; following the opinion of Lord St. Leonards in Wrixon v. Vize, 3 Dr. & War. 104; and R. P. Stat. 121, 2nd ed.; and overruling, on this point, Dearman v. Wyche, 9 Sim. 570; Du Vigier v. Lee, 2 Hare, 326; and Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405). In the case of an equitable charge on a reversionary interest in land, time commences to run against the right to foreclose from the time when the interest falls into possession (Hugill v. Wilkinson, 38 Ch. D. 480; see Re Owen, [1894] 3 Ch. 220; Re Witham, Chadburn v. Wilkinson, [1922] 2 Ch. 413). Where real estate was demised for twenty-one years, the rent for seventeen years being paid in advance, and in the following year mortgaged, the mortgage was held to be of an estate in possession (Wakefield, &c., Bank v. Yates, [1916] 1 Ch. 452).

A redemption action is not an action to recover land (Kinsman v. Rouse, 17 Ch. D. 107).

Title deeds.

A bill by the lord of a manor to recover his title deeds and court rolls was barred by this section (Wells v. Doddington, 2 Coll. C. C. 73).

Partition.

So also the equitable title of a tenant in common suing for partition was barred by this section (Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 158).

Waste.

As to waste, see post, p. 290.

Charities are within the operation of this section (Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 6 H. L. C. 189; see the note to sect. 25, post). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 24.

See further the note as to Courts of equity and the Statutes of Limitation, post, pp. 287 et seq. Charities.

S. L. R. (No. 2) Act, 1890, has repealed formal words which occurred in the following sections of this Act, viz.:—24, 29, 30, 33, 39, 41, 42, and 43, and which have accordingly been omitted in the present edition. Repeal of formal words.

25. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that when any land or rent shall be vested in a trustee upon any express trust, the right of the cestui que trust, or any person claiming through him, to bring a suit against the trustee, or any person claiming through him, to recover such land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued, according to the meaning of this Act, at and not before the time at which such land or rent shall have been conveyed to a purchaser for a valuable consideration, and shall then be deemed to have accrued only as against such purchaser and any person claiming through him. In cases of express trust, the right shall not be deemed to have accrued until a conveyance to a purchaser.

(3) Running of Time between Trustee and c. q. t....190.
(4) Running of Time in case of Charitable Trusts...192.

In the case of proceedings against trustees commenced after January 1, 1890, regard must be had to sects. 1, 8, and 12 of the Trustee Act, 1888, post, p. 283. Trustee Act, 1888.

The following note relates to the law, irrespective of that Act.

(1) Old law.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the rule that trusts are not within the Stat. Lim. would not apply where a claim was made after a long time against a trustee by implication of law arising upon a doubtful equity (Townshend v. T., 1 Cox, 28; 1 Bro. C. C. 550); and where relief would originally have been given upon a constructive trust, it was refused to a party who, after long acquiescence, came into equity to seek relief (Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 97; Ex parte Hasell, 3 Y. & Coll. 622; Bell v. B., 1 Lloyd & G. temp. Plunket, 65; see Bonny v. Ridgard, cited 4 Bro. C. C. 138).

(2) This section applies to express trusts only.

Sect. 25 is confined to express trusts—that is, trusts expressly declared by deed or will or other written instrument. It does not apply to a trust made out by circumstances (Petre v. Petre, 1 Drew. 393; see Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 263; Price v. Phillips, [1894] W. N. 213), or to trusts resulting or trusts by operation of law (Dickenson v. Teasdale, 1 D. J. & S. 59), or to a trust which arises from acts of parties (Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 617). Distinguish the trust raised in the case of a purchase of land and treated as an express trust, Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196; and see the other cases quoted, post, p. 292. "In order to bring a case within the 25th section there must be a trustee in whom the land is vested; there must be an express trust, by which I understand the legislature to mean a trust which arises upon the construction of the written instrument, not upon any inference of law imposing a trust upon the conscience, a trust arising upon the words of the instrument itself. Therefore these three things must concur—there must be land, there must be a trustee of the land, and there must be a cestui que trust for whose benefit in this respect the land is to be held—and all that must be found upon the construction of the instrument" (per Lord Cairns, Cunningham v. Foot, 3 App. Cas. 984).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25.

Who are express trustees;

There was an express trust within this section where a testator devised land upon trust for sale, the proceeds to be considered as part of his personal estate (Mutlow v. Bigg, 18 Eq. 246; reversed, on other grounds, 1 Ch. D. 385), but not where a testator devised lands to his son and his heirs male in the fullest trust and confidence that he would not defeat subsequent limitations (Dawkins v. Penrhyn, 4 App. Cas. 51). Where trustees of a will entered on and administered as part of a testator's estate land of which he was held to die intestate, they were not express trustees within this section (Yardley v. Holland, 20 Eq. 428; see Churcher v. Martin, 42 Ch. D. 312; Re Lacy, Royal Association v. Kydd, [1899] 2 Ch. 149). But an express trust for the benefit of an heir-at-law was held to arise as against trustees in the possession of lands devised by a will which did not declare any trust of the surplus rents (Salter v. Cavanagh, 1 Drury & Walsh, 668). So where the will did not declare trusts of part of the real estate (Patrick v. Simpson, 24 Q. B. D. 129). And where a person acted as trustee of a will containing express trusts of realty, though the estate was not vested in her, she had placed herself in the position of an express trustee (Life Association v. Siddal, 3 D. F. & J. 58). One of several tenants in common who entered into possession of the lands and procured a fee-farm grant to himself was not an express trustee within this section for himself and his co-tenants (Re Dane, I. R. 5 Eq. 498); nor was a purchaser from an executor at an undervalue with notice of the trusts of the will (Pyrah v. Woodcock, 24 L. T. 407; see, as to a purchaser with notice from an express trustee, Young v. Harris, 65 L. T. 47; Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 18 Beav. 223; 6 H. L. C. 189). A c. q. t. of real estate under a will was discharged in 1825 under the Insolvent Act, but omitted the estate from his schedule. In 1831 he became bankrupt, and his assignee in bankruptcy took a conveyance of the legal estate from the trustee, in trust for the creditors under the bankruptcy; held, that the legal estate thereby became vested in the assignee upon an express trust within this section—viz., the trust declared by the will, the benefit of which belonged to the creditors under the insolvency (Sturgis v. Morse, 3 De G. & J. 1). A deed of direction was held to constitute receivers and the trustee of rents of realty express trustees for the benefit of certain annuitants (Knight v. Bowyer, 2 D. G. & J. 421). But a mortgagee was not an express trustee for the mortgagor, even where the mortgage was in the form of a trust for sale (Locking v. Parker, 8 Ch. 30; Re Alison, Johnson v. Mounsey, 11 Ch. D. 284). Where the mortgagee was paid off, see Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 617; Teevan v. Smith, 20 Ch. D. 730. Under sects. 1 & 2 of the L. T. Act, 1897, the legal personal representative is an express trustee of real estate, and the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, does not run in his favour (Toates v. T., [1926] 2 K. B. 30).

land;

(3) Time no bar between c. q. t. and trustee:

where trustee in possession;

In the case of a direct or express trust, as where an estate is conveyed to the use of A and his heirs in trust for B and his heirs, no time, as between the trustee and c. q. t., can bar the equitable right of the latter (Barnard, C. R. 449; Townshend v. T., 1 Bro. C. C. 551). The possession of the trustee is the possession of the c. q. t., and if the only circumstance is that he does not perform his trust, his possession operates nothing as a bar, because his possession is according to his title (Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 633). In the case of a strict trustee, it is his duty to take care of the interest of his c. q. t., and he is not permitted to do anything adverse to it; a tenant also has a duty to preserve the interests of his landlord; and many acts therefore of a trustee and a tenant, which if done by a stranger would be acts of adverse possession, will not be so in them, from its being their duty to abstain from them (Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 190; see Latter v. Dashwood, 6 Sim. 462; Faussett v. Carpenter, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 75). But where any doubt arises as to the existence of a trust, and it is possible to reconcile such enjoyment with the facts of the case, the utmost regard is then to be paid to the length of time during which there has been an enjoyment of the property inconsistent with the supposed trust (Att.-Gen. v. Fishmongers' Co., 5 M. & C. 18). Where estates were devised upon trust to sell and pay debts, and subject thereto for infant children, and the surviving trustee retained possession of one of the estates in satisfacton of debts which he alleged himself to have paid, the testator being insolvent: on a bill for an account and conveyance of the estate forty-five years after the death, inquiries were directed whether the children had notice, whether they had released, and whether the trustee had advanced money to the value of the estate (Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 Jac. & W. 51, where numerous cases on this subject are cited).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25.

Where for more than the statutory period trustees in possession of land paid by mistake the whole rents to a stranger, the right of the actual c. q. t. was not barred (Lister v. Pickford, 34 Beav. 576; see Churcher v. Martin, 42 Ch. D. 312). So where the trustees paid the whole rents to some c. q. t.'s to the exclusion of another, the latter was not barred (Knight v. Bowyer, 2 De G. & J. 421; see Christ's Hospital v. Grainger, 1 Mac. & G. 465). Distinguish the case where, the trustees not acting, some c. q. t.'s received the whole rents to the exclusion of others, and the others were barred (Burroughs v. McCreight, 1 J. & Lat. 290).

For a case where the trustee remained in possession and paid the rents into Court, and a beneficiary mortgaged his share but no principal or interest was paid in respect of the mortgage for twelve years, and the mortgagee was held barred, see Re Hazeldine, [1908] 1 Ch. 34; Re Fox [1913] 2 Ch. 75.

Where the same trustee held leases of Blackacre and Whiteacre (adjoining properties) on different trusts a person who was entitled as c. q. t. to possession of Whiteacre, and by reason of such possession obtained possession of Blackacre, and retained the same for more than the statutory period, was held to be a person claiming through the trustee otherwise than by purchase for value, and time did not run in her favour (East Stonehouse Council v. Willoughby, [1902] 2 K. B. 318, 335).

As to the effect of fines formerly between trustee and c. q. t., see Gilb. Ch. 62; Bell v. B., 1 Ll. & G. temp. Plunket, 59; Earl Pomfret v. Lord Windsor, 2 Ves. sen. 472, 281; Reynolds v. Jones, 2 Sim. & Stu. 206; 1 Sand. on Uses, 3rd ed., 291; 5 Cruise, Dig. 208—213.

where c. q. t. in possession;

The case where the c. q. t. is in possession is dealt with in the note to sect. 7, ante, p. 169.

where stranger in possession time bars both trustee and c. q. t.;

The rule that a trust is not barred by length of time does not apply between a c. q. t. entitled in possession and his trustees on the one side and strangers on the other. Therefore, where a c. q. t. entitled to a present estate and his trustee have been both out of possession for the time limited, the trespasser has a good bar against both (Llewellyn v. Mackworth, Barnard, C. R. 445; 15 Vin. Abr. 125, n. to pl. 1; see Townshend v. Townshend, 1 Br. C. C. 550; Melling v. Leek, 16 C. B. 652; Clay v. Clay, 3 Br. C. C. 639, n.; Hercy v. Ballard, 4 Br. C. C. 469; Harmood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 199; 8 Ves. 106; Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 629). In a colonial case, however, c. q. t.'s entitled in possession could, under a colonial Act, enforce their rights even where their trustees were barred (Williams v. Papworth, [1900] A. C. 563).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25.

The question is more difficult whether a trespasser's possession which bars a trustee also bars a c. q. t., who, if his estate had been legal, would have had further time, as being an infant, or as being only entitled to a future estate. In the case of a c. q. t. entitled to a future estate, a strong opinion was expressed by the L. C. of Ireland that he would be barred by the trustee being barred (Cooper v. Warre, 18 Ir. Jur. 24, 28). A similar opinion was expressed in the case of a c. q. t. under disability (Re Scott, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 323; compare Wych v. E. India Co., 3 P. W. 309). And a c. q. t. who was not himself barred was held barred by the trustee's bar (Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9; see as to the proceeds of sale in that case being land, Kirkland v. Peatfield, [1903] 1 K. B. 759). Lewin seems to think that such a c. q. t. would be barred (12th ed., 1130; and see 51 Sol. J. 155). The contrary view is suggested by Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 420, referring to Scott v. S., 4 H. L. C. 1065; and by Lightwood, Time Limit, 80.

The 25th section renders lapse of time unimportant in all cases within it, that is, between the c. q. t. and his trustee, until the trust is disturbed; and that disturbance can only be effected by such a denial of the trust as takes place when the trustee sells to a third party for valuable consideration the property held in trust (Law v. Bagwell, 4 Dru. & War. 408). In such a case a lapse of the statutory period from the date of the conveyance will bar the c. q. t.; but it seems that if at the date of the conveyance the rights of the c. q. t. are reversionary, or he be under disability, the running of time will be postponed accordingly (Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dru. & War. 489; Att.-Gen v. Magdalen College, 6 H. L. C. 215).

(4) Charities; law before the statute:

Before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, time did not run against charities in a Court of equity, neither were charities bound to the times expressed in the statutes 32 Hen. 8, c. 2, and Lim. Act, 1623 (Duke, 161; Att.-Gen. v. Coventry, 3 Madd. 368; 2 Vern. 399; Att.-Gen. v. Christ's Hospital, 3 M. & K. 344; Att.-Gen. v. Bristol, 2 Jac. & W. 321; Att.-Gen. v. Poulden, 8 Sim. 472; Att.-Gen. v. Smythies, 2 M. & K. 749; Christ's Hospital v. Grainger, 1 Mac. & G. 460; Shelford on Charities, p. 563). At law the old Stat. Lim. operated against all claimants, although they held in trust for charities; but in Chancery, unless in the case of a purchaser for value, they had no operation (43 Eliz. c. 4; Sugd. V. & P. 944, 11th ed.).

The R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, does not contain any saving in favour of charities, and they are within its provisions (Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 4 App. Cas. 324). Where the Attorney-General, having no independent rights of his own, stands only in the same situation as those who are entitled to the benefit of a charity, if they are barred by lapse of time, he is equally barred (Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 18 Beav. 223; 6 H. L. C. 189).

Where a testator charged land in Ireland with a rent-charge as a salary for a schoolmaster, to be appointed by the owner for the time being of the estate on which the rent was charged, time did not run against the gift until a schoolmaster was appointed (Att.-Gen. v. Persse, 2 Dru. & War. 69).

express trusts for charities;

Property given upon express trust for a charity is within sect. 25 (Commrs. of Donations v. Wybrants, 2 J. & Lat. 182). The section barred relief where charity land had not been aliened in fee, but had been held under a lease granted in breach of trust for 500 years at a rent which had been regularly paid (Att.-Gen. v.

Davey, 4 De G. & J. 136; Att.-Gen. v. Payne, 27 Beav. 168; see Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 8 Ch. D. 728). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25.

Length of time would not formerly protect a purchaser with notice of charitable trusts (Att.-Gen. v. Christ's Hospital, 3 M. & K. 344; see Att.-Gen. v. Bristol, 2 Jac. & W. 321; Att.-Gen. v. Poulden, 8 Sim. 472). But time will now, it seems, run in his favour from the conveyance (Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, 6 H. L. C. 189; see Att.-Gen. v. Flint, 4 Hare, 147; Att.-Gen. v. Davis, 18 W. R. 1132). As to the length of time during which an account of rents will be directed in the case of trustees for charities, see the note to sect. 42, post, p. 235. purchasers with notice of charitable trusts.

The principle of sect. 25 has now been extended to personal estate by Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 2, post, p. 291 (see Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 262). Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25 (2).

26. In every case of a concealed fraud the right of any person to bring a suit in equity for the recovery of any land or rent of which he, or any person through whom he claims, may have been deprived by such fraud, shall be deemed to have first accrued at and not before the time at which such fraud shall, or with reasonable diligence, might have been first known or discovered: provided that nothing in this clause contained shall enable any owner of lands or rents to have a suit in equity for the recovery of such lands or rents, or for setting aside any conveyance of such lands or rents, on account of fraud against any bonâ fide purchaser for valuable consideration, who has not assisted in the commission of such fraud, and who at the time that he made the purchase did not know and had no reason to believe that any such fraud had been committed. In cases of fraud, no time shall run whilst the fraud remains concealed.

(1) Cases under Sect. 26...193.
(2) Cases in Equity as to Fraud...195.

(1) Pleading concealed fraud.

Before the Jud. Acts, a case of concealed fraud might have been set up in equity on an ejectment bill (Chetham v. Hoare, 9 Eq. 571); but not on petition (Ex parte Breach, 12 W. R. 769).

Since the Jud. Acts, it has been held that concealed fraud must be pleaded with the utmost particularity (Riddell v. Strathmore, 3 Times Rep. 329; Lawrance v. Norreys, 15 App. Cas. 210). The circumstances alleged must lead to the reasonable inference that fraud was the cause of the deprivation, and exclude other possible causes (Lawrance v. Norreys, supra). On the argument of a demurrer to a bill raising a case of concealed fraud, the Court had then nothing to do with the probability or improbability of the plaintiff's ultimate success at the hearing (Vane v. Vane, 8 Ch. 395). The same point was discussed on an application to strike out under Ord. 25, r. 4 (Boaley v. Holder, 54 L. T. 298). On the whole materials before it, the Court struck out as vexatious a claim raising concealed fraud (Lawrance v. Norreys, 39 Ch. D. 213; 15 App. Cas. 210).

To bring a case within the section there must have been (1) fraud, (2) which must have deprived the claimant or his predecessors in title of the estate, (3) and which was concealed, and (4) which concealment could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered sooner (Willis v. Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 551). What is concealed fraud within this section.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 26.

The fraud must be the fraud of the person setting up the statute, or some person through whom he claims (Re McCallum, M. v. M., [1901] 1 Ch. 143, C. A.; Rigby, L.J., dissentiente; see Thorne v. Heard, [1895] A. C. 495).

Mere ignorance does not prevent the operation of the statute (Dawkins v. Penrhyn, 6 Ch. D. 324). Thus the occupation of an underground cellar without the knowledge of the owner of the surface was not concealed fraud within this section (Rains v. Buxton, 14 Ch. D. 537). The husband of a woman married before 1882 was held not to be guilty of concealed fraud in entering after her death into possession of freeholds of which she could not dispose by will, though he was trustee of her will (Re Coole, [1920] 2 Ch. 536). This section does not mean the case of a party entering wrongfully into possession, but it applies to designed fraud, by which a party, knowing the rightful owner, conceals the circumstances giving the right, and who by means of such concealment is enabled to enter and hold (Petre v. P., 1 Drew. 397; see Dean v. Thwaite, 21 Beav. 621). It points to some contrivance by which the real owner has been not merely deprived, but defrauded; in the sense of being induced to believe that he was not owner, and that the person who so entered was owner and entitled to enter (Willis v. Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 552). Where the grantor never disclosed the deed to the grantees, possibly thinking it non-effective till disclosure, there was no concealed fraud (Re Levesley, 60 S. J. 142; and see Re McCallum, M. v. M., [1901] 1 Ch. 147, 164; compare Le Lievre v. Gould, [1893] 1 Q. B. 500). The word "concealed" seems to indicate that there were facts known to the person who enters, and designedly concealed by him from the real owner, which facts if known would enable the real owner to recover (Willis v. Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 552). As regards concealment, compare Bulli Co. v. Osborne, [1899] A. C. 363, and other decisions (post, p. 258), to the effect that in cases of concealed trespass it is not necessary, for the purpose of avoiding the statute, to show active concealment.

An allegation that, with a view to deprive the true owner of his right, the person in possession conspired with his solicitors to destroy the deeds, was a sufficient allegation of concealed fraud within this section (Lawrance v. Norreys, 39 Ch. D. 224; see 15 App. Cas. 213). As to whether preventing information as to the title from reaching the true owner would amount to concealed fraud, see 39 Ch. D. 228; 15 App. Cas. 215. Bringing up an eldest son in the belief that he was a younger son was concealed fraud within this section (Vane v. V., 8 Ch. 383). So the procuring instruments of conveyance and devise to be executed by a person of unsound mind (Lewis v. Thomas, 3 Hare, 26; as to a conveyance by a lunatic, see Price v. Berrington, 3 Mac. & G. 486). But where lunacy was not proved but only dulness of intellect, the Court refused after eighty years to set aside a compromise of an action to recover land (Manby v. Bewicke, 3 K. & J. 342). The omission from the Schedule of an insolvent of an estate to which he was entitled, was treated in a suit commenced twenty-eight years later as having been a concealed fraud (Sturgis v. Morse, 24 Beav. 541; 2 De G. & J. 1). In another case the Court refused after twenty-two years to assume that there had been any concealment of assets by contributories negotiating a compromise with a liquidator (Watt v. Assets Co., [1905] A. C. 317).

In a case before this statute, fraud relating to a sale, discovered thirty-seven years after conveyance, furnished an answer to the objection of lapse of time. It was said that it is the duty of the Court, when transactions of long standing are brought before it, most anxiously to weigh all the circumstances, and to consider what evidence there may have been, which from lapse of time may be lost. But beyond this, in cases of fraud, time has no effect (Charter v. Trevelyan, 11 Cl. & Fin. 740). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 26.

As to what constitutes reasonable diligence in the discovery of concealed fraud, see Chetham v. Hoare (9 Eq. 571) and the judgment of Malins, V.-C., Vane v. V. (8 Ch. 390, n.); Willis v. Howe (43 L. T. 375). Reasonable diligence.

A purchaser for value is not entitled to the protection of this proviso, if his agent who negotiated the purchase had in the course of the transaction actual knowledge of the fraud, or had reason to believe that a fraud has been committed (Vane v. V., 8 Ch. 383). Proviso as to bona fide purchasers.

(2) Cases in equity as to fraud.

When time bars in cases of fraud.

Though equity will interpose to prevent those mischiefs which would result from persons being allowed at any distance of time to disturb the possession of another; yet as its interference proceeds upon principles of conscience, it will not in any manner protect the abuse of confidence, and therefore no length of time will bar a fraud (1 Fonbl. Eq. 331; Cotterill v. Purchase, Forrest, 61; Alden v. Gregory, 2 Eden, R. 230; Whalley v. Whalley, 1 Mer. 436; S. C., 3 Bligh, 1; as to length of time being no bar in cases of fraud, see also Deloraine v. Browne, 3 Bro. C. C. 633; Smith v. Clay, ibid., 639 n.; Hercy v. Dinwoody, 4 Bro. C. C. 258; 2 Ves. jun. 87; Yate v. Moseley, 5 Ves. 480; Moth v. Atwood, 5 Ves. 845; Purcell v. Macnamara, 14 Ves. 91; Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 87; Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 607, 630; Moore v. Blake, 1 Ball & B. 62; Medlicott v. O'Donnell, ibid., 156; Gould v. Okenden, 4 Br. P. C. 198, Toml. ed.; Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 355; Pickering v. Lord Stamford, 2 Ves. jun. 272; Byrne v. Frere, 2 Molloy, 176; Hatch v. H., 9 Ves. 292). An agreement on settlement of family disputes, where one party had been guilty of gross fraud and concealment of the rights of the other, was set aside after a great length of time (Gordon v. G., 3 Swanst. 400). As to the construction of deeds of compromise, see Cloutte v. Storey, [1911] 1 Ch. 18. As to fraud in the case of levying fines, see Langley v. Fisher (9 Beav. 90).

A Court of equity refused to impeach a transaction on the ground of fraud, where the facts had been within the knowledge of the party many years; but held that every new right of action in equity must be acted on at the utmost within twenty years, except in the case of a trustee whose possession was consistent with the title of the claimant (Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 637; see Redgrave v. Hurd, 20 Ch. D. 13). According to the law before this Act, where a party was constituted a trustee by a Court of equity on the ground of fraud, his possession was adverse, and time ran from the discovery of the fraud (2 Sch. & Lef. 633; 2 Ball & B. 129; Brooksbank v. Smith, 2 Y. & Coll. 58; Blennerhasset v. Day, 2 Ball. & B. 118).

See further the note as to Courts of equity and the Statutes of Limitation, post, pp. 287 et seq.

27. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall be deemed to interfere with any rule or jurisdiction of courts of equity in refusing relief, on the ground of acquiescence or otherwise, to any person whose right to bring a suit may not be barred by virtue of this Act. Saving the jurisdiction of equity on the ground of acquiescence or otherwise.

If a party, having a right, stands by and sees another dealing with the property in a manner inconsistent with that right, and makes no Acquiescence.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 27.

objection while the act is in progress, he cannot afterwards complain. That is the proper sense of the word acquiescence (Leeds v. Amherst, 2 Phil. 123). It may be defined as "quiescence under such circumstances as that assent may be reasonably inferred from it" (De Bussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. D. 314). Every presumption that can be fairly made will be raised against a stale demand. It may arise from the acts of the parties, or the very forbearance to make the demand affords a presumption either that the claimant is conscious it is satisfied, or intended to relinquish it (Pickering v. Stamford, 2 Ves. jun. 280) imports knowledge.

Parties, however, cannot be said to acquiesce in the claims of others unless they are fully cognisant of their right to dispute them (Marker v. M., 9 Hare, 16). And the doctrine does not apply where there is a common mistake (Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Mer. 362); e.g., by executors and a legatee as to the construction of a will (Newton v. Ayscough, 19 Ves. 539; Brooksbank v. Smith, 2 Y. & C. 59; see Knatchbull v. Fearnhead, 3 M. & C. 122).

Acquiescence generally.

Acquiescence for nearly fifty years in a mortgage transaction, liable to have been impeached, was a bar to relief (Hicks v. Cooke, 4 Dow. 17). Long acquiescence by a party acquainted with the facts is a bar to setting aside a lease, upon the ground of fraud or mistake (Selsey v. Rhodes, 1 Bligh, (N.S.) 1). An heir-at-law was not entitled to an issue devisavit vel non after twenty years' acquiescence in his ancestor's will (Tucker v. Sanger, M'Clel. 424; 13 Price, 119). An acquiescence of twenty-three years, with a knowledge of the will, is a bar to a claim by a residuary legatee against an executor for an account, on the ground of neglect or misfeasance (Portlock v. Gardner, 11 L. J. Ch. 313). A wife was bound by the declaration of her husband alone of the uses of a fine levied of her lands after having acquiesced fifteen years from his death (Swanton v. Raven, 3 Atk. 105). Where the shareholders of a canal had acquiesced for forty-seven years in an agreement for letting tolls not warranted by statute they could not impeach such agreement in respect of the public interest (Gray v. Chaplin, 2 Russ. 126). Acquiescence will not be held to have taken place, so long as the circumstances of undue influence on one side, and distress on the other, continue to operate (Purcell v. Macnamara, 14 Ves. 106, 121, 122). A claim by mortgagees to make legatees refund was barred after twenty years by acquiescence (Blake v. Gale, 32 Ch. D. 571).

Acquiescence in breaches of trust.

Length of time, when it does not operate as a statutory bar, operates simply as evidence of acquiescence. A cestui que trust is not less capable of giving assent to a breach of trust when his interest is in reversion than when it is in possession. But where the trust is clear, a breach of trust will not be held to have been sanctioned by the mere knowledge and non-interference on the part of the cestui que trust before his interest has come into possession (Life Association v. Siddal, 3 D. F. & J. 72, 74; see Brown v. Cross, 14 Beav. 105; March v. Russell, 3 M. & C. 31).

Acquiescence imports knowledge, for a man cannot be said to have acquiesced in what he did not know; and in cases involving a breach of trust, acquiescence imports full knowledge. A cestui que trust cannot be bound by acquiescence, unless he has been fully informed (Life Association v. Siddal, supra). A cestui que trust who, knowing that his trustee has committed a breach of trust, obtains from him part only of that to which he is entitled, does not waive his claim to further relief, unless such an intention can be clearly inferred (Re Cross, Harston v. Tenison, 20 Ch. D. 122). In the case of a trustee's purchasing the trust property, the question of acquiescence cannot arise until it is ascertained that the cestui que trust knew that his trustee had become the purchaser (Randall v. Errington, 10 Ves. 427, 428; Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 335). If the cestui que trust joins with the trustees in that which is a breach of trust, knowing the circumstances, such a cestui que trust can never complain of such a breach of trust; and either concurrence in the act, or acquiescence without original concurrence, will release the trustees; but the Court must inquire into the circumstances which induced concurrence or acquiescence (Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64). All c. q. t.'s, who (being of age and under no incapacity) have had full information of the conduct of their trustees, and openly or tacitly acquiesced in it during a considerable time, are held to have adopted such conduct, and precluded themselves from remedy (Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319; Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst. 83, n.; Underwood v. Stevens, 1 Mer. 712; Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 444). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 27.

"Where there is a Statute of Limitations the objection of simple laches does not apply until the expiration of the time allowed by the statute. But acquiescence is a different thing, it means more than laches. If a party who could object lies by, and knowingly permits another to incur an expense in doing an act under a belief that it would not be objected to, and so a kind of permission may be said to be given to another to alter his condition, he may be said to acquiesce: but the fact of simply neglecting to enforce a claim for the period which the law permits delay without losing right, I conceive cannot be any equitable bar" (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 383). A testator bequeathed to his widow a pecuniary legacy and a life annuity. She survived him twenty-eight years. After her death a bill for their recovery, filed by her executrix, was dismissed on the ground of great laches (Pattison v. Hawkesworth, 10 Beav. 375). See Sibbering v. Balcarras (3 De G. & Sm. 737), where the Court refused to entertain a suit for setting aside the sale of a reversionary interest after the lapse of several years; and see Spackman v. Evans, L. R. 3 H. L. 220. An action to foreclose a mortgage of an advowson was barred by laches (Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519). Laches would bar an action for assignment of dower where for twelve years the widow does not claim any right (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 722). Where it would be practically unjust to give a remedy, either because the party has, by his conduct, done that which might fairly be regarded as equivalent to a waiver of it, or where by his conduct and neglect he has, though perhaps not waiving that remedy, yet put the other party in a situation in which it would not be reasonable to place him if the remedy were afterwards to be asserted, in either of these cases, lapse of time and delay are most material. But in every case, if an argument against relief, which otherwise would be just, is founded upon mere delay, that delay of course not amounting to a bar by any Statute of Limitations, the validity of that defence must be tried upon principles substantially equitable. Two circumstances, always important in such cases, are the length of the delay and the nature of the acts done during the interval which might affect either party and cause a balance of justice or injustice in taking the one course or the other, so far as relates to the remedy (Lindsay Petroleum Co., v. Hurd, L. R. 5 P. C. 239; adopted, Allcard v. Skinner, 36 Ch. D. 163). Laches.

In the case of legal right, Courts of equity will not refuse relief on ground of delay, unless sufficient to create statutory bar (Three Towns' Co. v. Maddever, 27 Ch. D. 523; Re Baker, Collins v. Rhodes, 20 Ch. D. 230). So in the case of an injunction to aid a legal right (Fullwood v. F., 9 Ch. D. 176).

7. Limitation of Time between Mortgagor and Mortgagee.

A. As to the Barring of the Rights of Mortgagors.

[Sect. 28 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, has been repealed and the following substituted, viz.:]

Mortgagor to be barred at end of twelve years from the time when the mortgagee took possession or from the last written acknowledgment.

[R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 7.] When a mortgagee shall have obtained the possession or receipt of the profits of any land or the receipt of any rent comprised in his mortgage, the mortgagor, or any person claiming through him, shall not bring any action or suit to redeem the mortgage but within twelve years next after the time at which the mortgagee obtained such possession or receipt, unless in the meantime an acknowledgment in writing of the title of the mortgagor, or of his right to redemption, shall have been given to the mortgagor or some person claiming his estate, or to the agent of such mortgagor or person signed by the mortgagee or the person claiming through him; and in such case no such action or suit shall be brought but within twelve years next after the time at which such acknowledgment, or the last of such acknowledgments, if more than one, was given; and when there shall be more than one mortgagor, or more than one person claiming through the mortgagor or mortgagors, such acknowledgment, if given to any of such mortgagors or persons, or his or their agent, shall be as effectual as if the same had been given to all such mortgagors or persons; but where there shall be more than one mortgagee, or more than one person claiming the estate or interest of the mortgagee or mortgagees, such acknowledgment, signed by one or more of such mortgagees or persons, shall be effectual only as against the party or parties signing as aforesaid, and the person or persons claiming any part of the mortgage money or land or rent by, from, or under him or them, and any person or persons entitled to any estate or estates, interest or interests, to take effect after or in defeasance of his or their estate or estates, interest or interests, and shall not operate to give to the mortgagor or mortgagors a right to redeem the mortgage as against the person or persons entitled to any other undivided or divided part of the money or land or rent; and where such of the mortgagees or persons aforesaid as shall have given such acknowledgment shall be entitled to a divided part of the land or rent comprised in the mortgage, or some estate or interest therein, and not to any ascertained part of the mortgage money, the mortgagor or mortgagors shall be entitled to redeem the same divided part of the land or rent on payment, with interest, of the part of the mortgage money which shall bear the same proportion to the whole of the mortgage money as the value of such divided part of the land or rent shall bear to the value of the whole of the land or rent comprised in the mortgage. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

Sect. 7 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, has, by sect. 9 of the same Act, been substituted for sect. 28 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833. Sect. 7 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, fixes the period of limitation for bringing an action for redemption at twelve years, but in other respects is substantially similar to R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 28, which has accordingly been omitted.

CASES AS TO BARRING MORTGAGOR'S RIGHTS.

(1) Effect of section.

A trust for sale of land by way of security for money lent is a mortgage within the section (Locking v. Parker, 8 Ch. 30). After possession by the mortgagee for the statutory period the mortgagor's rights are barred, not only in the land but also in the purchase-money, whether such money arise under such a trust for sale (Re Alison, Johnson v. Mounsey, 11 Ch. D. 284), or under an ordinary power of sale (Chapman v. Corpe, 41 L. T. 22). Where the trustee under the mortgagor's bankruptcy was barred, the mortgagor was barred also, notwithstanding annulment of the bankruptcy (Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339).

Possession of mortgagee.

A mortgagee in possession of part of the land mortgaged can, under this section, acquire title to such part, although the remaining part is in possession of the mortgagor (Kinsman v. Rouse, 17 Ch. D. 104: the rule before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was different, Rakestraw v. Bruyer, Moseley, 189). Consider the decision where land and personalty were included in the same mortgage, and, the mortgagee having by possession acquired title to the land, it was held that the mortgagor could not redeem the personalty (Charter v. Watson, [1899] 1 Ch. 175).

A husband separated from his wife, becoming mortgagee in possession of her separate estate for twenty years, cannot set up the statute (Booth v. Purser, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 33). A solicitor who pays off a mortgage debt due from a client must be taken to act as the agent of the client, and if he receive the rents of the mortgaged property time will not run against the client (Ward v. Carttar, 1 Eq. 29). Where a mortgagee who had been in possession for six years without making any acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title, purchased the interest of the tenant for life of the equity of redemption, and continued in possession for twenty years longer, such possession was not adverse during the life estate (Hyde v. Dallaway, 2 Hare, 528; Raffety v. King, 1 Keen, 601). A mortgagee of a life interest who entered into possession under an order of the Court and remained in possession did not become a trespasser by the mortgagor's death (Hickman v. Upsall, 2 Ch. D. 617). A second mortgagee was held not to have acquired a title by adverse possession (Thorpe v. Holdsworth, 7 Eq. 139). "I am disposed to think that the statute cannot apply so as to make the mere possession by the mortgagee for twenty years without acknowledgment a bar to redemption, where the original contract is in terms that the mortgagor may redeem at any time during a period extending beyond the twenty years" (per Lord Cranworth, Alderson v. White, 2 De G. & J. 109). A claim for accounts by a second against a first mortgagee was held not to bring the action within the C. L. P. (Ireland) Act, 1853, which makes six years the period of limitation for an action of account (Ocean, &c., Corporation v. Collum, [1913] 1 I. R. 328).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

Where a man by his will creates particular estates and remainders and then mortgages his estate, and the mortgagee enters, the mortgagor and his devisees have only in common a single period to claim, which runs from the entry (Browne v. Bishop of Cork, 1 Dru. & Wal. 700; Sugd. R. P. Stat. 38; see Raffety v. King, 1 Keen, 601). As to redemption of her land by a wife after her husband's death under the old law, see Price v. Copner, 1 Sim. & Stu. 347.

Where possession of mortgaged land was taken and held by the mortgagee for three years before his death, and after his death was retained by the tenant for life of his real and personal estate for a period sufficient to bar the mortgagor, the land devolved as personal, not real estate (Re Loveridge, Drayton v. Loveridge, [1902] 2 Ch. 859. See Re Woodhead, Cadman v. Carr (1884), W. N. 174). But the share which passed to one of the mortgagee's next of kin who died after the bar passed to him as real estate (Re Loveridge, Pearce v. Marsh, [1904] 1 Ch. 518).

Welsh mortgages.

A Welsh mortgage is a conveyance of an estate redeemable at any time on payment of the principal, with an understanding that the profits shall be received by the mortgagee without account in satisfaction of interest (see Talbot v. Braddyl, 1 Vern. 395; Lawley v. Hooper, 3 Atk. 280; Yates v. Hambly, 2 Atk. 237). As to whether an account would in such a case be directed, see Coote on Mortgages, 7th ed. 34 (Fulthorpe v. Forster, 1 Vern. 477; 5 Jarm. Conv., by Sweet, 96, 101). A Welsh mortgagee has no remedy to compel redemption or foreclosure (Longuet v. Scawen, 1 Ves. sen. 406); but if such a mortgagee be permitted to hold for more than the statutory period after the debt has been paid, the mortgagor would be barred (Fenwick v. Reed, 1 Mer. 125; 5 B. & Ald. 232; and see 2 Spence on Eq. Jurisd., pp. 616—618). The express inclusion of a power of sale shows that a deed is not intended to operate as a Welsh mortgage (Re Cronin, [1914] 1 I. R. 23). As to Welsh mortgages, see further Teulon v. Curtis, Younge, 610; Hartpoole v. Walsh, 5 Br. P. C. 267, Toml. ed.; Balfe v. Lord, 2 Dr. & War. 480.

(2) Acknowledgments:

The acknowledgment must be given "in the meantime," and accordingly an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title made by the mortgagee after time has run in his favour does not revive the equity of redemption. (See Sanders v. S., 19 Ch. D. 373; Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 346; disapproving Stansfield v. Hobson, 3 D. M. G. 620). The old law was different (Pendleton v. Booth, 1 D. F. & Jo. 81). See as to acknowledgments of the mortgage title under the old law, Hodle v. Healey, 6 Madd. 181; Price v. Copner, 1 S. & S. 347.

must be made to the mortgagor or his agent;

The section has been held to operate retrospectively as to acknowledgments (Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 75). An acknowledgment by the mortgagee (in writing signed by himself) of his mortgage title to a third person is not sufficient (Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 83, 84; Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339). When a mortgagor became bankrupt a letter written to him subsequently did not operate as an acknowledgment either of his title or that of the assignee to the equity of redemption (Markwick v. Hardingham, supra). Where a mortgagee in possession conveyed the land to a purchaser, subject expressly to the equity of redemption of the mortgagor, the deed was not a sufficient acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title (Lucas v. Denison, 13 Sim. 584).

The acknowledgment may be made to an agent of the mortgagor, who need not, however, have at the time an authority to act (Trulock v. Robey, 12 Sim. 402). A sufficient acknowledgment was found in a letter to an infant's grandfather, whom she was entitled to treat as her agent (ibid.). In the case of a mortgage by a member of a building society to the society, the committee were not the agents of the mortgagor to receive an acknowledgment (Wilson v. Walton Society, 19 T. L. R. 408); but see Re Metropolis &c., Society, [1911] 1 Ch. 698. Letters written by a mortgagee to the mortgagor's solicitor were (apart from their date) a sufficient acknowledgment in Stansfield v. Hobson, 3 D. M. & G. 620; but insufficient in Thompson v. Bowyer, 11 W. R. 975. It seems that the keeping of accounts (not signed) by the mortgagee in possession is not an acknowledgment (see Baker v. Whetton, 14 Sim. 426). In Re Alison, Johnson v. Mounsey (11 Ch. D. 284), where the mortgagor was held barred, accounts had been kept by the mortgagee in possession (compare Jackson v. Ogg, post, p. 261).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

mortgagee's accounts;

An acknowledgment of a mortgagor's title given by one of two joint mortgagees was inoperative. "The provision in this section as to acknowledgment by some of several mortgagees applies only where they have separate interests either in the money or the land" (Richardson v. Younge, 6 Ch. 478).

acknowledgment by one of several mortgagees.

(3) Disabilities.

There are no savings for disabilities of the mortgagor or his heirs in regard to the bar created by the section. And the sections as to disabilities (ante, p. 178) do not apply; an action to redeem not being "an action to recover land" within these sections (Kinsman v. Rouse, 17 Ch. D. 104; Forster v. Patterson, 17 Ch. D. 132).

B. As to the Barring of the Rights of Mortgagees.

THE REAL PROPERTY LIMITATION ACT, 1837.

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28.

Mortgagees of "land" within the definition in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1, may bring actions to recover land within twenty years after last payment of principal or interest.

Whereas doubts have been entertained as to the effect of a certain Act of Parliament made in the third and fourth years of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Limitation of Actions and Suits relating to Real Property, and for simplifying the Remedies for trying the Rights thereto," so far as the same relates to mortgages; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed: It shall and may be lawful for any person entitled to or claiming under any mortgage of land, being land within the definition contained in the first section of the said Act to make an entry or bring an action at law or suit in equity to recover such land at any time within twenty years next after the last payment of any part of the principal money or interest secured by such mortgage, although more than twenty years may have elapsed since the time at which the right to make such entry or bring such action or suit in equity shall have first accrued, anything in the said Act notwithstanding.

By R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 9 (post, p. 214), the period of twelve years is substituted for twenty years in R. P. Lim. Act, 1837.

CASES AS TO THE BARRING OF MORTGAGEE'S RIGHTS.

Doubts were entertained whether a mortgagee, who was not proved to have been in possession or receipt of the profits within twenty years, and to whom no acknowledgment in writing had been given according to the 14th section (ante, p. 176), was not barred of his ejectment by the 2nd and 3rd sections inasmuch as the mortgagee's right had accrued more than twenty years previously (Doe v. Williams, 5 Ad. & Ell. 291; see Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 154). These doubts have been removed by the above enactment.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

Foreclosure.

A foreclosure action is an action for the recovery of land within 1 Vict. c. 28 (Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539). And if a mortgagee obtains an order for foreclosure absolute, this is a new title (Heath v. Pugh, 6 Q. B. D. 360, 361), which accrues within the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 2, at the date of the order (Pugh v. Heath, 7 App. Cas. 238).

The R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, does not itself create a bar in any case in which it had not been already created by the Act which it explains. It only declares (in conformity, and with manifest reference to the rule which had before prevailed in equity) that nothing in that Act shall bar the title of a mortgagee (continuing to be such) who has received any payment on account of principal and interest from the person entitled to the equity of redemption within the statutory period before the commencement of any action (Heath v. Pugh, 6 Q. B. D. 362).

An action to foreclose an equitable mortgage of an advowson in gross (which was not land within the statute) was barred by laches (Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519).

Effect on mortgagee's title, where mortgage is followed by adverse possession of stranger.

The R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, is not limited to proceedings between the mortgagee and mortgagor (Ludbrook v. L., [1901] 2 K. B. 100). Where the owner of land mortgages it, and an intruder subsequently obtains possession and the mortgage continues to exist, the Act applies in favour of the mortgagee, although as against the mortgagor and those claiming under him the intruder may have acquired a good title (ibid.).

In the case of a mortgage executed before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, where a stranger was in possession, but such possession was not adverse either at the date of the mortgage or of the passing of the last-mentioned Act, the mortgagee brought ejectment, the mortgagor having within the statutory period paid interest on the mortgage: held, that the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, preserved to the plaintiff the same right of entry as if the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, had not passed; and he was entitled to recover, though the mortgagor's right of entry, within the meaning of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, had accrued before the mortgage, and was barred under that statute (Doe v. Eyre, 17 Q. B. 366; Eyre v. Walsh, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 346; Ford v. Ager, 2 H. & C. 279; 11 W. R. 1073).

In another case, where there was no adverse possession at the date of the mortgage, the land was subsequently sold and the purchaser paid the mortgage debt, and took a conveyance, in which mortgagor and mortgagee joined; held, that the purchaser was a person "claiming under" a mortgage within the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837; and that under the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 2, time ran from the paying off of the mortgage (Doe v. Massey, 17 Q. B. 373). Quære whether this decision is consistent with Heath v. Pugh (supra), the mortgage not having continued to subsist (Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 158).

Where adverse possession of stranger is followed by mortgage.

Where, however, at the date of the mortgage an intruder is in possession holding adversely to the mortgagor, and time has already begun to run in his favour as against the mortgagor, the present Act does not confer a new right of entry on the mortgagee (Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 158; see Hemming v. Blanton, 21 W. R. 636).

Where there is possession of mortgagor.

If a mortgagor remains in possession for twelve years without paying principal or interest and without acknowledgment, the mortgagee's title will be extinguished, although a prior mortgage (under which possession has not been taken) has been in existence during the earlier part of the time (Kibble v. Fairthorne, [1895] 1 Ch. 219). The puisne mortgagee was also barred where, while time was running against him, a prior mortgagee took possession (Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 533; but see Re Bermingham, 5 Ir. R. Eq. 147). The effect of the extinguishment was to vest in the mortgagor the legal estate; which might avail for the protection of a person taking a subsequent mortgage from him (Kibble v. Fairthorne, supra). See now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 85, post. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

For the case of a mortgage of an equitable interest in land and the proceeds thereof, where the trustees remained in possession, see Re Hazeldine, [1908] 1 Ch. 34.

When time begins to run against mortgagee.

Mortgage of estate in possession.

As regards the point from which time runs against a mortgagee in the case of a legal mortgage of an estate in possession in freehold land; if the mortgage deed contains a provision that the mortgagor may retain possession of the land for a time certain, e.g. until default on a particular day, and the mortgage deed is executed by the mortgagee, there is in effect a redemise by the mortgagee until the day for payment of the principal, and the mortgagee having no right of entry until that day, time will not run against him until then (Wilkinson v. Hall, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 508; see Doe v. Goldwin, 2 Q. B. 143). Where, however, the mortgage deed contains no such provision or has not been executed by the mortgagee, the mortgagee has an immediate right of entry upon execution by the mortgagor of the mortgage deed (Doe v. Lightfoot, 8 M. & W. 564; Doe v. Day, 2 Q. B. 147; Rogers v. Grazebrook, 8 Q. B. 895; Green v. Burns, 6 L. R. Ir. 173), and time runs against him from that point, not from the day for payment of the principal (Doe v. Lightfoot, supra). Quære as to the dicta to the contrary effect in Kibble v. Fairthorne, [1895] 1 Ch. 225; Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 536.

Where a mortgagee is also tenant for life of the whole of the mortgaged estate, the statute does not begin to run against the mortgage title until his death; and the same rule applies where the mortgagee is entitled for life as tenant in common with others to the mortgaged estate (Wynne v. Styan, 2 Phil. C. C. 303; see Topham v. Booth, 35 Ch. D. 607).

Mortgage of estate in reversion.

In the case of an equitable charge on a reversionary interest in land, time runs against the right of foreclosure from the date when the interest falls into possession (Hugill v. Wilkinson, 38 Ch. D. 480; Re Owen, [1894] 3 Ch. 220; Powell v. Brodhurst, [1901] 2 Ch. 167; Henry v. Smith, 2 Dr. & W. 381; Re Witham, [1922] 2 Ch. 413; and see Re Lake, 63 L. T. 416).

Copyholds.

In the case of a mortgage of copyholds a mortgagee could not maintain ejectment until he had been admitted, but his admittance related back to the date of the surrender (Holdfast v. Clapham, 1 Term. Rep. 600; Doe v. Webber, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 922). The mortgagee, however, might commence an action for foreclosure before admittance (Sutton v. Stone, 2 Atk. 101).

Annuity.

As to whether the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, applies to the grantor of an annuity charged on land, see argument in Searle v. Colt (1 Y. & C. C. C. 36).

Payments within R. P. Lim. Act, 1837.

A payment within the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, must be a payment of principal or interest, and must be made by the mortgagor, or by some person bound to pay principal or interest on his behalf (Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539)—i.e., bound as between himself and the mortgagor (Bradshaw v. Widdrington, [1902] 2 Ch. 436). Payment by a stranger will not do (Ellis v. E., [1905] 1 Ch. 619). The mortgagee's receipt of the surrender value of a policy included in the mortgage was not a sufficient payment

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28.

(Re Clifden, Annaly v. Agar-Ellis, [1900] 1 Ch. 774). Where a mortgagor assigned the equity of redemption, and subsequently paid interest, the payment did not prevent time running in favour of the assignee (Newbould v. Smith, 33 Ch. D. 127). The House of Lords expressed no opinion on the point (14 App. Cas. 423: compare Adnam v. Sandwich, 2 Q. B. D. 490). Payment of rent made to the mortgagee by a tenant of the land in consequence of notice was not sufficient (Harlock v. Ashberry, supra; compare Wrigley v. Gill, [1906] 1 Ch. 165, and cases there quoted); but such payment made by a receiver who was the mortgagor's agent was sufficient (Berwick v. Price, [1905] 1 Ch. 642; see Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115). Time did not run against the mortgagee where the same person was entitled to the interest of the mortgage and the rents of the whole mortgaged land (Topham v. Booth, 35 Ch. D. 607. For the case where he was only entitled to the rents of part, see Re Finnegan, [1906] 1 I. R. 370. See also the case where a wife was entitled to a mortgage on her husband's land, Re Hawes, Burchell v. H., 62 L. J. Ch. 463; and the cases quoted post, pp. 220, 252). Where estates A, B and C are included in one mortgage, and the owner of A pays interest, the mortgagee's remedy against B and C is preserved (Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115; see Dickenson v. Teasdale, 1 D. J. S. 52. Compare Lewin v. Wilson, 11 App. Cas. 639).

It was said that the mere laches of the mortgagee to demand interest from the tenant for life of the equity of redemption would not prejudice his claim against those in remainder (Wrixon v. Vize, 2 Dr. & War. 192; Loftus v. Swift, 2 Sch. & L. 642). Payment of interest by a tenant for life of the equity of redemption to the right person keeps the mortgage alive so that foreclosure can be had (Barclay v. Owen, 60 L. T. 222. As to payments keeping alive the remedy on covenant, see Pears v. Laing, 12 Eq. 41; Dibb v. Walker, [1893] 2 Ch. 429; Leahy v. De Moleyns, [1896] 1 I. R. 206; Thompson v. Hurly, [1905] 1 I. R. 594). But where the tenant for life by deed admitted payment of interest, this was not a sufficient acknowledgment, as against the remainderman, to prevent the statute from operating (Gregson v. Hindley, 10 Jur. 383). Compare Re Fitzmaurice (15 Ir. C. L. R. 445); Beckett v. De la Cour (11 L. R. Ir. 187). Where the mortgage debt is settled on A for life, remainder to B, B may be barred by non-payment of interest to A where the debt is vested in trustees with power to give receipts (Barcroft v. Murphy, [1896] 1 I. R. 590).

See, further, the cases as to payments quoted under sect. 8 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, post, p. 224; and sect. 5 of the Civ. Proced. Act, 1833, post, p. 251.

8. Limitation of Time as to Church Property and Advowsons.

No lands or rents to be recovered by ecclesiastical or eleemosynary corporation sole, but within two incumbencies and six years, or sixty years.

29. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any archbishop, bishop, dean, prebendary, parson, vicar, master of hospital or other spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole, to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit to recover any land or rent within such period as hereinafter is mentioned next after the time at which the right of such corporation sole, or of his predecessor, to make such entry or distress, or bring such action or suit, shall first have accrued; (that is to say,) the period during which two persons in succession shall have held the office or benefice in respect whereof such land or rent shall be claimed, and six years after a third person shall have been appointed thereto, if the times of such two incumbencies and such term of six years taken together shall amount to the full period of sixty years; and if such times taken together shall not amount to the full period of sixty years, then during such further number of years in addition to such six years, as will, with the time of the holding of such two persons and such six years, make up the full period of sixty years; and no such entry, distress, action, or suit shall be made or brought at any time beyond the determination of such period. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 29.

Law before the statute.

Before this Act, ecclesiastical corporations, and all ecclesiastical persons seised in right of churches, were not within the Stat. Lim., and could not bar their successors, by neglecting to bring actions for recovery of land within the time prescribed for other persons, although an ecclesiastical person, guilty of such neglect, would himself have been barred (Plowd. 358, 538; 11 Rep. 78 b; 7 Roll. R. 151; 2 Bos. & Pull. 546; see 3rd Real Prop. R. 58—62).

Although the Statute of Fines, 4 Hen. 7, c. 24 (ante, p. 152), did not bar the successors of ecclesiastical persons entitled to lands in respect of offices for life, yet each person was bound by a lapse of five years in his own time after the fine had been levied (Runcorn v. Cooper, 5 B. & C. 696; Croft v. Howel, Plowd. 358; 1 Prest. Conv. 235; Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 67).

The Prescription Act, 1832, extends to any ecclesiastical person, but tithes are excepted from that Act (ante, p. 2).

Cases under the section.

Where lands belonging to a spiritual corporation sole became vested in the Eccl. Commrs., this section extended to the commissioners under sect. 57 of the Eccl. Commrs. Act, 1840 (Eccl. Commrs. v. Rowe, 5 App. Cas. 736); but it does not extend to an ordinary lay successor to a spiritual corporation (Irish Commrs. v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 14). See as to the possession required by the section, Blackett v. Ridout, [1915] 2 K. B. 415, where land had been allotted to a rector by an inclosure award.

30. No person shall bring any quare impedit or other action, or any suit to enforce a right to present to or bestow any church, vicarage, or other ecclesiastical benefice, as the patron thereof, after the expiration of such period as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say,) the period during which three clerks in succession shall have held the same, all of whom shall have obtained possession thereof adversely to the right of presentation or gift of such person, or of some person through whom he claims, if the times of such incumbencies taken together shall amount to the full period of sixty years, and if the time of such incumbencies shall not together amount to the full period of sixty years then after the expiration of such further time as, with the times of such incumbencies, will make up the full period of sixty years. No advowson to be recovered but within three incumbencies or sixty years.

Limitation of the right to

If a stranger present to a benefice, the recovery of that presentation depends on the statutes 13 Edw. 1, c. 5, s. 2, and 7 Anne, c. 18.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 30.

recover presentations.

"If a stranger usurps my presentation, and I do not pursue my right within six months, I shall lose that turn without remedy, for the peace of the church, and as a punishment for my own negligence; but that turn is the only one I shall lose thereby" (3 Steph. Comm. 531).

Limitation of right to recover advowsons.

The limitation of the right to recover advowsons laid down by R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 30, was in accordance with a suggestion of Blackstone (3 Steph. Comm. 565, where the old law is stated; see Robinson v. Bristol, 20 L. J. C. P. 208).

The effect of time on an action to foreclose an advowson was considered in Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519.

Incumbencies after lapse to be reckoned within the period, but not incumbencies after promotions to bishoprics.

31. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that when on the avoidance, after a clerk shall have obtained possession of an ecclesiastical benefice adversely to the right of presentation or gift of the patron thereof, a clerk shall be presented or collated thereto by his Majesty, or the ordinary, by reason of a lapse, such last-mentioned clerk shall be deemed to have obtained possession adversely to the right of presentation or gift of such patron as aforesaid; but when a clerk shall have been presented by his Majesty upon the avoidance of a benefice, in consequence of the incumbent thereof having been made a bishop, the incumbency of such clerk shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed a continuation of the incumbency of the clerk so made bishop.

Lapse.

Presentation must be made by a common person within six calendar months after the death of the last incumbent, otherwise the right accrues to the ordinary, which is called a lapse (3 Leon. 46; 2 Inst. 273; Wats. Cl. L. c. 12). The six months commence from the time the patron has notice of the avoidance (2 Burn, Eccl. Law, 327; see Benefices Act, 1898, s. 5); but if the clerk of a stranger be instituted and inducted, and the patron gives no disturbance within six months, he has no remedy for that turn, because induction is an act of which he is bound to take notice (ibid., 329). If the avoidance be by resignation or deprivation, the six months do not commence till notice of the avoidance given by the ordinary to the patron (Com. Dig. Esglise (H. 9)). But where the incumbent is himself patron, a sentence of deprivation is not necessary to render the first living void, the object of such a sentence being to give notice to the patron (Apperley v. Hereford, 9 Bing. 681). If the bishop should not present within six months after the lapse to him, then the right to present goes to the archbishop (Com. Dig. Esglise (H. 11)); and if neither the bishop nor archbishop present, then to the Crown, which is not confined to any time (Cro. Car. 335; Plowd. 498). It is clear that, as against the bishop at least, the patron may at any time present, notwithstanding six months have elapsed, provided advantage has not been taken of the lapse (3 Moore & Scott, 114). So that if after a lapse and before the bishop or archbishop has collated his clerk, the patron presents one, the latter shall be instituted (Hutt. 24; Hob. 152, 154; 2 Inst. 273). So after a lapse to the King, if the patron's clerk be presented, instituted, and inducted, and die incumbent, before the King has taken advantage of the lapse, his right is gone (Owen, 2—5; Cro. Eliz. 44, 119; 7 Rep. 28). Advowsons donative, which were abolished by the Benefices Act, 1898, s. 12, were not subject to lapse (Co. Litt. 344 a; see Fairchild v. Gayre, Cro. Jac. 63; Britton v Wade, ibid. 515), unless augmented by Queen Anne's bounty (1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10, ss. 6, 14; Mutter v. Chauvel, 1 Mer. 475; 11 East, 478). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 31.

When an incumbent is made a bishop, the right of presentation to livings held by him vests for that turn in the King, and is called a prerogative presentation. This right of the Crown was formerly doubted (Wentworth v. Wright, Owen, 144), but has since been fully established and acted on, but the right must be exercised in the lifetime of the person promoted, otherwise the turn of the Crown is lost (2 Bl. Rep. 770; R. v. London, 1 Show. 464; S. P., Show. P. C. 185; Com. Dig. Esglise (H. 6); Armagh v. Att.-Gen., 2 Br. P. C. 514). If after a grant of the next presentation to a living the incumbent be made a bishop, by which the living becomes vacant, and the King is entitled to present, the grantee may present on the next vacancy occasioned by the death or resignation of the King's presentee (Calland v. Troward, 2 H. Bl. 324; 8 Br. P. C. 71). The right of the Crown to present to an English benefice upon the appointment of the incumbent to a bishopric, is not barred by the Crown having before such appointment granted the advowson to a subject. But no such right exists in the case of an appointment to the bishopric of Christchurch, in New Zealand (R. v. Eton College, 8 Ell. & Bl. 610). Prerogative presentation.

The right of presentation given to the universities by the statutes 3 Jac. 1, c. 5, ss. 18, 19, 20; 1 Will. & M. c. 26, s. 2, and 13 Anne, c. 13, s. 1 arises only in the case of a sole patron, or all of several patrons professing the Roman Catholic religion. Where two are jointly seised of an advowson, the one being a Roman Catholic, the other a Protestant, the sole right is in the latter (Edwards v. Exeter, 5 Bing. (N.S.) 652; see Cottington v. Fletcher, 2 Atk. 155). By statute 13 Anne, c. 13, the presentation to any benefice by any Roman Catholic is void (see Boyer v. Norwich, [1892] P. 41; [1892] A. C. 417). And by the Church Patronage Act, 1737, s. 5, every grant made of advowson or right of presentation, collation, nomination or donation, by any Roman Catholic, or by his mortgagee or trustee, is void unless made for valuable consideration to a Protestant (see Religious Disabilities Act, 1846). Universities.

The Pluralities Act, 1838, ss. 1—13, applies generally to all persons and benefices without distinction of value; see also Pluralities Acts Amendt. Act, 1885, s. 13. By the 11th section of the Pluralities Act, 1838, institution into a second benefice ipso facto avoids the first. See Storie v. Winchester, 9 C. B. 62; Ex p. Bartlett, 12 Q. B. 488, as to avoidance by non-residence under ss. 54, 58 of the same statute, when the clerk is in prison. Pluralities.

32. In the construction of this Act every person claiming a right to present to or bestow any ecclesiastical benefice, as patron thereof, by virtue of any estate, interest or right which the owner of an estate tail in the advowson might have barred, shall be deemed to be a person claiming through the person entitled to such estate tail, and the right to bring any quare impedit, action or suit, shall be limited accordingly. When person claiming an advowson in remainder, &c., after an estate tail, shall be barred.

33. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no person shall bring any quare impedit or other action, or any suit to enforce a right to present to or bestow any ecclesiastical benefice, as the patron thereof, after the No advowson to be recovered after 100 years.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 33.

expiration of one hundred years from the time at which a clerk shall have obtained possession of such benefice adversely to the right of presentation or gift of such person, or of some person through whom he claims, or of some person entitled to some preceding estate or interest, or undivided share, or alternate right of presentation or gift, held or derived under the same title, unless a clerk shall subsequently have obtained possession of such benefice on the presentation or gift of the person so claiming, or of some person through whom he claims, or of some other person entitled in respect of an estate, share or right held or derived under the same title.

There is no saving of the rights of persons under disabilities. It will still be necessary to require abstracts of titles to advowsons to be carried back for a century at least (1 Dart, V. & P., 6th ed., 334). An abstract of title to an advowson should be accompanied with evidence that the presentations have from time to time been made by the persons appearing to be the owners of the advowson. See 3 Bl. Comm. 250; Co. Litt. 115 a.

9. Final Extinction of Right.

At the end of the period of limitation the right of the party out of possession to be extinguished.

34. At the determination of the period limited by this Act to any person for making an entry or distress, or bringing any writ of quare impedit or other action or suit, the right and title of such person to the land, rent or advowson, for the recovery whereof such entry, distress, action or suit respectively might have been made or brought within such period, shall be extinguished.

Effect of section.

There is a marked distinction between the old Statutes of Limitation and the present one. The former statutes only barred the remedy but did not touch the right. Under the present Act when the remedy is barred, the right and title of the real owner are extinguished (Incorp. Society v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 289; Re Alison, Johnson v. Mounsey, 12 Ch. D. 296). Where a tenant from year to year remained in possession for the statutory period without paying rent, the title of the landlord was barred, not only to the land, but also to the arrears of rent (Re Jolly, Gathercole v. Norfolk, [1900] 2 Ch. 616). The above cases related to land. The effect of the statute is different as regards the personal remedy for a mortgage debt; in which case the debt is not extinguished (Kibble v. Fairthorne, [1895] 1 Ch. 224).

Cases as to the fee simple in freeholds.

As regards land, it is now settled, at least in England, that the effect of this section is to extinguish the title of the dispossessed owner, not to transfer it to the statutory owner (Tichborne v. Weir, 67 L. T. 735; Re Nisbet and Potts, [1905] 1 Ch. 399). For the view of the Irish judges, see the cases as to leaseholds quoted below. Accordingly it is impossible to read literally certain earlier dicta in cases relating to the fee simple in freeholds; e.g., where it was said by Parke, B., that the effect of the Act was to make a "Parliamentary conveyance" to the intruder (Doe v. Sumner, 14 M. & W. 42), or where it was said by Lord St. Leonards, "The statute has executed a conveyance" (Scott v. Nixon, 3 Dr. & War. 407; Burroughs v. McCreight, 1 J. & L. 303; Incorp. Society

v. Richards, supra; and see Sanders v. Sanders, 19 Ch. D. 379). The effect of the section was thus described by Mr. Hayes (1 Hayes Conv., 5th ed., 269): "We must not confound the negative effect of the statute with the positive effect of a conveyance. . . . The wrongdoer must be considered according to the principle of the old law as claiming generally, and therefore as claiming the absolute property (unless indeed he expressly qualify his claim) and the statute as merely diminishing from time to time the danger of eviction, till at length his originally precarious fee becomes, by the exclusion of every stronger claim, a firm inheritance." And these words have been quoted with approval by Bowen, L.J., in Tichborne v. Weir (supra). See Williams on Seisin, p. 7; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 151, part 2. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34.

When the owner of land entered into restrictive covenants and was subsequently dispossessed, it was held that the right of the covenantee (which was in the nature of an equitable easement) was not affected by the statutory extinguishment of the title of the dispossessed owner. For the only rights extinguished by the section were those of persons who during the statutory period might by themselves or by some one representing them have brought an action to recover the land (Re Nisbet and Potts, [1906] 1 Ch. 388, 410).

As to leaseholds.

In the case of a leasehold interest, it was held by the Court of Appeal in England that occupation for the statutory period did not transfer the lease to the occupier so as to render him liable to be sued after the expiration of the term on repairing covenants (Tichborne v. Weir, 67 L. T. 735; see Walter v. Yalden, [1903] 2 Q. B. 309). On the other hand, the Irish judges have adopted the view that the title by possession is limited by rights yet remaining unextinguished, and is commensurate with the interest which the rightful owner lost by the operation of the statute and has the same legal character (O'Connor v. Foley, [1906] 1 I. R. 39). And they have in effect held that in such a case there has been a transfer of the estate in the term (Rankin v. McMurtry, 24 L. R. Ir. 297; Mulcaire v. Lane Joynt, 32 L. R. Ir. 683; MacCormick v. Courtney, [1895] 2 I. R. 97; Re Hayden, [1904] 1 I. R. 1; see Re McClure and Garrett, [1899] 1 I. R. 225; Doyle v. Foley, [1903] 2 I. R. 95; Coyle v. McFadden, [1901] 1 I. R. 298). Compare effect of Nullum Tempus Act, ante, p. 144.

In a case, where Tichborne v. Weir was discussed, the Irish Court of Appeal held that an intruder for the statutory period on leasehold land was subject to the statutory incidents of the tenancy, which included a disability to assign created by the Irish Act, 7 Geo. 4, c. 29 (O'Connor v. Foley, [1906] 1 I. R. 20).

As to copyholds.

In the case of copyholds, it has been held that a squatter on copyhold land who had acquired a good title under the statute against the copyholder, had no title to the freehold against the lord; but that time began to run against the lord only from the date at which after proclamation or notice the squatter failed to come in and be admitted (Eccl. Comm. v. Parr, [1894] 2 Q. B. 420; Re Nisbet and Potts, [1905] 1 Ch. 400; see Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 158).

Land held on trust.

The effect of sect. 34 in the case of land settled on trust, where possession for more than the statutory period has been held by (1) the trustee, or (2) the c. q. t., or (3) a stranger, is discussed in the notes to sects. 25 and 7, ante.

In Re Hazeldine, [1908] 1 Ch. 34, land devised on trust for sale was retained by the trustees who paid the rents into Court. A beneficiary conveyed his share in the land and proceeds thereof by way of mortgage, and the mortgagee remained for twelve years without any payment or acknowledgment. On a summons dealing with the rents in Court, the Court of Appeal held that the title of the mortgagee was extinguished by sect. 34. Sed qu. as to the effect of the trustee's possession. See also Re Fox, Brooks v. Marston, [1913] 2 Ch. 75.

Right of trespasser before time has run.

A person in possession of land in the assumed character of owner, and exercising peaceably the ordinary rights of ownership, has a perfectly good title against all the world but the rightful owner (Perry v. Clissold, [1907] A. C. 79; where Doe v. Barnard, 13 Q. B. 954, is disapproved). He has, even before time has run in his favour under this statute, a devisable interest (Asher v. Whitlock, L. R. 1 Q. B. 1; Keeffe v. Kirby, 6 Ir. C. L. R. 591; Clarke v. Clarke, I. R. 2 C. L. 395; Calder v. Alexander, 16 T. L. R. 294; see under the old law, Doe v. Birchmore, 9 Ad. & Ell. 662).

Possession by succession of independent trespassers.

A continuous adverse possession for the statutory period by a succession of persons not claiming under one another bars the true owner (Willis v. Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 553). In such a case it has been suggested that at the end of the period the last trespasser has a good title (Dixon v. Gayfere, 17 Beav. 430), but this has been disapproved (Asher v. Whitlock, L. R. 1 Q. B. 4). And the better view seems to be that at the end of the statutory period the first trespasser has a right to the possession and may maintain ejectment against a subsequent trespasser by whom he has been expelled (see Dalton v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 2 Ch. 90; Asher v. Whitlock, L. R. 1 Q. B. 4; Doe v. Martin, 1 Car. & M. 32; Doe v. Dyball, 3 C. & P. 610). If before the statutory period has expired the trespasser abandons possession, and the possession is vacant, the rightful owner is in the same position in all respects as before the trespass (Trustees Co. v. Short, 13 App. Cas. 798). This does not mean that there is any suspension of the right of action, but that the right of action in respect of the old intrusion is gone; and if there is a fresh intrusion, there is a fresh right of action (Johnson v. Brock, [1907] 2 Ch. 538).

Old law.

Before this statute twenty years' possession gave a prima facie title against every one, and a complete title against a wrongdoer who could not show any right, even if such wrongdoer had been in possession many years, provided they were less than twenty (Doe v. Cooke, 7 Bing. 346; see ante, p. 151).

Rents and heriots.

The section would, it seems, extinguish the right to rent-charges, Hanks v. Palling (6 E. & B. 659; Sugd. R. P. S. 9). But it is doubtful whether either heriot service or heriot custom (as to which see ante, p. 137) are within the section (Zouche v. Dalbiac, L. R. 10 Ex. 172).

Extinguished title cannot be revived.

When a title has been extinguished by the statute, the old title cannot be restored by a subsequent acknowledgment (Kibble v. Fairthorne, [1895] 1 Ch. 219; Sanders v. S., 19 Ch. D. 379; Re McClue and Garrett, [1899] 1 I. R. 225; Beamish v. Whitney, [1908] 1 I. R. 38; see also Re Alison, Johnson v. Mounsey, 11 Ch. D. 296; Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 346; Lyell v. Kennedy, 18 Q. B. D. 796); or by subsequent re-entry (Bryan v. Cowdal, 21 W. R. 693; Brassington v. Llewellyn, 27 L. J. Ex. 297). The law before this statute was different (Pendleton v. Rooth, 1 D. F. & J. 81). The law as to simple contract debts under the Lim. Act, 1623, and Stat. of Frauds Amdt. Act, 1828, is also different (Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay, 669); see pp. 268, 274, post, as well as the law as to money charged on land, post, p. 226.

In a case which was held to fall within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 8, after the expiration of twenty years, during which no rent had been paid, the tenant, within five years before action, paid some arrears. It was held that under sect. 8 time ran from the last payment of rent, and that sect. 34 had not extinguished the title of the plaintiff who was the reversioner (Bunting v. Sargent, 13 Ch. D. 330; see, however, Sanders v. S., 19 Ch. D. 379; Re Hobbs, H. v. Wade, 36 Ch. D. 557, and other cases above cited). See also Nicholson v. England, [1926] 2 K. B. 93. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34.

The Court has compelled a purchaser to take a title depending upon parol evidence of adverse possession under this statute (Scott v. Nixon, 3 Dru. & War. 388; Games v. Bonnor, 54 L. J. Ch. 517, applied in Re Atkinson and Horsell, [1912] 2 Ch. 1; see Kirkwood v. Lloyd, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 598; Moulton v. Edmonds, 1 D. F. & J. 250; Lethbridge v. Kirkman, 25 L. J. Q. B. 89). So where the rights of the Crown were barred under 48 Geo. 3, c. 47 (Tuthill v. Rogers, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 441). But the above are cases where objections apparent on the face of the title as shown were held covered by the possession. The Court did not compel the purchaser to take a leap in the dark (Re Nisbet and Potts, [1905] 1 Ch. 401). Where the contract is an open one, a possessory title, to be sufficient, must be shown for forty years (Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858), reduced to thirty years by the L. P. Act, 1925, s. 44, post. Purchaser compelled to accept title depending on the statute.

10. Receipt of Rent.

35. The receipt of the rent payable by any tenant from year to year, or other lessee, shall as against such lessee or any person claiming under him (but subject to the lease), be deemed to be the receipt of the profits of the land for the purposes of this Act. Receipt of rent to be deemed receipt of profits.

11. Abolition of Real and Mixed Actions, &c.

[Sect. 36 contained a list of the names of the old writs in real and mixed actions. By the operation of that section, and sect. 26 of the C. L. P. Act, 1860, real and mixed actions (except ejectment) and plaints in the nature of such actions were abolished.]

An ejectment was a possessory action, wherein the title to land might be tried, in all cases where the party claiming title had a right of entry, whether such title was to an estate in fee, fee tail, for life or for years (see 2 Archbold's Pr., by Prentice, 825—883, 13th ed.). This relief is now obtained by means of an action for the recovery of land (see R. S. C., Ord. 18, r. 2, and note thereto in Annual Practice). Ejectment.

[Sects. 37 and 38, which contained provisions as to saving rights in respect of real actions, have been repealed by S. L. R. Act, 1874.]

39. No descent cast (f), discontinuance (g), or warranty (h), which may happen or be made, shall toll or defeat any right of entry or action for the recovery of land. No descent, warranty, &c., to bar a right of entry.

(f) A mere entry is not possession. Continual or other claim will no longer preserve any right of entry, or distress or action (ante, sects. 10, 11, p. 173). By the common law, descents of corporeal inheritances in fee simple took away the entry of the party who had right (Litt. s. 385); as if a disseisor died seised, Descent cast.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 39.

and the lands descended to his heir, the entry of the disseisee was thereby taken away unless there had been a continual claim (Litt. s. 414), and the like law was of an abatement and intrusion, and of the feoffees or donees of abators or intruders. But by stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 33, the "dying seised of any disseisor of and in any lands, &c., having no title therein, shall not be deemed a descent to take away the entry of the person or his heir, who had lawful title of entry at the time of the descent, unless the disseisor has had peaceable possession for five years next after the disseisin, without entry or continual claim by the person entitled." If a disseisor died after five years' quiet possession, and the disseisee entered, the heir of the former might have maintained an ejectment, for the right of possession belonged to him, although the mere right was in the disseisee (Smyth v. Tyndall, 2 Salk. 685). See also as to rights of entry sect. 4, sub-sect. 3 of the Law of Property Act, 1925, post, p. 605. The doctrine of descent cast did not apply, if the claimant was under any legal disabilities during the life of the ancestor, either of infancy, coverture, imprisonment, insanity, or being out of the realm; because in all these cases there was no laches or neglect in the claimant, and therefore no descent took away his entry (Litt. l. 3, c. 6); nor did it affect copyhold or customary estates, where the freehold is in the lord (Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299); nor cases where the party had not any remedy but by entry as a devisee (Co. Litt. 240 b; 7 East, 321. On the descent cast, see Co. Litt. 237 b; Bac. Abr. Descent (F) (G) (H); Com. Dig. Descent (D); Roscoe on Real Actions, 81—87; Adams on Ejectment).

Discontinuance.

(g) A discontinuance of estates in lands and tenements is defined by Lord Coke to be "An alienation made or suffered by tenant in tail, or by any that is seised in auter droit, whereby the issue in tail, or the heir or successor, or those in reversion or remainder, are driven to their action and cannot enter" (Co. Litt. 325 a). At common law, an estate might be discontinued five ways:—1. By feoffment. 2. By fine. 3. By common recovery. 4. By confirmation: and 5. By release of warranty. A grant by deed or fine, of such things as lie not in livery (Litt. s. 618; Co. Litt. 332 a), did not work any discontinuance. A feoffment made after October 1, 1845, had no tortious operation (Real Prop. Act, 1845, s. 4. By L. P. Act, 1925, s. 51, p. 647, post, feoffments are abolished).

A discontinuance of an estate tail could only be made by a tenant in tail in possession (Doe v. Jones, 1 B. & C. 243; Trevilian v. Lane, Cro. Eliz. 56; see 1 Rep. 76 a; Litt. s. 658; Co. Litt. 325 a). But the existence of a term of years prior to the estate of a tenant in tail did not prevent a fine levied by him from operating as a discontinuance (Doe v. Finch, 1 Nev. & M. 130). As to a prior estate by the curtesy, see Anderson v. Anderson, 30 Beav. 209; see further the notes to Doe v. Finch, supra, where much learning on the subject of discontinuance, &c., is collected (S. C., 4 B. & Ad. 283). As to discontinuance, see Bac. Abr. and Com. Dig. Discontinuance; Co. Litt. 325 a; 347 b, and notes by Butler; Roscoe on Real Actions, 43—53; 1 Prest. on Conv. and on Abst. Index; Roper on Husband and Wife, c. 2, s. 2; Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W. 125.

Warranty.

(h) As to the law of warranty, see Com. Dig. Guaranty; Co. Litt. 365 a; 393 b, and notes by Butler; Bac. Abr. Warranty; Shepp. T. 181—203; Doe v. Jones, 1 Crompt. & Jerv. 528.

12. Limits of the Act.

Act to extend to the spiritual courts.

43. No person claiming any tithes, legacy or other property for the recovery of which he might bring an action or suit at law or in equity, shall bring a suit or other proceeding in any spiritual court to recover the same but within the period during which he might bring such action or suit at law or in equity.

The mode in which personal legacies were recovered in the ecclesiastical Courts is stated in 3 Hagg. Eccl. R. 161, 162. By the Court of Probate Act, 1857, s. 23, the Court of Probate, to which the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical Courts has been transferred, shall entertain no suit for legacies.

Act not to extend to Scotland nor to advowsons in Ireland.

* Lege present.

44. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that this Act shall not extend to Scotland; and shall not, so far as it relates to any right to permit* to or bestow any church, vicarage or other ecclesiastical benefice, extend to Ireland.

The provisions of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, relating to advowsons, &c., were extended to Ireland by Grand Juries (Ireland) Act, 1843, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 27, and the words of this section excluding Ireland have been repealed (S. L. R. Act, 1874). See 32 and 33 Vict. c. 42.

The colonies.

This Act applies to New South Wales (Day v. Day, L. R. 3 P. C. 751; Trustees Co. v. Short, 13 App. Cas. 793); and to New Zealand (Plimmer v. Wellington, 9 App. Cas. 708), but does not apply to Jamaica (Pitt v. Dacre, 3 Ch. D. 295). Where a Hindoo banker claimed as a creditor in an English administration action, the English statute applied (Finch v. Finch, 35 L. T. 235). But the Indian statute was held to govern the case of money in an English Court representing land in India (Re Peat, 7 Eq. 302). As to which statute, see also Hay v. Gordon (21 W. R. 11). See also the questions raised as to bonds charged on the revenues of Oudh in Doss v. Secretary, &c., of India ((1875), W. N. 59); and as to the Bombay Civil Service Fund, in Edwards v. Warden (1 App. Cas. 281). By the law of Lower Canada, the period of prescription is thirty years (Herrick v. Sixby, L. R. 1 P. C. 436; Macdonald v. Lambe, ibid., 539; see Labrador Co. v. The Queen, [1893] A. C. 104). As to adverse possession in Nova Scotia, see Des Barres v. Shey (22 W. R. 273); and in Ceylon, see Clark v. Elphinstone (6 App. Cas. 164). See as to the period of limitation in New Brunswick, Lewin v. Wilson, 11 App. Cas. 639; in British Columbia, Kirby v. Cowderoy, [1912] A. C. 599; Wilson v. Delta Corporation, [1913] A. THE REAL PROPERTY LIMITATION ACT, 1874, ss. 9, 11, 12.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57.—An Act for the further Limitation of Actions and Suits relating to Real Property.

[7th August, 1874.]

Whereas it is expedient further to limit the times within which actions or suits may be brought for the recovery of land or rent and of charges thereon (a). Be it enacted, &c.

(a) The preamble did not prevent sect. 8 from operating as a bar to an action on a covenant for payment of a mortgage debt (Sutton v. S., 22 Ch. D. 520).

[Sect. 1, reducing the period of limitation for the recovery of land or rent, will be found ante, p. 147.

Sect. 2, containing provisions for the case of future estates in the case of land or rent, will be found ante, p. 162.

Sects. 3, 4, & 5, containing provisions as to disabilities in the case of land or rent, will be found ante, pp. 178, 182.

Sects. 8 & 10, containing provisions as to money charged on land, will be found post, pp. 215, 241].

Act to be read with 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, of which certain parts are repealed, and other parts to be read in reference to alteration by this Act.

9. From and after the commencement of this Act all the provisions of the Act passed in the session of the third and fourth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter twenty-seven, except those contained in the several sections thereof next hereinafter mentioned, shall remain in full force, and shall be construed together with this Act, and shall take effect as if the provisions hereinbefore contained were substituted in such Act for the provisions contained in the sections thereof numbered two, five, sixteen, seventeen, twenty-three, twenty-eight, and forty respectively (which several sections, from and after the commencement of this Act, shall be repealed), and as if the term of six years had been mentioned, instead of the term of ten years, in the section of the said Act numbered eighteen, and the period of twelve years had been mentioned in the said section eighteen instead of the period of twenty years; and the provisions of the Act passed in the session of the seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, and the first year of the reign of her present Majesty, chapter twenty-eight, shall remain in full force, and be construed together with this Act, as if the period of twelve years had been therein mentioned instead of the period of twenty years. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 9.

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, to be read with this Act.

11. This Act may be cited as the "Real Property Limitation Act, 1874." Short title.

12. This Act shall commence and come into operation on the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine. Commencement of Act.

As to the application of the Statutes of Limitation to registered land, see sect. 75 of the Land Registration Act, 1925, post. Registered land.

A. Limitation for Recovery of Money charged on Land and Legacies.

THE REAL PROPERTY LIMITATION ACT, 1874.

(37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.)

8. No action or suit or other proceeding shall be brought to recover any sum of money secured by any mortgage, judgment, or lien, or otherwise charged upon or payable out of any land or rent at law or in equity, or any legacy, but within twelve years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a discharge for or release of the same, unless in the meantime some part of the principal money, or some interest thereon, shall have been paid, or some acknowledgment of the right thereto shall have been given in writing signed by the person by whom the same shall be payable, or his agent, to the person entitled thereto, or his agent; and in such case no such action or suit or proceeding shall be brought but within twelve years after such payment or Money charged upon land and legacies to be deemed satisfied at the end of twelve years if no interest paid nor acknowledgment given in writing in the meantime.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

acknowledgment, or the last of such payments or acknowledgments, if more than one, was given.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

From January 1, 1879, the above section of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, was by sect. 9 of the same Act substituted for sect. 40 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833. The latter section fixed the period of limitation for the recovery of money charged upon land and legacies at twenty years; but the wording being in other respects similar to the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8, sect. 40 has not been printed here at length. The decisions under the two sections have been arranged together in one note.

(1) Mortgages.

A foreclosure action was held not to be an action to recover the mortgage money within sect. 40, but an action to recover land within sects. 2 and 24 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539; Heath v. Pugh, 6 Q. B. D. 345; 7 App. Cas. 235). A claim for payment out of money in Court made by mortgagees holding a mortgage on a reversionary interest in real estate, was held barred by sect. 40 (Humble v. H., 24 Beav. 535). But a claim by a legal mortgagee for principal and interest in a suit for the administration of the real and personal estate of a deceased owner of the equity of redemption was held to be within sect. 8 of this Act, so that an acknowledgment could be relied on (Re Lloyd's Estate, [1911] 1 I. R. 153).

Sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, barred after twelve years the personal remedy of a mortgagee to obtain payment of principal from his mortgagor, whether on a collateral bond given by him (Fearnside v. Flint, 22 Ch. D. 579), or on his covenant in the mortgage deed (Sutton v. S., 22 Ch. D. 511); even where the property charged was a reversionary interest in land, which had not fallen in (Kirkland v. Peatfield, [1903] 1 K. B. 756). In Sutton v. S., Cotton, L.J., referring to Hunter v. Nockolds (1 Mac. & G. 640; in which Lord Cottenham had held that in actions on covenant or specialty, sect. 42 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, was controlled by sect. 3 of Civil Proced. Act, 1833, post, p. 246), said, it might be right in the case of an Act passed in 1833, to read it as explained by an Act passed only three weeks later; but in the case of an Act passed in 1874, there was no such necessity to explain it by an Act passed in 1833 (22 Ch. D. 519; see Re Frisby, 43 Ch. D. 110). The section, however, did not bar an action which was brought, not against the mortgagor himself, but against a surety, who had covenanted for payment by the mortgage deed (Re Frisby, Alison v. F., per Kay, J., and Bowen, L.J., Cotton, L.J., differing, 43 Ch. D. 106); or who had given a promissory note (Re Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 541). An action on a bond given by a surety for a mortgagor to recover from the surety an indemnity against the non-payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage debt, is not within this section (Re Powers, Lindsell v. Phillips, 30 Ch. D. 291).

Sutton v. Sutton.

Presumption of payment before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, if the mortgagor continued in possession, and there had been neither payment nor demand of any principal nor interest for twenty years, this was sufficient to raise the presumption of payment (1 Ch. R. 59, 105; Trash v. White, 3 Br. C. C. 289; Christopher v. Sparke, 2 Jac. & W. 228; Cooke v. Soltau, 2 Sim. & Stu. 154; contra Joplis v. Baker, 2 Cox, 118; Leman v. Newnham, 1 Ves. sen. 51); but such presumption was liable to be rebutted, and payment of interest on part of the debt kept the whole alive (Loftus v. Smith, 2 Sch. & Lef 642). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

(2) JUDGMENTS.

Sect. 40 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, applied to a case in which a judgment was sought to be enforced against the personal estate, as well as to a case in which it was sought to be enforced against the land of the debtor (Watson v. Birch, 15 Sim. 523; Jay v. Johnstone, [1893] 1 Q. B. 190; Henry v. Smith, 2 Dru. & War. 391). Where an action of debt is brought on a judgment and judgment recovered, time runs against the former judgment from its own date (Watters v. Lidwill, 9 Ir. L. R. 362; Kealy v. Bodkin, ibid., 383).

Sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, applies to judgments generally, not merely judgments which operate as a charge on land (Hebblethwaite v. Peever, [1892] 1 Q. B. 124; Jay v. Johnstone, [1893] 1 Q. B. 189; Taylor v. Hollard, [1902] 1 K. B. 676). It barred after twelve years the right of a judgment creditor to obtain an adjudication in bankruptcy against the judgment debtor (Ex parte Tynte, 15 Ch. D. 125).

Revivor.

Proceedings to revive a judgment (as to which see C. L. P. Act, 1852, ss. 128—134; 19 & 20 Vict., c. 97, s. 10) were also held within this section (Watters v. Lidwill, 9 Ir. L. R. 362; Williams v. Welch, 3 Dowl. & L. 565; Wall v. Walsh, I. R. 4 C. L. 103). As to the effect of such proceedings on the running of time, see Farrell v. Gleeson (11 Cl. & Fin. 702); Farran v. Beresford (10 Cl. & Fin. 319); Re Blake (2 Ir. Ch. R. 643); see Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 176. And as to what lands were bound by the proceedings, see Murray v. Clarke (4 Ir. C. L. R. 610); Kirkwood v. Lloyd (11 Ir. Eq. R. 561; 12 Ir. Eq. R. 585); Re Bodkin (12 Ir. Ch. R. 61); Ryan v. Cambie (2 Ir. Eq. R. 328); Franks v. Mason (9 Ir. Eq. R. 358).

The above-mentioned sections of the C. L. P. Act, 1852, have now been repealed; and where time has elapsed since the date of a judgment which it is desired to enforce, the practice is now regulated by R. S. C. Ord. XLII., rr. 22, 23. An order for leave to issue execution made under the latter rule would seem not to affect the running of time (Evans v. O'Donnell, 16 L. R. Ir. 452).

Leave to issue execution.

Decree in equity.

A decree in equity for payment of a specific sum was a "judgment" within sect. 40 (Dunne v. Doyle, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 502).

Judgment on post obit bond, when time begins to run.

Time does not run against a judgment on a post obit bond, until the death (Barber v. Shore, 1 Jebb. & S. 610; Tuckey v. Hawkins, 4 C. B. 655; Gilman v. Chute, 11 Ir. L. R. 442; Kennedy v. Whaley, 12 Ir. L. R. 54). As to the running of time in the case of judgments entered on bonds, see Re Kingston (I. R. 3 Eq. 485); Re Keay (I. R. 3 Eq. 659).

Presumption of satisfaction of judgments before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, if a judgment creditor had lain by for twenty years without any effort to enforce his judgment, and it had not been acknowledged, it was presumed to be satisfied (Peake's Ev. 25, n.; see 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 12; Kemys v. Ruscomb, 2 Atk. 45; Willaume v. Gorges, 1 Campb. 217; Grenfell v. Girdlestone, 2 Y. & C. 662; White v. Parnther, 1 Knapp, 228, 229).

(3) LIENS.

As regards liens, in the case of a contract to sell a reversionary interest in stock, the purchaser was entitled to enforce a lien for his deposit after a long lapse of time, no Statute of Limitations directly applying (Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 487; [1899] 1 Ch. 5).

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

A vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money was held to be within sect. 40 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (Toft v. Stephenson, 7 Hare, 1; 1 D. M. & G. 28). As to when time commences to run, see Toft v. Stephenson, 5 D. M. & G. 735.

General note as to vendor's lien.

As regards a vendor's lien generally, it is settled that where a vendor delivers possession of an estate to a purchaser without receiving the purchase-money, equity, whether the estate be conveyed (Chapman v. Tanner, 1 Vern. 267; Pollexfen v. Moore, 3 Atk. 272; and see 1 Bro. C. C. 302, 424, and 6 Ves. jun. 483; Mackreth v. Symmons, 15 Ves. 329), and a receipt is endorsed on the conveyance (Coppin v. C., 2 P. W. 291; 3 Russ. 488), or be not conveyed (Smith v. Hibbard, 2 Dick. 730; Charles v. Andrews, 9 Mod. 152), and although there was not any special agreement for that purpose, and whether the estate be freehold or copyhold (Winter v. Anson, 3 Russ. 488), gives the vendor a lien on the land for the money. The lien extends to interest (Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 76). The doctrine applies in the case of other property besides land, e.g., a share in proceeds of sale of leaseholds (Davies v. Thomas, [1900] 2 Ch. 462; see Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 478), or a reversionary interest in trust funds (Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 76). But the application of the doctrine depends upon the intention of the parties (Re Albert, &c. Co., 11 Eq. 179).

When lost.

Where a vendor took a mortgage of part of the estate, his lien over the rest of the estate was held to be excluded (Capper v. Spottiswoode, Taml. 21); and where he took a mortgage of the whole estate for part of the unpaid purchase-money his lien for the balance was lost (Bond v. Kent, 2 Vern. 281; see 1 Sch. & Lef. 135). So there is no lien where the vendor takes a mortgage of another estate (6 Ves. 760), or a charge upon stock (Nairn v. Prowse, 6 Ves. 752); nor where the consideration for the conveyance was expressed to be the covenant for the payment of an annuity and a sum in gross in the event of the purchaser's marriage (Clark v. Royle, 3 Sim. 499; see Stuart v. Ferguson, 1 Hayes, 452; Parrott v. Sweetland, 3 M. & K. 655; Dixon v. Gayfere, 21 Beav. 118; 1 De G. & J. 655; Matthew v. Bowler, 6 Ha. 110; Buckland v. Pocknell, 13 Sim. 406); nor where land was purchased under the Lands Clauses Act, and the consideration was a yearly rent-charge (Jersey v. Briton Ferry Co., 7 Eq. 409); nor where the purchase-money of lands sold to a company was expressed to be payable out of moneys to be received by the company on sale of shares (Re Brentwood Co., 4 Ch. D. 562); nor as against the mortgagees of the purchaser where vendor joined in the mortgage (Cood v. Pollard, 9 Price, 544; Smith v. Evans, 28 Beav. 59). For the lien in the case of purchases with trust money, see White v. Wakefield (7 Sim. 401); Muir v. Jolly (26 Beav. 143). Vendors were held to have lost their lien by permitting the purchaser to register his conveyance with a view to a sub-sale (Kettlewell v. Watson, 26 Ch. D. 501; see Ex p. Parker, 1 Glyn. & J. 228).

When not lost.

The lien, however, may subsist notwithstanding a personal security is given for the money, whether by bill of exchange (Hughes v. Kearney, 1 Sch. & Lef. 132; Grant v. Mills, 2 Ves. & B. 306; Ex p. Peake, 1 Mad. 346); or promissory note (Gibbons v. Baddall, 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 682, n. b; Ex p. Loaring, 2 Rose 79); or bond (Winter v. Anson, 3 Russ. 488; Collins v. Collins, 31 Beav. 347). Nor is the lien lost by an improper payment to the vendor's solicitors (Wrout v. Dawes, 25 Beav. 369).

Enforcement.

The lien can be enforced by sale or mortgage (Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 76).

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

Against whom it prevails.

The lien prevails against the purchaser and his heir; against volunteers claiming under him; against sub-purchasers with notice; sometimes against sub-purchasers without notice (Rice v. R., 2 Drew. 85; Sugd. V. & P. 682, 14th ed.); and against assignees whether in bankruptcy or claiming under an assignment for the benefit of creditors (Fawell v. Heelis, Amb. 724); and against a person appointed under the Lunacy Act, 1890, s. 116, to get in a lunatic's estate (Davies v. Thomas, [1900] 2 Ch. 464).

Is assignable.

The lien is assignable by parol (Dryden v. Frost, 3 M. & C. 670), but the assignee will take it subject to any prior incumbrances created by the vendor (Lacy v. Ingle, 2 Ph. 413).

In the case of sales to a railway company.

A vendor of land to a railway company who have entered and used it for the purpose of their railway, is entitled to the same lien on land for the unpaid purchase-money and the same remedies for enforcing it as an ordinary vendor (see Munns v. Isle of Wight Ry. Co., 5 Ch. 414, where an order was made for a receiver, and the cases there quoted: Wing v. Tottenham Co., 3 Ch. 740, where the vendor was held entitled to a sale). The company will not be restrained from running trains over the land until the sale (Lyatt v. Stafford Co., 13 Eq. 261). The vendor has no lien for the costs of an arbitration under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (Ferrers v. Stafford Co., 13 Eq. 524).

Real Estate Charges Acts.

The word "mortgage" in Real Estate Charges Act, 1854, has been extended so as to include the lien, both in the case of testators and intestates (see R. E. C. Acts, 1867 and 1877, post; Broadbent v. Groves, 24 Ch. D. 94). As to a lien on real estate for an unpaid legacy, see Barker v. B. (10 Eq. 438).

At common law.

An unpaid vendor has not at law any lien on the title-deeds for his purchase-money (Goode v. Burton, 1 Ex. 189; see also Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Ad. 498; Baker v. Dewey, 1 B. & C. 704; Lampon v. Corke, 5 B. & Ad. 606; Oxenham v. Esdaile, 3 Y. & J. 362; Hooper v. Ramsbottom, 4 Camp. 121; Harding v. Ambler, 3 M. & W. 279).

Purchaser's lien.

A purchaser may have a lien on the land for the deposit paid by him to the vendor (Rose v. Watson, 10 H. L. C. 683; Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 478; [1899] 1 Ch. 5; Whitbread v. Watt, [1902] 1 Ch. 835), which may be lost by his repudiation of the contract (Cornwall v. Henson, [1899] 2 Ch. 710). He may also have a lien for his costs (Kitton v. Hewett, [1904] W. N. 21).

(4) Money charged upon or payable out of land.

Under sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, the rule is that in the case of simple contract debts charged on land, the remedy against the land is not barred for twelve years (Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 39; Re Raggi, [1913] 2 Ch. 206, where there was a gift of residuary realty and personalty on trust for sale and conversion and payment of debts; see Barnes v. Glenton, [1899] 1 Q. B. 891), although the personal remedy by action is barred in six (Barnes v. Glenton, [1899] 1 Q. B. 885; compare Hugill v. Wilkinson, 38 Ch. D. 480; Powell v. Brodhurst, [1901] 2 Ch. 167; Firth v. Slingsby, 58 L. T. 483; Re Witham, [1922] 2 Ch. 413). Re Jauncey, Bird v. Arnold, [1926] Ch. 471.

The same section barred after twelve years the right to recover paving expenses made a charge on land by statute (Hornsey Board v. Monarch Society, 24 Q. B. D. 1); and also an action to recover interest on money paid for redeeming land tax, which by statute was charged on the land (Skene v. Cook, [1902] 1 K. B. 682). The section applies where money is charged on land, even where there is no personal liability on the part of the owner of the land to pay the money (ibid., 689). The section, however, does not apply to an action on the personal covenant of a lessee in respect of a royalty (Darley v. Tennant, 53 L. T. 257); or in respect of rent reserved (Donegan v. Neill, 16 L. R. Ir. 309).

A share of the proceeds of land settled on trust for sale was held to be "money payable out of land," within sect. 42 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (Bowyer v. Woodman, 3 Eq. 313; see Pawsey v. Barnes, 20 L. J. Ch. 393; and see the argument, Re Lloyd, L. v. L., [1903] 1 Ch. 389, 395, 397). In Mutlow v. Bigg (18 Eq. 246), land was devised on trust for sale, and part having been sold, but part remaining unsold, an action was brought for execution of the trust. Hall, V.-C., held that sect. 40 had no application, except as regards the part sold.

In the case of a settlement of land the claim of a remainderman to be recouped out of the assets of the life tenant arrears of mortgage interest, which ought to have been kept down by him, but which had in fact been paid by means of a sale of part of the land, was within sect. 40 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, as being a lien or charge on a life estate in land (Kirwan v. Kennedy, 3 I. R. Eq. 472).

Money due on a bond by an ancestor was not money payable out of land within sect. 40 (Roddam v. Morley, 2 K. & J. 336; 1 D. G. & Jo. 18; see Morley v. M., 5 D. M. & G. 610).

Same hand to pay and receive.

The statute cannot be applied to a case where there is no assignable person liable to pay the charge, no person who by the delay could be induced to suppose that the charge was abandoned or merged, and where the rent out of which the interest ought to be paid belongs to the same person who is entitled to the interest (Burrell v. Egremont, 7 Beav. 206); as where a tenant for life paid off a charge on settled estates (ibid.; see Kensington v. Bouverie, 7 D. M. & G. 144; 7 H. L. C. 557; Baldwin v. B., 4 Ir. Ch. R. 501; Carbery v. Preston, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 455; secus, where the tenant for life of realty devised, subject to the life interests on trust for sale, paid debts of the testator (Re Welch, [1916] 1 Ch. 375); or where the person entitled beneficially to the rents of land was also entitled to the interest of a mortgage thereon, although the trustees were different (Topham v. Booth, 35 Ch. D. 607). In these cases payment of interest has been presumed. The same principle was applied where a married woman living with her husband was entitled to the interest of mortgage money charged on her husband's land (Re Hawes, Burchell v. H., 62 L. J. Ch. 463; see Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., [1900] 2 Ch. 561). There must be a hand to receive as well as a hand to pay, and the party to receive must be capable of giving a discharge (M'Carthy v. Daunt, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 29; Carroll v. Hargrave, I. R. 5 Eq. 123). See further, the cases quoted under the R. P. Lim. Act, 1837 (ante, p. 204); and under Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 5 (post, p. 252).

Sect. 40 had no application in the case of an annuity charged on real estate in Jamaica (Pitt v. Dacre, 3 Ch. D. 295).

(5) Legacies.

Sect. 40 was applicable to legacies payable out of personal estate only (Paget v. Foley, 2 Bing. N. C. 679; Sheppard v. Duke, 9 Sim. 569; Henry v. Smith, 2 Dru. & War. 391; O'Hara v. Creagh, 1 Long. & T. 65). The section extended to a residue (Prior v. Horniblow, 2 Y. & Coll. 201); or share of residue (Christian v. Devereux, 12 Sim. 271); and to an annuity payable out of personalty. (Re Ashwell, Johns. 112; see Dower v. Dower, 15 L. R. Ir. 264). Sect 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, barred after twelve years the right to recover legacies or shares in residue which were not held by executors on express trusts (Re Rowe, Jacobs v. Hind, 61 L. T. 581; Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 119; Re Barker, Buxton v. Campbell, [1892] 2 Ch. 491; see Rudd v. R., [1895] 1 Ir. R. 15). But where defendants are sued as trustees of a fund and not as executors, then apart from the Trustee Act, 1888, no Stat. Lim. applies (Re Timmis, Nixon v. Smith, [1902] 1 Ch. 184). So the words in the above section "action to recover a legacy" did not include an action by a residuary legatee against trustees to recover loss from non-realisation of residue (Re Swain, S. v. Bringeman, [1891] 3 Ch. 233). Or an action to make trustees liable for improperly paying over a settled share (Re Timmis, supra). An action for administration brought by a residuary legatee is none the less an action to recover a legacy within sect. 8 by reason of an allegation that the defendant executor had at the time of action brought assets in his hands (Re Richardson, Pole v. Pattenden, [1920] 1 Ch. 423, where Re Croydon (55 Sol. J. 632) was not followed). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

Where the person liable for payment of a legacy and the person entitled to receive it are the same, no question of limitation can arise (Binns v. Nicholls, 2 Eq. 256; see Blachford v. Worsley, 27 Ch. D. 676). Compare the cases as to charges (supra), and as to specialties (post, p. 252). As to the effect of an order in lunacy (carrying over funds to a particular account) in preserving the right to recover a legacy, see Re Walker (7 Ch. 120); and generally as to the running of time in the cases of actions to recover legacies, see especially the cases as to a present right to receive a legacy, p. 223, post.

An executor who had possessed assets sufficient to pay a legacy, died leaving it unpaid, and having charged his real estates with his debts. The right to sue for the legacy as such having been barred, it could not be claimed under the charge of debts (Piggott v. Jefferson, 12 Sim. 26).

Annuities.

An annuity given by will and payable out of personal estate only should, it seems, be treated as a series of "legacies" within the section payable de anno in annum (Dower v. D., 15 L. R. 264; see Edwards v. Warden, 9 Ch. 505). In this view non-payment of the annuity for the full statutory period does not extinguish the annuitant's title, but each instalment must be considered separately, having regard to the time at which a present right to receive the same accrued (ibid.; secus Re Ashwell, Joh. 117).

Presumption of payment of legacies before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.

Before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, lapse of time was frequently held a bar to a suit for a legacy upon the ground of raising a presumption of payment (Higgins v. Crawford, 2 Ves. jun. 572; Pickering v. Stamford, ibid., 582; Jones v. Turberville, ibid., 11; Montressor v. Williams, 1 Rop. on Leg. 792, 2nd ed.; Campbell v. Graham, 1 R. & M. 453; 2 Cl. & Finn. 429). Even after the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the presumption was applied in the case of an annuity (Shadbolt v. Vanderplank, 29 Beav. 405). For cases where the presumption was not raised, see Shields v. Rice (3 Jur. 970); Lee v. Brown (4 Ves. 362); Prior v. Horniblow (2 Y. & Coll. 206); Ravenscroft v. Frisby (1 Coll. 16).

(6) Express trusts —of money payable out of land;

According to the law as it stood before 1879, where an express trust existed, there having regard to sect. 25 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the claim was not barred by sect. 40. So held where land was vested in trustees upon express trust to secure payment of debts (Dillon v. Cruise, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 70; Hunt v. Bateman, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 360; see Dundas v. Blake, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 138; Heenan v. Berry, 2 J. & Lat. 303); or of charges (Young v. Waterpark, 13 Sim. 204; 15 L. J. Ch. 63, distinguished in Re Power's Estate, [1913] 1 I. R. 530; Blair v. Nugent, 3 J. & Lat. 658; Lawton v. Ford, 2 Eq. 97; see Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. C. 907); or of legacies or annuities (Watson v. Saul, 1 Giff. 188; Ward v. Arch, 12 Sim. 472). On the other hand where an annuity was given by will, and real estate was charged with it, and then the estate was simply devised charged with the payment of the annuity, it was not an express trust (Francis v. Grover, 5 Hare, 39). Compare the case where an annuity was charged on land in favour of a charity, and the devisee being bound to give effect to the gift, was held to be an express trustee (Commrs. of Donations v. Wybrants, 2 J. & Lat. 182). A devise of realty subject to and charged with legacies did not create an express trust in favour of the legatees (Proud v. P., 32 Beav. 234; see also Re Hazlette, [1915] 1 I. R. 285). A vendor's lien was not an express trust (Toft v. Stephenson, 7 Hare, 1; Dundas v. Blake, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 138; Henderson v. Atkins, 28 L. J. Ch. 913). Where a testator charged his real estates with his debts, and devised a particular plantation in trust to pay his debts, it was held, that as to the plantation a trust had been created in favour of the creditors, but that as to the other real estates they had a mere charge (Jacquet v. Jacquet, 27 Beav. 332). On the construction of an entire will, it was held in one case that an express trust arose to secure a legacy (Thomson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215; see Williams v. W., [1900] 1 Ch. 152), and in another that there was no express trust to secure annuities (Cunningham v. Foot, 3 App. Cas. 974; see Re Lacy, Royal Association v. Kydd, [1899] 2 Ch. 156; Hanly v. Carroll, [1907] 1 I. R. 166).

Now the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10, provides that after January 1, 1879, no action, suit, or other proceeding shall be brought to recover any sum of money or legacy charged upon or payable out of any land or rent at law or in equity, and secured by an express trust, except within the time within which the same would be recoverable if there were not any such trust (see post, p. 241).

The case of sums of money secured by an express trust of personalty vested in a trustee, but which sums are not charged upon or payable out of land, appears to be unaffected by the last-mentioned section; and in the case of such sums it was held, previously to the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, that the trust of personalty prevented the statute from operating as a bar (see Playfair v. Cooper, 17 Beav. 187; compare the Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25 (2), Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 262). It seems that the last-mentioned rule did not apply to the case where the trust of personalty was one imposed upon an executor (Cadbury v. Smith, 9 Eq. 42; Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & Fin. 382; Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 45). But the executor might become a trustee (see Charlton v. Durham, 4 Ch. 433); e.g. where he severed a legacy (Phillipo v. Munnings, 2 M. & C. 309; explained in Harcourt v. White, 28 Beav. 309; Tyson v. Jackson, 30 Beav. 384; see Re Smith. Henderson Roe v. Hitchins, 42 Ch. D. 302); or executed a declaration of trust (Re Rowe, Jacobs v. Hind, 60 L. T. 599). The executor might become a trustee by assenting to a legacy given to him in trust (Dix v. Burford, 19 Beav. 412); but not in general by performance of his duties qua executor (Re Mackay, M. v. Gould, [1906] 1 Ch. 31), e.g. not by assenting to an absolute legacy (Re Rowe, supra); or by signing a residuary account (Re Rowe, 61 L. T. 581; see Tyson v. Jackson, 30 Beav. 384, and Re Claremont, [1923] 2 K. B. 718). The ordinary implied trust which affects personal estate held by an executor for the benefit of legatees does not prevent the running of time (Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 124; Re Barker, Buxton v. Campbell, [1892] 2 Ch. 491; see Re Lacy, Royal Association v. Kydd, [1899] 2 Ch. 149).

Trustee Act, 1888.

In the case of proceedings against trustees, regard must be had to sects. 1, 8, and 12 of the Trustee Act, 1888 (post, p. 283).

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

(7) Present right to receive.

As regards the meaning of the words "next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a discharge" (which occur in both the above sections) these words should be compared with the first words in the sections, which suggest that at the time when the present right accrues some "proceeding" can be brought. This view was adopted by Kekewich, J., who interpreted the words "present right to receive" as meaning a right to recover by legal proceedings (Re Pardoe, M'Laughlin v. Penny, [1906] 1 Ch. 269), and held that where an action could not have been brought, time did not run (ibid.; see Re Blachford, B. v. Worsley, 27 Ch. D. 676, where the legatee was one of the executors). See, however, Hornsey Board v. Monarch Society, 24 Q. B. D. 6. In the case of next-of-kin, it has been laid down that they have no present right to receive from the administrator a reversionary estate belonging to the intestate before it falls into possession (Re Johnson, Sly v. Blake, 29 Ch. D. 971). So in the case of a residuary legatee, his claim to recover residuary assets was not barred as to assets received by the executor within the statutory period before the action, but was barred as to assets received previously (Adams v. Barry, 2 Coll. 290; Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 119; Bright v. Larcher, 27 Beav. 130; see the form of Decree in Larkins v. Phipps (1873), W. N. 207). In the case of a pecuniary legatee whose legacy is payable immediately, time runs against him from the death, not from the expiration of a year from the death (Waddell v. Harshaw, [1905] 1 I. R. 46). It would seem on principle that this rule applies even where the only assets are reversionary, at least where such reversionary assets can be made available for payment of the legacy (see Bright v. Larcher, 27 Beav. 136; 4 De G. & J. 618; see contra the dicta of Kay J., Re Ludlam, L. v. L., 63 L. T. 332). Where a pecuniary legacy was bequeathed out of a reversionary fund, the present right to receive did not arise until the reversion fell in (Re Ludlam, L. v. L., ibid; Earle v. Bellingham, 24 Beav. 448). As to a reversionary share of residue, the title to which was accelerated, see Russell v. Crowley, [1907] 1 I. R. 275. In the case of a legacy payable on a future event time ran from the event (Rudd v. R., [1895] 1 I. R. 15).

In the case of next-of-kin.

Residuary legatees.

Pecuniary legatees.

Charges.

With respect to charges on land, it has been said that in each case the moment to be looked to is the moment when the charge comes into present operation (Hornsey Board v. Monarch Society, 24 Q. B. D. 9; Re Lambert, [1906] 1 I. R. 231). A present right to receive means an immediate right without waiting for the happening of any future event (Farran v. Beresford, 10 Cl. & Fin. 334; see Ryan v. Combie, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 334). Where the tenant for life of land failed to keep down mortgage interest, time did not run against the remainderman's claim to be recouped out of the life tenant's assets until his death (Kirwan v. Kennedy, 3 I. R. Eq. 472). And where a testator devised all his real estate to A for life and on her death charged the same with money and the devise included a contingent reversionary interest in land which did not fall in until long after the death of A, time as regards such reversionary interest ran against the chargees not from the falling in of the interest but from the death of A, when the money might have been raised by sale or mortgage (Re Owen, [1894] 3 Ch. 225; and see Re Witham, [1922] 2 Ch. 413).

Where a legacy was charged upon real estate, it was held that a present right to receive the same accrued notwithstanding the existence of prior charges (Proud v. P., 11 W. R. 101). See, however, Faulkner v. Daniel, 3 Hare, 212, where legatees whose legacies were charged on real estate subject to prior charges were not affected by lapse of time so long as the prior charges subsisted. See also Ravenscroft v. Frisby, 1 Coll. 22.

In a case before the Court of Appeal the expenses of paving works were charged by statute upon the plots fronting the street upon the completion of such works by the local board, but the amount charged upon each plot was not ascertained by apportionment for several years later; and the Board subsequently sued the owner of one plot to enforce his proportion of the charge. It was held that time ran against the Board not from the apportionment but from the completion of the works when the charge arose (Hornsey Board v. Monarch Society, 24 Q. B. D. 1). It was said that a "present right to receive" was distinguishable from "a present right to sue" (ibid., 9), an interpretation which should be compared with the cases set out above.

Disabilities.

The present right to receive must accrue to some person capable of giving a discharge for the same; accordingly, where a legacy was bequeathed to an infant, time ran from her majority (Piggott v. Jefferson, 12 Sim. 26). When time has commenced to run against a legatee and the executor is subsequently found a lunatic, time continues to run (Boldero v. Halpin, 19 W. R. 320).

(8) Part payment.

The words in sect. 40, "by the person by whom the same shall be payable or his agent," apply equally to the making of a payment and the signing of an acknowledgment (Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115, 124; see Harlock v. Ashberry, 19 Ch. D. 539). A payment to take a case out of the statute must be such a payment as amounts to an acknowledgment of liability (19 Ch. D. 548). Compare Lewin v. Wilson, 11 App. Cas. 639. The whole idea is that the payment is an admission of the right of the person to whom it is paid (Bradshaw v. Widdrington, [1902] 2 Ch. 436, 450). Payment by a mere stranger will not do (Homan v. Andrews, 1 Ir. Ch. Rep. 106; Linsell v. Bonsor, 2 Bing. N. C. 245; Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115). The person by whom money is payable means, in the case of a claim by equitable lien, the person entitled to the land on which the charge is sought to be fixed (Toft v. Stephenson, 1 D. M. & G. 40; Pears v. Laing, 12 Eq. 54). In the case of a mortgage, it is sufficient if there is a payment by the mortgagor, or by a person who as between himself and the mortgagor is bound to pay (Bradshaw v. Widdrington, [1902] 2 Ch. 436, 450). Payment of interest by a receiver who was the agent of a mortgagor was sufficient (Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 134; Berwick v. Price, [1905] 1 Ch. 642; see Re Hale, Lilley v. Foad, [1899] 2 Ch. 107; Whitley v. Lowe, 25 Beav. 421). Where on the death of a mortgagor his widow (entitled to dower) took possession of the land with the heir's consent, payment of interest by the widow (who was regarded as the heir's agent) kept the mortgage alive as against him (Ames v. Mannering, 26 Beav. 583). If estates A, B and C are included in one mortgage, and payments of interest are made out of the rents of A, these payments are sufficient to keep alive the remedy of the mortgagee against B and C (Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115). Where a loan was secured by covenant and a mortgage of Blackacre, and the mortgagor died having specifically devised Blackacre to A, and Whiteacre, which also belonged to him, to B, and the mortgagee thirty-five years later claimed to enforce the specialty debt against Whiteacre, payment of interest by A kept alive the mortgagee's right to resort to Whiteacre for payment of his principal. The Court held that being a payment by one of several interested, it bound the others on the principle of Roddam v. Morley, 1 De G. & J. 1, quoted under the Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 5, post (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 332).

In cases within sect. 8 payment of interest by one co-debtor or co-contractor will preserve the remedy against the other, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97 not applying (Re Frisby, Alison v. Frisby, 43 Ch. D. 111; see Re Powers, 30 Ch. D. 291; Baillie v. Irwin, [1897] 2 I. R. 614; Seager v. Aston, 26 L. J. Ch. 302). For payments on judgments against co-debtors, see Brew v. Brew, [1899] 2 I. R. 163; Re Kingston, I. R. 3 Eq. 485. A mortgagor, however, who assigned the equity of redemption did not by subsequently paying interest prevent time running in favour of the assignee (Newbould v. Smith, 33 Ch. D. 127; 14 A. C. 423; compare Lyall v. Fluker (1873), W. N. 208). The mortgagee's receipt of the surrender value of a policy on the mortgagor's life included in the mortgage was not a sufficient payment to entitle the mortgagee to sue on the covenant (Re Clifden, Annally v. Agar-Ellis, [1900] 1 Ch. 774; see Re Conlan, 29 L. R. Ir. 199; Scott v. Synge, 27 L. R. Ir. 560). But where a mortgagor assigned an annuity to the mortgagee as security and the mortgagee received the annuity to an amount exceeding the money secured, it was held that the surplus was a payment sufficient to keep alive another mortgage held by the same mortgagee from the same mortgagor (Staley v. Barrett, 26 L. J. Ch. 321; see Re Irwin, [1907] 1 I. R. 537). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

Where the hand to pay and to receive was the same, payment of interest on a charge has been presumed (see the cases under R. P. Lim. Act, 1837, ante, p. 204, and under Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 5, post, p. 252); as where the person entitled to interest on the charge was also tenant for life of the charged land, and owed a duty to the remainderman (Burrell v. Egremont, 7 Beav. 236; distinguished in Re Welch, [1916] 1 Ch. 375, quoted ante, p. 220), secus where payment of the money charged was claimed out of the chargor's personal estate under his covenant, and the devisee of the land was absolute owner, and owed no such duty (Re England, Steward v. England, [1895] 2 Ch. 107). The last decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeal, on the principle that the landowner was not personally liable to the chargee to pay the interest (ibid., [1895] 2 Ch. 825). And this principle appears to have been applied to the case of a tenant for life by North, J., in refusing to presume a payment of interest (Re Allen, Bassett v. A., [1898] 2 Ch. 499). Same hand to pay and receive.

Part payment by an administrator out of an asset recovered by him within the statutory period, will not revive the right to sue for general administration, which was barred at the time (Re Johnson, Sly v. Blake, 29 Ch. D. 964). Payment of interest under an order in a foreclosure action to which infants were parties was considered as made without prejudice to their rights (Thwaites v. M'Donogh, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 97).

(9) Acknowledgments in writing.

The words of the 8th section of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, and sect. 42 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, being nearly the same, most of the decisions as to acknowledgments under these two sections are arranged in one note. As to acknowledgments under the 14th and 28th sections, see ante, pp. 177, 200.

Both sections refer to an "agent." An agent need not be authorised in writing (Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 250). Nor need the agent have at the time an actual authority to act (Trulock v. Robey, 12 Sim. 407). Wherever a specific appointment of an agent is necessary, a subsequent recognition of acts done by him in that capacity is better even than a previous authority (James v. Bright, 5 Bing. 533; Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 233). See generally, as to the extent and nature of an agent's authority, Pole v. Leask, 28 Beav. 562; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 829. In Toft v. Stephenson (1 D. M. & Who is agent.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

G. 28), an inquiry was directed as to the agency of an attorney who had acknowledged a debt.

By whom an acknowledgment may be made.

An acknowledgment is sufficient if signed by the person who represents the estate out of which the money claimed is payable, or by his agent. Thus, where an estate was devised to a trustee in trust to sell and pay the testator's debts, and subject thereto in trust for A, an acknowledgment was sufficient where signed by the trustee or his agent; but such an acknowledgment will not impose on him any personal liability to pay the debt. The words in sect. 42, "by whom the same was payable," do not denote merely the persons who are legally bound by contract to pay, but all persons against whom payment might be enforced (Bolding v. Lane, 1 D. J. & S. 122; St. John v. Boughton, 9 Sim. 219). An acknowledgment signed by the attorney of the trustees of the will of a deceased purchaser of land who had entered before payment of purchase-money was sufficient (Toft v. Stephenson, 1 D. M. & G. 28). An acknowledgment by one of two executors and devisees in trust of real estate, even if effectual as regards personal estate, did not prevent the operation of sect. 42 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, as regards the real estate (Astbury v. A., [1898] 2 Ch. 111). An acknowledgment by a debtor given after he has transferred his property for the benefit of the creditors is not sufficient (Lyall v. Fluker (1873), W. N. 208; conf. Newbould v. Gould, 33 Ch. D. 127). An acknowledgment by a mortgagor of more than six years' arrears of interest being due upon a first mortgage, does not preclude a puisne mortgagee from relying on the statute (Bolding v. Lane, 1 D. J. & S. 122; see Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115; and Astbury v. A., [1898] 2 Ch. 117; where it is suggested that an acknowledgment by an executor will not bind a different person who is devisee of the real estate). In Re Fitzmaurice (15 Ir. Ch. R. 445), the tenant for life of the equity of redemption in a mortgaged estate, gave a written acknowledgment to the mortgagee, which kept alive against the remainderman the mortgagee's right to recover more than six years' interest. See Beckett v. De la Cour, 11 L. R. Ir. 187; Gregson v. Hindley, 10 Jur. 383; Barclay v. Owen, 60 L. T. 222.

To whom.

Both the sections require the acknowledgment to be made "to the person entitled" or his agent. But in dealing with this the Court has not restricted itself within narrow limits. If it be made in a schedule, affidavit, or answer, it is sufficient, although it may be said that in those cases it is made to the Court and not to the party. Sugden, L.C., thought the decisions right, and that they proceeded upon a liberal but yet a fair and just construction of the statute (Blair v. Nugent, 3 J. & Lat. 677).

Sufficient acknowledgments have been held to arise from an answer in Chancery (ibid., 673); an affidavit in a suit (Tristam v. Harte (Long. & T. 186); an insolvent's schedule (Barrett v. Bermingham, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 537; Morrough v. Power, 5 Ir. L. R. 494; Hanan v. Power, 8 Ir. L. R. 505); a debtor's will (Millington v. Thompson, 3 Ir. Ch. R. 235; see Re Hoyle, H. v. H., [1893] 1 Ch. 92; Scott v. Synge, 27 L. R. Ir. 560). In Hill v. Stawell (2 Ir. L. R. 302), where the report of the master on an inquiry as to incumbrances was not a sufficient acknowledgment, the creditor was not a party (Wrixon v. Vize, 3 Dr. & W. 123). A statutory declaration made by a mortgagor in the lunacy of the mortgagee was held, having regard to its terms, to be an insufficient acknowledgment (Hervey v. Wynn, 22 T. L. R. 93).

What amounts to an acknowledgment.

As to what is a sufficient acknowledgment. An acknowledgment under the present sections need not, it seems, amount to a new promise to pay. It is a withdrawal by virtue of the statutes of the abrogation of the remedy and leaves the old debt still recoverable (Re Lacey; Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 345). The personal liability of the party signing the acknowledgment is out of the question (St. John v. Boughton, 9 Sim. 295). Consider Holland v. Clark (1 Y. & C. Ch. 151), where a letter written by one of two executors, not for the purpose of charging himself with the payment of a legacy, but of throwing the burden on his co-executor, was held by Knight Bruce, V.-C., not to be a sufficient acknowledgment. And consider the dicta in Grenfell v. Girdlestone (2 Y. & C. Ex. 676, a decision on the law before 1833). A written proposal of terms, adding "this being done, it is hoped the judgment against B. will be satisfied," was a sufficient acknowledgment of the judgment debt (Vincent v. Willington, Long. & T. 456). A correspondence between the treasurer of a Co. and a person holding a mortgage on works of the Co. was a sufficient acknowledgment (Jortin v. S. E. Ry. Co., 6 D. M. & G. 270). The acknowledgment need not state the amount alleged to be due (St. John v. Boughton, 9 Sim. 225). 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8.

When must the acknowledgment under the section be made.

Sect. 8 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, operates only as a suspension of the remedy and not as an extinguishment of the right (Kibble v. Fairthorne, [1895] 1 Ch. 224). Accordingly an acknowledgment after the statutory period has elapsed is sufficient (Harty v. Davis, 13 Ir. L. R. 23; Re Clifden, Annaly v. Agar-Ellis, [1900] 1 Ch. 774; Waring v. W., 5 Ir. Ch. R. 6; see contra, Gregson v. Hindley, 10 Jur. 383; Homan v. Andrews, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 106; Hervey v. Wynn, 22 T. L. R. 93: compare on this point the rule as to land, ante, p. 210, and as to simple contract debts, post, p. 268). So a payment after the statutory period (Beamish v. Whitney, [1908] 1 I. R. 38).

A condition of sale as to evidence of the discharge of a statute barred equitable charge on land was discussed in Hopkinson v. Chamberlain, [1908] 1 Ch. 853.

B. Limitation for Recovery of Personal Estate of Intestates.

Law of Property Amendment Act, 1860, s. 13.

Extension of section 40 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, to cases of claims to estates of intestates.

The above section, after reciting R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40, proceeds: "no suit or other proceeding shall be brought to recover the personal estate, or any share of the personal estate, of any person dying intestate, possessed by the legal personal representative of such intestate, but within twenty years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a discharge for or release of the same, unless in the meantime some part of such estate or share, or some interest in respect thereof, shall have been accounted for or paid, or some acknowledgment of the right thereto shall have been given in writing, signed by the person accountable for the same, or his agent, to the person entitled thereto, or his agent; and in such case no such action or suit shall be brought, but within twenty years after such accounting, payment, or acknowledgment, or the last of such accountings, payments, or acknowledgments, if more than one was made or given."

It should be observed that sect. 8 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, does not extend to claims to estates of intestates. As to such claims accordingly the period of limitation was still the period prescribed by the above section (repealed by L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924).

The above section was retrospective (Willis v. Howe, 43 L. T. 375; Re Johnson, Sly v. Blake, 29 Ch. D. 964), and applied to a partial as well as an entire intestacy (Willis v. Howe, supra). An action was barred by this section in Martin v. Beauchamp (1888, W. N. 247); also in Re Lacy, Royal Association v. Kydd (1899, 2 Ch. 149). aid Re M'Causland, [1908] I. R. 327; where executors were held not to be express trustees for next of kin. Having regard to this section, an action to obtain revocation of an old grant of administration was dismissed as vexatious (Willis v. Beauchamp, 11 P. D. 59). The section was no bar to a claim made by the next of kin to leaseholds of the intestate which had been occupied for more than twenty years by the administrator (who was also heir-at-law to the intestate), under a belief that the property was freehold (Reed v. Fenn, 35 L. J. Ch. 464). A widow who had entered into possession on behalf of herself and all the next of kin was held entitled to the benefit of the section, her possession being attributed to her character of administratrix (Mallon v. M'Alea, [1923] 1 I. R. 30). See also as to lapse of time in the case of claims to an intestate's estate, Cresswell v. Dewell (4 Giff. 460); Bermingham v. B., [1918] 1 I. R. 436.

As to a "present right to receive" the personal estate of an intestate, and as to part payments and acknowledgments in relation thereto, see the cases quoted under sect 8 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, pp. 223 et seq. As to deaths intestate after 1925, see Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, ss. 46 et seq., post.

R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 41.

No arrears of dower to be recovered for more than six years.

41. No arrears of dower, nor any damages on account of such arrears, shall be recovered or obtained by any action or suit for a longer period than six years next before the commencement of such action or suit.

In equity, as at law, there was before this Act no limitation to a claim of the arrears of dower (Oliver v. Richardson, 9 Ves. 222; see Mordaunt v. Thorold, 3 Lev. 375; Curtis v. C., 2 Br. C. C. 620; Dormer v. Fortescue, 3 Atk. 130; Tilley v. Bridger, 2 Vern. 519; Prec. in Ch. 252; Wakefield v. Child, 1 Fonbl. Eq. 159, n.; the Dower Act, 1833, post; Bamford v. B., 5 Hare, 203; Marshall v. Smith, 5 Giff, 37; Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 713). This section is repealed in the case of all deaths after December 31, 1925, by the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post, s. 45 of which abolishes dower in those cases.

D. Arrears of Rent or of Interest in respect of Money charged on Land or in respect of Legacies.

R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42.

No arrears of rent or interest to be recovered for more than six years.

42. No arrears of rent (a) or of interest in respect of any sum of money charged upon or payable out of any land or rent (b), or in respect of any legacy (c), or any damages, in respect of such arrears of rent or interest, shall be recovered by any distress, action or suit, but within six years next after the same respectively shall have become due (d), or next after an acknowledgment of the same in writing shall have been given to the person entitled thereto, or his agent, signed by the person by whom the same was payable or his agent (e): provided nevertheless, that where any prior mortgagee or other incumbrancer shall have been in possession of any land, or in the receipt of the profits thereof, within one year next before an action or suit shall be brought by any person entitled to a subsequent mortgage or other incumbrance on the same land, the person entitled to such subsequent mortgage or incumbrance may recover in such action or suit the arrears of interest which shall have become due during the whole time that such prior mortgagee or incumbrancer was in such possession or receipt as aforesaid, although such time may have exceeded the said term of six years. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

(a) As to how far this section was retrospective, see Paddon v. Bartlett (3 Ad. & Ell. 884); Peyton v. M'Dermot (1 Dru. & Wal. 198); Vincent v. Willington (1 Long. & T. 456). The section remains in full force after, as well as before, 1879 (see sect. 9 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, p. 214). How far this section retrospective.

(1) ARREARS OF RENT.

By the Lim. Act, 1623, s. 3, actions of debt for arrears of rent must have been commenced within six years. The section was confined to actions for arrears of rent upon a demise without deed, and did not extend to rent reserved by specialty (Freeman v. Stacey, Hutton, 109). Old law.

Sect. 42 was held in Ireland to include tithe rentcharge (Eccl. Commrs. v. Sligo, 5 Ir. Ch. R. 46; Conolly v. Gorman, [1898] 1 I. R. 20). Only two years' arrears of an ordinary tithe rentcharge can be recovered (54 Vict. c. 8, s. 10, sub-s. 2). As to uncommuted tithes, see 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 74 (both repealed except as to uncommuted tithes by S. L. Rev. Acts, 1887 and 1888); Robinson v. Purday (16 M. & W. 11). Tithe rentcharge and tithes.

As regards rent reserved, the opinion was expressed in 1836 that, having regard to the definition of "rent" in sect. 1 the words "arrears of rent" in sect. 42 did not include a conventional rent reserved on a lease (Paget v. Foley, 2 Bing. N. C. 688, 690). In 1841, the Court of Exchequer held that "rent" in sect. 2 of the Act did not include such a conventional rent (Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 122, approved in Irish Commission v. Grant, 10 A. C. 26; Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 576; see ante, p. 148); but it was suggested by Parke, B., and Rolfe, B., that there was a distinction between "rent" in the earlier sections of the Act and "arrears of rent" in sect. 42 (Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & Rent reserved.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

W. 120, 125). Later on it was laid down by the H. L. (in a case of rent reserved where a remedy against land was being asserted) that sect. 42 prevents the recovery of more than six years' arrears: the House in effect holding (1) that "rent" in the 42nd section did include rent reserved on a lease; and (2) that as against the land the six years' limit applied to rent reserved (Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 375, 382). Where, however, arrears of rent reserved by specialty were sought to be recovered in a personal action on the specialty it was decided that such action might be brought at any time within the twenty years allowed by the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 3, post, p. 246 (Paget v. Foley, 2 Bing. N. C. 679; see Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 653). The last-mentioned rule has not been altered by the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8, ante, p. 215. See Darley v. Tennant, 53 L. T. 257; Donegan v. Neill, 16 L. R. Ir. 309. For the period during which an account of mesne rents will be directed in equity, see post, p. 234.

Fee-farm rent.

Arrears of a fee-farm rent were limited by this section to six years (Humfrey v. Gery, 7 C. B. 567).

Annuities.

An annuity charged on land by will comes within the meaning of the word rent in the 42nd section, as explained by the 1st section; therefore no more than six years' arrears are recoverable (Ferguson v. Livingston, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 202; Francis v. Grover, 5 Ha. 39); so also when the annuity is charged on realty and personalty (Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140). The rule applies even where the property charged is a reversionary interest in land (Smith v. Hill, 9 Ch. D. 150; approving Vincent v. Going, 1 J. & Lat. 697; Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405; see contra Wheeler v. Howell, 3 K. & J. 198). The 2nd section of the Act provides for the case where the right or title to an annuity is disputed (see ante, p. 148). The 42nd section provides for the case where the title to the annuity is not disputed, but the distress is made for the arrears due (James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 552).

In the case of an annuity charged on land by deed and also secured by covenant, arrears were in a proceeding against the land limited by the 42nd section to six years (Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 640; Harrison v. Duignan, 2 Dr. & War. 295). But in such a case it was held that an action of covenant might under the 3rd section of the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, be brought within twenty years (Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & El. 558); even where the annuity as a charge on land had become extinguished by non-payment for thirty-three years (Manning v. Phelps, 10 Exch. 59). As to the effect on this ruling of Sutton v. S. (22 Ch. D. 511), see note on Mortgage Interest, post, p. 231. See also Re Turner, Klaftenberger v. Groombridge, [1917] 1 Ch. 432; Ryott v. Bentley, [1920] 1 I. R. 321.

An annuity bequeathed out of personalty only is neither "rent" nor "interest in respect of a legacy" within this section (Roch v. Callen, 6 Ha. 531; Re Ashwell, Johns. 112); so held contrary to the opinion of Lord St. Leonards (R. P. Stat. 138).

The words "arrears of rent" in the 42nd section were held to include a portion charged by will upon land, and payable by periodical instalments (Uppington v. Tarrant, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 268, 269).

(2) Arrears of Interest.

(b) "Sect. 40 enumerates mortgages, liens, judgments; but sect. 42 adopts the previous general description of money 'charged upon or payable out of land,' a description which includes every security, omitting the enumeration which it was unnecessary to repeat. It is impossible to draw any distinction between the sums of money mentioned in the one section and in the other" (Sugd. R. P. Stat. 139: see Bolding v. Lane, 4 Giff. 574).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

(a) On mortgages of land.

The section was applied in the case of a charge on land (Thompson v. Hurley, [1905] 1 I. R. 588). A mortgagee of canal works was limited under this section to six years' arrears (Hodges v. Croydon Canal Co., 3 Beav. 86); and a mortgagee of a reversionary interest in the proceeds of lands devised on trust for sale was similarly limited; the mortgagor's property being held to be "money payable out of land" within this section (Bowyer v. Woodman, 3 Eq. 313; compare Re Lambert, [1906] 1 I. R. 220). But a mortgagee of turnpike tolls (which are not within the Act) was not limited to six years' arrears (Mellish v. Brooks, 3 Beav. 22). Nor was any such limit applied to the case of a mortgagee of a reversionary interest in trust funds invested on mortgage (Smith v. Hill, 9 Ch. D. 143; see Jordan v. Young (1878), W. N. 229); or in pure personalty (Clarkson v. Henderson, 14 Ch. D. 348; Mellersh v. Brown, 45 Ch. D. 225, a foreclosure action). A summons by a second mortgagee against the first mortgagee and others interested in surplus proceeds of sale to have it determined whether he is entitled to repayment, and to obtain it, is in substance an action by a beneficiary for execution of the trusts of the surplus proceeds, and not an action or suit for the recovery of interest in respect of money charged on or payable out of land within this section (Re Thomson's Mortgage Trusts, [1920] 1 Ch. 508).

Cap. 27, section 42, and cap. 42, section 3.

Sutton v. Sutton.

In some cases under R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42, a difficulty arose in consequence of Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 3 (post); and the Courts treated the provision of the latter section as an exception out of the former (Paget v. Foley, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 690; Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & E. 558). In Hunter v. Nockolds (1 Mac. & G. 640) Lord Cottenham (overruling Du Vigier v. Lee, 2 Hare, 326) laid down that the effect of the conjoint enactment was, that no more than six years' arrears of interest in respect of any sum charged upon or payable out of any land or rent could be recovered by way of distress, action, or suit, other than and except in actions on covenant or debt on specialty, in which case the limitation was twenty years (see Hughes v. Kelly, 3 Dru. & War. 482). In a later case which fell within the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, the C. A. held that the personal remedy of a mortgagee (on covenant) to obtain payment from the mortgagor of the principal sum secured by the mortgage was barred in twelve years by sect. 8 of the last-mentioned Act; and they refused to follow Lord Cottenham in treating sect. 3 of the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, as permitting (by way of exception to the R. P. Lim. Acts) an action on covenant to recover a mortgage debt to be brought within twenty years (Sutton v. S., 22 Ch. D. 511; see Macdonnell v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 1 I. R. 568). It should be observed that the section discussed by the C. A. was sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, which deals with principal sums secured by mortgage. They did not discuss interest, or sect. 42 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, which remains in full force (see sect. 9 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, p. 214). It has, however, been held in Ireland that, having regard to Sutton v. S., only six years' arrears of interest on money charged on land can be recovered in an action on covenant (Thompson v. Hurley, [1905] 1 I. R. 595; and see Re Turner, Klaftenberger v. Groombridge, [1917] 1 Ch. 422).

Arrears of interest to which mortgagee is entitled through foreclosure;

After Hunter v. Nockolds it was held, in several cases, that in an action to foreclose real estate, a mortgagee could not recover more than six years of interest, although the mortgage debt was secured by covenant (Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405; Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 412; Round v. Bell, 30 Beav. 121). It made no difference that the property mortgaged was reversionary (Vincent v. Going, 1 J. & Lat. 697; Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405;

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

Smith v. Hill, 9 Ch. D. 143; see contra, Wheeler v. Howell, 3 K. & J. 198; Jordan v. Young (1878), W. N. 229). Compare the large arrears recovered where a contingent reversion was charged (Re Lambert, [1906] 1 I. R. 220). Where mortgaged land was taken under the L. C. C. Act, 1845, the money being paid into Court, and the mortgagee petitioned for payment, the proceeding was treated as analogous to an action to recover land, and the mortgagee only recovered six years' interest (Re Stead, 2 Ch. D. 713). On the other hand, on the principle of retainer, a mortgagee selling land under his power can retain, out of money in his hands more than six years' arrears (Re Marshfield; M. v. Hutchins, 34 Ch. D. 721). See in the case of personal estate, Re Hancock; H. v. Berry, 59 L. T. 199. On the same principle where the executors of a mortgagee sold land and paid the proceeds into Court in a suit to administer the mortgagee's estate, the executors on their petition for payment out were entitled to more than six years' arrears (Edmunds v. Waugh, 1 Eq. 418).

through retainer.

Arrears payable on redemption.

In redemption actions a mortgagor can only redeem on payment of all arrears of interest, even exceeding six years (Edmunds v. Waugh, 1 Eq. 421; Dingle v. Coppen, [1899] 1 Ch. 726; Powell v. Brodhurst, [1901] 2 Ch. 167). And where A mortgaged to B a share passing under a will in proceeds of sale of land, and in an action to administer the testator's estate the land was sold and the proceeds went into Court; the mortgagor petitioning for payment out was only allowed to recover the fund on payment to the mortgagee of full arrears (Re Lloyd; L. v. L., [1903] 1 Ch. 385; see Re Hazeldine, [1908] 1 Ch. 34).

Tacking

In Elvy v. Norwood (5 De G. & S. 240), the heir of a mortgagor who had covenanted for himself and his heirs to pay interest, could not redeem without paying twenty years' interest, as the mortgagee was entitled to tack. Since the Administration of Estates Act, 1833, a mortgagee of freeholds may tack his simple contract debt in a foreclosure suit as against the heir of the mortgagor (Thomas v. Thomas, 11 Beav. 341). As to a mortgagee of copyholds, see Rolfe v. Chester (20 Beav. 610). The question of tacking must be raised on the pleadings (Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405). But see p. 686, post.

Effect on mortgage interest of barring of principal.

As regards mortgage interest. A further question may be raised as to the effect upon it of the barring of principal. It has been said that when a mortgage debt has gone, the right to interest has gone also (Skene v. Cook, [1901] 2 K. B. 15); reference being made to the doctrine that interest is an accessory which falls to the ground with the principal (Parr's Bank v. Yates, [1898] 2 Q. B. 465). It seems doubtful whether this doctrine applies to the case where a mortgage deed contains separate covenants for payment of principal and interest (see Parr's Bank v. Yates, supra; Hollis v. Palmer, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 717). And it may be pointed out that, while payment of a statute barred principal debt cannot be enforced, the debt itself is not extinguished (Smith v. Betty, [1903] 2 K. B. 322); and further that principal and interest are distinct debts and can be sued for separately (Attwood v. Taylor, 1 Man. & G. 207).

Possession of prior incumbrancer.

Under the exception in this clause, where there are several incumbrances on an estate, and one incumbrancer enters, the right of a subsequent incumbrancer to recover interest during such possession is saved, provided he come within one year after the possession terminates. A judgment creditor who has the first security, and enters, is a prior incumbrancer in possession within this proviso (Henry v. Smith, 2 Dru. & War. 390). The prior incumbrance referred to in this exception is one which affects the interest upon which the subsequent incumbrance is also a charge (Vincent v. Going, 1 J. & Lat. 697). An annuitant was able under the exception to recover more than six years' arrears, which accrued during the possession of a prior incumbrancer (Drought v. Jones, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 303, "a doubtful authority"; Sugd. R. P. Stat. 146, n.). See also Montgomery v. Southwell, 2 Con. & Law. 263. Where a mortgagor sold the equity of redemption and assigned outstanding charges to a trustee for the purchaser, and the purchaser entered, the land was not in the possession of a prior incumbrancer within this exception (Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. C. 115; where the nature of this exception is explained by Lord Westbury).

(b) On judgments.

Debts secured by judgments are sums of money charged upon or payable out of land within the meaning of this section. In relation to the Stat. Lim., the rights of judgment creditors to arrears of interest, as against the real and personal estates of their debtor, are equal and co-extensive. As far as the statute protects the real estate, to the same extent the personal estate is protected. The interest given by the Debtors (Ireland) Act, 1840, s. 26, is subject to the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42 (Henry v. Smith, 2 Dru. & War. 381; followed in Re Turner, Klaftenberger v. Groombridge, [1917] 1 Ch. 422; compare Watson v. Birch, 15 Sim. 523; Jay v. Johnstone, [1893] 1 Q. B. 190). In the case of an Irish judgment not registered as a mortgage only six years' arrears of interest are recoverable out of the judgment debtor's personal estate (Macdonnell v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 1 I. R. 556). See as to the Irish judgment creditor's remedy against the land, Shea v. Moore, [1894] 1 I. R. 158.

1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 17, 18.

Formerly a judgment did not carry interest, but interest might be recovered at law as damages, by action on the judgment (Gaunt v. Taylor, 3 M. & K. 302). Now by Judgments Act, 1838, ss. 17, 18 (post), every judgment debt carries interest at 4 per cent. from entering up until satisfaction. As to interest on debts generally, see p. 236, post.

(c) On unpaid purchase-money of land.

In the case of a contract to sell land the vendor's right to receive interest on the purchase-money did not accrue until completion, and he recovered forty years' arrears (Toft v. Stevenson, 5 D. M. & G. 735).

Interest on an incumbrance for six years before writ was allowed where the action enured for benefit of all incumbrancers (Archdall v. Anderson, 25 L. R. Ir. 433; see Greenway v. Bromfield, 9 Hare, 201).

(d) On charges on land.

(c) Arrears of interest on legacies can only be recovered for six years, calculated from the filing of the bill (Hughes v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 683; Chappell v. Rees, 1 D. M. & G. 393; Re Walker, 7 Ch. 120; see Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215). But where the assets consisted of a reversion, and for the benefit of the estate realisation was delayed, legatees received interest from the expiration of one year from the death of testatrix, a period exceeding six years (Blachford v. Worsley, 27 Ch. D. 676). As to interest on legacies, see Lord v. L., (2 Ch. 782); Re Richards (8 Eq. 119) and as to the time from which such interest runs, see Re Waters (42 Ch. D. 517); Re Bignold (45 Ch. D. 496); Re Friend, F. v. Young ([1898] W. N. 26); Re Gardner, Long v. G., ([1892], W. N. 164); R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 64; Walford v. W., [1912] A. C. 658, where the legacy was demonstrative.

(e) On legacies.

(f) On charges on personal estate.

Sect. 42 does not apply to money charged on personal estate. In an action to enforce a vendor's lien on personal estate interest for more than six years was allowed (Re Stucley; S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 67; see ante, p. 218).

(3) Express trusts.

(d) According to the law as it stood before 1879, it was settled that where an express trust existed, there having regard to sect. 25

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, the claim was not barred by sect 42. So held in the case of annuities secured on realty (Ward v. Arch, 12 Sim. 472; Mansfield v. Ogle, 24 L. J. Ch. 700; Cox v. Dolman, 2 D. M. & G. 592; Snow v. Booth, 8 D. M. & G. 69; Lewis v. Duncombe, 29 Beav. 175; Knight v. Bowyer, 2 De G. & J. 421; see Round v. Bell, 30 Beav. 121; Cunningham v. Foot, 3 App. Cas. 974); in the case of a mortgage secured by a term in a trustee (Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 412); in the case of a simple contract debt charged by will on real estate (Blower v. B., 7 W. R. 101); and in the case of interest on a legacy directed to be raised by a sale of realty (Gough v. Bult, 16 Sim. 323; Kellett v. K., I. R. 5 Eq. 298; Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215). Now by R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10 (post, p. 241), an express trust does not prevent time running in case of arrears of rent or of interest in respect of any money or legacy charged upon or payable out of any land or rent. The section does not affect legacies not so charged or payable.

Trustee Act, 1888.

In the case of proceedings against trustees commenced after 1889, regard must now be had to the Trustee Act, 1888, ss. 1, 8, and 12, post, p. 283.

(e) See the cases as to acknowledgments, ante, p. 225.

Acknowledgments.

Part payment.

Sect. 42 differing from sect. 40 makes no mention of part payment. So that it would seem that part payment of an instalment of interest would not prevent the operation of the statute as to the balance (Astbury v. A., [1898] 2 Ch. 115).

Disabilities.

The 42nd section contains no exception in favour of persons under disabilities; and if the Act be construed literally, infants and lunatics, and other persons under disabilities, will only be enabled to recover six years' interest (see De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Exch. 182; Sugd. V. & P., 11th ed., 638).

(4) Account of rents in equity.

A suit for the recovery of mesne rents and profits in equity, was not a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent within sect. 42 (Hicks v. Salitt, 3 D. M. & G. 816). On the question how far the account was to be carried back in such suits, the following distinctions were laid down. In cases of express trusts, it was said that the Statutes of Limitation would afford no defence, and that an account would be directed from the accruer of the plaintiff's title (Sturgis v. Morse, 3 De G. & J. 1; Wright v. Chard, 4 Drew. 673; Mathew v. Brise, 14 Beav. 341; see now R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10, post, p. 241). Where there is no express trust, but the person in possession has had notice of the plaintiff's title, it was formerly held, that as at law, more than six years' mesne profits could not be recovered, so in equity the account would not be carried back beyond six years from the filing of the bill (Reade v. R., 5 Ves. 744; Harmood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 215); and in Hicks v. Sallitt (3 D. M. & G. 782), where the defendant was a purchaser for value, with notice of the plaintiff's title, Turner, L.J., thought that the Lim. Act, 1623, might be applicable, by analogy to the action of account at law. An account for six years was granted in Hickman v. Upsall (4 Ch. D. 144); see Burnell v. B. (11 Ch. D. 213; Forster v. F., [1918] 1 I. R. 95). But, "where there is no trust, no fraud, no infancy, no suppression, where, in short, there is a mere bona fide adverse possession, it is not according to the course of the Court to carry back the account of rents beyond the filing of the bill" (Hicks v. Sallitt, 3 D. M. & G. 782, where Lord Cranworth refers to the older cases; see Thomas v. T., 2 K. & J. 79; Penny v. Allen, 7 D. M. & G. 409; Morgan v. M., 10 Eq. 99). The principle of the rule, however, is that in order to disentitle the plaintiff to an account of rents before the institution of the suit, there must be neglect in bringing the suit (Hickman v. Upsall, 4 Ch. D. 148).

(b) For six years.

(c) From filing of bill.

Infancy of plaintiff.

Where the plaintiff has been under the disability of infancy during the possession of the defendant, the latter is regarded as a bailiff for the former, and an account will be directed during the period of infancy (Blomfield v. Eyre, 8 Beav. 250; Nanney v. Williams, 22 Beav. 452; Schroder v. S., Kay. 591; Pascoe v. Swan, 27 Beav. 508; Pelly v. Bascombe, 4 Giff. 390; Thomas v. T., 2 K. & J. 79; Wall v. Stanwick, 34 Ch. D. 763; see Re Hobbs, H. v. Wade, 36 Ch. D. 553, and the older cases discussed in Howard v. Shrewsbury, 17 Eq. 399). But so far as regards the arrears of rent, it was said that the bill must be filed within six years after the plaintiff comes of age (Lockey v. L., 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 304, pl. 10; see as to recovering the land, Tinker v. Rodwell, 69 L. T. 591, ante, p. 153). It has been laid down in Ireland, that a person entering on the estate of an infant, whether the infant has been actually in possession or not, will be fixed with a fiduciary position towards the defendant, (1) when he is the infant's natural guardian; (2) when he is so connected by relationship or otherwise with the infant as to impose upon him a duty to protect, or at least not to prejudice, the infant's rights; (3) when he takes possession with knowledge or express notice of the infant's rights (Quinton v. Frith, I. R. 2 Eq. 396). See cases quoted ante, p. 152.

Laches.

Where the plaintiff has been guilty of laches an account will only be directed from the filing of the bill (Dormer v. Fortescue, 3 Atk. 130; Pettiward v. Prescott, 7 Ves. 541; Pickett v. Loggan, 14 Ves. 215; Schroder v. S., Kay, 591). The right to an account, even in the case of mines, may be lost by laches (Parrott v. Palmer, 3 M. & K. 632). A party's right to an account may also be restricted in consequence of laches in not finding out a mistake earlier by the means which were in his power (Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & Coll. Ex. 42).

In case of charities.

There is no fixed limit of time in directing an account against the trustee of a charity. In each case the Court is bound by the particular circumstances (Att.-Gen. v. Exeter, Jac. 448). An account against a corporation for a breach of trust in receiving charity funds was not confined either to the filing of the information, or to six years years before that time (Att.-Gen. v. Brewers' Co., 1 Mer. 495; Att.-Gen. v. Stafford, 1 Russ. 547). And an account of the rents and profits of a charity estate was decreed for a period of 200 years against the corporation, who, by their answer, admitted the receipt, and stated that they had from time to time debited themselves in their books with the amount (Att.-Gen. v. Exeter, Jac. 443; 2 Russ. 362; 3 Russ. 395; Att.-Gen. v. Caius College, 2 Keen, 110; Att.-Gen. v. Pretyman, 4 Beav. 462; see now R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10, post, p. 241). Where, however, charitable trustees have acted honestly, though mistakenly, the Court will not make them account for rents received prior to the filing of the information (Att.-Gen. v. Wax Chandlers' Co., L. R. 6 H. L. 14; Att.-Gen. v. Christchurch, 2 Russ. 324). When the Court limits an account of the rents and profits of charity estates to the time of filing the information, or to six years before that date, it does not act with reference to the statute. The Court proceeds upon the principle that it will not deal harshly with men, who, meaning to discharge their duty faithfully, have nevertheless mistaken it (Att.-Gen. v. Exeter, 2 Russ. 367). The principles upon which the Court acts in taking an account against corporations who are trustees of charities, and have misapplied the funds, are discussed in Att.-Gen. v. Newbury (3 M. & K. 647); see Att.-Gen. v. Davis (18 W. R. 1132).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

(5) INTEREST ON DEBTS GENERALLY.

Interest on debts at common law.

At common law, independently of statute, it was the general rule that interest was not payable on any debts unless expressly agreed on, or unless a promise could be implied from the usage of trade or other circumstances (Higgins v. Sargent, 2 B. & C. 348; Rhodes v. R., Johns, 653; see L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 140). As to implication from the usage of trade. Bills and notes have always been held to carry interest (Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & Ald. 305). This interest is now regulated by the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, ss. 9 (3) and 57 (see Lawrence v. Willcocks, [1892] 2 Q. B. 696). Interest on bills or notes is given as damages (ibid.; see Ex p. Charman (1887), W. N. 184). As to implication from other circumstances. An agreement to pay interest was implied between banker and customer (Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 228). Also where a tradesman delivered accounts charging interest and the customer without objection made payments on account (Re Anglesey, Willmot v. Gardner, [1901] 2 Ch. 548).

In some early cases it was said that interest might be given where a debt was wrongfully detained (Eddowes v. Hopkins, 1 Doug. 376; Arnott v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353). But this was said to be inconvenient by Lord Tenterden, who laid down the rule that interest is not due on money secured by a written instrument, unless it appears on the face of the instrument that interest was intended to be paid, or unless it be implied from the usage of trade, as in the case of mercantile instruments (Page v. Newman, 9 B. & C. 381). This rule is not now open to question (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1893] A. C. 441). The result of the modern English authorities seems to be that in a case which cannot be brought within the common law rule (stated above) or within the Civil Procedure Act, 1833, ss. 28 and 29 (stated below), interest on a debt cannot be claimed on the ground that the debt has been wrongfully withheld (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1893] A. C. 437—441; Toronto v. T., [1906] A. C. 117, 120). A dictum to the contrary effect by Lord Westbury in Caledonian Co. v. Carmichael (L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 66) has been quoted in some modern English cases (Webster v. British Co., 15 Ch. D. 174; Borthwick v. Elderslie, [1905] 2 K. B. 520). But the dictum related to Scotland where the law may be different (see L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1893] A. C. 443).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, ss. 28, 29.

The Civil Procedure Act, 1833, enacts (sect. 28) that upon all debts or sums certain, payable at a certain time or otherwise, the jury, on the trial of any issue, or on any inquisition of damages, may, if they shall think fit, allow interest to the creditor at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest from the time when such debts or sums certain were payable, if such debts or sums be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time; or if payable otherwise, then from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until the time of payment; provided that the interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law. The Act provides further (sect. 29), that the jury, on the trial of any issue, or on any inquisition of damages, may, if they shall think fit, give damages in the nature of interest, over and above the value of the goods at the time of the conversion or seizure, in all actions of trover or trespass de bonis asportatis, and over and above the money recoverable in all actions on policies of assurance made after the passing of this Act.

Section 28.

Lord Tenterden was the author of the above statute, which was passed with reference to the rule laid down by him in Page v. Newman, supra (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1893] A. C. 440).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

Sect. 28 was declaratory of the law before the statute (Webster v. British Co., 15 Ch. D. 173, 178). Under both sect. 28 and sect. 29, any interest given is by way of damages (ibid. 174, 175; see Re Roberts, Goodchap v. R., 14 Ch. D. 49).

The Act gives the jury a discretion, "if they shall think fit" (Attwood v. Taylor, 1 M. & G. 322; Att.-Gen. v. Ludlow, 1 Hall & T. 219). And interest will not be given where there has been no default on the part of the person against whom interest is claimed (Att.-Gen. v. Ludlow, supra; Webster v. British Co., supra). There must be either a written demand or a written instrument under which the sum is payable (Harper v. Williams, 4 Q. B. 219). A written application for a loan was not such a written instrument (Taylor v. Colt, 3 H. & C. 452). The instrument must ascertain the sum and the time (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 144). As regards the sum certain interest was allowed where the instrument gave data for ascertaining the amount, and a dispute as to such amount was settled by the Court (McIntosh v. G. W. Ry. Co., 4 Giff. 683; see Newton v. Nock, 43 L. T. 197; L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 143). The sum certain must be due absolutely and in all events (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1893] A. C. 436). As regards the time certain, six months after death is a time certain (Re Horner, Fooks v. Horner, [1896] 2 Ch. 188). Where the instrument does not mention the time certain, but contains provisions which on the happening of an event render the time certain, this is not sufficient within the statute (Merchant Co. v. Armitage, L. R. 9 Q. B. 114; L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 120; see contra, Duncombe v. Brighton Co., L. R. 10 Q. B. 371).

Written instrument.

Demand in writing.

A demand in writing may entitle the jury to give interest from date of demand, although the writing claimed interest from a prior date (Londesborough v. Mowatt, 4 El. & Bl. 1). The demand need not specify the exact amount of the debt (Mildmay v. Methuen, 3 Drew. 91, a demand for work and labour in an administration suit; Geake v. Ross, 32 L. T. 666, disapproving Hill v. South Staffordshire Ry. Co., 18 Eq. 154; see Ex p. Kemp, [1894] 3 Ch. 702). A solicitor may give notice that he will claim interest on his bill of costs delivered (Berrington v. Phillips, 1 M. & W. 48; see Ward v. Eyre, 15 Ch. D. 130). And where the client is dead the notice should be given to the representative, even where an administration action is pending (Re McMurdo, [1896] W. N. 171). A summons in a winding-up was a sufficient demand (Ex p. Alison, 15 Eq. 394). But an answer in a Chancery suit was not (Ward v. Eyre, supra); nor a claim in a writ (Rhymney Ry. Co. v. Rhymney Iron Co., 25 Q. B. D. 146; see Wills v. Wood, [1892] 1 Q. B. 687); nor a statement in a tradesman's bill-head that interest will be charged after a certain time (Re Lloyd Edwards, Williams v. Trench, 61 L. J. Ch. 22). Where a written notice as to interest was given under this section, and the defendants paid the principal due into Court, the Court ordered payment of subsequent interest in addition (Hull Co. v. N. E. Ry. Co., 5 D. M. & G. 872). Interest on compensation for injury by waterworks was given from the written demand (Fletcher v. Birkenhead, [1906] 1 K. B. 605).

Section 29.

An action for damages for minerals wrongfully taken is not within sect. 29 (Phillips v. Homfray, [1892] 1 Ch. 465).

Damages and interest.

As regards damages, while interest cannot be payable on damages, it may be taken into consideration on computing damages (G. W. Ry. Co. v. Fisher, [1905] 1 Ch. 325), and was included in the damages given for breach of implied covenants for title (ibid.), and also in the damages given for a maritime collision (The Kong Magnus, [1891] P. 235).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

Rate.

When the rate of interest is not expressed, the rate is a question for the Court (Gibbs v. Fremont, 11 Exch. 25, where 25 per cent. was allowed). The rule was to recommend the jury to give 5 per cent. (Re Roberts, 14 Ch. D. 52; see Peruvian Guano Co. v. Dreyfus, [1892] A. C. 166); but the Court will follow the current rate at the time (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 120, 137; see Wainwright's Case, 62 L. T. 30, where 4 per cent. was given). The rate usually allowed on bills of exchange is 5 per cent. (Re Commercial Bank, 36 Ch. D. 529; see Lawrence v. Willcocks, [1892] 1 Q. B. 696). Judgment debts carry interest at 4 per cent. (Judgments Act, 1838, s. 17, post, where see note; and see R. S. C. Ord. 42, r. 16; Ord. 55, r. 62); and on the recovery of judgment on a covenant the covenant is merged in the judgment (Ex p. Fewings, 25 Ch. D. 338; Re European Co., 4 Ch. D. 33). But a mortgagee may on the construction of his deed be entitled to retain his security until paid interest at a rate higher than 4 per cent. (Economic Society v. Usborne, [1902] A. C. 147; see Popple v. Sylvester, 22 Ch. D. 98; Arbuthnot v. Bunsilall, 62 L. T. 234). Where judgment is signed in default of appearance on a claim for a liquidated demand, the rate of interest not being specified, the rate up to judgment is 5 per cent. (R. S. C., Ord. 13, rr. 3 and 4).

Rate of interest in equity.

4 per cent.

Courts of equity have adopted the rate of 4 per cent. in many cases. Thus the purchase-money of a reversionary interest in personalty with interest thereon for twenty-six years at 4 per cent. was held secured by the vendor's lien (Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 67). A purchaser of land duly rescinding may recover his deposit with interest at 4 per cent. (Weston v. Savage, 10 Ch. D. 736; Re Marshall & Salt, [1900] 2 Ch. 206). Where on an open contract for the purchase of land, the purchaser does not complete at the proper time, he must pay interest on the price at 4 per cent. (Paine v. Meller, 6 Ves. 352; Fletcher v. Lancashire Ry Co., [1902] 1 Ch. 908; see Re Richard & G. W. Ry., [1905] 1 K. B. 68). Executors of a surety retained out of a legacy bequeathed by him to the principal debtor the amounts paid by their testator with interest at 4 per cent. (Re Watson, Turner v. W., [1896] 1 Ch. 937). Where advances have to be brought into hotchpot interest must be calculated at 4 per cent. (Re Davy, Hollingsworth v. D., [1908] 1 Ch. 61; where the earlier decisions are referred to by the Court of Appeal; Re Cooke, Randall v. C., [1916] 1 Ch. 480). Quære, whether the same rate applied in setting off shares in a partition action (see Re Dracup, Field v. D., [1894] 1 Ch. 59).

3 per cent.

In questions between tenant for life and remainderman interest has been calculated at 3 per cent. in apportioning an annuity (Re Perkins, Brown v. P., [1907] 2 Ch. 596); in applying the rule in Re Chesterfield's Trusts (Re Goodenough, Marland v. Williams, [1895] 2 Ch. 537; Re Cleveland, Hay v. Woolmer, ibid., 542; Rowlls v. Bebb, [1900] 2 Ch. 118; but in Re Baker, B. v. Public Trustee, [1924] 2 Ch. 271, 4 per cent); and in applying the rule in Howe v. Dartmouth (Re Nicholson, [1895], W. N. 106; Re Lynch Blosse, [1899] W. N. 27; Re Woods, Gabellini v. W., [1904] 2 Ch. 4; Re Chaytor, C. v. Home, [1905] 1 Ch. 233). But a tenant for life was held entitled to 4 per cent. on the estimated capital value of retained unauthorised investments (Re Owen, Slater v. O., [1912] 1 Ch. 519; Re Beech, Saint v. B., [1920] 1 Ch. 40). As to the rate between cestui que trust and trustee, see below.

Interest in equity.

The earlier cases in equity as to interest are collected, C. P. Coop. 209—250, n. The Court of Chancery followed the law in dealing with legal claims (Booth v. Leycester, 3 M. & C. 459). But it usually decreed interest in cases of purely equitable demands, e.g., suits for equitable waste, or against trustees who misapplied trust moneys (L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., [1892] 1 Ch. 142; see further Hyde v. Price, 8 Sim. 578; Re Powell, 10 Hare, 134; Martyn v. Blake, 3 Dru. & War. 125; Mansfield v. Ogle, 4 De G. & J. 38; Spartali v. Constantinidi, 20 W. R. 823). Interest was given as damages for non-payment of money (Marsh v. Jones, 40 Ch. D. 563). On setting aside a sale by a trustee to himself interest was not charged on rents (Silkstone Co. v. Edey, [1900] 1 Ch. 167). In ordinary cases it is against the practice of a Court of equity to allow anything in the nature of compound interest (Re Magheramorne, Hogg v. H., [1901] W. N. 152; see the special cases below). As to the interest allowed on portions, see Balfour v. Cooper, 23 Ch. D. 472; Lewin, 12th ed., 486.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

As regards interest between trustee and c. q. t., the true principle has been said to be, that a trustee must be charged with such interest as he either has received, or ought to have received, or which he may fairly be presumed to have received (Att.-Gen. v. Alford, 4 D. M. & G. 851). Thus a trustee who kept moneys in his hands and used them as his own has been charged with simple interest at the rate of 5 per cent. (Jones v. Foxall, 15 Beav. 388; Williams v. Powell, ibid., 461; Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 233; Re Jones, J. v. Searle, 49 L. T. 91; see Vyse v. Foster, 8 Ch. 329; and compare Rule 11 of the rules under the Judicial Trustee Act, 1896). In other cases 4 per cent. has been charged (Re Emmet, E. v. E., 17 Ch. D. 142; see in Ireland McArdle v. Gaughran, [1903] 1 I. R. 106); but in England 5 per cent. is still the rule (Re Davis, D. v. D., [1902] 2 Ch. 314). A husband who takes possession of his wife's separate money is prima facie a trustee. If she knows of the act, his estate will be liable to repay to her the money with interest at 4 per cent. from his death (Wassell v. Leggatt, [1896] 1 Ch. 559). If she did not know of the act, interest may run from the taking possession (see Dixon v. D., 9 Ch. D. 593). Where promoters were compelled to make good to the company a secret profit, they were charged with interest at 3 per cent. (Re Olympia, Lim., [1898] 2 Ch. 171; see, however, Gluckstein v. Barnes, [1900] A. C. 255). Where the trustee had not had the use of the money he was in some cases charged only with 3 per cent. (Re Barclay, B. v. Andrew, [1899] 1 Ch. 674; Gilroy v. Stephen, 51 L. J. Ch. 834; 46 L. T. 761; see Re Stuart, Smith v. Stuart, [1897] 2 Ch. 593). Compound interest has been charged against a trustee where there was a direction to accumulate (Re Emmet, E. v. E., 17 Ch. D. 142; Re Barclay, supra); where he had employed the money in trade (Jones v. Foxall, 15 Beav. 388; Williams v. Powell, ibid., 461; see Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 242); and where the c. q. t. was an infant, and the income was not required for maintenance. (Jones v. Foxall, supra; Vyse v. Foster, L. R. 7 H. L. 346; Gilroy v. Stephen, 51 L. J. Ch. 834; 46 L. T. 761). See further Lewin, 12th ed., 396 et seq.

Interest between trustee and c.q.t.

As to interest between banker and customer, see Crosskill v. Bower (32 Beav. 86); Williamson v. W. (7 Eq. 542); and between principal and agent, Turner v. Burkinshaw (2 Ch. 488); Burdick v. Garrick (5 Ch. 233); G. W. Ry. Co. v. Cunliffe (9 Ch. 525); Baring v. Stanton (3 Ch. D. 502). Where unconscionable bargains have been entered into with moneylenders, the Court will only allow the sums actually advanced to be recovered together with interest at 5 per cent. (Miller v. Cook, 10 Eq. 641; Tyler v. Yates, 6 Ch. 665; Aylesford v. Morris, 8 Ch. 484; see now Money Lenders Act, 1900). There is no general rule as to the interest the Court will allow on repayment of money expressed to be the consideration of an absolute assignment, which is treated only as a security (Re Unsworth, 2 Dr. & Sm. 337; where 5 per cent. was allowed). Where under a contract a fixed sum is charged on land and made payable at a fixed date, nothing being said about interest, the chargee is prima facie entitled to receive out of the land interest from that date (Re Drax, Savile v. D., [1903] 1 Ch. 781). Interest at the rate of 4 per cent, was allowed on a simple contract debt secured by deposit of deeds, where there had been no stipulation as to interest (Re Kerr, 8 Eq. 331). As to interest on charges, see Lippard v. Ricketts (14 Eq. 291); on debenture bonds, Price v. *G. W. On arrears of annuity.

537). Where an annuity is in arrear "the established rule of the Court (which, however, is only general and not inflexible) is, that interest cannot be recovered on the arrears" (Martyn v. Blake, 3 Dru. & War. 125; Mansfield v. Ogle, 4 De G. & J. 41; Blogg v. Johnson, 2 Ch. 228; Wheatley v. Davies, 24 W. salary, see Rishton v. Grissell (10 Eq. 393). Interest was allowed at 5 per cent. where default had been made in the performance of a covenant to pay money (Knapp v. Burnaby, 9 W. R. 765; Re Horner, Fooks v. H., [1896] 2 Ch. 188; see Re Roberts, Goodchap v. R., 14 Ch. D. 49; Mellersh v. Brown, 45 Ch. D. 228). Where a bond does not specify a day for payment, it is payable on the day of date, and interest runs from that day (Farquhar v. Morris, 7 T. R. 124). Where a date is specified, see as to interest after that date, Cook v. Fowler (L. R. 7 H. L. 27); Re Dixon, Heynes v. D.

Bonds.

([1900] 2 Ch. 561). It is the general rule both at law (Brangwin v. Parrot, 2 W. Bl. 1190; White v. Sealey, 1 Dougl. 49), and in equity, to consider the penalty of the bond as the limit of the debt or damages which can be recovered (see Hatton v. Harris, [1892] A. C. 547). But there are exceptions to this rule (see the earlier cases collected in C. P. Coop. 209—230; and see Clarke v. Abingdon, 17 Ves. 106; Hughes v. Wynne, 1 M. & K. 20; Walter v. Meredith, 3 Y. & Coll. 264; Knipe v. Blair, [1900] 1 Ir. R. 372; and Mathews v. Keble, 3 Ch. 691, where the interest allowed, together with the principal, exceeded the penalty).

As to deducting income tax on payments in respect of interest, see Crane v. Kilpin (6 Eq. 334). And as to calculation of interest and apportionment in questions between a tenant for life and remainderman, see Re Grabowski (6 Eq. 12); Cox v. Cox (8 Eq. 343); Maclaren v. Stainton (11 Eq. 382); Re Moore (54 L. The rate allowed would probably formerly have been 3 per cent. (see Goodenough, Marland v. Williams, [1895] 2 Ch. 537; Re Cleveland, Hay v. Wolmer, ibid., 542). But see Re Owen, [1912] 1 Ch. 519; Re Beech, [1920] 1 Ch. 40; Re Baker, [1924] 2 Ch. 271, quoted ante, p. 238.

Interest in liquidation of a company.

The Civil Procedure Act, 1833, s. 28, applies to calls made in winding up a company where the notice of call states that interest will be charged (Barrow's Case, 3 Ch. 784). But provisions in articles as to interest on calls do not apply to calls made by liquidators (Re Welsh Flannel, &c., Co., 20 Eq. 360). As regards debts due from a company where under the Act interest would be payable, it may be claimed in a winding-up (Times Assurance Co.'s Case, 2 H. & M. 722). The rule in the compulsory winding-up of an insolvent company is that creditors whose debts carry interest get dividends on what was due for principal and interest at the winding-up, but no subsequent interest except there be a surplus (Warrant Finance Co.'s Case, 4 Ch. 643). The same rule applies in a voluntary winding-up (Re Salt, 98 L. T. 558). As to the application of the above rule where a creditor has security or a right of proof against another company, see Warrant Finance Co.'s Case (No. 2) (5 Ch. 86); Quartermaine's Case, [1892] 1 Ch. 639; and compare Ex p. Findlay (17 Ch. D. 334). Creditors whose debts do not carry interest are not allowed interest in a winding-up (Re Hatfield Co., 11 W. R. 971). But a demand in writing for payment may be made under the Act so as to entitle the creditor to interest (Re East of England Co., 4 Ch. 14; but see Re Herefordshire Co., 4 Eq. 250). As to the interest now allowed in the case of a company wound up by the Court, see the Companies Winding-up Rules, 1909, rule 97. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

In administration, where a debt of the deceased carries interest, interest is paid accordingly, and where it does not carry interest, interest is paid at the rate of £4 per cent. from the date of judgment out of assets remaining after satisfaction of the costs, debts, and interest in respect of debts carrying interest (R. S. C., Ord. 55, rr. 62, 63). Where the estate is insolvent, interest on a debt carrying interest is calculated up to judgment, and a dividend paid on that amount (Re Summers, Boswell v. Gurney, 13 Ch. D. 136; see Re London, &c., Hotels Co., [1892] 1 Ch. 639; Re Whitaker, W. v. Palmer, [1904] 1 Ch. 299). Interest at 4 per cent. was allowed on a debt claimed against the insolvent estate of a lunatic under a contract of indemnity given by him (Re Hunt, Harvey's Claim, [1902] 2 Ch. 318). Computation of interest in administration actions.

As to what interest can be claimed on a writ specially indorsed under R. S. C., Ord. 3, r. 6, see Wilks v. Wood, [1892] 1 Q. B. 684; London Bank v. Clancarty, ibid., 689; Lawrence v. Willcocks, ibid., 696; Gold Ores Co. v. Parr, [1892] 2 Q. B. 14; Hamilton v. Brogden, 60 L. J. Ch. 88; see R. S. C., Ord. 14, r. 1 (b). Specially indorsed writ.

Where execution has been delayed by appeal, interest will be allowed (R. S. C., Ord. 58, r. 19; see Civil Proced. Act, 1833, s. 30; Garland v. Carlisle, 5 Cl. & F. 355; Langridge v. Levy, 4 M. & W. 337; Hooper v. Lane, 6 H. L. C. 443; Tyne Commissioners v. General Steam Co., 15 W. R. 875). Where money is paid under an order which is subsequently reversed on appeal, it must be repaid with interest at £4 per cent. (Rodgers v. Comptoir D'Escompte, L. R. 3 P. C. 465; Merchant Banking Co. v. Maude, 18 Eq. 659). Interest in the case of appeals.

E. Time not enlarged by Express Trusts.

R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10.

10. After the commencement of this Act no action, suit, or other proceeding shall be brought to recover any sum of money or legacy charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, at law or in equity, and secured by an express trust, or to recover any arrears of rent or of interest in respect of any sum of money or legacy so charged or payable and so secured, or any damages in respect of such arrears, except within the time within which the same would be recoverable if there were not any such trust. Time for recovering charges and arrears of interest not to be enlarged by express trusts for raising same.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10.

By sect. 9 of this Act (ante, p. 214) the provisions of R. P. Lim. Act, Act, 1833 (except the repealed sections but including the provisions substituted for such repealed sections), are to be construed together with this Act. The present section must accordingly be construed with especial reference to R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8 (substituted for R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40), and R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42.

Effect of section on cases within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40, Under R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40, it was held that in a number of cases (ante, p. 221) an express trust prevented the section from operating as a bar. By the present section an express trust will make no difference in this respect. A conveyance of a term on trust for raising money was held to be such an express trust (Williams v. W., [1900] 1 Ch. 152). See further the cases as to express trust quoted ante, pp. 189, 221, 233. It has been said that simple contract debts, secured by a trust in a will to pay the same out of real estate, may be barred in twelve years (Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 39; and see Re Raggi, [1913] 2 Ch. 206). This section prevented a trust to pay debts in a will from keeping alive a claim on a bond (Fearnside v. Flint, 22 Ch. D. 579).

Legacies not charged upon or payable out of land or rent, which were within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40, and are within the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8, are not within the present section. In the case of such legacies, accordingly, an express trust would seem to prevent time running (see Playfair v. Cooper, 17 Beav. 187; see further the notes ante, pp. 221, 233, and post, p. 291). The ordinary implied trust which affects personal estate held by an executor for the benefit of legatees, does not prevent time running (Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 124; see Re Barker, Buxton v. Campbell, [1892] 2 Ch. 491). As to arrears of interest on a legacy, see Blachford v. Worsley (27 Ch. D. 676).

or within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42.

Again, under R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42, it was held, that in a number of cases (ante, p. 233), an express trust prevented the section from operating as a bar. By the present section an express trust will make no difference as regards arrears.

Annuity charged on land.

In the case of an annuity charged on land and secured by an express trust (there being no covenant), the rule of limitation now applicable depends on whether such annuity should (1) be considered as a whole, and dealt with as one "rent" within sect. 1 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, and sect. 25 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (see the note, ante, p. 141; Dower v. D., 15 L. R. Ir. 273; Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140; and the argument for the annuitant in Hughes v. Coles, 27 Ch. D. 234): or should (2) be considered as a series of "sums of money charged upon land" within the earlier words of the above sect. 10 (see Hughes v. Coles, 27 Ch. D. 235; Edwards v. Warden, 9 Ch. 505; Hanly v. Carroll, [1907] 1 I. R. 171, 176; but see Re Jordison, infra, as to cases where the trustee has the property in his possession). In the first view, time would not commence to run against the annuitant until the trustee alienated for value (R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 25; the earlier words of the above sect. 10 not applying). In the second view, each instalment of the annuity must it seems be dealt with separately, and time runs against its recovery on its becoming payable but not before. As regards arrears they would in either view seem to be limited to six years (R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 42, read in connection with the later words of the above sect. 10). In one case it was held that where apart from a trust the annuity would have been barred as a whole, no arrears were recoverable (Hughes v Coles, supra; but see Dower v. D., 15 L. R. Ir. 264; and Re Jordison, [1922] 1 Ch. 440, cited infra, overruling Hughes v. Coles). Where an annuity charged on land is secured by covenant, the rule applicable is stated, ante, p. 230. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10.

As regards the matters especially mentioned in it, this section appears to control Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25 (2) (unrepealed by Jud. Act, 1925), which provides generally that no claim of a cestui que trust against his trustee for any property held on an express trust, or in respect of any breach of such trust, shall be barred by any Statute of Limitations. Compare 40 & 41 Vict. c. 57, s. 28 (2); Hanly v. Carroll, [1907] 1 I. R. 172. But sect. 10 does not apply to an annuity payable under an express trust where the trustee has the property on which the annuity is charged actually in his possession. Such a case falls within sect. 25, sub-sect. 2 of Jud. Act, 1873 (Re Jordison, Paine v. J., [1922] 1 Ch. 440). Jud. Act, 1875, s. 25.

In the case of proceedings against trustees and persons claiming through them commenced after January 1, 1890, regard must be had to the Trustee Act, 1888, post, p. 283. Trustee Act, 1888.

III. Of the Limitation of Actions by or against Executors in Respect of Injuries to Property.

The Administration of Estates Act, 1925.

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 26.

26.—(1) For any debt (including arrears of rent) due to a deceased person, and for any injury to or right in respect of his personal estate in his lifetime, his personal representative shall have the same right of action as the deceased would have had if alive. Rights of action by and against personal representative.

(2) The personal representative of a deceased person may maintain for any injury committed to the real estate of the deceased within six months before his death any action which the deceased could have maintained, but the action must be brought within one year after his death, and any damages recovered in the action shall be part of the personal estate of the deceased.

(3) A personal representative may distrain for arrears of a rentcharge due or accruing to the deceased in his lifetime on the land affected or charged therewith, so long as the land remains in the possession of the person liable to pay the rentcharge or of the persons deriving title under him, and in like manner as the deceased might have done had he been living.

(4) A personal representative may distrain upon land for arrears of rent due or accruing to the deceased in like manner as the deceased might have done had he been living.

Such arrears may be distrained for after the termination of the lease or tenancy as if the term or interest had not determined, if the distress is made—

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 26.

(a) within six months after the termination of the lease or tenancy;

(b) during the continuance of the possession of the lessee or tenant from whom the arrears were due.

The statutory enactments relating to distress for rent apply to any distress made pursuant to this subsection.

(5) An action may be maintained against the personal representative of a deceased person for any wrong committed by the deceased within six months before his death to another person in respect of his property, real or personal, but the action shall be brought within six months after the personal representative of the deceased has taken out representation.

Any damages recovered in the proceedings shall be payable as a simple contract debt incurred by the deceased.

(6) Nothing in this section affects any right of action conferred by the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, as amended by any subsequent enactment.

9 & 10 Vict. c. 93.

By 13 Edw. 1, st. 1, c. 23, executors were allowed a writ of account, and by 4 Edw. 3, c. 7, an action of trespass, in respect of the personal estate of their testators. By 31 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 11, administrators had a right of action to recover debts of the deceased, and by 32 Hen. 8, c. 37, executors and administrators were enabled to sue for arrears of rent. The Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42), empowered (sect. 2) executors or administrators to sue in respect of injuries to the real estate of the deceased committed within six months before his death if the action were brought within one year after his death; and the section also gave a right of action against personal representatives for injuries committed by the deceased to property, real or personal, within six months of his death, if the action were brought within six months after the representatives had taken upon them the administration of his estate. By sects. 37 and 38 of the same Act, personal representatives might distrain for arrears after the determination of the term, if the distress were made within six months of the determination and during the possession of the tenant from whom the arrears became due as regards the lessor himself. The above enactments were repealed, as to deaths after 1925, by Administration of Estates Act, 1925, and replaced by this section.

It was doubted whether "real estate" in the Act of 1833 included leasehold interests (Adam v. Bristol, 2 Ad. & Ell. 389). But by sect. 55, sub-sect 1 (xix) of Administration of Estates Act, 1925, real estate includes chattels real. Under the Act of 1833 an executor was held entitled to recover damages for an obstruction to the light of a house of his testatrix. It was said that the damages would be confined to damage arising within six months before the death (Jones v. Simes, 43 Ch. D. 607). According to the rule of common law, executors could not be sued for a wrong committed by their testator for which only unliquidated damages could be recovered (Kirk v. Todd, 21 Ch. D. 489; see Phillips v. Homfray, 24 Ch. D. 439; Twycross v. Grant, 4 C. P. D. 45; Re Duncan, Terry v. Sweeting, [1899] 1 Ch. 387, and the notes to Wheatley v. Lane, 1 Wms. Saund. 239). (See also sect. 29 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post). 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 26.

As an exception to the above rule, the Act of 1833 and this section permit executors to be sued for wrongs committed by their testator in respect of property, provided the injury has been committed not more than six months before his death (see Kirk v. Todd, supra). Trespass was maintained against an administrator for coal wrongfully taken from the plaintiff's land by the intestate within six months before his death (Powell v. Rees, 7 Ad. & Ell. 426). And sect. 2 of the Act of 1833 has been applied in the case of continuing wrongs, e.g., wrongs arising from obstruction of light (Jenks v. Clifden, [1897] 1 Ch. 694, where the obstructing building was completed more than six months before the death); or from not repairing (Woodhouse v. Walker, 5 Q. B. D. 408; in which case the instrument under which possession was taken imposed an express duty to repair). But it did not apply to the remedy of a remainderman against the estate of a tenant for life for failure to repair (Jay v. J., [1924] 1 K. B. 826).

It seems that a claim under sect. 2 might be made more than six months after the death, but within six months from probate (Re Williames, Andrew v. W., 52 L. T. 41); see now sub-sect. 5 of the present section. Under sect. 2 an action of tort was maintained against the executors of an innkeeper within six months after his death for the property of a traveller lost in his house (Morgan v. Ravey, 30 L. J. Ex. 131). But a claim for negligence brought against the executors of a deceased landlord more than six months after the death was too late (Erskine v. Adeane, 8 Ch. 760). See as to evidence of conversion within six months, Richmond v. Nicholson (8 Scott, 134).

Law independently of the Act.

The rule actio personalis moritur cum personâ was never extended to such personal actions as were founded upon any obligation, contract, debt, covenant, or any other duty to be performed (Wheatley v. Lane, 1 Wms. Saund. 240; Finlay v. Chirney, 20 Q. B. D. 502; Formby v. Barker, [1903] 2 Ch. 550). Thus executors were held entitled to sue for a cause of action which arose out of a statutory duty to the deceased (Peebles v. Oswaldtwistle, [1896] 2 Q. B. 159; Darlington v. Roscoe, [1907] 1 K. B. 219). As to an action for breach of promise of marriage, see Quirk v. Thomas ([1916] 1 K. B. 516). As to liability for untrue statements by a director, see Geipel v. Peach ([1917] 2 Ch. 108). In the case of non-repair, damages are, independently of the above section, recoverable from the estate of a former possessor of land, where an obligation to repair arises either from the terms of the instrument under which possession was taken (Re Williames, Andrew v. W., 52 L. T. 41; 54 L. T. 405; Re Bradbrook, 56 L. T. 106; compare Dingle v. Coppen, [1899] 1 Ch. 726), or from the local law (Batthyany v. Walford, 33 Ch. D. 624; 36 Ch. D. 269), or from the custom of the manor (Blackmore v. White, [1899] 1 Q. B. 293). In the last-mentioned cases the nature of the obligation to repair was said to be contractual. In the earlier case, however, of Woodhouse v. Walker (supra), the neglect to repair was said to amount to a tort. The manorial custom giving rise to such an implied contract must be a special one. In ordinary cases a copyhold tenant was liable to forfeiture for non-repair amounting to waste, but was not liable to pay damages (Galbraith v. Poynton, [1905] 2 K. B. 258).

The Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, gives a right of action, for the benefit of the relatives, in respect of deaths caused by wrongful acts, neglects, or defaults, if commenced within twelve months of the death.

§ 3. Limitation of Actions on Specialties, and some other Debts and Penalties...246.
§ 4. Persons under Disability...249.
§ 5. Acknowledgment in Writing or by Part Payment...250.
§ 6. Limitation after Judgment reversed, &c....253.
§ 7. Meaning of Beyond the Seas...253.

Limitation of action of debt on specialties, &c.

3. That all actions of debt for rent upon an indenture of demise, all actions of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, and all actions of debt or scire facias upon any recognizance, and also all actions of debt upon any award where the submission is not by specialty, or for any fine due in respect of any copyhold estates, or for an escape, or for money levied on any fieri facias, and all actions for penalties, damages or sums of money given to the party grieved, by any statute now or hereafter to be in force, that shall be sued or brought at any time after the end of the present session of parliament, shall be commenced and sued within the time and limitation hereinafter expressed, and not after; that is to say, the said actions of debt for rent upon any indenture of demise or covenant, or debt upon any bond or other specialty, actions of debt or scire facias upon recognizance, within ten years after the end of this present session, or within twenty years after the cause of such actions or suits, but not after; the said actions by the party grieved, one year after the end of this present session, or within two years after the cause of such actions or suits, but not after; and the said other actions within three years after the end of this present session, or within six years after the cause of such actions or suits, but not after: provided that nothing herein contained shall extend to any action given by any statute where the time for bringing such action is or shall be by any statute specially limited. (As to Ireland, see 16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, s. 20.)

The reasons which led to this enactment are discussed by Lindley, M.R. (Thomson v. Clanmorris, [1900] 1 Ch. 725).

Covenants or bonds.

To an action of covenant six years is not a good plea of limitation (Hartshorn v. Watson, 4 Bing. N. C. 178). Where a purchaser covenanted to pay purchase-money by promissory notes of even date, an action could be brought on the covenant after six years (Dixon v. Holroyd, 7 Ell. & Bl. 703). The section applied even where the bond was executed in India, where the limitation is shorter (Alliance Bank v. Carey, 5 C. P. D. 429).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3.

As regards rent reserved, an action on a covenant may be brought to recover an instalment within twenty years from the date limited by the above section. In Paget v. Foley (2 Bing. N. C. 679), Tindal, C.J., said, "If the 42nd section of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, is a general enactment the subsequent declaration that an action of covenant may be commenced during a longer period is virtually an exception out of the former: we are to reconcile the two enactments if it be possible, but it be not, the affirmative and negative cannot co-exist, and the action of covenant must be taken as an exception (see Paddon v. Bartlett, 3 Ad. & Ell. 895; Wilson v. Jackson, 2 Ir. L. R. 1). The R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, has made no difference in this respect (Darley v. Tennant, 53 L. T. 257; Donegan v. Neill, 16 L. R. Ir. 309).

Covenants securing rent reserved.

In the case of an annuity charged on land by deed and also secured by covenant, it was decided before 1879 that an action of covenant might be brought for an instalment within the twenty years limited by the above section (Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & Ell. 558); even where the annuity as a charge on land had become extinguished by non-payment for thirty-three years (Manning v. Phillips, 10 Exch. 59). For the present law, see ante, pp. 230, 231.

Annuities.

A personal covenant to pay a rent-charge cannot be enforced after twelve years of non-payment, sect. 1 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, having reduced the period of twenty years fixed by this section to twelve (Shaw v. Crompton, [1910] 2 K. B. 370).

Rent-charge.

As regards principal money secured by mortgage, the personal remedy of a mortgagee to obtain payment from the mortgagor, is now, by R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8, barred after twelve years, whether the action be on a collateral bond (Fearnside v. Flint, 22 Ch. D. 579), or on the mortgagor's covenant in the mortgage deed (Sutton v. S., 22 Ch. D. 511); which section applies even where the property charged is a reversionary interest in land which has not fallen in (Kirkland v. Peatfield, [1903] 1 K. B. 756).

Mortgage debts.

Before this Act it had been held that satisfaction of money secured on bonds would be presumed after twenty years (Humphreys v. H., 3 P. Wms. 396; 2 Atk. 144; Morley v. M., 5 D. M. & G. 610). But such presumption might have been rebutted, as if interest were proved to have been paid (8 Mod. 278; 2 Ld. Raym. 1370; 3 Bro. P. C. 535; 2 Str. 827; 2 Cox. 118); or if the obligor had had no opportunity or means of paying (Fladong v. Winter, 19 Ves. 196); or had been abroad (Newman v. N., 1 Stark. N. P. C. 101). See further as to the presumption of payment of bonds, Barrington v. Searle (3 Bro. P. C. 535); Glyn v. Bank of England (2 Ves. sen. 43); Oswald v. Legh (1 T. R. 271); Colsell v. Budd (1 Camp. 27); Middleton v. Melton (10 B. & C. 317); Gleadow v. Atkin (1 C. & M. 410); Sanders v. Meredith (3 M. & R. 116; 1 Phil. Ev. 7th ed. 255). No presumption of the discharge of a bond arose from the fact of its being in the obligor's possession at his death (Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., [1900] 2 Ch. 561).

Old rule as to the presumption of payment of bonds.

In the winding up of a company established by a deed of settlement, the liability of a shareholder was a liability by way of specialty within this secton (Re Portsmouth Banking Co., 2 Eq. 167). By the Companies Act, 1862, s. 75, the liability to contribute under a winding-up order created a specialty debt, even though the company was not registered under that Act (Muggeridge v. Sharp, 10 Eq. 443); and the specialty was one which bound the heirs of the contributory (Buck v. Robson, 10 Eq. 629). In the case of companies formed and registered under that Act, the liability of a member in a winding-up was a specialty (Companies Act, 1862, ss. 75, 90, 134). So also was the liability of a member under the articles (sect. 16). See now Companies Consolidation Act, 1908, ss. 14 and 125. A specialty debt was not created by a call made by a company established under the old Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Acts (Robinson's Executors' Case, 6 D. M. & G. 572), or under a colonial statute (Weliand Ry. Co. v. Blake, 30 L. J. Ex. 161).

Dividends.

Claims by shareholders for dividends were held to fall within the above section, both in the case of preference shares (Smith v. Cork Ry., I. R. 5 Eq. 65), and ordinary shares (Re Drogheda Co., [1903] 1 I. R. 512; Re Artisans Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 796); the share certificates in each case being under the seal of the Co., and referring to the articles. Compare Re Severn Ry. Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 559. Time ran from the date of the declaration of the dividend. The section also applied to a shareholder's claim for money repayable on a reduction of capital; time running from the order (Re Artisans Corporation, supra).

Debt upon statute.

An action upon statute is an action upon a specialty (Cork Ry. Co. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 826). So the following were within the section, viz., an action by a company for calls under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16 (ibid.); an action for shipping duties (Shepperd v. Hills, 11 Exch. 55); an action by solicitors for expenses (Nichols v. Regent's Canal Co., 63 L. J. Q. B. 641); a claim under warrants for interest on debenture stock issued under the Companies Clauses Act, 1863 (Re Cornwall Ry. Co., [1897] 2 Ch. 74); an action to recover the price of seed from an occupier of land in Ireland (Magherafelt v. Gribben, 24 L. R. Ir. 520). But not a claim by a borough authority against a county authority for expenses which would be payable out of a particular fund and recoverable by action on the case (Salford v. Lancashire, 25 Q. B. D. 384). See as to the recovery of paving expenses under the Metrop. Management Acts, Hampstead v. Caunt, [1903] 2 K. B. 1. The liability of a lunatic to repay to guardians the cost of his maintenance (treated as a statutory liability) was held to fall within Lim. Act, 1623, and not within this section (Re Newbegin, Eggleton v. N., 36 Ch. D. 477; Re Watson, Stamford Union v. Bartlett, [1899] 1 Ch. 72; Re Taylor, Edmonton Union v. Deeley, [1901] 1 Ch. 480; see Re Clabbon, [1904] 2 Ch. 465; Re Murphy, [1913] 1 I. R. 504).

Judgments.

Judgments, although specialties, are not within this section (Jay v. Johnstone, [1893] 1 Q. B. 30, 190).

Awards.

Under this section an action for debt on an award, where the submission is not by specialty, must be brought within six years, which in an action to enforce an award of compensation under the Lands Clauses Act were held to run from the date of the award (Turner v. Midland Ry. Co., [1911] 1 K. B. 832). An action of debt on an award under seal was held not to fall within Lim. Act, 1623 (Hodsden v. Harridge, 2 Wms. Saund. 150).

Fines.

A lord's right to a fine on admittance was barred by this section, time running from the admittance (Monckton v. Payne, [1899] 2 Q. B. 603).

Penalties.

The words "actions for penalties, damages, or sums of money given to the party grieved by any statute," do not include an action for penalties by an officer of the Goldsmiths' Company, mentioned in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22 (Robinson v. Currey, 7 Q. B. D. 465); or an action by a shareholder against directors for misrepresentation under the Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (Thomson v. Clanmorris, [1900] 1 Ch. 718). See Comp. Consol. Act, 1908, s. 84.

When time begins to run under this section.

In the case of post obit bonds, time does not begin to run until the death (Tuckey v. Hawkins, 4 C. B. 655; see Barber v. Shore, 1 Jebb & S. 610). On a bond conditioned to pay an annuity, the non-payment of each instalment is a distinct breach, and the statute begins to run against each as it becomes due (Amott v. Holden, 18

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3.

Q. B. 593); where Lord Campbell, C.J., said (p. 603): "It is admitted that, since Sanders v. Coward (15 M. & W. 48), and Blair v. Ormond (17 Q. B. 423), where a bond is conditioned for the performance of a series of acts at stated times, though there may have been a forfeiture, by reason of the non-performance of the first act in that series, yet if default be made in the performance of subsequent acts, a new cause of action arises upon each default, and the statute runs from that" (see Higgs v. Mortimer, 1 Exch. 711). If a bond with a penalty were given to secure a duty which is to be performed during a period of twelve years, the bond would be forfeited by a delinquency in the first year, but the obligee might elect not to act on it until the delinquency in the twelfth year (per Bramwell, B., 7 L. T. 792). Where the breach is a continuing breach, a fresh cause of action arises at every moment of the time during which the breach continues (Maddock v. Mallet, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 193). But the true inference from long acquiescence in breaches may be that the covenant is released (Gibbon v. Payne, 23 T. L. R. 250).

The breach of a covenant for good right to convey, occasioned by the existence of a right of way, is not a continuing breach. Time ran from the delivery of the deed (Turner v. Moon, [1901] 2 Ch. 828; Spoor v. Green, L. R. 9 Ex. 110. See, however, the judgment of Kelly, C.B., L. R. 9 Ex. 116).

In the case of a present debt and covenant to pay on demand, a demand is not a condition precedent to an action; secus, in the case of a covenant to pay a collateral sum on demand; and time runs accordingly (Re Brown, [1893] 2 Ch. 300).

A deed of settlement of a company exonerated the transferor of shares from all liabilities subsequently to transfer. In winding-up time ran from the date of the transfer (Re Portsmouth Banking Co., 2 Eq. 167).

Courts of equity and the statute.

Courts of equity adopted many of the provisions of this statute (Hyde v. Price, 8 Sim. 578). In administration suits specialty debts were held barred under it (Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay, 669). But where a settlor had constituted himself a trustee of a covenant, time was no bar (Stone v. Stone, 5 Ch. 74). A covenant to pay a mortgage debt was held to remain in force for more than twenty years by reason of the pendency of a trust (Bennett v. Cooper, 9 Beav. 252). See, further, the note as to Courts of equity and the Statutes of Limitation, p. 287, post.

before limited after the return of such person or persons from beyond the seas.

Disabilities.

This provision as to disabilities has been altered by the Merc. Law Amendt. Act, 1856, s. 10 (p. 279, post), which enacts that the absence beyond seas of the person entitled to the action shall be no disability. As to the meaning of "beyond seas," see sect. 7 of this statute (p. 253, post). See further the cases quoted under Limitation Act, 1623, s. 7 (p. 266, post), the law as to disabilities under both these sections being now the same. In cases within M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 1 (2), coverture has ceased to be a disability (Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. D. 676; Weldon v. Neal, 51 L. T. 289).

Proviso in case of acknowledgment in writing, or by part payment.

5. That if any acknowledgment shall have been made, either by writing signed by the party liable by virtue of such indenture, specialty or recognizance, or his agent, or by part payment or part satisfaction on account of any principal or interest being then due thereon, it shall and may be lawful for the person or persons entitled to such actions to bring his or their action for the money remaining unpaid, and so acknowledged to be due, within twenty years after such acknowledgment by writing or part payment or part satisfaction as aforesaid; or in case the person or persons entitled to such action shall at the time of such acknowledgment be under such disability as aforesaid, or the party making such acknowledgment be, at the time of making the same, beyond the seas, then within twenty years after such disability shall have ceased as aforesaid, or the party shall have returned from beyond seas, as the case may be; and the plaintiff or plaintiffs in any such action on any indenture, specialty or recognizance, may, by way of replication, state such acknowledgment, and that such action was brought within the time aforesaid, in answer to a plea of this statute (see 16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, s. 23, as to Ireland).

(1) Acknowledgment in Writing...250.
(2) Acknowledgment by Payment...251.

Since Sutton v. Sutton (22 Ch. D. 511), a mortgagee's action on covenant to recover principal money secured by a mortgage of land falls within sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. And in the note to that section (ante, p. 225) the decisions as to acknowledgments thereunder are collected. Before Sutton v. Sutton, such an action fell within the Civ. Proc. Act, 1833 (Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 640), and accordingly some of the decisions referred to below were in actions relating to mortgages. It has been said that for the purpose of acknowledgments there is no practical distinction between the two statutes (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 345).

(1) Acknowledgment in writing.

An acknowledgment may be made by writing or payment. A written acknowledgment may be sufficient, though it came into existence accidentally and without the intention of the party making it (Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 50). And if lost, parol evidence of the contents of the writing may be admitted (S. C. [1909] 2 K. B. 724). The writing is to be signed by the party liable by virtue of such specialty. In the case of several persons who are liable under specialty jointly but not severally, a written acknowledgment may be made by such persons or any of them (Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 585). Where one of five persons jointly and severally liable on a bond died, a written acknowledgment signed by his executor was an acknowledgment of the several liability of the deceased obligor and not of the joint liability of the surviving obligors, and did not take the case out of the statute as against them (Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 577; see Slater v. Lawson, 1 B. & Ald. 396).

By whom it may be made.

The written acknowledgment need not be made to the person entitled, or amount to a promise to pay (Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 588). Therefore, the admission of a bond debt, contained in an answer of the executors of the obligor in a suit to which the obligee was not a party, was sufficient (Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 433). A conveyance on trust to sell and pay off mortgages was not an acknowledgment within the section of a particular mortgage (Howcutt v. Bonner, 3 Exch. 491; see Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Exch. 716). As to pleading acknowledgments under the section, see Kempe v. Gibbon (9 Q. B. 609; 12 Q. B. 662).

To whom.

The case of disability at the time of the acknowledgment existing on the part of the person entitled to the action, or on the part of the person making the acknowledgment, is provided for at the end of this section. See the joint effect of this provision and the Merc. Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 11, explained Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 161.

(2) Acknowledgment by payment.

The acknowledgment may also be made by payment; which must be made by a party interested, for the legislature could not mean to give any right against the debtors by the mere act of a stranger (Roddam v. Morley, 1 De G. & J. 18). The payment of interest to a mortgagee by the assignee of the equity of redemption was payment by the agent of the mortgagor within the section (Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Exch. 716; compare Newbould v. Smith, 33 Ch. D. 127); so payment by the tenant for life of an equity of redemption (Dibb v. Walker, [1893] 2 Ch. 429). Payments made by a receiver in a suit, but which were not authorised by the order appointing him, did not take the case out of this statute (Whitley v. Lowe, 25 Beav. 421; 2 De G. & J. 704; see Re Hale, Lilley v. Foad, [1899] 2 Ch. 107). Where the same bond secured payment of different sums to different persons, payment of one sum was held no acknowledgment in respect of the other sum (Ashlin v. Lee, 23 W. R. 458).

Where several liable.

Where a devisee for life paid interest on a specialty of his testator's, in which the heirs were bound, this was sufficient to preserve the right of action not only against the payor, but also against all remaindermen (Roddam v. Morley, 1 De G. & J. 1). "If the payment is made by one only of several persons liable, as, for instance, by a person having only a life interest as devisee, who is affected by the payment? Does it operate against the party only by whom the payment is made, or does it affect all the other parties liable? Does it merely enable the creditor to sue the party by whom the payment was made, or does it set free the action generally? I have come to the conclusion that when a part payment or payment of interest has been made, which has the effect of preserving any right of action, that right will be saved not only against the party making the payment, but also against all other persons liable on the specialty" (per Lord Cranworth, ibid., 18).

Roddam v. Morley.

Roddam v. Morley was subsequently followed in Pears v. Laing, 12 Eq. 41; Re Hollingshead, H. v. Webster, 37 Ch. D. 651; Dibb

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5.

v. Walker, [1893] 2 Ch. 429; Leahy v. De Moleyns, [1896] 1 Ir. 206; Re Chant, Bird v. Godfrey, [1905] 2 Ch. 225. In Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot ([1907] 1 Ch. 339, 355), the Court of Appeal considered Dickenson v. Teasdale (1 D. J. & S. 52) and Coope v. Cresswell (2 Ch. 112); decisions apparently inconsistent with Roddam v. Morley. But in preference they adopted the latter case, the principle of which they applied to a payment treated as an acknowledgment under sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874. The meaning of the section in the case where more persons than one are liable by virtue of the specialty is now settled by Roddam v. Morley (Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 585). And in such a case an acknowledgment in writing stands on the same footing as payment (S. C., [1909] 2 K. B. 735).

Where a person indebted on a specialty dies having left personal estate, and real estate devised for payment of debts, and also real estate devised beneficially, it was said by Kindersley, V.-C., "There are three parties, each of whom is liable to the claims of a specialty creditor—the executor in respect of the personalty, the trustees in respect of the real estate devised for payment of debts, and the beneficial devisee in respect of the real estate beneficially devised. . . . If any one of these parties makes the payment or gives the acknowledgment, it is a payment or acknowledgment by the party liable by virtue of the specialty" (Coope v. Cresswell, 2 Eq. 117, in which case the V.-C. held, that payment of interest on a specialty debt of a testator by his personal representatives who were also trustees of real estate devised for payment of debts, took the debt out of the statute as against a beneficial devisee). This holding was reversed by Lord Chelmsford (2 Ch. 112). But the last-mentioned decision has been disapproved in the Court of Appeal (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 351).

As regards acknowledgments within the present statute by payment of principal or interest, in the case of several parties being liable (whether jointly only or jointly and severally), it has now been provided by Merc. Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 14, that payments by one co-debtor shall not prevent time running under this statute in favour of another co-debtor (see post, p. 281).

What amounts to payment.

Where a settlement (under which the husband took the first life interest) comprised stock covenanted to be transferred by him, and the stock was not transferred, time ran in favour of the husband from the execution of the settlement. It could not be assumed that a person had been paying himself the interest of a non-existing fund (Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay, 669; see also Stone v. Stone, 5 Ch. 74). But where a settled fund, the income of which the settlor was entitled to receive until insolvency, was lent to him, and judgment was entered against him to secure repayment, time did not run against the judgment until the insolvency (Re Keay, I. R. 3 Eq. 659). And where a settlement (under which the husband took the first life interest) comprised money secured by a bond of the husband time did not run against the obligee until his death, he being the person who was both bound to pay the interest on the bond, and entitled to receive the interest under the settlement (Mills v. Borthwick, 35 L. J. Ch. 31; 13 W. R. 707). So where the wife took the first life interest, and she lived with her husband in amity (Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., [1900] 2 Ch. 561). The principle was applied where the same person was entitled to receive the rents of mortgaged land and the interest on the mortgage (Topham v. Booth, 35 Ch. D. 607), and also where the husband was mortgagor and the wife mortgagee (Re Hawes, Burchell v. H., 62 L. J. Ch. 463; see Re Dixon, supra). Where money settled to the separate use of a wife was lent to her husband, and she, with his consent, gave formal receipts for the income, but no money passed, this was payment of interest within the section (Amos v. Smith, 1 H. & C. 238; Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., supra). See Re England, Steward v. E., [1895] 2 Ch. 820, where the money was charged on land; and also the cases quoted ante, pp. 204, 225. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5.

Same hand to pay and receive.

A payment upon one of several judgments obtained upon one joint and several bond will prevent recovery upon another of such judgments from being barred (Re Kingston, I. R. 3 Eq. 485; see Brew v. Brew, [1899] 2 I. R. 163).

A bond conditioned for the replacing of stock in specie is not such an instrument as comes within the 5th section of Civil Proc. Act, 1833. The payment of sums of money in lieu of dividends which would have been payable if the stock had remained in the name of the obligee, is not payment of interest, neither is any sum of money thereby acknowledged to be due (Blair v. Ormond, 17 Q. B. 436, 437).

As to the proof of payment by indorsements on a bond, see 1 Taylor, Ev. 472—476, 11th ed.

6. And nevertheless be it enacted, if in any of the said actions judgment be given for the plaintiff, and the same be reversed by error, or a verdict pass for the plaintiff, and upon matter alleged in arrest of judgment the judgment be given against the plaintiff, that he take nothing by his plaint, writ or bill, or if in any of the said actions the defendant shall be outlawed, and shall after reverse the outlawry, that in all such cases the party plaintiff, his executors or administrators, as the case shall require, may commence a new action or suit from time to time within a year after such judgment reversed, or such judgment given against the plaintiff, or outlawry reversed, and not after (16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, s. 21, Ireland). The limitation after judgment reversed.

See Tynte v. The Queen (7 Q. B. 216). Outlawry has been abolished in civil cases by Civil Proc. Acts Repeal Act, 1879, s. 3.

7. That no part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nor the islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney and Sark, nor any islands adjacent to any of them, being part of the dominions of his Majesty, shall be deemed to be beyond the seas within the meaning of this Act, or of the Act passed in the 21st year of the reign of King James the First, intituled "An Act for Limitation of Actions, and for avoiding of Suits in Law." No part of the United Kingdom, &c., to be deemed beyond the seas within meaning of this Act.

The Act 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, was omitted from this section, and the consequence was to make Ireland a place beyond the seas within the meaning of 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, notwithstanding the Act of Union (Lane v. Bennett, 1 M. & W. 70; Battersby v. Kirk, 2 Bing. N. C. 603). But see now the Merc. Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 12, post, p. 280.

No part of the United Kingdom, nor the islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney and Sark, nor any islands adjacent to any of them, being part of the dominions of her Majesty, are to be deemed to be beyond the seas within the meaning of the Act Beyond the seas within the Irish Acts.

(4) Continuous running of Time and Actions by and against Executors...264.

21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

(1) Statute does not extinguish debt, but merely bars remedy.

This statute does not extinguish the debt but merely bars the remedy by action (Smith v. Betty, [1903] 2 K. B. 322; see Courtenay v. Williams, 15 L. J. Ch. 204; Curwen v. Milburn, 42 Ch. D. 434; Re Hancock, H. v. Berrey, 59 L. T. 199; Re Hepburn, 14 Q. B. D. 400, where it was said that for the purpose of proving in bankruptcy the remedy by action can alone be looked at). On the above principle, a creditor whose action is barred may avail himself of any other means of recovering his debt he may possess (Re Abrahams, A. v. A., [1908] 2 Ch. 73).

An executor may out of money coming to one of the testator's debtors from the testator's estate retain a barred debt (see cases quoted post, p. 294). If a debtor pay money to a creditor without appropriation, the creditor may apply it in payment of a barred debt (Mills v. Fowke, 5 Bing. N. C. 455; see Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 434). A solicitor recovered by his lien barred costs (Higgins v. Scott, 2 B. & Ad. 413; Re Murray (1867), W. N. 190; Re Carter (1885), W. N. 184; see Re Brockman, [1909] 2 Ch. 170; Spears v. Hartley, 3 Esp. 81). Statute-barred items were held taxable under an order directing taxation of a trustee's costs as between him and his cestui que trust (Budgett v. B., [1895] 1 Ch. 202); but they are not taxable under the common order as between a client and his solicitor (Re Brockman, [1909] 2 Ch. 175), nor can they be recovered under the submission to pay (ibid.). As to a client recovering from his solicitor (under the summary jurisdiction) money the claim to which is statute-barred, see Sittingbourne Co. v. Lawson (1886), W. N. 76.

Set-off.

Set-off, however, is within sect. 3 of the Limitation Act, 1623 (Stat. Frauds Amendment Act, 1828, s. 4, post, p. 279); therefore, a debt barred by the statute cannot be set off (Remington v. Stevens, 2 Str. 1271; Rawley v. R., 1 Q. B. D. 460; Smith v. Betty, [1903] 2 K. B. 323). The set-off must have been barred before the commencement of the suit in order to support a replication of the statute (Walker v. Clement, 15 Q. B. 1046; Re Ballard, Lovell v. Forester (1890), W. N. 64). A claim to retain a barred loan was disallowed as being in the nature of set-off (Dingle v. Coppen, [1899] 1 Ch. 726). As to replying the statute to part of the claim of set-off, see Mead v. Bashford, 5 Ex. 336; see also Fairthorne v. Donald, 13 M. & W. 424; and see R. S. C., Ord. XIX., r. 15.

(2) Cases within this section.

An action of debt for a penalty incurred under a bye-law, made by virtue of a royal charter under the Great Seal is an action of debt grounded upon a contract without specialty within this section (Tobacco-pipe Makers v. Loder, 16 Q. B. 765). The liability of an equitable assignee of leaseholds in respect of the covenants in the lease is that of simple contract within the statute (Saunders v. Benson, 4 Beav. 351; see Moore v. Greg, 2 Phil. 717). So an action in an English Court to recover a simple contract debt for which judgment had been recovered in a foreign Court was barred in six years (Dupleix v. De Roven, 2 Vern. 540; compare Wilson v. Dunsany, 18 Beav. 293). When by an instrument not under seal, A agrees to repay an advance and execute a mortgage, this statute would at the end of six years bar an action to recover the advance or for breach of the contract to execute the mortgage (Firth v. Slingsby, 58 L. T. 483). The section applies to the personal remedy, even where the simple contract debt is charged on land (Barnes v. Glenton, [1899] 1 Q. B. 885). An action in rem in the Admiralty Court to recover damages for collision is not within this Act (Kong Magnus, [1891] P. 223).

21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

Banker and customer.

Money placed with a banker to current account in the ordinary way is money lent to the banker with a superadded obligation that it is to be paid when called for by cheque; and if it remain in the banker's hands for six years, without any payment by him of the principal or allowance of interest, the statute is a bar to its recovery (Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 324; distinguish money paid to a deposit account, Re Tidd, T. v. Overell, [1893] 3 Ch. 156). The relation between a banker and his customer is that of debtor and creditor, and not trustee and cestui que trust (Foley v. Hill, 1 Phill. 399; 2 H. L. Ca. 28; and see Moxon v. Bright, 4 Ch. 294). But, where a fund was standing to the account of two trustees, and the bankers, who had notice that it was a trust fund, transferred it to the account of the tenant for life, and thereby obtained payment of a debt due from him to them, the trustees had a right to compel the bankers to replace the fund, and the statute was inapplicable (Bridgman v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302; see Foxton v. Manchester Banking Co., 44 L. T. 406; Coleman v. Bucks Bank, [1897] 2 Ch. 243). As to the parties to actions against bankers, and the practice of the common law Courts in allowing amendments to avoid the effect of the statute, see Crawford v. Cocks (20 L. J. Ex. 169); Corne v. Malins (ibid., 434).

Solicitor and client.

The statute bars a solicitor's action for costs (Coburn v. Colledge, [1897] 1 Q. B. 702). As to the effect of a solicitor's lien, see cases quoted supra, p. 255; and as to the running of time in the case of actions for costs, see p. 263, post. In the absence of fraud, the statute bars a client's action to recover money received by a solicitor as his client's agent (Re Hindmarsh, 1 Dr. & Sm. 129; Crawford v. Crawford, 16 W. R. 411; Watson v. Woodman, 20 Eq. 721). But where a solicitor was dealing for his own benefit with his client, the client was entitled to open accounts settled more than six years before action (Cheese v. Keen, [1908] 1 Ch. 245), and the statute did not apply where a solicitor received money of which he knew his client was an express trustee (Re Bell, Lake v. B., 34 Ch. D. 462; see Blyth v. Fladgate, [1891] 1 Ch. 337; Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390); nor where a solicitor received his client's money under a special power of attorney, which was held to create a trust (Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 233; Gray v. Bateman, 21 W. R. 137). See now Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, post. No trust, however, is created where a solicitor is employed to invest in a particular mortgage, or to find securities to be approved by the client and then invest, and the client does approve the security; in such a case the statute will bar an action for negligence (Dooby v. Watson, 39 Ch. D. 178; see Hughes v. Twisden, 54 L. T. 570; Mara v. Browne, [1896] 1 Ch. 199). See also Smith v. Pococke, 2 Drew. 197.

Master and steward.

Where during his life a master had permitted his steward to retain his salary out of moneys in his hands, the steward, in accounting after the master's death, was allowed his salary for twenty years, the statute not applying (Hawkins v. H., 28 W. R. 240).

Principal and agent.

An action by a principal for an account against his agent is, generally speaking, within the statute, time not commencing to run until the agency is terminated (Re Sharpe, Masonic Co. v. Sharpe, [1892] 1 Ch. 166; see Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 233; Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 421).

Account.

Before the Stat. Frauds Amendment Act, 1828, it was held, that in the case of open accounts between persons other than merchants, the statute did not begin to run so long as the account was continued

(see Foster v. Hodgson, 19 Ves. 185). The effect, however, of that Act in the case of actions of debt or assumpsit was, that although there might be a mutual open running account, the existence of items not barred was not sufficient to take items which were barred out of the statute (Williams v. Griffiths, 2 C. M. & R. 45; Cottam v. Partridge, 4 M. & G. 271; see Jackson v. Ogg, Johns., 397). Merchants' accounts were excepted from the Lim. Act, 1623 (see as to the exception, Robinson v. Alexander, 2 Cl. & Fin. 717); but this exception has been repealed by the M. L. A. Act, 1856, s. 9 (post, p. 279), and merchants' accounts now stand upon the same footing as other accounts. The statute bars an action by a merchant against his factor (Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 431); and an action to recover the balance of the proceeds of sale of the cargo of a wrecked vessel sold by an agent of the insurers (Henry v. Hammond, [1913] 2 K. B. 515).

Merchants' accounts.

In the case of partnership accounts it is settled that, after a partnership has ceased, any claim on simple contract by one partner against the others in respect thereof is prima facie subject to be barred after six years. (Knox v. Gye, L. R. 5 H. L. 656; in which case a suit for an account by the executors of a deceased partner instituted against the surviving partner more than six years from the death, was barred, although the business had been carried on and assets got in by the defendant during the six years; see also Chan Kit San v. Ho Fung Hang, [1902] A. C. 257, where time ran against the estate of the deceased partner from the grant of administration). In another case an action for an account brought more than six years after a dissolution was barred (Noyes v. Crawley, 10 Ch. D. 31, where Miller v. M., 8 Eq. 499, was treated as overruled). On the other hand, "while a partnership is continuing there is no authority for suggesting that a claim between the partners is affected by the statute, and the opinion of Lindley, L.J. (Partnership, 7th ed. 553), is to the contrary" (Barton v. N. Stafford. Co., 38 Ch. D. 463; see The Pongola, 73 L. T. 512). The statute was no bar where the accounts of an old partnership had been carried on into a new partnership without interruption or settlement (Betjemann v. B., [1895] 2 Ch. 474). A partner is entitled to rely on the good faith of his co-partner, and concealed fraud (even where due caution would have discovered it) will prevent the statute applying (ibid.).

Partnership accounts.

An action by a shareholder against a company for unpaid dividends appears to be within the section (Re Severn Ry. Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 559; see cases quoted, ante, p. 248). Where an action was brought to compel a company to replace stock transferred on a forgery, time ran from the refusal of the company after notice of the forgery to treat the plaintiff as owner (Barton v. N. Stafford Co., 38 Ch. D. 458).

Companies.

A shareholder's action against directors under sect. 3 of the Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (see Comp. Consol. Act, 1908, s. 84) is within the section (Thomson v. Clanmorris, [1900] 1 Ch. 718); so an action based on concealed fraud (e.g., to recover a bribe secretly received by a director) is within the section, time running from the discovery of the fraud (Metropolitan Bank v. Heiron, 5 Ex. D. 319; Re Fitzroy Bessemer Co., 50 L. T. 144; see Re Cape Breton Co., 29 Ch. D. 810). Compare the case of a claim against directors for improperly paying dividends, which was a claim for a breach of trust, and was not then capable of being barred, Flitcroft's Case (21 Ch. D. 519); and see the principle stated by Cotton, L.J. (5 Ex. D. 325). Where an auditor was guilty of a breach of duty to the company, the plea of the statute was admitted without argument (Leeds Co. v. Shepherd, 36 Ch. D. 809). In an action for damages arising from fraudulent misrepresentation, time ran from the discovery of the fraud (Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. D. 59; compare Moore v. Knight, [1891] 1 Ch. 547; Rawlins v. Wickham, 3 D. G. & J. 304, and the other cases cited post, p. 289). As to an action to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud, see Redgrave v. Hurd, 20 Ch. D. 13; Molloy v. Mutual Reserve Co., 22 T. L. R. 525; Oelkers v. Ellis, [1914] 2 K. B. 139. And as to an injunction in aid of an action of deceit, see Fullwood v. F. (9 Ch. D. 176).

Fraud, breach of duty.

21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

Fraudulent trespass.

The statute applies to Chancery proceedings in respect of trespass unless some equitable grounds repel it (Trotter v. Maclean, 13 Ch. D. 584). Where for years coal was furtively taken from a mine by a wilful and secret underground trespass, the statute did not apply (Bulli Co. v. Osborne, [1899] A. C. 351). To avoid the defence of the statute in such a case it is not necessary to show active concealment (ibid.). But breaking bounds into a neighbouring colliery is not per se fraudulent (Bulli Co. v. Osborne, supra; disapproving Ecc. Commrs. v. N. E. Ry., 4 Ch. D. 845); and the fact that the defendants kept a map, in which they omitted to mark their workings into the plaintiff's mine, was not sufficient to establish fraud (Daws v. Bagnall, 23 W. R. 690). Where the wrongful working of the defendant was with the knowledge of the plaintiff, it was treated as inadvertent, and an account was only directed for six years (Trotter v. Maclean, 13 Ch. D. 574; see the cases classified, ibid. 586; and see Dean v. Thwaite, 21 Beav. 61).

As to waste, see post, p. 290.

Devastavit.

A person injured by a devastavit is but a simple contract creditor of the executor (Charlton v. Low, 3 P. W. 331). And in general his claim is barred by this statute when six years have elapsed from the act constituting the devastavit (Thorne v. Kerr, 2 K. & J. 54; Re Gale, Blake v. G., 22 Ch. D. 820; Re Hyatt, Bowles v. H., 38 Ch. D. 618). The rule was applied where the devastavit consisted of parting with assets without providing for a contingent claim, and the action was brought within six years after the contingency had ripened into a certain claim (Lacons v. Warmoll, [1907] 2 K. B. 350; see Re Croydon, Hincks v. Roberts, 55 Sol. J. 632). But a claim by originating summons by a residuary legatee against an executor for administration is an action to recover a legacy within sect. 8 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (Re Richardson, Pole v. Pattenden, [1920] 1 Ch. 423, where Re Croydon was disapproved in C. A.).

Arrears of pauper lunatic's maintenance.

Where a pauper lunatic becomes entitled to property, the guardians can only recover six years' arrears in respect of his maintenance either from himself (Re Newbegin, Eggleton v. N., 36 Ch. D. 477; see Re Weaver, 21 Ch. D. 615) or from his representatives (Re Watson, Stamford v. Bartlett, [1899] 1 Ch. 72; Re Taylor, Edmonton v. Deeley, [1901] 1 Ch. 480; Re Murphy, [1913] 1 I. R. 504). Secus where payments on account had been made by a receiver appointed in the lunacy (Wandsworth v. Worthington, [1906] 1 K. B. 420) or where the claim was by the Crown for the maintenance of a criminal lunatic (Re J., [1909] 1 Ch. 574).

India.

Foreign contracts.

Prior to 1859 this statute extended to India (Buckmaboye v. Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. 4; but see now Re Peat, 7 Eq. 302). In the construction of a contract, the question whether there has been a contract made at all is to be governed by the law where the contract was made, but the remedy is to be according to the law where the contract is sought to be enforced (Ex p. Melbourne, 6 Ch. 69). Therefore a debt contracted abroad can only be enforced in England within the time limited by the English statutes. (Huber v. Steiner, 2 Bing. N. C. 202; see Harris v. Quine, L. R. 4 Q. B. 653; Pardo v. Bingham, 4 Ch. 738; Finch v. F., 35 L. T. 235; Alliance Bank v. Carey, 5 C. P. D. 429). But where a debt was disallowed as barred in an English administration action, and the creditor afterwards obtained in Scotland a judgment which he registered in England under the Judgments Extension Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 54), he was restrained from enforcing his judgment only on the terms of being admitted to prove (Re Low, Bland v. L., [1894] 1 Ch. 147). See as to the Irish Free State Wakely v. Triumph Cycle Co. [1924] 1 K. B. 214, where it was held that that Act has ceased to apply to that State, and that a plaintiff resident in it without assets in England is in the position of a foreigner. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

(3) When time begins to run.

There cannot be a cause of action within the meaning of the statute from which time will run unless there be not only a person in existence capable of suing (Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 214; Chan Kit San v. Ho Fung Hang, [1902] A. C. 257), but also a person who can be sued (Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 704; see Musurus Bey v. Gadban, [1894] 2 Q. B. 358). An ambassador cannot be sued either while he is accredited, or during such reasonable period afterwards as he requires for preparing to return home; and time does not run against his creditors until the expiration of such period (Musurus Bey v. Gadban, supra), and see the cases as to executors and administrators, post, p. 265. Cause of action from which time runs.

(a) Actions ex Delicto...259.
(b) Actions ex Contractu...260.
(c) Effect of Fraud...263.
(d) Costs...263.

(a) Running of time in actions ex delicto.

In an action on the case for negligence (e.g., against a solicitor), where the plaintiff alleges a breach of duty, and a special consequential damage, the cause of action is the breach of duty and not the consequential damage; and the statute runs from the time when the breach of duty is committed, and not from the time when the negligence was discovered, or when the consequential damage accrued (Howell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259; Smith v. Fox, 6 Hare, 386; Hughes v. Twisden, 54 L. T. 570. Compare the rule in assumpsit, Short v. M'Carthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626, post, p. 261). Concealment of the negligence without fraud would make no difference (Armstrong v. Milburn, 54 L. T. 247, 723; and see Osgood v. Sunderland, 111 L. T. 529). There is no duty on the part of the solicitor to disclose his negligence (Wood v. Jones, 61 L. T. 551). Time runs against a shareholder's right to sue directors for compensation under sect. 3 of the Directors' Liability Act, 1890 (see Comp. Consol. Act. 1908, s. 84), from the subscription for the shares (Thomson v. Clanmorris, [1900] 1 Ch. 718). In actions on the case for injury to real property, where the ground of the action is the consequential damage, time runs from the actual damage, and not from the wrongful act (Bonomi v. Backhouse, 9 H. L. C. 503; an action for negligently working mines, where the working which caused the thrust was more than six years before action brought, but the actual damage did not commence till within six years). In the case of a further subsidence, time commences to run from such subsidence (Darley Main Co. v. Mitchell, 11 App. Cas. 127, overruling Lamb v. Walker, 3 Q. B. D. 389; see Crumbie v. Wallsend Board, [1891] 1 Q. B. 503; and West Leigh Co. v. Tannicliffe, [1908] A. C. 27). Case.

In trover, time runs from the conversion (Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. 42). A's furniture having been seized under an execution, and then purchased by his friends, was left in A's possession for more than six years. After A's death the furniture was Trover. Detinue.

21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

claimed by his friends, and adversely by his administratrix: it was held that the rights of the former were not barred by the statute, which could only apply from six years from a conversion (Edwards v. Clay, 28 Beav. 145). Where once there has been a complete cause of action arising out of contract or tort, the statute begins to run, and subsequent circumstances, which would but for the prior wrongful act or default have constituted a cause of action, are disregarded (Wilkinson v. Verity, L. R. 6 C. P. 209). In the case of tort this principle only applies where the defendant is the sole wrongdoer (Miller v. Dell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 470). Where an action of detinue is founded upon a bare taking and withholding of the property of another, without any circumstances to show a trust for the owner, or to found an option to sue, either for the wrong or for the breach of the original terms of deposit, time will run from the period at which the property was first wrongfully dealt with (Wilkinson v. Verity, L. R. 6 C. P. 206; see Hinchcliffe v. Sharpe, 77 L. T. 714). Where A's lease was deposited fraudulently with B to secure a loan, and the mortgage debt and lease were afterwards transferred to C, both B and C being ignorant of the fraud, and C having refused to return the lease, A brought detinue against him, the statute ran from the time when A first had a complete cause of action against C by reason of his refusal, irrespective of the existence of any previous cause of action against B (Miller v. Dell, [1891] 1 Q. B. 468; Spackman v. Foster, 11 Q. B. D. 99). It was doubted whether the statute would prevent a person rightfully in possession of land from recovering title deeds more than six years after their conversion ([1891] 1 Q. B. 472). In an action for detention of title deeds, time does not begin to run so long as the deeds are in the possession of the person enjoying the land, although such enjoyment be wrongful (Plant v. Cotterell, 5 H. & N. 430).

Fraud.

As to the running of time in the cases of concealed fraud, see the cases on p. 289.

False imprisonment.

As to when time runs in the case of an action for false imprisonment, see Violett v. Simpson (8 El. & Bl. 344; 6 W. R. 12).

In actions ex contractu time only runs from complete cause of action,

The time limited by the statute does not begin to run until there be a full and complete cause of action (see Musurus Bey v. Gadban, [1894] 2 Q. B. 358). Where the cause of action does not arise until after request made, the statute will only run from the time of such request (Gould v. Johnson, 2 Salk. 422; 2 Saund. 63 b, n.). If the contract be to pay money at a future period, or upon the happening of a certain event, the statute does not begin to run until that specified period or that event (Fenton v. Imbers, 1 W. Bl. 354; 3 Burr. 1278). If goods be consigned to a factor for sale, an action does not lie against him for not accounting for them, until after a demand made of an account; and the statute, therefore, in such case runs only from the time of such demand (Topham v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 572). On a sale of goods on credit, the statute begins to run from the time when credit has expired (Helps v. Winterbottom, 2 B. & Ad. 431). In general, the day on which the cause of action accrued is to be included (Hob. 109; 4 Moore, 465).

The statute runs from the earliest time at which an action can be brought (Reeves v. Butcher, [1891] 2 Q. B. 511; see Barker's Claim, [1894] 3 Ch. 290). In assumpsit the statute begins to run from the breach of the promise, and not from the consequential damage. In an action against an attorney for an omission to make a search, which took place upwards of six years before, the statute was a bar, though the omission was not discovered till within the six years (Short v. M'Carthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; Brown v. Howard, 2 Brod. & B. 73; Battley v. Faulkner, 3 B. & Ald. 288). Compare the rule in an action on the case (Howell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259, ante, p. 259). As regards the liability of a husband for his wife's ante-nuptial debts under sects. 14, 15 of M. W. P. Act, 1882, time runs in favour of the husband from the date of the cause of action against the wife, not from marriage (Beck v. Pierce, 23 Q. B. D. 323). The defendant gave a warrant of attorney to secure a debt payable by instalments, the plaintiff to be at liberty, in case of default, to have judgment for the whole. The fact that the first default was made more than six years before action was a defence, not only as to instalments due more than six years ago, but also as to those due within that period (Hemp v. Garland, 4 Q. B. 519). If any one of the securities for an annuity are set aside, the grantee may recover back the purchase-money on the ground of failure of consideration, and the statute runs from the time when the security is set aside (Huggins v. Coutes, 5 Q. B. 432; Cowper v. Godmond, 9 Bing. 748; see Churchill v. Bertrand, 3 Q. B. 568). 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

Guarantees.

On the construction of a guarantee for a current account given to a bank, time ran against the bank's right to sue on the guarantee as regards each item of the account as it became due. The bank, however, recovered interest which had accrued within six years, although the principal was barred (Parr's Bank v. Yates, [1898] 2 Q. B. 460). An action on a guarantee was held barred (Henton v. Paddison, 68 L. T. 405). The points from which time runs in an action on a warranty and in an action on a contract of indemnity are different. And the difference may be material in considering which should be implied (Sheffield v. Barclay, [1903] 2 K. B. 596; [1905] A. C. 404).

Debt payable on demand.

In the case of a present debt and promise to pay on demand, the demand is not a condition precedent to an action: secus, in the case of a promise to pay on demand a collateral sum—e.g., by a surety (Re Brown, [1893] 2 Ch. 300; see Birks v. Trippet, 1 Wms. Saund. 38). Where money was advanced to a firm to be repaid on demand, with compound interest: the statute ran from the date of the advance (Jackson v. Ogg, Johns. 397); in which case it was also held that entries in the books of the firm, crediting the lender with interest, did not affect the operation of the statute. Compare the cases as to a mortgagee's accounts, ante, p. 201. Where the plaintiff advanced £5,000 to assist an undertaking, and the defendant was not to be personally liable, but the plaintiff was to be paid out of the profits, the statute did not run until after the plaintiff's first demand. A distinction was drawn between debts payable on demand, and debts recoverable on demand (Knox v. Gye, 15 W. R. 628). In an action to recover paving expenses under the Metrop. Man. Acts, time did not run against the vestry until demand (Hampstead v. Caunt, [1903] 2 K. B. 5). The defendant, drawer of two bills of exchange of which the plaintiff was holder, gave him a written promise to pay the bills, "whenever my circumstances may enable me to do so, and I may be called upon for that purpose." The statute ran from the time of the defendant becoming able to pay, though the plaintiff had made no demand, and had no knowledge of such ability (Waters v. Thanet, 2 Q. B. 757; see Hammond v. Smith, 33 Beav. 452; Bethell v. Bethell, 34 Ch. D. 561). A promissory note being given to a banker by A and a surety, and a contemporaneous agreement being executed showing the note to be given as a security for A's banking account, the statute did not run from the time when A became indebted to the bank, but from the time when the balance was struck (Hartland v. Jukes, 32 L. J. Exch. 162). Time runs without demand in the case of money paid into a bank on current account (Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 32, see ante, p. 256); but a demand is necessary in the case of an ordinary deposit account (Re Tidd; Tidd v. Overell, [1893] 3 Ch. 154); also in the case of money entrusted to another for safe custody (ibid.); also in the case of a loan to a building society on the terms that the same should be repayable on notice (Atkinson v. Bradford Society, 25 Q. B. D. 377). But time ran from the date of an advance, notwithstanding that the lender was authorised to sell bonds deposited as security, and the borrower undertook to pay the difference (Re McHenry, McDermott v. Boyd, [1894] 3 Ch. 290).

Bills and notes.

In the case of a note, payable on demand, the statute runs from the date of the note (Christie v. Fonsick, 1 Selw. N. P. 301, 13th ed.; Re George; Francis v. Bruce, 44 Ch. D. 627). So in the case of a cheque given for a pre-existing debt (Bethell v. Bethell, 34 Ch. D. 566). It makes no difference that the note is payable with interest (Norton v. Ellam, 2 M. & W. 461). Where, upon a loan, the borrower, before the advance was made, gave to the lender a promissory note payable on demand, it was said that time ran from the giving of the note, not from the date of the advance (Buccleuch v. Eden, 61 L. T. 360). Where in form a note is payable twenty-four months after demand, the cause of action on the note does not accrue, and the statute does not begin to run until twenty-four months after demand made (Thorpe v. Boothe, 1 Ry. & Moo. 388). Payment of interest upon a promissory note payable on demand, although there be no independent evidence that any demand of payment of the note has been made, is of itself evidence of a demand (Bamfield v. Tupper, 7 Exch. 27; Re Rutherford; Brown v. Rutherford, 14 Ch. D. 687). Where a note is payable after sight, the statute runs only from the time of presentment (Holmes v. Kerrison, 2 Taunt. 323; and see Savage v. Aldred, 2 Stark. 232). As to when bills and notes are to be deemed payable on demand, see Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, ss. 10, 11, 88.

Where the statutory period for suing on a note expired on a Sunday, and a writ was issued on Monday, the action was held barred, R. S. C. Ord. 64, r. 3, not applying (Morris v. Richards, 45 L. T. 210; Gelmini v. Moriggia, [1913] 2 K. B. 549). Where a debtor draws a bill to be applied in part payment of the debt, and the bill is paid when due by the drawee to the creditor, it operates as a part payment to defeat the statute only from the time of the delivery of the bill by the debtor, not from the time of its payment (Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90). The defendant gave his acceptance in blank on a bill to S., who filled up the same long afterwards. The defendant being sued on the bill, and having pleaded the statute, the statute ran from the time the bill became due as filled up, and not from the time it would have become due if completed when it was accepted in blank (Montague v. Perkins, 22 L. J. C. P. 187). In the case of a bill of exchange drawn on a bank, time did not commence to run against the holder's right to sue the drawer until presentation to the bank for payment (Re Boyse; Crofton v. Crofton, 33 Ch. D. 612). In the case of a bill of exchange drawn at so many months after sight, and refused acceptance, the cause of action is complete, and the statute begins to run upon the refusal of acceptance, and no new cause of action arises upon refusal of payment (Wilkinson v. Verity, L. R. 6 C. P. 209; see Whitehead v. Walker, 9 M. & W. 506). K. being indebted to the plaintiffs and to the defendant, and also to a banking company, it was agreed between all the parties that to secure K.'s debt to the company the defendant should draw upon K. three bills of exchange, payable to the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs should indorse them to the company. The bills became due in 1843, and were dishonoured. In 1847 the company sued the plaintiffs on the bills, and the plaintiffs, in 1851, paid the amount: it was held, in 1852, that the plaintiffs were barred by the statute from suing the defendant as drawer of the bills (Webster v. Kirk, 17 Q. B. 944). 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

Where a bill is drawn payable at a future period for a sum lent by payee to drawer at the time of drawing the bill, the payee may recover in an action for money lent at any time within six years from the time when the bill became due (Wintersheim v. Carlisle, 1 H. Bl. 631). Where an advance was made by the lender giving to the borrower a cheque which was subsequently paid, time ran against the lender, in an action for money lent, from the payment, not the giving of the cheque (Garden v. Bruce, L. R. 3 C. P. 300).

As to actions for contribution, see post, p. 291. Contribution.

(c) Effect of fraud.

Before the Jud. Acts it was held that it was no answer at law to a plea of the statute that the plaintiff was prevented by the defendant's fraud from knowing of the cause of action until after the time of limitation had expired (Imperial Gas Co. v. London Gas Co., 10 Exch. 39; Hunter v. Gibbons, 1 H. & N. 459). The rule was different in equity where time ran from the discovery of the fraud (Blair v. Bromley, 2 Phil. 354). The rule in equity now prevails at least in cases where before the Jud. Acts there was a concurrent remedy both in law and equity (Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. D. 59; Re Crosley, Munns v. Burn, 35 Ch. D. 266). As to purely common law actions, where there was no such concurrent remedy, see Armstrong v. Milburn, 54 L. T. 247, 723; Barber v. Houston, 18 L. R. Ir. 475; Osgood v. Sunderland, 111 L. T. 529. In cases falling within the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, the rule in Blair v. Bromley is not affected by that section (Moore v. Knight, [1891] 1 Ch. 547). Concealment of a cause of action without fraud makes no difference (Armstrong v. Milburn, 54 L. T. 723). Where fraud or non-discovery of fraud is relied on as taking a case out of the statute, it must be the fraud of the person who invokes the statute (Thorn v. Heard, [1895] A. C. 495).

(d) Actions for costs.

The cause of action in respect of a solicitor's costs arises when the work is completed, from which time the statute runs, and not from a month after delivery of bill (Coburn v. Colledge, [1897] 1 Q. B. 702). In the case of bills of costs items dated more than six years before action will be barred, where the work was miscellaneous (Beck v. Pierce, 23 Q. B. D. 323), or the employment not continuous (Phillips v. Broadley, 9 Q. B. 744). Where, however, the employment was continuous and lasted till within the six years, such items will not be barred (Harris v. Quine, L. R. 4 Q. B. 653). As where a solicitor is retained to conduct an action; in which case he cannot, as a rule, sue for his costs until the termination of the action or of his retainer (Harris v. Osbourn, 2 C. & M. 629; Nicholls v. Wilson, 11 M. & W. 106; see Underwood v. Lewis, [1894], 2 Q. B. 306; Court v. Berlin, [1897] 2 Q. B. 396). So costs incurred in conducting a suit in which no final decree had been made were held not to be barred, though no steps had been taken in the suit for ten years prior to action brought (Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Exch. 691; see Stokes v. Trumper, 2 K. & J. 232; Baile v. B., 13 Eq. 497). The statute will, as a rule, run from the date of the judgment in the action for which the retainer was given (Rothery v. Munnings, 1 B. & Ad. 15); but when an appeal is brought, the employment will be considered continuous as from the commencement of the action (Harris v. Quine, L. R. 4 Q. B. 657). During the course of the action the solicitor may give reasonable notice to the client to supply him with funds, and on refusal sue for costs. The retainer will also be determined by the death of the client (Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Exch. 691). As to part payment in the case of bills of costs, see Morley v. Finney (1870, W. N. 82). And as to taxation where some of the items of a bill are barred, see Curwen v. Milburn (42 Ch. D. 424); Budgett v. B., ([1895] 1 Ch. 202); Re Brockman ([1909] 2 Ch. 170).

Costs in lunacy.

Costs incurred by solicitors in prosecuting a commission in lunacy, and subsequently acting on behalf of the committee, were held (at the lunatic's death) not barred by the lapse of six years during his life; for any action for the recovery of the claim would have been restrained (Stedman v. Hart, Kay, 607). See the cases as to a lunatic's maintenance, post, p. 299.

Where costs were incurred in obtaining an Act for a railway, subsequently abandoned, time did not commence to run until the company had assets (Re Kensington Station, 20 Eq. 197).

Costs incurred by a company which is afterwards wound up.

Where solicitors delivered to a liquidator papers, on which they had a lien upon his undertaking in writing to pay out of the first funds available, the statute had no application (Re Gloucester Ry. Co., 2 Giff. 47). A solicitor's right to have a call made for his payment may be lost by laches (Ex p. A'Beckett, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 684; see Re Gloucester Ry. Co., supra).

(4) Continuous running of time.

Under the Winding-up Acts of 1848-49, an order to wind up a company did not stop time from running against a right of action accrued previously to the order (Ex p. Forest, 2 Giff. 42). But the carrying in a claim under the winding-up did so (Wryghte's Case, 5 De G. & Sm. 244). Under the Companies Consol. Act, 1908, a winding-up order stops the running of time (Re General Rolling Stock Co., 7 Ch. 646). Compare the similar effect of judgment in an administration action, post, p. 296.

Effect of winding-up order.

Inability to sue, &c.

It was formerly laid down that when once time had begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue would stop it (Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42). But it has since been held, that where a debtor takes out administration to his creditor, the running of time will be suspended during the administration (Seagram v. Knight, 2 Ch. 628).

Where a testator appointed as executors several persons of whom one was indebted to him, and the others proved at once but the debtor did not prove for more than six years, he could not then set up the statute, the act of proving having relation to the testator's death (Ingle v. Richards, 28 Beav. 366). See as to a creditor appointing his debtor to be his executor, Re Bourne, Davey v. B., [1906] 1 Ch. 708; Wms. Exors., 11th ed. 1053.

The rule as to the continuous running of time in the case of claims to land is stated ante, p. 160.

A mere letter of licence by a creditor to his debtor does not suspend the operation of the statute (Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614). But a covenant not to sue for a certain period will prevent time running until the expiration of that period (Iron v. Elwes, 3 Drew. 25; see O'Brien v. Osborne, 10 Hare, 92). Where under a composition deed a debtor makes default in payment of a composition, a fresh promise to pay the original debt at that time is implied, and time begins to run accordingly (Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 107; Re Stock, 66 L. J. Q. B. 146; Macdonnell v. Broderick, [1896] 2 I. R. 136).

Bankruptcy or death of creditor.

Where the creditor becomes bankrupt, time runs against the bankruptcy trustee as against the bankrupt (Ex p. Norton, [1892] W. N. 32). Where the creditor dies, the cause of action having accrued to him in his lifetime, his executor cannot sue after the time limited by the statute has expired (Penny v. Brice, 18

C. B. (N.S.) 393; 13 W. R. 342). But if time has not begun to run during the lifetime of an intestate, it does not run against the administrator until administration has been taken out (Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 241; Chan Kit San v. Ho Fung Hang, [1902] A. C. 257). Where there is no evidence to show whether the intestate died before or after the cause of action accrued, time does not run against the administrator until administration is taken out (Atkinson v. Bradford Society, 25 Q. B. D. 377). In an action by an administrator against the acceptor of a bill payable to the testator, but accepted after his death, time ran from the grant of administration, there being no cause of action until there was a party capable of suing (Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204; and see Pratt v. Swaine, 8 B. & C. 285; Perry v. Jenkins, 1 M. & C. 118; Hyde v. Price, 1 C. P. Coop. 196; Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 M. & C. 499; Howlitt v. Lambert, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 263; Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & Fin. 121; Musurus Bey v. Gadban, [1894] 2 Q. B. 358). 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.

When the debtor becomes bankrupt before the right of action is complete, it would seem that time does not commence to run until the close of the bankruptcy (see Re Crossley; Munns v. Burn, 35 Ch. D. 266; but where the right has arisen and the statute has begun to run, the debtor's subsequent bankruptcy does not prevent it from continuing to run (Re Benzon; Bower v. Chetwynd, [1914] 2 Ch. 68). Bankruptcy of debtor.

Where the debtor dies, and time has once begun to run against the debt in the debtor's life, it does not afterwards cease to run during the period which may elapse between his death and the time at which a personal representative to him is constituted (Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 M. & C. 499; Boatwright v. B., 17 Eq. 71; see Martin v. Beauchamp (1888), W. N. 247). But where an action was brought in time and the defendant died, the plaintiff had a right to bring a new action against the executor or administrator within a reasonable time (Sturgis v. Darell, 6 H. & N. 120; see sect. 4, post). This rule was applied where the second action was commenced within a year from the proof of the will by the executor (Swindell v. Bulkeley, 18 Q. B. D. 250). Death of debtor.

Where time had not commenced to run against a debt during the debtor's life, the statute was not a good plea where an executor had not proved, because no laches could be imputed to a plaintiff for not suing whilst there was no executor against whom he could bring his action (Jolliffe v. Pitt, 2 Vern. 694; Coop. Eq. Pl. 233; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 305; see Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686; Musurus Bey v. Gadban, [1894] 2 Q. B. 532). But where the defendant acts, and might be sued, as executor de son tort, time runs from his so acting, and not from probate (Flood v. Patterson, 29 Beav. 299; Webster v. Webster, 10 Ves. 93).

As to actions by or against executors for injuries to property, see ante, p. 243.

By sect. 4, if judgment is given for the plaintiff and reversed by error or arrested, or if the defendant is outlawed and the outlawry reversed, a new action may from time to time be commenced within a year afterwards by the plaintiff, his heirs, executors or administrators. Limitation after judgment or outlawry reversed.

Within the equity of this section the Courts permitted an executor, within a year, or within a reasonable time after the death of the testator, to renew a suit commenced by the testator, and vice versâ (Curlewis v. Mornington, 7 E. & B. 283; see 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, ss. 135 et seq.; Swindell v. Bulkeley, 18 Q. B. D. 250).

21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7.

Infants, femes coverts, &c., excepted.

7. Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that if any person or persons that is, or shall be, entitled to any such action of trespass, detinue, action sur trover, replevin, actions of accounts, actions of debt, actions of trespass, for assault, menace, battery, wounding or imprisonment, actions upon the case for words, be or shall be, at the time of any such cause of action, given or accrued, fallen or come, within the age of twenty-one years, feme covert, non compos mentis, imprisoned or beyond the seas, that then such person or persons shall be at liberty to bring the same actions, so as they take the same within such times as are before limited, after their coming to or being of full age, discovert, of sane memory, at large, and returned from beyond the seas, as other persons having no such impediment should have done.

Infancy.

A case of infancy occurred in Dashwood v. Magniac, [1891] 3 Ch. 387.

Coverture.

From the time when the M. W. P. Act, 1882, enabled a married woman to sue, she became discovert within the above section; so held in the case of an action for slander (Weldon v. Neal, 51 L. T. 289; 32 W. R. 828), and for assault (Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. D. 676). Neither the imprisonment of the plaintiff nor his absence beyond the seas now constitute a disability (Merc. Law. Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 10, post).

Imprisonment and beyond the seas.

During the absence of a defendant beyond the seas the running of time is suspended by 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19 (see Forbes v. Smith, 11 Ex. 161); and the right of the plaintiff to sue after the defendant's return is not affected by R. S. C. Ord. 11, giving leave to serve out of the jurisdiction (Musurus Bey v. Gadban, [1894] 2 Q. B. 352). As to the meaning of "beyond seas" in these Acts, see Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 7 (p. 253, ante); and Merc. Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 12 (post, p. 280); and see, as to the effect of the proviso relating to plaintiffs beyond the seas, Perry v. Jackson (4 T. R. 516); Lafond v. Ruddock (13 C. B. 813; 2 Atk. 610—614); Strithorst v. Græme (3 Wils. 145); Le Veux v. Berkeley (5 Q. B. 836); Townsend v. Deacon (3 Exch. R. 706); Smith v. Hill (1 Wils. 134; 4 T. R. 311); Denys v. Shuckburgh (4 Y. & Coll. 47).

One of several under disability.

Under 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, if a right of action had accrued against several persons, one of whom was beyond seas, the statute did not run until his return, though the others had never been absent from the kingdom (Fannin v. Anderson, 7 Q. B. 811; Towns v. Mead, 16 C. B. 123; see M. L. A. Act, 1856, ss. 10, 11, post, p. 280).

Representatives of persons dying under disability.

Where a person died abroad, to whom a right of action had accrued during his residence there, and he never returned to this country, his executors could sue for it, although more than six years had elapsed since it accrued. It was unnecessary to consider the question whether the executor could maintain the action after the expiration of six years from the death; Parke, B., inclining to the opinion that the executor was under no restraint; but Rolfe, B., thinking it would be more reasonable to consider the right of action as accruing to the executor at the death of the testator, and to limit the right of action accordingly (Townsend v. Deacon, 3 Exch. 706). A person gave his creditor a bill, and, before the bill arrived at maturity, went to India, whence he never returned. As soon as circumstances would permit after his death in India, his will was proved in England. A creditor's bill filed within six years after his death was held not barred (Story v. Fry, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 603; see Williams v. Jones, 13 East, 439; and Flood v. Patterson, 29 Beav. 295).

Express Acknowledgments.

THE STATUTE OF FRAUDS AMENDMENT ACT, 1828, ss. 1, 3, 4.

9 Geo 4, c. 14.

An Act for rendering a Written Memorandum necessary to the Validity of certain Promises and Engagements.
[19th May, 1828.]

§ 1. No Acknowledgment sufficient unless in Writing or by Payment...267.
§ 3. Indorsements by Payee not sufficient...278.
§ 4. Limitation Act, 1623, applied to Set-off...279.

The stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, recites the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, and the Irish stat. 10 Car. 1, sess. 2, c. 6, and that various questions had arisen in actions founded on simple contracts, as to the proof and effect of acknowledgments and promises offered in evidence, for the purpose of taking cases out of the operation of the said enactments; and that it was expedient to prevent such questions, and to make provision for giving effect to the said enactments, and to the intention thereof; and enacts (sect. 1).

In actions of debt or upon the case no acknowledgment shall be deemed sufficient, unless it be in writing or by part payment.

In actions of debt or upon the case grounded upon any simple contract, no acknowledgment or promise, by words only, shall be deemed sufficient evidence of a new or continuing contract, whereby to take any case out of the operation of the said enactments, or either of them, or to deprive any party of the benefit thereof, unless such acknowledgment or promise shall be made or contained by or in some writing to be signed by the party chargeable thereby; and that, where there shall be two or more joint contractors, or executors or administrators of any contractor, no such joint contractor, executor or administrator, shall lose the benefit of the said enactments, or either of them, so as to be chargeable in respect or by reason only of any written acknowledgment or promise made and signed by any other or others of them: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall alter or take away or lessen the effect of any payment of any principal or interest made by any person whatsoever: provided also, that in actions to be commenced against two or more such joint contractors, or executors or administrators, if it shall appear at the trial or otherwise that the plaintiff, though barred by either of the said recited Acts or this Act as to one or more of such joint contractors, or executors or administrators, shall nevertheless be entitled to recover against any other or others of the defendants by virtue of a new acknowledgment or promise, or otherwise, judgment may be given and costs allowed for the plaintiff as to such defendant or defendants against whom he shall recover, and for the other defendant or defendants against the plaintiff. See as to Ireland, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, ss. 24, 25, and 26.

Proviso for case of joint contractors.

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

Old law.

Before the above Act the plaintiff was permitted, although the time limited by the Lim. Act, 1623, had elapsed, to prove an acknowledgment, or promise to pay, within six years, which was sufficient to entitle him to recover (Willis v. Newham, 3 Y. & Jerv. 522). To provide a remedy against vague verbal promises, this Act was passed (Towler v. Chatterton, 6 Bing. 264).

(1) Acknowledgments in Writing...268.
(2) Acknowledgments by Payment...274.

(1) Acknowledgments in writing.

The intention of the Act was not to make any alteration in the legal construction to be put upon acknowledgments or promises made by debtors, but to require a different mode of proof; substituting the certain evidence of writing signed by the party chargeable, for the insecure testimony derived from the memory of witnesses (Haydon v. Williams, 7 Bing. 163; see Courtenay v. Williams, 3 Ha. 549; Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 440; Emery v. Day, 1 C. M. & R. 245).

Parol evidence.

Where a written promise to pay a debt barred by the statute has been lost, parol evidence is admissible of the contents of the writing (Haydon v. Williams, 7 Bing. 163; see Read v. Price, [1909] 2 K. B. 724). It is also admissible to connect two letters relied on as an acknowledgment (M'Guffie v. Burleigh, 78 L. T. 264). But it is doubtful whether the date of the written acknowledgment can be supplied by oral evidence (Edmunds v. Downes, 2 C. & M. 459). It is not necessary that the writing should specify the debt or the matter out of which it arose (Whitcombe v. Steere, 19 Times L. R. 697. See Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay, 699; Kennett v. Milbank, 8 Bing. 38).

When acknowledgment must be made.

An acknowledgment made within six years before action brought is sufficient, although it be made more than six years after the original cause of action (Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay, 669; see Re Lane, 23 Q. B. D. 74). Compare the rule on this point as to land, ante, p. 210, and as to money charged on land, ante, p. 226. An acknowledgment made after action brought cannot be used to take a case out of the statute (Bateman v. Pinder, 3 Q. B. 574).

Acknowledgments by agent.

Previously to the M. L. A. Act, 1856, it was held, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, that an acknowledgment signed by an agent of the debtor would not revive a debt barred by the Lim. Act, 1623, but that it must have been signed by the debtor himself (Hyde v. Johnson, 2 Bing. N. C. 776; Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott, N. R. 165; see Swift v. Winterbotham, L. R. 8 Q. B. 249; and Williams v. Mason, 21 W. R. 386). An acknowledgment signed by an agent is now sufficient (see M. L. A. Act, 1856, s. 13, post, p. 281). Thus an acknowledgment by a solicitor bound his client (Curwen v. Milburn, 42 Ch. D. 432). And an acknowledgment by one partner would probably be regarded as an acknowledgment by the firm (Lindley, Partnership, 7th ed. 295). Compare the case of payments by one partner (Watson v. Woodman, 20 Eq. 730; Re Tucker, T. v. T., [1894] 3 Ch. 429). Where a debt due from a company to L was barred, and the board of directors, of whom L was one, passed a resolution in reference to the debt, it was said, that even if the resolution had been a sufficient acknowledgment, it would not have bound the company (Lowndes v. Garnett, 33 L. J. Ch. 418). As to acknowledgments given by a client to his solicitor in respect of costs owing, see Lloyd v. Coote & Ball, [1915] 1 K. B. 242. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

Since 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, one of several executors can bind the estate by an acknowledgment or promise (Re Macdonald, Dick v. Fraser, [1897] 2 Ch. 187), and after the death of the promisor payment of the debt may be ordered out of assets in hands of the surviving executors (ibid.). See before 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, Tulloch v. Dunn, 1 Ry. & M. 416; Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 514. By one of several executors.

A written acknowledgment of a debt by an infant is sufficient if the debt was for necessaries (Willins v. Smith, 4 Ell. & Bl. 180). Note, however, that it is provided by Infants' Relief Act, 1874, s. 2, that no action shall be brought whereby to charge any person upon any promise made after full age to pay any debt contracted during infancy, or upon any ratification made after full age of any promise or contract made during infancy, whether there shall or shall not be any new consideration for such promise or ratification after full age. By infants.

An acknowledgment made to a third party will not take the case out of the statute (Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 439; Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 619; Grenfell v. Girdlestone, 2 Y. & Coll. Exch. 676; Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 603; Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, [1892] 1 Q. B. 765; Rogers v. Quin, 26 L. R. Ir. 136. But an acknowledgment to the agent of the creditor will be sufficient (Edmonds v. Goater, 15 Beav. 415). Acknowledgment to a third party: to an agent.

An admission by a bankrupt in his balance-sheet will not, as between the creditor and the bankrupt's assignees, take a debt out of the statute (Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321); where it was also held that an admission in an unsigned letter, written and sent by direction of the assignees of a bankrupt, by an accountant employed by them to wind up the affairs of the bankrupt estate, would not take a debt of the bankrupt out of the statute (see Everett v. Robertson, 1 Ell. & Ell. 16, and Ex p. Topping, 34 L. J. Bk. 44). Bankrupt's balance sheet.

An advertisement under the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859, s. 29, to creditors to bring in their claims did not take a debt out of the statute (Re Stephens, Warburton v. Stephens, 43 Ch. D. 43). So in the case of advertisements before that Act (Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & Fin. 382). Advertisement.

But an admission in cross-examination, and appearing in a signed deposition, may amount to an acknowledgment (Re Beynon (1873), W. N. 186). Deposition.

So also a statement by the debtor in an affidavit for probate (Re Emmett, Jenkins v. Emmett, [1906] W. N. 201; see Smith v. Poole, 12 Sim. 17; Maniram v. Seth, 22 T. L. R. 619; but see contra, Re Beavan, Davies v. B., [1912] 1 Ch. 196; Lloyd v. Coote & Ball, [1915] 1 K. B. 242). Affidavit.

To prevent the right to have an account from being barred by the statute, it is not necessary to have an acknowledgment that a debt is actually due, but it is sufficient that there should be an acknowledgment that the account is pending, and a promise to pay the balance if it should be found to be against the accounting party (Prance v. Sympson, Kay, 678; see Langrish v. Watts, [1903] 1 K. B. 636; Maniram v. Seth, 22 T. L. R. 619). Acknowledgment of pending account.

If, since the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, a defendant, by letter, admits a balance to be due, without stating the amount, this will take the case out of the statute, but the damages will be nominal unless the amount be proved at the trial (Dickenson v. Hatfield, 5 C. & P. 46; Bird v. Gammon, 3 Bing. N. C. 833; Archer v. Leonard, 15 Ir. Ch. Rep. 67, a promise to pay a solicitor an amount to be ascertained by taxation; Cheslyn v. Dalby, 4 Y. & C. 238, where the recitals of a deed amounted to a promise to pay an amount to be ascertained Amount need not be stated.

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

as mentioned in the deed; Dodson v. Mackey, 8 Ad. & El. 225, n.; Dabbs v. Humphries, 10 Bing. 446; Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623; Waller v. Lacey, 1 Scott, N. R. 186).

Effect of an acknowledgment.

The legal effect of an acknowledgment of a debt, barred by the Statute of Limitations, is that of a promise to pay the old debt, and for this purpose the old debt may be said to be revived. It is revived as a consideration for a new promise. But the new promise, and not the old debt, is the measure of the creditor's right. If a debtor simply acknowledges an old debt, the law implies from that simple acknowledgment a promise to pay it, for which promise the old debt is a sufficient consideration. But if the debtor promises to pay the whole debt when he is able, or by instalments, or in two years, or out of a particular fund, the creditor can claim nothing more than the promise gives him (Philips v. Philips, 3 Hare, 299; since adopted, Buckmaster v. Russell, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 749; Chasemore v. Turner, L. R. 10 Q. B. 505; Lusher v. Hassard, 20 T. L. R. 563; compare Re Wheeler, Hankinson v. Hayter, [1904] 2 Ch. 70). On this principle a mere acknowledgment of a debt, accompanied with a proposal to pay part, which has not been acceded to, is not sufficient to take the case out of this statute (Francis v. Hawkesley, 1 Ell. & Ell. 1052).

Construction of an acknowledgment.

The construction of an acknowledgment is a question for the Court, not the jury, except where the document is connected with other evidence affecting the construction (Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 402; Bird v. Gammon, 3 Bing. N. C. 883; Power v. Barham, 4 Ad. & Ell. 473; Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 140).

What a sufficient acknowledgment.

There must be —(a) acknowledgment, or (b) unconditional promise, or (c) conditional promise and evidence of condition performed.

On the construction of acknowledgments the following principles have been laid down. A mere acknowledgment is not sufficient to take a case out of the statute, unless there be a promise to pay; upon a general acknowledgment, where nothing is said to prevent it, a general promise to pay may and ought to be implied; but where the party guards his acknowledgment, an implication will not arise (Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 602; but see Brown v. Mackenzie, [1913] W. N. 75; 29 Times L. R. 310). A statement of inability to pay does not per se exclude the implication of a promise (Firth v. Slingsby, 58 L. T. 485; Parson v. Nesbitt, 85 L. J. K. B. 654), nor the expression of a hope to pay (Whitcombe v. Steere, 19 Times L. R. 697; Cooper v. Kendall, [1909] 1 K. B. 405). In Smith v. Thorne (18 Q. B. 134, 139), Parke, B., said, "the acknowledgment must be consistent with an intention to pay, either on request, or else (which practically comes to the same thing) at the end of a particular period which has elapsed, or on some condition which has been fulfilled" (see Everett v. Robertson, 1 Ell. and Ell. 20). "There must be, in order to take the case out of the statute, one of the three following things: either there must be an acknowledgment of the debt from which a promise to pay it must be implied: or secondly, there must be an unconditional promise to pay the debt; or thirdly, there must be a conditional promise to pay the debt in writing, and evidence that that condition has been performed" (Mitchell's Claim, 6 Ch. 828; see also Fettes v. Robertson, 37 Times L. R. 80). The authorities were reviewed, Cooper v. Kendall (supra) approved, and Fettes v. Robertson (supra) considered in Spencer v. Hemmerde, [1922] A. C. 507, where the House of Lords held to be a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute a letter stating "It is not that I won't pay you but that I can't do so. . . . What I wrote" [in a previous letter] "was not that I saw no prospect at present of being able to repay the capital but that I saw no prospect of being able to repay the capital at present."

Instances of sufficient

The following letters by debtors have also been held sufficient acknowledgments from which a promise to pay must be implied:—

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

acknowledgments.

"In regard to your statement of account received, I am ashamed the account has stood so long, and I must beg to trespass on your kindness a short time longer" (Cornforth v. Smithard, 1 H. & N. 13). "It is my wish to settle your account immediately, but being at a distance I wish everything very explicit and correct. I have asked Mrs. H. (defendant's agent) to mark the agreements, and send them to me, and I will return them by first post, with instructions to pay, if correct" (Sidwell v. Mason, 2 H. & N. 306; see Whitcombe v. Steere, 19 T. L. R. 697). "When the policy is paid on the 29th October, I hope that you will have the whole of your account ready for me as I hope to be with you on that day": followed by a second letter, "Oct. 25, Mr. V., when here on Saturday, stated that the amount due against me was about £280; of course this includes the £100 and interest that I had some years since, and the £40 promissory note that I jointly signed with the late Mr. B." (Godwin v. Culley, 4 H. & N. 373). "I am sure that I am anxious to get out of your debt. I will endeavour to send you a little next week" (Lee v. Wilmot, L. R. 1 Ex. 364). "I shall be obliged to you to send in your account made up to Christmas last. I shall have much work to be done this spring, but cannot give further orders till this be done": followed by another letter, "I again beg of you to send in your account" (Quincey v. Sharpe, 1 Ex. D. 72). A request for the delivery of "any unsettled bill" (Curwen v. Milburn, 42 Ch. D. 424). The submission, formerly inserted in a petition for taxation, to pay what shall be found due (Re Margetts, [1896] 2 Ch. 263; see now Re Brockman, [1909] 2 Ch. 170). An indorsement by the maker of a promissory note, with his name, together with the date, upon the note (Bourdin v. Greenwood, 13 Eq. 281). So where a first mortgagee who had sold the property, wrote to the second mortgagee enclosing account showing balance after payment of first mortgage, and offered explanation (Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 254, see 274). S. borrowed of J. £200 upon promissory notes, and a year afterwards remitted to J. £10 on account of the interest due, and sent him a bill of £17 for goods. J. wrote, acknowledging the £10 and bill and stated that he placed both sums to the credit of S., and requested S. to receipt the bill and return. In an action for the £17, it was held, that the above letter took the case out of the statute (Evans v. Simon, 9 Exch. 282).

Unconditional promises.

The following were held to be unconditional promises to pay:— "I hope to be in H. very soon, when I trust everything will be arranged with Mrs. W. agreeable to her wishes" (Edmonds v. Goater, 15 Beav. 415; see Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 620). "I shall repeat my assurance to you of the certainty of your being repaid your generous loan. Let matters remain as they are a short time and all will be right" (Collis v. Stack, 1 H. & N. 605, in which case it was said that the question in these cases is, whether the statement as to the time of payment is merely an excuse, or the condition on which payment is to be made). "I shall be taking some money next month and will then try to settle with you" (Pryke v. Hill, 79 L. T. 738). "Show this letter to Mrs. W., and tell her the claim has not been forgotten by me, and shall be liquidated at the earliest opportunity" (Wilby v. Elgee, L. R. 10 C. P. 497).

Conditional promises.

Where a debtor says he does not owe the amount claimed, but that if vouchers are furnished he will pay what is due, there is a conditional promise (Langrish v. Watts, [1903] 1 K. B. 641; see Skeet v. Lindsay, 2 Ex. D. 314). So where the debtor wrote, "The old account between us, which has been standing over so long, has not escaped our memory, and as soon as we can get our affairs arranged, we will see you are paid" (Chasemore v. Turner, L. R. 10 Q. B. 500).

Condition performed.

The following is an instance of a conditional promise to pay, the condition having been performed. A debtor wrote to his creditor, "I will pay you as soon as I get it in my power: before I cannot." Held, that time commenced to run when the debtor became of ability to pay, and not before (Hammond v. Smith, 33 Beav. 452; see Waters v. Thanet, 2 Q. B. 757; Buccleugh v. Eden, 61 L. T. 360).

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

See also Archer v. Leonard (15 Ir. Ch. R. 267); Leland v. Murphy (16 Ir. Ch. R. 500); Burrows v. Baker (I. R. 3 Eq. 596); Fiske v. Mitchell (19 W. R. 798).

Instances of insufficient acknowledgments.

An acknowledgment, accompanied with what is a contradiction of any promise to pay, is not sufficient (Linsell v. Bonsor, 2 Bing. N. C. 241). If the acknowledgment does not amount to a new promise, it is not sufficient (Fearn v. Lewis, 6 Bing. 349; Scales v. Jacob, 3 Bing. 638; Ayton v. Bolt, 4 Bing. 105). Therefore a letter acknowledging that the plaintiff made a demand, but not acknowledging the propriety of the demand, and denying all liability, was insufficient (Brigstock v. Smith, 1 C. & M. 483). So where the debtor expressed a hope that the creditor would name some figure less than the principal and interest (Mowbray v. Appleby, 80 L. T. 805). The following letters written by debtors have been held not to be sufficient:—"I am happy to say that by that time both the principal and interest will have been paid in full" (Green v. Humphreys, 26 Ch. D. 474). "A paper has been received purporting to be a memorandum of account between you and this company, which is altogether incorrect, omitting all deductions and credits, which would leave a balance considerably in their favour. The company are still willing to have all accounts decided by arbitration" (Mitchell's Claim, 6 Ch. 822). "I am in hopes that I shall be able to transfer the mortgage to enable me to clear off the whole that may be standing against me" (Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 134). "I give the above accounts to you, so you must collect them and pay yourself, and I will then be clear" (Routledge v. Ramsey, 8 Ad. & Ell. 221). "I have been in almost daily expectation of being enabled to give a satisfactory reply to your application. I will call upon you (the plaintiff's solicitor) to-morrow on the matter" (Morrell v. Frith, 8 C. & P. 246). "I am not conscious of ever having had this bill put before me till now, nor did I know it was owing. I am much annoyed that it should have been so long unsettled" (Collinson v. Margetson, 27 L. J. Ex. 305). "I never shall be able to pay you in cash, but you may have any of the goods we have at the pantechnicon by paying the expenses incurred thereon, as before agreed" (Cawley v. Furnell, 12 C. B. 291). "I do not wish to avail myself of the Statute of Limitations to refuse payment of the debt. I have not the means of payment, and must crave a continuance of your indulgence. In time an augmentation of salary may enable me to propose some satisfactory arrangement" (Rackham v. Marriott, 2 H. & N. 196). "It is agreed that Mr. H. in his general account shall give credit to Dr. H. for £174, being for bricks delivered to the trustees of Y. P. chapel in 1834" (Hughes v. Paramore, 7 D. M. & G. 229). "I have no wish to have anything to do with the lawyers, much less do I wish to deny a just debt. I cannot, however, get rid of the notion that my account with you was settled when I left the army. But as you declare it was not settled, I am willing to pay you £10 per annum until it is liquidated" (Buckmaster v. Russell, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 745). "I will not fail to meet the plaintiff on fair terms, and have now a hope, before perhaps a week from this date, I shall have it in my power to pay him at all events a portion of the debts, when we shall settle about the liquidation of the balance" (Hart v. Prendergast, 14 M. & W. 745; see Gardner v. M'Mahon, 3 Q. B. 561; Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 620). A letter in which the defendant stated "that family arrangements have been making to enable him to discharge the debt; that funds have been appointed for that purpose, of which A is trustee; and that the defendant has handed the plaintiff's account to A; and that some time must elapse before payment, but that the defendant is authorized by A to refer the plaintiff to him for any further information" (Whippy v. Hillary, 3 B. & Ad. 399).

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

Instances of insufficient acknowledgments.

The renewal of former promissory notes by a debtor cannot be considered as a promise rendering a party liable to pay original debts, but only that the party intended to give a fresh security limited to the new notes (Foster v. Dawber, 6 Exch. 839). A deed of composition was not evidence of a promise nor an acknowledgment, for the debt acknowledged remained to be made out by parol evidence (Kennett v. Millbank, 8 Bing. 38). P., indebted to the executors of C. in £1,100 to which A. was beneficially entitled, wrote to A.:—"I have sent you a note for the money due to you, which your mother left for you." Inclosed was a promissory note insufficiently stamped. The letter was not a sufficient acknowledgment, it being impossible to refer to the note (Parmiter v. Parmiter, 3 D. F. & J. 461). See the cases as to parol evidence above.

Improvement commissioners appointed a committee, who made a report with schedule of liabilities, including arrears of salary due to a clerk. The commissioners' entry in their minute book accepted the report. Held, no sufficient acknowledgment of the debt (Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311; 11 W. R. 1078; see Re Severn Ry. Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 559; see also Emery v. Day, 1 C. M. & R. 245; Lowndes v. Garnett, 33 L. J. Ch. 418; 12 W. R. 573). In Williams v. Griffith (3 Exch. 335), letters were not sufficient to take the plaintiff's claim, nor an account and affidavit sufficient to take the defendant's set-off, out of the statute. An admission of a debt made to a person, who at the same time signed a paper purporting to be a discharge of the debt, is not a sufficient acknowledgment though the discharge was inoperative in itself, and was given upon a consideration which the debtor failed to observe (Goate v. G., 1 H. & N. 29). A debtor with a view to an arrangement inserted the debt in the account of his debts, and his proposal was, that "for the future payment or compromise of such debts and engagements," he proposed to assign all his estate, &c.: held, not a sufficient acknowledgment (Everett v. Robertson, 1 Ell. & Ell. 16). An account stated between the defendant, a part owner and ship's husband, and his co-owners, in which the items of the plaintiff's account for work done and money advanced are included, is not a sufficient acknowledgment (Nash v. Hill, 1 F. & F. 198). Where the defendant and H gave to the plaintiff a joint and several promissory note, and after time had run the defendant wrote to the plaintiff, "I hereby consent to your receiving the dividend under H's assignment, and agree that your so doing shall not prejudice your claim upon me for the same debt." Held not a sufficient acknowledgment (Cockrill v. Sparke, 1 H. & C. 699). In Cassidy v. Firman (I. R. 1 C. L. 8), and Crawford v. C. (I. R. 2 Eq. 166) acknowledgments were held to be insufficient. See further Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 2nd ed. 81—91.

Condition not performed.

The following have been held to be conditional promises, the conditions of which were not shown to have been performed:—"I will send it as soon as possible, send your account next week" (Bethell v. B., 34 Ch. D. 561); "I shall be glad as soon as my position becomes somewhat better to begin again my instalments" (Meyerhoff v. Froehlich, 4 C. P. D. 63); "I cannot pay the debt at present, but I will pay it as soon as I can" (Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 602); "If in funds I would immediately pay the money and take the bill out of your hands" (Richardson v. Barry, 29 Beav. 22);

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

"I shall be happy to pay you both principal and interest as soon as convenient, I shall pay no more interest till we have a fair settling" (Edmunds v. Downes, 2 C. & M. 459). An agreement to pay the amount found due by arbitration, where the arbitration proved ineffective (Fenner v. Lord, 14 Times L. R. 450). "I cannot pay off anything of my account at present. As soon as I have the money, I shall forward you a cheque" (Lusher v. Hassard, 20 Times L. R. 563). "In the event of my selling my shares in the A. Co. I will pay the calls on such shares and the balance in settlement of my account" (Barrett v. Davies, 91 L. T. 736).

Acknowledgment exempted from stamp duty.

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 8.

No memorandum or other writing made necessary by 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, shall be deemed to be an agreement within the meaning of any statute relating to the duties of stamps (9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 8; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, s. 27, Ir.). Under this section the following memorandum:—"I acknowledge to owe to M. £36, which I agree to pay him as soon as circumstances will permit," is exempt from stamp duty, as a writing made necessary by that statute, provided it be put in for the mere purpose of barring the statute, the debt itself being proved by other evidence (Morris v. Dixon, 4 Ad. & Ell. 845). When the parties mean to make an instrument solely to prevent the operation of 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, they must take care not to import into it terms which will make it liable to stamp duty as a promissory note. A promissory note, improperly stamped, is not admissible as a memorandum to take a case out of the statute under the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 8; that section applies only to instruments which might be stamped with an agreement stamp (Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32; see also Parmiter v. Parmiter, 3 D. F. & J. 461).

(2) Acknowledgment by payment.

In addition to written acknowledgments, a creditor may, for the purpose of taking a case out of the statute, rely on the act of part payment (Emery v. Day, 1 C. M. & R. 249). This is the result not of the statute, but of judicial decision grafted on the statute (Re Hollingshead, H. v. Webster, 37 Ch. D. 657). The payment is sufficient even though at the time the debt is barred (Re Lane, 23 Q. B. D. 74); and even if the payment could be recovered back as pro tanto a fraudulent preference (ibid.).

Part payment of principal.

In order to take a case out of the statute by a part payment it must appear, in the first place, that the payment was made on account of a debt; secondly, that the payment was made on account of the debt for which the action is brought; and thirdly, that the payment was made as part of a greater debt; because the principle upon which a part payment takes a case out of the statute is, that it admits a greater debt to be due at the time of the payment (Tippets v. Heane, 1 C. M. & R. 252; see Wainman v. Kynman, 1 Exch. R. 118; Waugh v. Cope, 6 M. & W. 829). Part payment to come within the statute must be a payment from which a promise may be inferred to pay the remainder (Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, [1892] 1 Q. B. 769; Foster v. Dawber, 6 Exch. 839; Marrecco v. Richardson, [1908] 2 K. B. 588. See Sims v. Brutton, 5 Exch. 802; Re Somerset, S. v. Poulett, [1894] 1 Ch. 268; Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 421). The reason why the effect of such a payment is not lessened by the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, is, that it is not a mere acknowledgment by words, but it is coupled with a fact (Waters v. Tompkins, 2 C. M. & R. 726; see Morgan v. Rowlands, L. R. 7 Q. B. 493).

Payment of interest.

Payment of interest upon a promissory note payable on demand will take the principal sum secured by the note out of the statute, although there be no independent evidence of any demand having been made (Bamfield v. Tupper, 7 Exch. 27; Beally v. Greenslade, 2 C. & J. 61; Wyatt v. Hodson, 8 Bing. 309). But the payment of interest must be such that a promise to pay the principal can be inferred (Morgan v. Rowlands, L. R. 7 Q. B. 498). Accordingly, payment under compulsion of law is not enough (ibid.). And payment by trustees to a tenant for life of interest on a mortgage debt was not an acknowledgment of their liability to pay the principal in the investing of which a breach of trust had been committed (Re Somerset, S. v. Poulett, [1894] 1 Ch. 231; Re Fountaine, F. v. Amherst, [1909] 2 Ch. 382). As to whether a part payment of principal will take a claim for interest out of the statute, see Collyer v. Willcock, 4 Bing. 313; Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim. 108.

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

Insufficient payments.

A debt will not be kept alive by payment into Court (Long v. Greville, 3 B. & C. 10; distinguish Re Dennis, [1895] 2 Q. B. 630); nor by the payment of a dividend under an insolvency (Davies v. Edwards, 7 Exch. 22; Taylor v. Hollard, [1902] 1 K. B. 676), or under an inspectorship deed (Ex p. Topping, 34 L. J. Bank. 44), or under an arrangement with creditors (Re Lee, ex p. Grunwaldt, [1920] 2 K. B. 200). The effect of a payment may be qualified by words used at the time, but the jury must judge the truth of statements accompanying the admission of a previous payment (Baildon v. Walton, 1 Exch. 617; see Trentham v. Deverill, 3 Bing. N. C. 397). Where payment was relied upon as taking a debt out of the statute, it was for the jury to judge whether such payments were made in respect of interest or in respect of an annuity (Baildon v. Walton, supra). As to the effect of payments by guardians of one union to those of another, see Wycombe Union v. Eton Union (1 H. & N. 687).

Appropriation.

Where, several debts being due of which some are barred and some not barred, the debtor pays a sum without appropriating it to any debt, such payment will not, in the absence of evidence, be appropriated so as to revive the debts barred (Mills v. Fowkes, 5 Bing. N. C. 455). Semble, the creditor cannot, without the consent of the debtor, appropriate the payment, so as to entitle himself to sue for the balance of a barred debt (Nash v. Hodgson, 6 D. M. & G. 490; see, however, the judgment of Knight-Bruce, L.J., S. C.). And such consent will not be inferred from the debtor omitting to question an account sent to him which shows the appropriation (Re McHenry, McDermott v. Boyd, 71 L. T. 146). The creditor, however, may appropriate the payment towards satisfaction of such debt (Mills v. Fowkes, supra; distinguish Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 421). The creditor may appropriate up to the very last moment (The Mecca, [1897] A. C. 294; Seymour v. Pickett, [1905] 1 K. B. 715). But his right of appropriation was held to have ceased (Smith v. Betty, [1903] 2 K. B. 317). It may, of course, be shown that the debtor has himself appropriated the payment to any particular debt (Gwynn v. G., 41 L. T. 610). Where neither party has made any appropriation, the appropriation which the law will make as between items barred and not barred is discussed Re Boswell, Merritt v. B., [1906] 2 Ch. 366.

Payment "on account."

Payment by an agent to a principal of £300 "on account" was an acknowledgment that there was an account between them on which more than £300 would be payable, from which a promise to pay that balance must be inferred (Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 436; see Walker v. Butler, 6 E. & B. 506).

Proof of payment —by parol evidence;

Part payment of principal or payment of interest on account of a debt is not affected by the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, and therefore a parol acknowledgment of payment within six years before the action brought will take the case out of the statute (Cleave v. Jones, 6 Exch. 573; 20 L. J. Exch. 238; Edwards v. Janes, 1 K. & J. 534; Bevan v. Gething, 3 Q. B. 740). A witness, who said he settled all kinds of accounts for the defendant, admitted that an account containing a memorandum of a payment was in his own handwriting, but could not recollect the fact of payment: held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury, as to the fact of payment (Trentham v. Deverill, 3 Bing. N. C. 397; see further, as to parol evidence of part payment, Morley v. Finney (1870), W. N. 82). A letter not in itself sufficient as a written acknowledgment may form part of the evidence for deciding the question whether there has been a payment (Collinson v. Margesson, 27 L. J. Ex. 305).

9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

—by indorsements on bills and notes.

Indorsements on bills and notes treated as evidence of payment are dealt with by sect. 3, post.

Entries in debtor's books.

See as to admitting in evidence entries in a deceased's books, on the ground that they were against interest, Taylor v. Witham (3 Ch. D. 605); Newbould v. Smith (29 Ch. D. 882).

Modes in which payment can be made.

To constitute a payment sufficient to take a debt out of the statute it is not essential that money should pass between the parties. Thus there was a sufficient payment where the creditor gave a receipt (Maber v. Maber, L. R. 2 Ex. 153); and where a debtor supported a creditor's child (Bodger v. Arch, 10 Exch. 333). Anything received upon an agreement, in reduction of a debt, is a payment within 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, sufficient to take the debt out of the statute (Hooper v. Stephens, 4 Ad. & Ell. 71). If the parties to a bill of exchange agree that goods shall be supplied in part payment, and they are supplied and taken accordingly, that is a sufficient part payment (Hart v. Nash, 2 C. M. & R. 337); but in order to make a delivery of goods operative, there must be some evidence of an agreement that such delivery shall be deemed equivalent to payment (Cottam v. Partridge, 4 Scott, N. R. 819).

Payment —by delivery of goods;

—by settlement of accounts.

The stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, does not apply to the fact of an account stated, where there are items on both sides; but the going through an account with items on both sides and striking a balance converts the set-off into payments (Ashby v. James, 11 M. & W. 342; Worthington v. Grimsditch, 7 Q. B. 484; Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott, N. R. 165; Amos v. Smith, 1 H. & Colt. 238). See Williams v. Griffiths (2 C. M. & R. 45); Hughes v. Paramore (7 D. M. & G. 229). In Scholey v. Walton (12 M. & W. 510), the setting-off a sum of money in an account stated and settled was held to be a payment within the statute (see Stewart v. Connick, I. R. 5 C. L. 562). In another case a transaction in the nature of set-off was not a payment (Re Boswell, Merritt v. Boswell, [1906] 2 Ch. 368).

Set-off.

The going through an account where there are items on one side only does not alter the situation of the parties at all (Smith v. Forty, 4 C. & P. 126; Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32; Mills v. Fowkes, 5 Bing. N. C. 455).

Payment —by giving note or bill.

Where a bill is given in payment on account of a debt in such a manner as to raise an implication of a promise to pay the balance, this is sufficient part payment (Turney v. Dodwell, 3 Ell. & Bl. 136; Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90). The promise is to be implied at the time when the bill is given (Gowan v. Foster, 3 B. & Ad. 513), and where a cheque was given in part payment, it being at the time verbally agreed that the cheque should not be presented until a later date, the only date at which the promise could be implied was the giving of the cheque, and time ran accordingly (Marrecco v. Richardson, [1908] 2 K. B. 584. See Sparkes v. Restall, 22 Beav. 587, where a second note was given as a new security).

Payment to an agent;

Payment may be made to an agent of the creditor (Evans v. Davies, 4 Ad. & El. 840). The payment of interest to a cestui que trust was held to keep alive the right of the trustee to maintain an action on a promissory note (Megginon v. Harper, 2 C. & M. 322). Payment to a husband of interest on a promissory note given to his wife before marriage, was held sufficient payment (Hart v. Stephens, 6 Q. B. 937). 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.

Payment to a stranger is not sufficient (Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, [1892] 1 Q. B. 765). Unless possibly where the payment is made to a person filling a representative capacity, or who was believed to fill that capacity, when the payment might enure for the benefit of the persons for whom it was believed to be made (ibid., 769; Clark v. Hooper, 10 Bing. 480). —to a stranger.

Before M. W. P. Act, 1882, an acknowledgment or part payment by a woman before marriage kept her debt alive, both as against herself and her after-taken husband. But similar acts by her after marriage were of no avail either against herself or as against her husband (Pittam v. Foster, 1 B. & C. 248; Neve v. Hollands, 18 Q. B. 262). The M. W. P. Act, 1882, enables a wife to keep alive her liabilities in respect of her separate estate by an acknowledgment or part payment, or by suffering judgment to be obtained against her. But such acts do not affect her husband (Beck v. Pierce, 23 Q. B. D. 322). Payment by a wife;

The words of the Act, that "nothing herein contained shall alter or take away or lessen the effect of any payment of any principal or interest made by any person whatsoever," can never mean a payment made by a stranger, and without authority, but payment made by the principal debtor or someone acting by his authority (Linsell v. Bonsor, 2 Bing. N. C. 245; Homan v. Andrews, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 106). In Jones v. Hughes (5 Exch. 104), where money was advanced on a promissory note signed by the defendant thus: "I. H., churchwarden, J. E., overseer, or others for the time being," it was a question for the jury, whether the defendant had not constituted the parish officers for the time being his agents for payment of interest (see Rew v. Pettet, 1 Ad. & E. 196). As to whether payments by a company affect a director who has guaranteed the company's debt, see Re Wolmershausen (62 L. T. 541). In paying interest on a second mortgage a solicitor was held not to be the agent of the first mortgagee for whom he had previously acted on a sale (Thorne v. Heard, [1893] 3 Ch. 530). —by an agent;

Payment of part of a debt by a receiver of a business (appointed under a power in a mortgage) kept alive the debt against the estate of the owner of the business (Re Hale, Lilley v. Foad, [1899] 2 Ch. 107; compare Whitley v. Lowe, 2 De G. & J. 704). So payments by a receiver in lunacy towards the support of a lunatic maintained by poor law guardians (Wandsworth v. Worthington, [1906] 1 K. B. 420). —by receiver;

As to payments by one of a number of joint contractors, executors, or partners, see Merc. Law Amdt. Act, 1856, s. 14, post, p. 281. These case of payments by one of a number of persons bound by several promises is dealt with in Re Wolmershausen (62 L. T. 541). —by one of a number of joint contractors, &c.

Payments having been made to residuary legatees by the executors, it was held that such payments whilst the debts of the testator remained unpaid were a breach of trust, and that the debts having been kept alive against the executors, the statute was no bar to the claim of the creditor as against the residuary legatees to the extent of their interest in the residue, and they must therefore refund the moneys they had received on account of the estate (Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 226; see Re Brogden, Billing v. B., 38 Ch. D. 546). A claim by a creditor to make legatees refund was held barred by lapse of time and acquiescence (Blake v. Gale, 32 Ch. D. 571). Payment by executors; effect in keeping alive right to make legatees refund;

It was held under 47 Geo. 3, c. 74, that a payment by the executrix of a trader would not take a debt out of the statute, so as to enable the creditor to claim payment out of the real effect against beneficial devisee.

estate in the hands of a devisee (Putnam v. Bates, 3 Russ. 188: conf. Wilson v. Leonard, 3 Beav. 373, where a devisee was held not bound by the amount of a claim substantiated against the executor in an action at law to which he was not a party). And it has since been held under the Administration of Estates Act, 1833 (see notes to sect. 32 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post), that the payment of interest on a debt of the testator by the executors, they being also trustees of his real estate not subjected by the will to debts, did not necessarily keep the debt alive as against such real estate; for although the executors and trustees were the same persons they filled different characters, and where the payments were made by them in the character of executors only, the real estate was not affected by it (Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 230; compare Astbury v. A., [1898] 2 Ch. 119, where Stirling J., held that an acknowledgment which might have bound personal estate did not bind real estate; and see Re England, Steward v. E., [1895] 2 Ch. 109).

Where executor is beneficial devisee.

Where executor is trustee.

Payment of interest on a testator's simple contract debt made by a party filling the two characters of beneficial devisee and executor, was attributed to both characters, and not to one only, for the moral obligation did not attach more to one character than to the other. But it was otherwise where the characters held by the party were entirely distinct, as where he was personally liable as debtor, and was answerable also in the character of trustee of another; for he then represented two persons, and the question in such a case is by whom the promise is made and not what is its extent or effect (Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 225; compare Brown v. Gordon, 16 Beav. 302).

Consider now in connection with the last two paragraphs the effect of L. T. Act, 1897, s. 1, and the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post.

Right to marshall.

The demand of a simple contract creditor as against the real estate of the testator, which would otherwise be barred by the statute, is not kept alive by the effect of any right to have the assets marshalled (Fordham v. Wallis, supra; see, however, Darb. & Bos. Stat. Lim., 2nd ed., 130).

Payments by devisees.

Having regard to the Debts Recovery Act, 1830 (see note to sect. 32 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post), several devisees of distinct estates were jointly liable to a specialty creditor of their testator, and were "co-debtors" within sect. 14 of the M. L. A. Act, 1856 (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 349). Their liability in respect of his simple contract debts appears to have been similar. If so, payment by one such devisee would not affect another. It has been held, however, that payment of interest on a simple contract debt by a devisee for life of the debtor's real estate kept the creditor's right of action alive against all parties interested in such real estate in remainder (Re Hollingshead, H. v. Webster, 37 Ch. D. 651). It was said in one case that such a payment would operate to prevent time running as regards the testator's real estate only (Boatwright v. B., 17 Eq. 74).

See further as to the acknowledgment of a simple contract debt by payment, Whitcomb v. Whiting (1 Smith, L. C.); and see the cases quoted under R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8 (ante, p. 224), and Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 5 (ante, p. 251).

Indorsements of payments.

3. That no indorsement or memorandum of any payment, written or made after the time appointed for this Act to take effect, upon any promissory note, bill of exchange, or other writing, by or on behalf of the party to whom such payment shall be made, shall be deemed sufficient proof of such payment, so as to take the case out of the operation of either of the said statutes. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3.

As to this section, see Bradley v. James, 13 C. B. 822; Briggs v. Wilson, 5 D. M. G. 12.

4. That the said recited Acts and this Act shall be deemed and taken to apply to the case of any debt on simple contract, alleged by way of set-off on the part of any defendant, either by plea, notice, or otherwise. Simple contract debts alleged by way of set-off.

VI.—The Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, ss. 9—14.

An Act to amend the Laws of England and Ireland affecting Commerce. [29th July, 1856.]

§ 9. Actions on Merchants' Accounts to be commenced within six years...279.
§ 10. Absence beyond seas and imprisonment of creditor not to be disability...279.
§ 11. Joint Debtors beyond seas...280.
§ 12. Definition of "beyond seas"...280.
§ 13. Acknowledgments by agents...281.
§ 14. Part payment by one co-contractor...281.

9. All actions of account or for not accounting, and suits for such accounts, as concern the trade of merchandize between merchant and merchant (a), their factors or servants, shall be commenced and sued within six years after the cause of such actions or suits, or when such cause has already arisen then within six years after the passing of this Act; and no claim in respect of a matter which arose more than six years before the commencement of such action or suit shall be enforceable by action or suit by reason only of some other matter of claim comprised in the same account having arisen within six years next before the commencement of such action or suit. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9. Limitation of actions for "merchants' accounts."

(a) Ante, p. 257.

10. No person or persons who shall be entitled to any action or suit with respect to which the period of limitation within which the same shall be brought is fixed by the Act of the twenty-first year of the reign of King James the First, chapter sixteen, section three (b), or by the Act Absence beyond seas or imprisonment of a creditor not to be a disability.

This section was retrospective, and included causes of action accrued before the statute was passed (Pardo v. Bingham, 4 Ch. 755; see Cornill v. Hudson, 8 El. & El. 429).

Period of limitation to run as to joint debtors in the kingdom, though some are beyond seas.

11. Where such cause of action or suit with respect to which the period of limitation is fixed by the enactments aforesaid or any of them lies against two or more joint debtors, the person or persons who shall be entitled to the same shall not be entitled to any time within which to commence and sue any such action or suit against any one or more of such joint debtors who shall not be beyond the seas at the time such cause of action or suit accrued, by reason only that some other one or more of such joint debtors was or were at the time such cause of action accrued beyond the seas; and such person or persons so entitled as aforesaid shall not be barred from commencing and suing any action or suit against the joint debtor or joint debtors who was or were beyond seas at the time the cause of action or suit accrued after his or their return from beyond seas, by reason only that judgment was already recovered against any one or more of such joint debtors who was not or were not beyond seas at the time aforesaid.

Judgment recovered against joint debtors in the kingdom to be no bar to proceeding against others beyond seas after their return.

See R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 19, ante, p. 184; Civil Proc. Act, 1833, s. 7, ante, p. 253. This section of the Act is not retrospective (Flood v. Patterson, 29 Beav. 295). A testator in Jersey appointed his Jersey wife executrix. She proved in Jersey, but not in England; and, though she had been three weeks in England after the death, she did not act there as executrix: held, that she could not be sued in England, and therefore that time did not run in favour of her testator's estate (ibid.).

Before this Act payment of interest by one of the makers of a joint or joint and several promissory note took the case out of the statute as against the other maker (Whitcomb v. Whiting, 2 Doug. 652), although such payment was made after the statute had run (Channell v. Ditchburn, 5 M. & W. 494; Goddard v. Ingram, 3 Q. B. 839; see Atkins v. Tredgold, 2 B. & C, 23; Slater v. Lawson, Old law as to payments by one of several joint contractors.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14.

1 B. & Ad. 396; Burleigh v. Stott, 8 B. & C. 36; Munderston v. Robertson, 4 M. & R. 140). The doctrine of Whitcomb v. Whiting was applied to the case of one of the co-contractors jointly liable being a principal and the other a surety (Perham v. Raynall, 2 Bing. 306; Wyatt v. Hodson, 8 Bing. 309).

But the doctrine was limited to cases where a joint liability existed, and was never applied where the liability arose from promises which were several only (Re Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 544); even where one of the promisors was a principal mortgaging real estate and another a surety for him (ibid.). So where a joint contract was severed by the death of one of the contractors, nothing could be done by his personal representatives to take the debt out of the statute as against the survivor (Slater v. Lawson, 1 B. & Ad. 396; see Read v. Price, [1909] 1 K. B. 577), nor by the survivor so as to affect the deceased (Atkins v. Tredgold, 2 B. & C. 23).

Payments after death of one of several joint contractors.

Partners: payments after death of one of several;

So also payments of interest on a partnership debt by surviving partners have not the effect of taking the debt out of the statute as against the real or personal estate of a deceased partner (Way v. Bassett, 5 Hare, 55). See the doubts previously expressed as to this, Winter v. Innes (4 M. & Cr. 111); Braithwaite v. Britain (1 Keen, 221). Even where payments are made by a surviving partner, who is also executor of the deceased partner, the presumption seems to be that the payments are made in the character of surviving partner, and not as executor (Thompson v. Waithman, 3 Drew, 628; Brown v. Gordon, 16 Beav. 302).

Where a partnership continues, and all the partners are living, it has been decided, since the present Act, that the above section does not apply to a payment made by one partner on account of a debt due by the firm, such a payment being considered as a payment of the firm itself (Goodwin v. Parton, 42 L. T. 91; see Watson v. Woodman, 20 Eq. 730). But where a partner retires, and the retirement is publicly announced, part payment by a continuing partner cannot be set up against the retiring partner as an answer to the statute (Watson v. Woodman, 20 Eq. 721; Bristow v. Miller, 11 Ir. L. R. 461). Secus where the retirement is secret (Re Tucker, [1894] 3 Ch. 429).

Executors.

For the effect before the present Act, of a payment by one of several executors as regards his co-executors, see Atkins v. Tredgold (2 B. & C. 23); Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 512). The effect since the Act of one of several executors paying interest on a simple contract debt of his testator is discussed, Re Hollingshead, H. v. Webster (37 Ch. D. 658). See Re Macdonald, Dick v. Fraser, [1897] 2 Ch. 181.

Devisees.

Where a specialty debtor died having devised distinct estates to several persons, the devisees were "co-debtors" (within this section) in respect of their testator's specialties (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 349). It seems that the tenant for life and remainderman of a single estate would not be co-debtors (ibid.; Re Hollingshead, H. v. Webster, 37 Ch. D. 657).

Other cases on the section.

Under the above section (which was held not retrospective as regards the date of the payment, Jackson v. Woolley, 8 E. & B. 784), part payment by one of two makers of a joint and several promissory note did not take the case out of the statute as against the other (Cockerill v. Sparkes, 1 H. & C. 699).

The section does not apply in the case of payments under R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 8, ante, p. 224 (Re Frisby, Allison v. F., 43 Ch. D. 106). As to the effect of a mortgagor's payment of interest where by a separate instrument a surety had guaranteed the mortgage debt, see Re Powers, Lindsell v. Phillips, (30 Ch. D. 291, a separate bond); Re Wolmershausen (62 L. T. 541, a separate promissory note). And as to the effect of the section on the right of contribution between co-debtors, see Gardner v. Brooke, [1897] 2 I. R. 6. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 16.

16. In citing this Act it shall be sufficient to use the expression "The Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856." Short title.

17. Nothing in this Act shall extend to Scotland. Extent of Act.

VII.—The Trustee Act, 1888.

51 & 52 Vict. c. 59, ss. 1, 8, 12.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Duties, Powers, and Liability of Trustees. [24th December, 1888.]

1.—(1) This Act may be cited as the Trustee Act, 1888. Short title, extent, and definition.

(2.) This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

(3.) For the purposes of this Act, the expression "trustee" shall be deemed to include an executor or administrator, and a trustee whose trust arises by construction or implication of law, as well as an express trustee, but not the official trustee of charitable funds.

(4.) The provisions of this Act relating to a trustee shall apply as well to several joint trustees as to a sole trustee.

It was doubtful whether an executor, merely as such, came within the above definition (Lacons v. Warmoll, [1907] 2 K. B. 362, 364; but see now Re Blow, St. Bartholomew's Hospital v. Cambden, [1914] 1 Ch. 233, cited in note to clause (b) of section 8, post). As regards moneys of a company under their control, directors are trustees within this section (Re Lands Allotment Co., [1894] 1 Ch. 616; National Bank of Wales, [1899] 2 Ch. 629, 663; see Re Kingston Cotton Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 347; Whitwam v. Watkin, 78 L. T. 188); but not a trustee in bankruptcy (Re Cornish, [1896] 1 Q. B. 99; see Re Gallard, [1897] 2 Q. B. 8). The word "trustee" included a husband who had seized his wife's separate estate (Wassell v. Leggatt, [1896] 1 Ch. 554); or property in which she had a separate life interest (McArdle v. Gaughran, [1903] 1 I. R. 106).

As to the cases of constructive trust in which independently of this Act lapse of time would be a defence, see the note, post, p. 292.

8.—(1.) In any action or other proceeding against a trustee or any person claiming through him, except where the claim is founded upon any fraud or fraudulent breach of trust to which the trustee was party or privy, or is to recover trust property, or the proceeds thereof still retained by the trustee, or previously received by the trustee and converted to his use, the following provisions shall apply— Statute of Limitations may be pleaded by trustees.

(a.) All rights and privileges conferred by any statute of limitations shall be enjoyed in the like manner and to the like extent as they would have been enjoyed in such action or other proceeding if the trustee or person claiming through him had not been a trustee or person claiming through him:

(b.) If the action or other proceeding is brought to recover money or other property, and is one to which no existing statute of limitations applies, the trustee or person claiming through him shall be entitled to the benefit of and be at liberty to plead the lapse of time as a bar to such action or other proceeding in the like manner and to the like extent as if the claim had been against him in an action of debt for money had and received, but so nevertheless that the statute shall run against a married woman entitled in possession for her separate use, whether with or without a restraint upon anticipation, but shall not begin to run against any beneficiary unless and until the interest of such beneficiary shall be an interest in possession.

(2.) No beneficiary, as against whom there would be a good defence by virtue of this section, shall derive any greater or other benefit from a judgment or order obtained by another beneficiary than he could have obtained if he had brought such action or other proceeding and this section had been pleaded.

(3.) This section shall apply only to actions or other proceedings commenced after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety, and shall not deprive any executor or administrator of any right of defence to which he is entitled under any existing statute of limitations.

As to the application (independently of the present Act) of the Statutes of Limitation to proceedings against trustees, see in the case of land sect. 25 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, ante, p. 189, in the case of money, whether charged or not charged on land, the note to sect. 10 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, p. 242, and the references there given.

(1) Effect of the Section...284.
(2) Point from which Time Runs...285.
(3) Exceptions from the Section...286.
(4) Proceedings and Persons within the Section...287.

(1) Effect of section.

The short effect of sect. 8 is that, except in three specific cases—viz., fraud, retention by a trustee of trust money when an action is commenced against him, and conversion of trust money to his own use—a trustee who has committed a breach of trust is entitled to the protection of the several Statutes of Limitation as if actions and suits for breaches of trust were enumerated in them (How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 640). In cases where it applies the section appears to control sect. 25, sub-sect. 2 of the Jud. Act, 1873.

Clause (a).

As to clause (a) of sub-sect. 1, Fry, L.J., pointed out that there was no right or privilege conferred by any Statute of Limitations in respect of a breach of trust (Re Bowden, 45 Ch. D. 450). But this seems to deprive clause (a) of meaning (How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 639). Rigby, L.J., said that the clause dealt with remedies, not with causes of action. The clause supposed the trustee to be guilty of a breach of duty, and provided that he was to be treated as though the breach of trust were nothing more or less than a breach of duty by reason of some act or omission (ibid., 642). Where, accordingly, an annuitant sued a trustee of a will for breaches of trust consisting of omission to accumulate, clause (a) protected the defendant from demands more than six years before writ (How v. Winterton, supra). The same clause barred a second mortgagee's action for an account against a first mortgagee who had sold and received the proceeds (Thorne v. Heard, [1894] 1 Ch. 603; [1895] A. C. 495). 51 & 52 Vict. c. 59, s. 8.

In discussing the period prescribed by clause (a) Rigby, L.J., said that a duty might be thrown on a trustee by virtue of his simple contract to undertake the trust, or by reason of a covenant to undertake it, and that you must look to the appropriate Statutes of Limitation under which the periods might be different (How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 642; see as to this the cases quoted under sect. 32 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (post)). Lindley, L.J., said that if clause (a) applies to the trustee's accounts at all, it puts them on the same footing as other accounts; as to which (see ante, p. 257) the period is six years ([1896] 2 Ch. 639). The form of an order for account by trustees protected by the section is given, Re Davies, Ellis v. Roberts, [1898] 2 Ch. 142.

Clause (b).

As to clause (b). The period prescribed in the case of an action of debt for money had and received is the six years mentioned in the Lim. Act, 1623 (ante, p. 254; see Re Somerset, S. v. Poulett, [1894] 1 Ch. 255; Re Timmis, Nixon v. Smith, [1902] 1 Ch. 184). Clause (b) has been held to bar an action to compel a trustee to make good loss from improper investment (Re Bowden, Andrew v. Cooper, 45 Ch. D. 444; Re Gurney, Mason v. Mercer, [1893] 1 Ch. 590; Re Somerset, supra), or to make good to the estate income tax overpaid to annuitants (Re Sharp, Rickett v. R., [1906] 1 Ch. 793). Also an action by a residuary legatee to recover from a trustee loss from non-realisation of residue (Re Swain, S. v. Bringemann, [1891] 3 Ch. 233). The words of the clause are satisfied if the action be one to make the trustee pay money which does not belong to the plaintiff, but is payable into a fund as against which the plaintiff has a claim (see How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 642). The clause protected an executor in an action for an account brought by a creditor, and the executor was allowed sums honestly paid to beneficiaries more than six years before action brought (Re Blow, [1914] 1 Ch. 233). But a claim for administration made by a residuary legatee was held to be an action to recover a legacy barred only after twelve years by sect. 8 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante (Re Richardson, Pole v. Pattenden, [1920] 1 Ch. 423). On the concluding part of the clause see Re Allsop, Whittaker v. Bamford, [1914] 1 Ch. 1. As to pleading the statute, see Re Williams, Jones v. W., [1916] 2 Ch. 38.

Where a will appointed the same persons executors and trustees, and the executors completed the administration and became trustees of a fund settled by the will, an action to make them liable for improperly paying over the fund was barred by clause (b) as being an action to which no existing Statute of Limitations applied (Re Timmis, Nixon v. Smith, [1902] 1 Ch. 174).

(2) Point from which time runs.

The section has not altered the principles determining the time when a cause of action accrues (Thorne v. Heard, [1894] 1 Ch. 605). In the case of a breach of trust time runs from the date of the breach (ibid.; see Re Somerset, S. v. Poulett, [1894] 1 Ch. 231; Re Bowden, 45 Ch. D. 450; Smith v. Fox, 6 Hare, 386). Under the concluding words, however, of clause (b), time does not run against a beneficiary until his interest is in possession. Accordingly in an action brought more than six years after a breach of trust infant remaindermen were not barred, although the tenant for life was (Re Somerset, supra; Re Fountaine, F. v. Amherst, [1909] 2 Ch. 382; Re Dive, D. v. Roebuck, [1909] 1 Ch. 336; see Collings v. Wade, [1896] 1 I. R. 340). So where under a settlement of personal estate a wife took (expressly) an estate during the joint lives of herself and her husband, and (by way of resulting trust) a further estate for life after her husband's death, an action to enforce a breach of trust brought by her within six years after her husband's death was not barred (Mara v. Browne, [1895] 2 Ch. 69). In the case of an owner of a deferred annuity suing for previous breaches of trust, time ran against the annuitant from the commencement of her annuity (How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 637). Inasmuch, however, as during a life tenancy a remainderman can sue to have trust funds properly secured, his action for a breach of trust may, even where not barred under this statute, be barred by laches (Re Taylor, Atkinson v. Lord, 81 L. T. 812).

51 & 52 Vict. c. 59, s. 8.

Where fraud as regards a client's money was committed by solicitors in partnership, and was concealed by misrepresentation, time did not run against the client until the discovery of the fraud; an innocent partner being deprived of the benefit of the statute by representations which bound him as a partner (Blair v. Bromley, 2 Ph. 354). This decision rests on the law relating to representation and partnership, and not the law relating to trusts; and remains unaffected by the above section (Moore v. Knight, [1891] 1 Ch. 555). In the last-mentioned case Stirling, J., said that as against a trustee relying on clause (b), the cestui que trusts could claim the benefit of Blair v. Bromley (ibid., 556; see Whitwam v. Watkin, 78 L. T. 190).

(3) Exceptions from the section.

Sect. 8 starts by mentioning three exceptions. The intention of the statute was to give a trustee the benefit of the lapse of time when, although he had done something legally or technically wrong, he had done nothing morally wrong or dishonest. It was not intended to protect him where, if he pleaded the statute, he would come off with something he ought not to have (Re Timmis; Nixon v. Smith, [1902] 1 Ch. 186).

Fraud.

The first exception relates to fraud to which the trustee was party or privy. This means fraud in which the trustee has personally participated. It does not include fraud committed by an agent in his own interest, of which the trustee was ignorant, from which he did not benefit, and which he did not ratify (Thorne v. Heard, [1894] 1 Ch. 606, 615; [1895] A. C. 503. Conf. Ruben v. Great Fingall, [1906] A. C. 439). The receipt by a promoter of a secret profit may be "fraudulent" (Re Sale Hotel Co. (1897), W. N. 174; 46 W. R. 617; compare Collings v. Wade, [1896] 1 I. R. 340; Omnium Electric Palaces v. Baines, [1914] 1 Ch. 332).

Trust property still retained.

The second exception relates to trust property still retained by the trustee. This is confined to cases in which, at the date of the writ, the trustee has in his hands, or under his control, the property sought to be recovered. It refers to cases where the trustee, or any agent for him, has the property so that he can get it; but not cases where the property has been lost, whether by the trustee's negligence or otherwise (Thorne v. Heard, [1894] 1 Ch. 606). The property must be in some sense in his pocket (Re Timmis, Nixon v. Smith, [1902] 1 Ch. 185). Accordingly a trustee cannot be treated as having trust moneys still in his hands until he can account for their proper application (How v. Winterton, [1896] 2 Ch. 634, 638; Re Tufnell, 18 T. L. R. 705). Where an executor expended the residue in maintaining the infant residuary legatee, but rendered no account, the legatee's action for account brought more than six years after his majority was barred, the exceptions not applying (Re Page, Jones v. Morgan, [1893] 1 Ch. 301). But the second exception applied in the case of a husband who had seized his wife's separate estate (Wassell v. Leggatt, [1896] 1 Ch. 554), or property in which she had a separate life interest (McArdle v. Gaughran, [1903] 1 I. R. 106). 51 & 52 Vict. c. 59, s. 8.

The third exception relates to trust property received by the trustee and converted to his use. The exception did not include the case of trust funds advanced on mortgage, and, with the concurrence of the mortgagor, applied in payment of a debt previously charged on the mortgaged property in favour of a bank in which the trustee was partner (Re Gurney, Mason v. Mercer, [1893] 1 Ch. 590); but was thought to include the case of money deposited with solicitors for investment, and embezzled by a clerk of the firm (Moore v. Knight, [1891] 1 Ch. 553). Trust property converted.

The section only applies to "proceedings against a trustee," &c. Accordingly where the executors of a deceased trustee took out a summons to ascertain the liability, if any, of the trustees for retaining mortgages, the defence of the section was said not to be available (Re Chapman, Cocks v. Chapman, [1896] 1 Ch. 326). The words "any person claiming through" a trustee refer not to cestui que trusts, but to such persons as the executors, administrators, and assigns of the trustee (Leahy v. De Moleyns, [1896] 1 I. R. 206). (4) Proceedings and persons within the section.

In connection with sub-sect. 2 compare the case of creditors claiming in administration actions, post, p. 295; and see Williams v. W., [1900] 1 Ch. 152. As to sub-sect. 3, see Re Harrison; Allen v. Cort (1892), W. N. 148. Sub-sect. (2). (3).

12.—(1) This Act shall apply as well to trusts created by instrument executed before as to trusts created after the passing of this Act. Application of Act.

(2.) Provided always, that save as in this Act expressly provided, nothing therein contained shall authorise any trustee to do anything which he is in express terms forbidden to do, or to omit to do anything which he is in express terms directed to do, by the instrument or instruments creating the trust.

(1) Lapse of time in equity generally.

In the case of suits in courts of equity (before the Judicature Acts) relating to land, rent-charges, church property, advowsons, money charged on land or rent-charges, legacies, and the estates of intestates, provisions in terms affecting such suits occurred in R. P. Lim. Act, 1833 (sects. 24—34, 40—43); R. P. Lim. Act, 1837; Law of Prop. Amendment Act, 1860 (s. 13). See these sections, ante. Sects. 2—5, 7—9, 14—22 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, applied in terms only to actions at law, although in substance these limitations by virtue of sect. 24, governed suits in equity. All the provisions, however, of R. P. Lim. Act, 1874 (ante, p. 214), were so framed as to apply in terms to courts of equity as well as courts of law. In the case of trusts, proceedings in all courts are also affected by Jud. Act, 1873, sect. 25 (2); Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8.

Land, money charged on land, &c.

Legal demands.

In the case of specialty and simple contract debts the statutes which prescribed the periods of limitation for the recovery of such debts did not apply in terms to Courts of equity. But it was said before the Judicature Acts that in the case of legal demands those courts acted in obedience to the statutes (Foley v. Hill, 1 Ph. 399). Since the Judicature Acts, it has been said that Lim. Act, 1623, s. 3, is binding upon the High Court, and applies to every action properly described by it (Re Greaves, Bray v. Tofield, 18 Ch. D. 554; see Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. D. 67; Re Sharpe, Masonic Co. v. S., [1892] 1 Ch. 154). Again, it has been laid down that in the case of a legal right a Court of equity will not refuse relief on the ground of delay unless sufficient to create a statutory bar (Re Maddever, Three Towns' Co. v. M., 27 Ch. D. 532; Moore v. Marriott, 7 Ch. D. 546). Thus a less delay did not deprive a plaintiff of his right to an injunction in aid of an action of deceit (Fullwood v. F., 9 Ch. D. 176). So also a deed was set aside under 13 Eliz. c. 5, ten years after the death of the grantor (Three Towns' Co. v. Maddever, supra). And a specialty creditor recovered his debt more than eighteen years after the debtor's death (Re Baker, Collins v. Rhodes, 20 Ch. D. 230). Mere laches does not deprive the creditor of his right to sue an executor for devastavit (Re Birch, Roe v. B., 27 Ch. D. 622).

Equitable demands.

Acting by analogy.

Where a remedy in equity corresponds to a remedy at law which is within the statute, the Court of equity acts by analogy to the statute (Knox v. Gye, L. R. 5 H. L. 674; see Bulli Co. v. Osborne, [1899] A. C. 351; Oelkers v. Ellis, [1914] 2 K. B. 139). Thus an action against directors for misrepresentation in a prospectus was treated as analogous to an action for deceit, and it was said that no delay short of the statutory period would be a bar (Peek v. Gurney, L. R. 6 H. L. 377). So an action to set aside a gift on the ground of undue influence (Allcard v. Skinner, 36 Ch. D. 186). The analogy of the Lim. Act, 1623, was held applicable to an action to recover a debt out of a married woman's separate estate (Re Hastings, Hallett v. Hastings, 35 Ch. D. 105; Beck v. Pierce, 23 Q. B. D. 322), and to an action to set aside a forfeiture of shares (Rule v. Jewell, 18 Ch. D. 667). Lapse of time barred the claim of the liquidator to place a name on the list of contributories, the case being specific performance of an agreement to take shares (Mackenzie's Case, Europ. Assur. Arbitration Cases, 141). Where an action for damages for breach of a contract to execute a mortgage would have been barred by Lim. Act, 1623, it was said that specific performance would not be decreed (Firth v. Slingsby, 58 L. T. 483). But Courts of equity have refused by analogy to apply to personal estate a statute dealing only with real estate (Mellersh v. Brown, 45 Ch. D. 229; Charter v. Watson, [1899] 1 Ch. 175; Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1905] 1 Ch. 72). And the Court of Admiralty refused to apply the analogy of the statute in dealing with arrears of interest in an action in rem (The Kong Magnus, [1891] P. 223). As to acting by analogy see further the earlier cases quoted under sect. 24 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, ante, p. 188.

Courts of Equity and the Statutes of Limitation.

Laches and acquiescence.

Independently of the statute claims may be barred on the ground of laches; e.g. where a dowress neglects for more than twelve years to claim any of her rights (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 722). Or where the mortgagee of an advowson neglected for forty-eight years to require any payment (Brooks v. Muckleston, [1909] 2 Ch. 519). So equitable demands may be barred by laches (Harcourt v. White, 28 Beav. 303; Nutt v. Easton, [1900] 1 Ch. 29; Levy v. Stogdon, [1899] 1 Ch. 5; see Re Sharpe, Masonic Co. v. S., [1892] 1 Ch. 154; and cases quoted ibid. p. 168; Watt v. Assets Co., [1905] A. C. 329, 333). In the case of legal demands, relief will not be refused on the ground of delay unless sufficient to create a statutory bar (see above). Acquiescence will also, independently of the statute, prevent the enforcement of demands in equity (Blake v. Gale, 32 Ch. D. 571; Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R. 3 H. L. 249; Allcard v. Skinner, 36 Ch. D. 163; see Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. C. 383, where laches and acquiescence are distinguished; and see the cases quoted under R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 27, ante, p. 195. Laches and acquiescence will prevent the enforcement of a claim, even in the case of an express trust (Re Cross, Harston v. Tenison, 20 Ch. D. 121; Bright v. Legerton, 2 D. F. & J. 606; M'Donnell v. White, 11 H. L. C. 570).

Fraud.

In actions based on concealed fraud, time in Courts of equity always ran from the discovery of the fraud (Booth v. Warrington, 4 Bro. P. C. 163; Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 607; Rolfe v. Gregory, 4 D. J. & S. 579; see Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. D. 70; Re Crossley, Munns v. Burn, 35 Ch. D. 266). For the operation of the rule as between partners in regard to partnership accounts, see Betjemann v. B., [1895] 2 Ch. 474. The rule was applied where fraud, as regards a client's money, was committed by solicitors in partnership and concealed by misrepresentation (Blair v. Bromley, 2 Phil. 354; Moare v. Knight, [1891] 1 Ch. 547). In Blair v. Bromley (supra), the defendant was not personally concerned in the fraud, and had ceased to be a partner for six years before action, but was held liable for the fraud of his co-partner, committed in the ordinary course of the partnership business. The defendants were not liable where the fraud was not in such ordinary course (Hughes v. Twisden, 54 L. T. 570; compare Mara v. Browne, [1896] 1 Ch. 199), nor where fraud was committed not by themselves, but by an agent acting in his own interest (Thorne v. Heard, [1894] 1 Ch. 599; [1895] A. C. 495; see British Co. v. Charnwood Co., 18 Q. B. D. 714). In actions to open accounts, where an item complained of is fraudulent, the accounts will be opened altogether; but where the item is not fraudulent, and the accounts are of some years' standing, the plaintiff will only have liberty to surcharge and falsify (Gething v. Keighley, 9 Ch. D. 550; see Allfrey v. A., 1 Mac. & G. 87; Williamson v. Barbour, 9 Ch. D. 529). Delay deprives a man of his right to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud or misrepresentation, and the delay counts from the time when by due diligence the fraud or misrepresentation might have been discovered (Redgrave v. Hurd, 20 Ch. D. 13; Molloy v. Mutual Reserve Co., 22 T. L. R. 525; see Oelkers v. Ellis, [1914] 2 K. B. 139).

Mistake.

In the case of mistake, where equitable relief was claimed, time ran from the moment when the plaintiff discovered the mistake, or had reasonable means of discovery (Baker v. Courage, [1910] 1 K. B. 63). Thus, where trustees paid over trust money on a mistake of fact, and within six years from its discovery commenced a suit to compel refunding, they recovered (Brooksbank v. Smith, 2 Y. & C. Ex. 58; see Durrant v. Ecclesiastical Commrs., 6 Q. B. D. 234). Where A and B being tenants in common of rents, A under a mutual mistake of fact received more than his share, and B sued for an account. Held that as B had the means of discovering the mistake earlier, he was entitled to an account for six years only before bill (Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. Ex. 42). In a common law action to recover money paid under a mistake of fact time ran from payment (Baker v. Courage, [1910] 1 K. B. 56). It is not necessary to the cause of action in such a case that the payor should give the payee notice of his mistake and demand the money (ibid.; see Freeman v. Jeffries, L. R. 4 Ex. 200; Cowper v. Godmond, 9 Bing. 148; Leather, &c. Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 128 U. S. 26; Bree v. Holbech, 2 Doug. 654). As between A and B, cestui que trusts, where trustees by mistake overpaid A, the statute was no defence to a suit by B brought more than six years after the payment to make A refund (Harris v. H., 29 Beav. 110, where it does not appear when the mistake was discovered; see Prowse v. Spurgin, 5 Eq. 99; Re Horne, Wilson v. Cox Sinclair, [1905] 1 Ch. 76). Secus where the claim is in the nature of a claim for money and not for a specific trust fund (Re Robinson, McLaren v. Public Trustee, [1911] 1 Ch. 502). As between a trustee and a cestui que trust who by the trustee's mistake of law has been underpaid, the effect of time is dealt with, Newton v. Ayscough, 19 Ves. 534. And see Hilliard v. Fulford, 4 Ch. D. 389.

A release to trustees has been set aside after the lapse of more than twenty years, it having been executed under a mistake (Re Garnett, Gaudy v. Macaulay, 31 Ch. D. 1). Where property has been long enjoyed by a family in certain shares under a mistake, the Court will presume a family arrangement (Re Peat, 7 Eq. 302).

Mortgagee of interests in personalty.

A mortgagee of an equitable reversionary interest in personal estate can, on the interest falling into possession, recover the fund from the trustee and pay himself in full, although the debt, to secure which the mortgage was made, is barred (Re Hancock, H. v. Berrey, 59 L. T. 197; Re Lake, 63 L. T. 416; see Re Stucley, S., v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 67; Jordan v. Young (1878), W. N. 229). And inasmuch as sects. 40 and 42 of R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, do not affect mortgages of personal estate (London and Midland Bank v. Mitchell, [1899] 2 Ch. 161; Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, [1906] 1 Ch. 67), a mortgagee of personal estate in possession may foreclose after the personal remedy to recover the debt is barred (London and Midland Bank v. Mitchell, supra), and a mortgagee can in an action to foreclose personal estate recover interest for more than six years (Mellersh v. Brown, 45 Ch. D. 225; see Smith v. Hill, 9 Ch. D. 143). So in an action to enforce a vendor's lien on personal estate, the plaintiff recovered interest for twenty-six years (Re Stucley, S. v. Kekewich, supra). As to the right of the trustees of a fund, who have notice of other claims, to refuse to pay over the whole fund to a mortgagee, see Re Bell, Jeffery v. Sayles, [1896] 1 Ch. 1; Hockey v. Western, [1898] 1 Ch. 350.

Where real and personal estate were comprised in one mortgage, and the right to redeem the land was barred, redemption of the personalty was refused (Charter v. Watson, [1899] 1 Ch. 175).

Waste.

In the case of legal waste by a tenant for life, the period of limitation is six years (Birch Wolfe v. B., 9 Eq. 692), which period may be extended by infancy (Dashwood v. Magniac, [1891] 3 Ch. 386). Time runs against the remainderman from the cutting of the timber (Seagram v. Knight, 2 Ch. 628; Higginbottom v. Hawkins, 7 Ch. 676; see Simpson v. S., 3 L. R. Ir. 314). In the case of equitable waste time runs against the remainderman from the date when his title accrues in possession (Leeds v. Amherst, 2 Phil. 117; Morris v. M., 6 W. R. 427; Dashwood v. Magniac, [1891] 3 Ch. 386); and the period of limitation is now twelve years

(R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, ss. 2, 3, 24; R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 2; Leeds v. Amherst, supra).

Courts of Equity and the Statutes of Limitation.

In the case of exclusion of a partner, time runs from the act of exclusion (Barton v. N. Stafford Co., 38 Ch. D. 463).

Partners.

The statute does not being to run against a surety's right to sue a co-surety for contribution until the time at which the claim of the principal creditor is established against the surety. And during the statutory period computed from that time the surety can sue, although at the time of suing the statute may have run as between the principal creditor and the co-surety (Wolmershausen v. Gullick, [1893] 2 Ch. 514; see Gardner v. Brooke, [1897] 2 I. R. 6). The same principle applies to the case of a trustee claiming contribution from his co-trustee (Robinson v. Harkin, [1896] 2 Ch. 415).

Contribution.

(2) Trusts.

In the case of proceedings against trustees commenced after January 1, 1890, regard must be had to sects. 1, 8, and 12 of the Trustee Act, 1888 (ante, p. 283).

Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8.

The following note as to how far the existence of a trust may prevent any Statute of Limitation being set up relates to the law apart from the last-mentioned Act.

Express trusts affecting land or rent were dealt with by R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 25 (ante, p. 189), and express trusts affecting money charged upon land by R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, s. 10 (ante, p. 241). As to express trusts in the case of legacies payable out of personalty, see ante, p. 221).

Express trusts.

As regards real and personal property generally, it was enacted by the Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25 (2), that no claim of a cestui que trust against his trustee for any property held on an express trust or in respect of any breach of such trust, should be barred by any Statute of Limitations; "a statutory declaration of a law which has always been recognised and administered in Courts of equity" (Re Cross, Harston v. Tenison, 20 Ch. D. 121). See, as to this law, Beckford v. Wade (17 Ves. 97); Townshend v. T. (1 Bro. C. C. 550); Wedderburn v. W. (4 M. & C. 41); Stone v. Stone (5 Ch. 74). So far as regards money charged on land, the last section appears to be subject to 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10 (ante, p. 241). Compare the Irish Act, 40 & 41 Vict. c. 57, s. 28 (2).

Jud. Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 2.

In a case affecting personal estate decided since the Jud. Act, 1873, it was said there might be an express trust without any actual expression in words (Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 265; but see Sands to Thompson, 22 Ch. D. 617). The first mortgagee of a ship having sold, it was held that there was no express trust of the proceeds; that in the case of an ascertained surplus, the first mortgagee might be constructively trustee of the surplus; but that after six years, evidence could not be adduced to prove a surplus (Banner v. Berridge, supra). Where a stranger had assumed to act as a trustee, and had received trust money under a breach in which he concurred, he was treated as if he were an express trustee (Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390; see Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., [1900] 2 Ch. 561; Re Eyre-Williams, [1923] 2 Ch. 533). Compare the cases as to express trust within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 25 (ante, p. 189).

Where an express trust for the payment of a debt was for the benefit of the debtor only, it did not prevent time running against the creditor (Henriques v. Bensusan, 20 W. R. 350).

Where a breach of an express trust relating to personal estate had been committed, it was said that a cestui que trust might by his conduct raise a presumption of abandonment of his right of action which would bar subsequent proceedings (Re Cross, Harston v. Tenison, 20 Ch. D. 122). So if there had been a direct and independent dealing between the trustee and cestui que trust after the relation had terminated (Wedderburn v. W., 2 Keen, 749).

As regards constructive trusts, strictly so called, in some cases the statute would be a defence (Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 87; Bonney v. Ridyard, 17 Ves. 97; see Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 395, 400; and compare Re Davis, [1891] 3 Ch. 124). In other cases it would not (Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 405; Re Eyre-Williams, [1923] 2 Ch. 533).

Constructive trusts :

statute no defence;

Thus, solicitors receiving money were held to be trustees who could not set up the statute (Re Bell, Lake v. Bell, 34 Ch. D. 462; Lee v. Sankey, 15 Eq. 204; Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390). Distinguish the case of solicitors held not to be trustees (Dooby v. Watson, 39 Ch. D. 178; Mara v. Browne, [1896] 1 Ch. 199; and compare Blyth v. Fladgate, [1891] 1 Ch. 337; Hughes v. Twisden, 54 L. T. 570). A person purchasing land on behalf of another was held a trustee of the land unable to set up the statute (Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196; see Duffy v. D., [1906] 1 I. R. 205); and an agent receiving money to purchase land was a trustee of the money (North American Land v. Watkins, [1904] 1 Ch. 242). So a husband seizing his wife's separate estate (Wassell v. Leggatt, [1896] 1 Ch. 554; see McArdle v. Gaughran, [1903] 1 I. R. 106); an agent receiving rents and stating the receipt to be on behalf of another (Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 457). It has been held generally that no lapse of time will bar the right to an account of moneys received by a person standing in a fiduciary position (Teed v. Beere, 7 W. R. 394; James v. Holmes, 10 W. R. 634; Burdick v. Garrick, 5 Ch. 233; Re Tidd, T. v. Overell, [1893] 3 Ch. 154; Cheese v. Keen, [1908] 1 Ch. 245. Managers of an annuity fund were held trustees for the members so as to prevent time running (Edwards v. Warden, 1 App. Cas. 281). And before the Trustee Act, 1888, the defence of the statute was unsuccessfully raised by the following persons who were held to be trustees: a receiver appointed by the Court (Seagram v. Tuck, 18 Ch. D. 296; see Re Gent, Gent-Davis v. Harris, 40 Ch. D. 190; and compare the decisions since the Trustee Act, 1888, as to a trustee in bankruptcy, (Re Cornish, [1896] 1 Q. B. 99; Re Gallard, [1897] 2 Q. B. 8); a director who had paid dividends out of capital (Flitcroft's Case, 21 Ch. D. 519; Re Oxford Society, 35 Ch. D. 509; Re Sharpe, Masonic Co. v. S., [1892] 1 Ch. 154; see Re Lands Allotment Co., [1894] 1 Ch. 616; and compare the case of an action to recover a bribe received by a director, Metrop. Bank v. Heiron, 5 Ex. D. 319); a person who borrowed trust money with notice of the trust (Ernest v. Croysdill, 2 D. F. & J. 198; see Butler v. Carter, 5 Eq. 276; Coxwell v. Franklinski, 12 W. R. 1072; Re Dixon, Heynes v. D., [1900] 2 Ch. 561; Re Eyre-Williams, [1923] 2 Ch. 533).

In other cases, however, accounting parties were held not to be trustees of money received by them (Phillips v. Homfray, 44 Ch. D. 694; see Lister v. Stubbs, 45 Ch. D. 1). So the fiduciary relation between principal and agent did not prevent the statute from barring an action for balance of account (Friend v. Young, [1897] 2 Ch. 432). A company was not made a trustee of a dividend for a shareholder by declarations of the dividend, or by entry thereof in its books, no notice of the entry being given and no assets set aside (Re Severn Ry. Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 559). A secretary of a company can raise the defence of the statute to a charge of misfeasance (Municipal Co. v. Pollington, 63 L. T. 238); and an auditor (Leeds Co. v. Shepherd, 36 Ch. D. 787).

Where there was no trust, except such as was created by the decree of the Court on setting aside the transaction, time ran from the discovery of circumstances which constituted the right to relief (Clanricarde v. Henning, 30 Beav. 175, a purchase by a solicitor from his client; the rules of equity as to such a purchase, and the operation of lapse of time upon the right to relief in such a case, were considered in Gresley v. Mousley, 4 De G. & J. 78). In one case the purchase of trust property by trustees for their own benefit was set aside, after a considerable lapse of time and several assignments (Att.-Gen. v. Dudley, Coop. C. C. 146; see Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196). But in another case, a bill to set aside a purchase by a trustee for himself and his children was dismissed, merely on the ground of the lapse of eighteen years (Gregory v. Gregory, Coop. C. C. 201; see Champion v. Rigby, 1 R. & M. 539; Postlethwaite v. Rickman, 60 L. T. 514). Damages in respect of a sale at an undervalue were given against a bankruptcy trustee after long delay (Re Gallard, [1897] 2 Q. B. 8; compare Re Cornish, [1896] 1 Q. B. 99).

Courts of Equity and the Statutes of Limitation.

Compare with the above the decisions as to the effect of lapse of time in the case of constructive trusts of land, ante, p. 190. Constructive trusts are within the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8 (see sect. 1 of that Act).

Enforcing breach of trust against estate of deceased trustee.

A claim arising from a breach of trust is, generally speaking, considered as a simple contract debt (Holland v. H., 4 Ch. 449). But it was held that the analogy of the Lim. Act, 1623, could not, in answer to a claim founded on a breach of trust, be set up, either by the executor of the trustee (Brittlebank v. Goodwin, 5 Eq. 545; Creswell v. Dewell, 4 Giff. 460; Woodhouse v. W., 8 Eq. 514; Smith v. Cork, &c. Ry. Co., I. R. 5 Eq. 65; Carroll v. Hargrave, ibid. 548), or by his heir (Re Burge, Gillard v. Lawrenson, 57 L. T. 364). See now Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, ante, p. 283.

Testamentary provisions for payments debts.

A devise of real estate in trust for the payment of debts generally has been held not to operate for the benefit of a creditor whose debt is barred at the time of the testator's death (Burke v. Jones, 2 V. & B. 275). When a man makes a provision for his debts, he makes a provision for those which are not barred, that is to say, for those which in law are deemed debts (O'Connor v. Haslam, 5 H. L. C. 181). A direction, however, to pay specific debts may operate for the benefit of a creditor whose debt is barred at the testator's death (Williamson v. Naylor, 3 Y. & C. Ex. 308; Philips v. Philips, 3 Hare, 281; Turner v. Martin, 7 D. M. & G. 429; Clinton v. Brophy, 10 Ir. Eq. 139). And a debtor's will has been held to amount to a sufficient acknowledgment within R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 40 (Millington v. Thompson, 3 Ir. Ch. Rep. 236; see Re Hoyle, H. v. H., [1893] 1 Ch. 92; Scott v. Synge, 27 L. R. Ir. 560).

Effect as regards debts barred at the death.

Effect as regards debts not barred at the death.

As regards debts not barred at the testator's death, it has been held that a trust for payment of debts generally out of a testator's personal estate does not stop the running of time (Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & F. 382; Evans v. Tweedy, 1 Beav. 55; Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 My. & Cr. 499). For if a testator merely imposes upon his executors that which it is their regular duty to do, he does not create a trust (Cadbury v. Smith, 9 Eq. 42). So where a testator devised real estate on trust for payment of his debts and had in fact no real estate at his death, the devise had no effect on the running of time (Ex p. Hepburn, 14 Q. B. D. 394). And the case was the same where debts were charged on property which was described in the will as real estate but was in fact personalty (Scott v. Jones, supra). For the case where real and personal estate are blended in one gift to executors, see Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 46.

On the other hand a provision for payment of debts generally out of real estate (whether in the form of a trust, or a charge) is available for twelve years (Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 46; see Re Raggi, Brass v. Young, [1913] 2 Ch. 206), but no longer (Fearnside v. Flint, 22 Ch. D. 582; Piggott v. Jefferson, 12 Sim. 26). See the earlier cases decided before the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, Moore v. Petchell, 22 Beav. 172; Hughes v. Wynne, T. & R. 307; Hargreaves v. Mitchell, 6 Madd. 326; Fergus v. Gore, 1 Sch. & Lef. 107. Notwithstanding the L. T. Act, 1897, s. 2 (and see now Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 2, post), the above rule applies in the case of a testator who has died since 1897 (Re Bails, Treeby v. B., [1909] 1 Ch. 791); see Williams' Executors, 11th ed. 1638.

A direction in the will of a testator to pay the debts of another person operated for the benefit of those creditors of that other person whose debts were not barred at his death (O'Connor v. Hasham, 5 H. L. C. 170).

(3) The statute in the administration of estates.

Debts due from the testator which are barred.

An executor may pay debts due from the testator to a stranger, although barred in testator's lifetime (Stahlschmidt v. Lett, 1 Sm. & Giff. 415; Hunter v. Baxter, 3 Giff. 214); but not after the defence of the statute has been decided in favour of the estate (Midgley v. M., [1893] 3 Ch. 282). An executor may also retain a debt due from testator to himself, although barred (Hill v. Walker, 4 K. & J. 166; Beswick v. Orpen, 16 Ch. D. 207; see Coombs v. Coombs, L. R. 1 P. & M. 288; Morley v. Saunders, 8 Eq. 599); but the court will not pay out a fund to an executor, so that he may exercise such right of retainer (Trevor v. Hutchins, [1896] 1 Ch. 844). An executor, however, cannot either pay or retain a debt unenforceable by reason of the Statute of Frauds (Re Rownson, Field v. White, 29 Ch. D. 358).

Debts due to the testator which are barred.

To satisfy a debt due from a legatee to testator, but statute barred at his death, an executor may retain a pecuniary legacy (Courtenay v. Williams, 3 Hare. 539; Coates v. C., 33 Beav. 249. Compare Re Abrahams, A. v. A., [1908] 2 Ch. 69). But there must be a debt for which, apart from the Stat. Lim., the legatee could have been sued (Re Wheeler, Hankinson v. Hayter, [1904] 2 Ch. 66), or a liability (Re Jewell's Settlement, Watts v. Pub. Trustee, [1919] 2 Ch. 161). And a legatee could not be compelled to bring into account a debt due to the testator from a stranger under whose will the legatee was executor and residuary legatee (Re Bruce, Lawford v. B., [1908] 2 Ch. 682). An administrator could retain the share of a next of kin (Re Cordwell, White v. C., 20 Eq. 644). But there was no such right of retainer as against the heir out of moneys representing undisposed-of real estate (Re Milnes, M. v. Sherwin, 53 L. T. 554), nor is there as against a specific devisee of freeholds (Re Taylor, T. v. Wade, [1894] 1 Ch. 674; Re Akerman, [1891] 3 Ch. 212), or a specific legatee of leaseholds or of chattels (ibid.), or of stocks (Re Savage, Cull v. Howard, [1918] 2 Ch. 146). But retainer was allowed against a specific legatee of the profits of a business (Re Taylor, T. v. Wade, supra). Trustees can require a barred debt to be brought into account in the division of the proceeds of sale of real and personal residue (Re Akerman, [1891] 3 Ch. 212; see Re Watson, Turner v. W., [1896] 1 Ch. 925). Executors of a tenant for life against whom the remainderman recovered damages for waste could not retain the damages to answer a statute-barred debt (Dingle v. Coppen, [1899] 1 Ch. 726). After appropriating assets to meet a legacy, executors cannot retain or impound such assets to meet a debt due from the legatee (Ballard v. Marsden, 14 Ch. D. 374). Directions in wills that debts due from beneficiaries are to be deducted from shares bequeathed to them, have been held to include barred debts (Rose v. Gould, 15 Beav. 189; Poole v. P., 7 Ch. 17; see Mathews v. Keble, 3 Ch. 691), but not moneys claimed as rent for land to which as against the beneficiary the testator's title was barred (Re Jolly, Gathercole v. Norfolk, [1900], 2 Ch. 616).

Courts of Equity and the Statutes of Limitation.

Lapse of time will not of itself bar an executor of an executor of his right to have an account of the original testator's estate taken, with a view to ascertain such executor's liabilities as an accounting party (Smith v. O'Grady, L. R. 3 P. C. 311).

Executor's liability as regards devastavit.

According to decisions before the Trustee Act, 1888, it was settled that in an action on a devastavit, the claim as between the creditor and the executor personally was barred in six years (Thorne v. Kerr, 2 K. & J. 54); the executor being at liberty to set up the statute (Re Hyatt; Bowles v. H., 38 Ch. D. 616). But in a creditor's administration action an executor might, in respect of a debt not barred between the creditor and the estate, be made personally liable to the extent of personal assets which the executor had lost or parted with, even though he did so more than six years before action brought (Re Baker, Collins v. Rhodes, 20 Ch. D. 230; Re Marsden, Bowden v. Layland, 26 Ch. D. 783); the executor not being at liberty to set up the statute (Re Hyatt, Bowles v. H., supra; which case see as regards assets claimed from a devisee). Where the executor had parted with assets to a legatee, the legatee might be made to refund (Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 217). But the conduct of the creditor might bar his right against the legatee (Blake v. Gale, 32 Ch. D. 571; Harrison v. Kirk, [1904] A. C. 8); and it would seem also against the executor (Re Birch, Roe v. B., 27 Ch. D. 627; Re Marsden, supra). The above liability of the executor was sometimes placed on the ground of trust (Re Marsden, 26 Ch. D. 789; Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 226; see, however, Re Hyatt, 38 Ch. D. 619; Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 124).

Since the above cases the Trustee Act, 1888, has been passed, which contains provisions protecting a trustee (sect. 8, ante, p. 283), and also provides (sect. 1, sub-s. 3) that for the purposes of that Act the expression "trustee" shall include an executor or administrator; and the statute affords a defence to an executor in a creditor's administration action (Re Blow, St. Bartholomew's Hospital v. Cambden, [1914] 1 Ch. 233), as well as in an action of devastavit (Lacons v. Wormoll, [1907] 2 K. B. 364).

Administration actions.

Who may set up statute.

In administration actions legal demands are decided by Courts of equity entirely on legal grounds (Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 619). An acknowledgment by an executor after an administration decree will not revive a debt already barred (Phillips v. Beale, 32 Beav. 26). Executors in administration actions are not bound to plead the statute (Ex p. Dewdney, 15 Ves. 498; Norton v. Frecker, 1 Atk. 526; Castleton v. Fanshaw, Prec. Ch. 100; Re Baker, Nicolls v. B., 44 Ch. D. 270; see Re Wenham, Hunt. v. W., [1892] 3 Ch. 59). Nor is the Court bound to set up the statute on behalf of absent parties (Alston v. Trollope, 2 Eq. 205). Where one executor who was also residuary legatee set up the statute, while the other executor desired to pay, the debt was held barred (Midgley v. M., [1893] 3 Ch. 282). A residuary legatee was entitled to insist on the statute being set up where there was no administration judgment, but the executors had issued a summons to determine whether a defendant was a creditor of the estate (Re Wenham, Hunt v. W., [1892] 3 Ch. 59). The statute may, where a decree has been obtained, be set up in the proceedings under the decree, by one creditor against another (Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614), and by a residuary legatee or other party interested in the estate against a creditor (Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 432; Shewen

v. Vanderhorst, 1 Russ. & M. 347; Beeching v. Morphew, 8 Hare, 129). The statute cannot be set up against the plaintiff whose debt is the foundation of the decree (Adams v. Waller, 14 W. R. 789; Fuller v. Redman, supra; see Re Baker, Nicholls v. B., 44 Ch. D. 262). But as to this there is, in the administration of real estate, an exception in favour of c. q. t's of specifically devised land (Briggs v. Wilson, 5 D. M. G. 21; Re Lacy, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 331). A residuary legatee has been held to be precluded by his own acts from setting up the statute as against a pecuniary legatee (Prowse v. Spurgin, 5 Eq. 99). As to proof in an English action by a creditor who had attached French assets as security for two debts, one of which was barred in England but not in France, see Re Bowes, Strathmore v. Vane ((1889) W. N. 53); and by a creditor who had recovered judgment in Scotland for a debt barred in England, see Re Low, Bland v. L., ([1894] 1 Ch. 147).

Judgment in administration action.

The sending in a claim in answer to an executor's advertisement is not such a proceeding as will prevent time running against a debt (Re Stephens, Warburton v. S., 43 Ch. D. 43). But judgment in a legatee's administration action, containing a direction for payment of debts, prevents time running against creditors having then valid claims (Finch v. F., 35 L. T. 235, where the judgment was within the statutory period from the incurring of the debt; Re Crossley, Munns v. Burn, 35 Ch. D. 266; see Harrison v. Kirk, [1904] A. C. 5). Compare the effect of a winding-up order (Re General Rolling Stock Co., 7 Ch. 646). An administration judgment also operates in favour of the estate in regard to a set-off against a creditor's demand (Re Ballard, Lovell v. Forester (1890), W. N. 64).

(4) Pendency of administration action.

A decree in a creditor's administration suit did not prevent the barring of a debt in respect of which no claim was made under the decree (Tatam v. Williams, 3 Hare, 347). On the other hand, claims in actions which enured for the benefit of incumbrancers operated so as to increase the interest allowed (Archdall v. Anderson, 25 L. R. Ir. 433; Greenway v. Bloomfield, 9 Hare, 201). As to proving in an administration action after a lapse of time where there is a fund in Court, see Harrison v. Kirk, [1904] A. C. 1.

Berrington v. Evans.

Where a judgment creditor had allowed twenty years to elapse without enforcing his debt, he was not allowed to prove in a suit instituted within the twenty years for the benefit of the specialty creditors of his debtor (Berrington v. Evans, 1 Y. & Coll. 434; see also O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 390; Hutchins v. O'Sullivan, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 443).

Sterndale v. Hankinson.

Before R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, it was held that although a creditor was in strictness barred by the rule of equity, yet that rule would not be applied against him if he had delayed, relying on the prosecution of an existing suit by another creditor on behalf of himself and other creditors (Sterndale v. Hankinson, 1 Sim. 393; Brown v. Lynch, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 316; Carroll v. Darcy, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 321; Bermingham v. Burke, 2 J. & Lat. 714; see Foster v. Mackenzie, 17 Beav. 414; Finch v. F., 35 L. T. 235; see Harpur v. Buchanan, [1919] 1 I. R. 1). Since the Judicature Acts the reasons on which Sterndale v. Hankinson was founded no longer apply (Re Greaves, Bray v. Tofield, 18 Ch. D. 551; where the action was commenced within the statutory period from the incurring of the debt, but the judgment was made after the expiration of that period). Compare Thompson v. Hurley, [1905] 1 I. R. 588; Williams v. W., [1900] 1 Ch. 152. And in actions against trustees or executors, see the language of the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, sub-s. 2.

Courts of Equity and the Statutes of Limitation.

Pendency of proceedings.

The institution of a suit to execute the trusts of a will did not preserve the rights of the heir who claimed adversely to the will (Simmons v. Rudall, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 115). The right of a vendor to enforce his lien was not preserved by the existence of a suit by the creditors of the devisor of the estate, under whose will the sale took place, to administer his estate; nor by suits by the residuary devisees and legatees of the purchaser, for the administration of his estate (Toft v. Stephenson, 7 Hare, 1). A mortgagee's suit for foreclosure and sale instituted during the debtor's life, did not prevent time running against a judgment creditor of that debtor (Bennett v. Bernard, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 229; but see Harpur v. Buchanan, [1919] 1 I. R. 1). For the case where a creditor or incumbrancer is made a defendant to the suit, see Watson v. Birch (15 Sim. 523), and Humble v. H. (24 Beav. 535). As to relief where time has run pending improper litigation, see Pultney v. Warren (6 Ves. 73); East India Co. v. Campion (11 Bligh, 158, 186, 187); Furnival v. Boyle (4 Russ. 142); Sirdefield v. Price (2 Y. & C. 73).

Orders to carry on proceedings.

As to the application of the Statutes of Limitation to an order to carry on proceedings made before judgment, see Perry v. Jenkins (1 M. & Cr. 118, 121); Bland v. Davison (21 Beav. 312); and after judgment, see Alsop v. Bell (24 Beav. 451); Parkinson v. Lucas (28 Beav. 627, 630); see also Bampton v. Birchall (11 Beav. 38; 1 Phil. 568; 5 Beav. 67). Where a defendant was out of the jurisdiction and a bill prayed process against him when he should come within it, the operation of the statute was suspended though he had neither been served nor appeared (Hele v. Bexley, 20 Beav. 127).

Effect of appointment of a receiver.

Although the appointment of a receiver by the Court does not prevent the bar under the statute against a stranger, yet it will prevent time running in favour of a stranger to the suit (Wrixon v. Vize, 3 Dr. & War. 104, see p. 123; Parkinson v. Lucas, 28 Beav. 627). But under special circumstances the possession of a receiver prevented time running against a stranger to the action (Penney v. Todd, 26 W. R. 502). The possession of the receiver in a cause in which a trustee of the legal estate is made a party as such, may fairly be treated as the possession of the trustee. For many purposes the possession of the receiver is the possession of the party entitled to the lands, and time will not run against a person in possession (Gresley v. Adderley, 1 Swans. 579; Boehm v. Wood, T. & R. 345; Wrixon v. Vize, 3 Dr. & War. 104; see Groome v. Blake, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 428; Re Butler, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 453; Dixon v. Gayfere, 17 Beav. 421). The appointment of a receiver in the matter of an infant will not prevent the operation of the statute on a claim affecting the minor's estate, notwithstanding the fact that the master, in a report ascertaining the nature of the minor's property, has expressly found that the minor's estate was subject to that incumbrance (Harrison v. Duignan, 2 Dr. & War. 295; see Greenway v. Bromfield, 9 Hare, 203).

Injunction.

See as to the relief granted by Courts of equity where time had ran pending an injunction, Brown v. Newall (2 M. & Cr. 572); Anon. (2 Cas. Ch. 217); Fyson v. Pole (3 Y. & C. 273); Morgan v. M. (2 Dick. 643); Grant v. G. (3 Sim. 364; 3 Russ. 607); Duval v. Terry (Show, P. C. 15); O'Donel v. Browne (1 Ball & B. 262).

As to the effect of a petition for sale in the Irish Land Court, see Re Swanton (1898), 1 I. R. 157; Darb. & Bos. 571; Lightwood, Time Limit, 317.

(5) Funds in Court;

The claim of an equitable incumbrancer was kept alive by the existence of a fund in Court the rights in which had not been ascertained (Lancaster v. Evans, 10 Beav. 154). As to proving in an administration action after a lapse of time, where there is a fund in Court, see Harrison v. Kirk, [1904] A. C. 1. Where in an incumbrancer's suit against a tenant for life rents belonging to the defendant were paid into Court by a receiver and so remained 1815—1870, the claim of the remainderman to be recouped out of such rents payments which had subsequently fallen upon him was not barred (Howlin v. Sheppard, 6 Ir. Eq. Rep. 38; see Kirwan v. Kennedy, 3 I. R. Eq. 472; Re Slacke, [1896] 1 I. R. 199). And where lands on which an annuity was charged were sold by the Court, the claim of the annuitant to resort for arrears to the corpus of the proceeds which were in Court was not barred (Re Belton, [1894] 1 I. R. 537). So where to annul a bankruptcy money is paid into Court to provide for undisputed debts, time does not run against the creditors (Re Dennis, [1895] 2 Q. B. 630). Compare the case of money provided under a scheme to satisfy unascertained bondholders (Collingham v. Sloper, [1901] 1 Ch. 779; [1904] A. C. 159). But payment into Court under the Trustee Relief Act of a fund on which an annuity was charged did not make the Court a trustee or prevent a bar (Re Nugent, 19 L. R. Ir. 140; where, however, the annuity was also charged on real estate the remedy against which was held barred).

funds paid into court under the L. C. C. Act.

Where land in the occupation of a trespasser was compulsorily taken under the Lands Clauses Act and the purchase-money paid into Court, the trespasser was, after the expiration of the full statutory period (the true owner not claiming), held entitled to the money, although at the date of the purchase his adverse possession had only lasted eighteen years (Re Evans, 42 L. J. Ch. 357), or nineteen years and a half (Ex p. Winder, 6 Ch. D. 696; see Ex p. Chamberlain, 14 Ch. D. 323). It seems that a less period of adverse possession would be sufficient (Gedye v. Commrs. of Works, [1891] 2 Ch. 636). And where, at the purchase, land was in occupation of A who originally entered in respect of a long term, but had continued in occupation after the expiration of the term, the fund was invested and the dividends ordered to be paid to A until the lapse of twelve years from the end of the term (Re Harris, [1901] 1 Ch. 931; see Ex p. Chamberlain, 14 Ch. D. 323; Ex p. Forde, [1894] 1 I. R. 156). The fund was paid out after possession for fourteen years from the end of the term (Re Harris, (1909), W. N. 181). But where at the date of the purchase the land was in the possession of a person claiming in respect of a term which subsequently expired, and twelve years after the expiration of the term the termor claimed payment of a fund which had been paid into Court as representing the reversion the claim was dismissed (Gedye v. Commrs. of Works, [1891] 2 Ch. 636). Where the land taken was in mortgage, the mortgagee was only allowed six years' interest out of the purchase-money in Court (Re Stead, 2 Ch. D. 713).

(6) Lunacy.

Where a creditor cannot recover by reason of the lunacy of the debtor, time will not run (Stedman v. Hart, Kay, 607). But where an executor was found lunatic after time had commenced to run against a legatee, time ran during the lunacy (Boldero v. Halpin, 19 W. R. 320). Proceedings in lunacy were held not to exclude the operation of the statute on a promissory note (Roch v. Cooke, 1 De G. & Sm. 675). A petition in lunacy, after the death of the lunatic, by his committee, and a reference followed by a report that a sum of money had been expended by the committee in the maintenance of the lunatic, will not take the claim of the committee out of the statute, as against the heir-at-law, who was not a party (Wilkinson v. W., 9 Hare, 204). Where funds in the hands of a lunatic executrix were under an order transferred to the credit of the lunacy to an account in the names of herself and other persons interested, and the income was paid to her, the order preserved the right of the parties interested, but arrears of income could only be recovered for six years (Re Walker, 7 Ch. 120). An order for repayment to executors of advances made by their testator for maintenance of a lady found lunatic after his death was limited to six years before the death (Re Weaver, 21 Ch. D. 615). Guardians could only recover six years' arrears in respect of the maintenance of a pauper lunatic (Re Newbegin, Eggleton v. N., 36 Ch. D. 477; Re Watson, Stamford v. Bartlett, [1899] 1 Ch. 72; Re Taylor, Edmonton v. Deely, [1901] 1 Ch. 480; Re Murphy, Prendergast v. M., [1913] 1 Ir. R. 504). Secus where payments on account had been made by a receiver in lunacy (Wandsworth v. Worthington, [1906] 1 K. B. 420); or the claim was by the Crown (Re J., [1909] 1 Ch. 574). 56 & 57 Vict. c. 61, s. 1.

IX.—Limitations under the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893.

A number of limitations under particular provisions in various Acts are set out in Darb. & Bos. 2nd ed., p. 577, and Supplement, p. 24. Many of these provisions, however, have been repealed by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893. Having regard to the importance of the last-mentioned Act, the material sections thereof are set out at length, with a note of cases decided under them.

Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893.

56 & 57 Vict. c. 61.

An Act to generalise and amend certain statutory provisions for the protection of persons acting in the execution of statutory and other public duties.

[5th December, 1893.]

Be it enacted as follows:

Protection of persons acting in execution of statutory or other public duty.

1. Where after the commencement of this Act any action, prosecution, or other proceeding is commenced in the United Kingdom against any person for any act done in pursuance, or execution, or intended execution of any Act of Parliament, or of any public duty or authority, or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any such Act, duty, or authority, the following provisions shall have effect:

(a) The action, prosecution, or proceeding shall not lie or be instituted unless it is commenced within six months next after the act, neglect, or default complained of, or, in case of a continuance of injury or damage, within six months next after the ceasing thereof:

56 & 57 Vict. c. 61, s. 1.

(b) Wherever in any such action a judgment is obtained by the defendant, it shall carry costs to be taxed as between solicitor and client.

[Sub-sects. (c) and (d) of sect. 1 relate to tender of amends; and sect. 2 provides for the repeal of previous Acts.]

Saving as to Scotland.

3. This Act shall not apply to any action, prosecution, or other proceeding for any act done in pursuance or execution, or intended execution, of any Act of Parliament, or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any Act of Parliament, or on account of any act done in any case instituted under an Act of Parliament when that Act of Parliament applies to Scotland only, and contains a limitation of the time and other conditions for the action, prosecution, or proceeding.

Commencement.

4. This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

Short title.

5. This Act may be cited as the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893.

Reason for the protection given to public bodies.

The present Act has been largely applied to proceedings against public bodies administering or supported by the rates. A possible reason for the protection which the Legislature has given to such public bodies may be found in the general principle in reference to matters which have to be paid for out of the rates, viz. that each body of ratepayers for the time being should bear its own burden (Parker v. London C. C., [1904] 2 K. B. 505).

Kind of proceedings in which protection given.

Proceedings in which protection is given include actions in the Chancery Division, whether for an injunction or for damages (Fielding v. Morley, [1899] 1 Ch. 4), or for a declaration (Grand Junction Waterworks Co. v. Hampton, 15 T. L. R. 412). As to actions on contract see cases quoted on p. 302 in relation to matters not protected. Proceedings by a local authority in the King's Bench Division for a certiorari to quash surcharges by an auditor were held not to be an action within sect. 1 (Roberts v. Battersea, 110 L. T. 566). Nor was it held applicable to the costs of a local authority who, to vindicate a right of way, had defended successfully an action brought against an individual (M'Robert v. Reid, [1914] S. C. 633). But an order under Order xxxvi., r. 12, dismissing an action with costs for want of prosecution is a "judgment" within the section (Gilbert v. Gosport, [1916] 2 Ch. 587). A proceeding for a mandamus against a local authority is not within the section (R. v. Port of London, [1919] 1 K. B. 176). Nor does it apply to proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Fry v. Cheltenham, 81 L. J. K. B. 41), nor to actions for compensation under the Riot (Damages) Act, 1886 (Kauffmann v. Liverpool, [1916] 1 K. B. 860), nor to an action in rem which is not a proceeding against a person (The Burns, [1907] P. 137). As to claims to land see Cross v. Rix, 77 J. P. 84.

Kind of persons protected.

Corporations included.

As regards the persons protected, the word "persons" in sect. 1 includes any body of persons corporate or unincorporate (Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 19). It will be observed that the short title of the present Act is "The Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893." And it has been said that the long title (printed above), which "is an important part of the Act," gives the key to the wide language of sect. 1 (Fielding v. Morley, [1899] 1 Ch. 4).

56 & 57 Vict. c. 61.

Having regard to the titles, the word "person" should, it seems, be construed as excluding traders (Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea, [1905] 2 K. B. 13): e.g. a company of Pier proprietors, who were held to be a commercial company earning dividends for their shareholders (Att.-Gen. v. Margate, [1902] 1 Ch. 749); or a Railway Co. See Parker v. L. C. C., [1904] 2 K. B. 505; Lanarkshire v. Airdrie, 8 Fraser, 781, where it was said by the Scotch Court of Session that there is a broad distinction between (1) county councils and other bodies who are directed to perform public duties the cost of which is defrayed by rates; and (2) incorporated companies who are empowered with a view to profit to undertake certain works. In the one case the public body is under a legal obligation to proceed with the undertaking, but its members act gratuitously and are neither entitled to make a profit nor are responsible for loss. In the other case the Co. is absolutely free to consider whether the speculation for which Parliamentary powers have been obtained is worth prosecuting with a view to profit.

Commercial companies not protected.

The "persons" protected by the Act have been held to include Highway authorities (Southwark v. Wandsworth, [1898] 2 Ch. 603; Harvey v. Truro, [1903] 2 Ch. 646; Offin v. Rochford, [1906] 1 Ch. 342), Poor Law Guardians (Sharpington v. Fulham, [1904] 2 Ch. 449), County Councils (North Metropolitan Co. v. London County Council, [1898] 2 Ch. 145), Harbour authorities (Williams v. Mersey, [1905] 1 K. B. 804; The Ydun, [1899] P. 236), the Tyne Improvement Commissioners (The Johannesburg, [1907] P. 65), National Health Insurance committees (Mitchell v. Aberdeen Insurance Committee, [1918] S. C. 415), commanding officers of tugs (H.M. Tug Danube II., [1920] P. 104), Municipal corporations, even when carrying on work not strictly municipal (The Ydun, [1899] P. 241), e.g. when using land as a hospital (Harrop v. Ossett, [1898] 1 Ch. 525), or supplying water (Fielding v. Morley, [1899] 1 Ch. 1), or electric light (Jeremiah Ambler v. Bradford, [1902] 2 Ch. 585; Chamberlain v. Bradford, 83 L. T. R. 518), or gas (Clayton v. Pontypridd, [1918] 1 K. B. 219), or working a tramway (Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea, [1905] 2 K. B. 1; Spittal v. Glasgow, 6 Fraser, 838). An ambulance association is not protected (Ayr v. St. Andrews, [1918] S. C. 158).

Corporations protected.

Municipal corporations.

The protection extends not only to the public body as principals, but also to individual subordinates carrying out their mandates (Greenwell v. Howell, [1900] 1 Q. B. 540). But it does not extend to acts done by public bodies or their servants in respect to subject-matters as to which the body has no statutory or public duty but merely power to perform them (Bradford v. Myers, [1916] 1 A. C. 242), nor to matters merely incidental to the performance of statutory duties (Clarke v. St. Helens, 85 L. J. K. B. 17), but authorities acting under private as well as public statutes are protected (Bennett v. Stepney, 107 L. T. 383, and see R. v. Marshland Commrs., [1920] 1 K. B. 155), nor to an independent person undertaking for his own profit work under a contract with a public body (Tilling v. Dick Kerr, [1905] 1 K. B. 570; see Kent Council v. Folkestone Corporation, ibid., 620). As to the trustees of a Loan Society, see O'Brien v. Mitchelstown, [1903] 1 Ir. 282.

Individuals protected.

Public officials are not protected by the statute if they act maliciously; but malice cannot be presumed from a mistake as to authority, if they bona fide believe that they are acting under their powers (Newell v. Starkie, [1919] 2 I. R. 325).

The protection also extends to individuals discharging public duties, e.g. a commander of volunteers (Wilson v. Mackay, 7 Fraser, 168), or a doctor giving a statutory notice of illness (Salisbury v. Gould, 68 J. P. 158).

56 & 57 Vict. c. 61.

Kind of acts or defaults in respect whereof the proceedings must be commenced.

As to the acts or defaults in respect whereof the proceedings must be commenced to bring the case within the protection. It has been held in several cases under this Act that the wide words of sect. 1 extended the protection to proceedings in respect of an act done in the voluntary execution of the powers of an Act of Parliament, even where it was not done in the execution of a public duty (Jeremiah Ambler v. Bradford, [1902] 2 Ch. 590, 592, 595; Chamberlain v. Bradford, 83 L. T. R. 519). Thus protection was held to apply where proceedings were brought against a public body to restrain them from using land as a Fire Engine Station in breach of an alleged contract (Holford v. Acton, [1898] 2 Ch. 240, 249), or as a cemetery (Toms v. Clacton, 14 T. L. R. 474); also where a school board was sued for libel alleged to be contained in a resolution of the Board (Reid v. Blisland, 17 T. L. R. 626); and where a lord of a manor claimed from an urban council an account of certain tolls as payable to him under a lease (Newcastle v. Worksop, [1902] 2 Ch. 145, 162). But see now Bradford v. Myers, [1916] 1 A. C. 242. See also Att.-Gen. v. Margate, [1900] 1 Ch. 754; and per Vaughan Williams, L.J., in Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea, [1905] 2 K. B. 13, 18; National Telephone Co. v. Kingston-upon-Hull, 89 L. T. 294; Walsh v. Southwark, 72 J. P. 71; Lanarkshire v. Airdrie, 8 Fraser, 781.

Earlier cases.

Later cases.

Acts or defaults where protection has been given, public duty being involved.

Protection has been given under the section in respect of the following acts or defaults as being acts or defaults where a public duty was involved; e.g. the acts or defaults of a Highway Authority in relation to the protection of Highways (Harvey v. Truro, [1902] 2 Ch. 638; but see McRobert v. Reid, [1914] S. C. 633; Leckhampton v. Ballinger, 21 T. L. R. 632; Offin v. Rochford, [1906] 1 Ch. 342), of a public body in working tramways (Lyles v. Southend-on-Sea, [1905] 2 K. B. 1; Spittal v. Glasgow, 6 Fraser, 838; Hewlett v. London C. C., 72 J. P. 136), or in managing Harbours or Piers (Williams v. Mersey, [1905] 1 K. B. 804; The Johannesburg, [1907] P. 81), or in managing a Hospital (Markey v. Tolworth, [1900] 2 Q. B. 454); the acts or defaults of an individual in relation to public medical duties (Salisbury v. Gould, 68 J. P. 158), or to public military duties (Wilson v. Mackay, 7 Fraser, 168).

Acts or defaults where protection not given.

But the protection has been refused in the case of actions against a public body for breach of a contract entered into by them with a private individual, although entered into in the execution of a statutory or public duty or authority (Sharpington v. Fulham, [1904] 2 Ch. 449; Clarke v. Lewisham, 19 T. L. R. 62; Macfie v. Greenock, 7 Fraser, 246; Milford v. M., 65 J. P. 483; National Telephone Co. v. Kingston-upon-Hull, 89 L. T. 294); Hayes v. King's County, [1917] 2 I. R. 496). Nor did the protection extend to an action for false representation whereby the plt. was induced to enter into a contract with a public body (Pearson v. Dublin, [1907] A. C. 368). Nor was protection given to the Trustees of a Loan Society formed under a statute who made defaults occasioning loss to the members, and who were held not to be acting in execution of a public duty (O'Brien v. Mitchelstown, [1903] 1 I. R. 282).

Acts or defaults by servant of public body.

The protection applied where the action was brought in respect of a negligent act committed by a person who was a servant of a public body in the execution of a public duty of such body (Markey v. Tolworth, [1900] 2 Q. B. 454). But not where the person who committed the act was not the servant or agent of the public body, but only a contractor (Kent Council v. Folkestone Corporation, [1905] 1 K. B. 620).

There must be some act or default by defendant.

The protection only applies where the proceedings are brought in respect of some act or default of the deft. alleged to be unlawful (see Att.-Gen v. West Ham, [1910] 2 Ch. 560). An action brought to set aside an agreement on the ground that it was ultra vires the plt. was not within the statute (Holsworthy v. H., [1907] 2 Ch. 62). But the section may be construed so as to protect defts. in proceedings commenced in respect of acts done in intended execution of a public duty (The Johannesburg, [1907] P. 85, 86; Cree v. St. Pancras, [1899] 1 Q. B. 693). See as to vexatious actions against public bodies, Webster v. Bakewell, 86 L. J. Ch. 89.

56 & 57 Vict. c. 61.

Intended execution of public duty.

As regards the point from which time runs under sect. 1, sub-s. (a). Where there is no "continuance of injury or damage," time runs from the "act, neglect or default complained of." Where proceedings were commenced for damages for an accident which caused subsequent death, time ran from the accident (Williams v. Mersey, [1905] 1 K. B. 804). And where proceedings were commenced against a Highway Authority who had pulled down a fence and subsequently claimed title to the land within it, time ran from the pulling down of the fence, the claim of title not giving rise to any cause of action (Offin v. Rochford, [1906] 1 Ch. 342). Where in proceedings against a magistrate damages were claimed for an illegal distress put in for a fine under a conviction, which conviction was subsequently quashed, time ran from the distress and not the conviction (Polley v. Fordham, [1904] 2 K. B. 345). But where in proceedings against the High Bailiff of a County Court, damages were claimed for negligence in failing to serve a judgment summons on the plt., who was subsequently arrested, time ran from the omission to serve the judgment, not from the arrest (Turley v. Daw, 22 T. L. R. 231). In an action under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846, the limitation of time is fixed by that Act (Venn v. Tedesco, [1926] 2 K. B. 227). (See p. 245, ante.)

Point from which time runs.

Where no continuance of injury.

In cases where there is a "continuance of injury or damage" time runs from the ceasing thereof. The words do not mean damage inflicted once and for all which continues unrepaired (Harrington v. Derby, [1905] 1 Ch. 227), or from the effects of which the plaintiff is still suffering (Carey v. Bermondsey, 20 T. L. R. 2; Freeborn v. Leeming, [1925] 1 K. B. 160; Spittal v. Glasgow, 6 Fraser, 828); but new damage recurring day by day, whether by reason of one act or repeated acts (Harrington v. Derby, supra; see Pearson v. Dublin, [1907] A. C. 368; Markey v. Tolworth, [1900] 2 Q. B. 458; and compare Crumbie v. Wallsend, [1891] 1 Q. B. 503). The action may be brought within six months after the ceasing of a continuing injury for damage done within the previous six years (Harrington v. Derby, supra). See also Att.-Gen. v. Lewes, [1911] 2 Ch. 495 (periodical pollution of stream by sewer out of repair); Hart v. Marylebone, 76 J. P. 257; Huyton Gas Co. v. Liverpool, [1926] 1 K. B. 146.

Where there is continuance of injury.

The limitation in the statute applies though another general statute allows a longer limit of time in respect of the particular act done (Kent Council v. Folkestone Council, [1905] 1 K. B. 620; Markey v. Tolworth, supra).

Effect of other statutes of limitation.

As to amending defence by pleading the Act see Aronson v. Liverpool, 29 Times L. R. 325.

Pleading.

X.—Pleading and Practice as to the Statutes of Limitation.

By R. S. C. Ord. 19, r. 15 a party must raise by his pleadings all such grounds of defence or reply as, if not raised, would take the opposite party by surprise or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the preceding pleadings, as for instance, Statute of Raising the statute;

Pleading and Practice as to the Statutes of Limitation.

Limitations. In the County Court the particular statute need not be specified (Eaton v. Tapley, [1899] 1 Q. B. 953).

by pleading.

In Dawkins v. Penrhyn (4 App. Cas. 59; an action commenced in 1877, when demurrer was permitted), Earl Cairns held that in personal actions the statute must be pleaded; but that in the case of real property, where it was a question of title, the statute might be raised by demurrer (see further, Re Burge, Gillard v. Lawrenson, 57 L. T. 364; Noyes v. Crawley, 10 Ch. D. 31; and see as to the previous rule at common law, De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Exch. 166; Owen v. De Beauvoir, 16 M. & W. 547). Since Dawkins v. Penrhyn demurrer has been abolished, but in lieu thereof a party can raise by his pleading a point of law (R. S. C. Ord. 25).

Where an action is brought to recover land of which the defendant is in possession, the statute is often pleaded expressly (Lyell v. Kennedy, 18 Q. B. D. 796; Pedder v. Hunt, ibid., 565). In Heath v. Pugh (6 Q. B. D. 353), it was said that in such a case the defence of the statute might be raised under the plea of possession in a general form (Ord. 21, r. 21; see Coppinger v. Norton, [1902] 2 I. R. 241). As to the effect of such a plea, see Danford v. McAnulty, 8 App. Cas. 456. Under the old practice in equity a plea of adverse possession was overruled because it did not state the particular facts constituting the adverse possession on which the defendant relied (Hardman v. Ellames, 5 Sim. 640; 2 M. & K. 732). Compare the mode in which a plaintiff can plead a possessory title under the modern practice, Pledge v. Pomfret, [1905] W. N. 56.

Renewal of writ to save statute.

Ord. 8, r. 1 provides that no original writ of summons shall be in force for more than twelve months from the date thereof. Ord. 6, r. 1, provides for the issue of concurrent writs, such writs only to be in force for the period during which the original writ is in force. Under Ord. 8, r. 1, however, upon application before the expiration of the twelve months, the writ or concurrent writ may for good reason be renewed for six months, and so from time to time. Under Ord. 64, r. 7, times may be enlarged. Where the plaintiff's claim would, in the absence of renewal, be barred by statute, the time for renewing a writ will not usually be enlarged (Doyle v. Kaufmann, 3 Q. B. D. 7, 340; Hewett v. Barr, [1891] 1 Q. B. 98; see Magee v. Hastings, 28 L. R. Ir. 288). But the Court has a discretion (ibid.). And where the original writ was issued and renewed in proper time, the time for issuing a concurrent writ was enlarged, although the operation of the statute was thereby affected (Smalpage v. Tonge, 17 Q. B. D. 644).

Where a writ was issued in due time in the Common Pleas to recover a debt, which writ was never served; and six months later (when, unless saved by the writ, the debt was barred) the plaintiff took out an administration summons in Chancery; such summons was held barred, the writ not keeping the debt alive for the purpose of proceedings in another Court (Manby v. M., 3 Ch. D. 101. Compare Hurst v. H., 21 Ch. D. 291, 295).

Amendments.

In the case of pleadings, a party cannot by amendment set up fresh claims which since the writ have become barred by statute (Weldon v. Neal, 19 Q. B. D. 394; Lancaster v. Moss, 15 T. L. R. 476; see Steward v. North Metropolitan Co., 16 Q. B. D. 556; Hudson v. Fernyhough, 61 L. T. 722). As to raising by amendment a case of concealed fraud to meet the statute, see Lawrance v. Norreys (39 Ch. D. 235).

Meaning of certain words and expressions.

1. Be it enacted, that in the construction of this Act the word "lands" shall extend to manors, advowsons, rectories, messuages, lands, tenements, tithes, rents and hereditaments of any tenure (except copy of court roll), and whether corporeal or incorporeal, and any undivided share thereof, but when accompanied by some expression including or denoting the tenure by copy of court roll, shall extend to manors, messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments of that tenure, and any undivided share thereof; and the word "estate" shall extend to an estate in equity as well as at law, and shall also extend to any interest, charge, lien or incumbrance in, upon, or affecting lands, either at law or in equity, and shall also extend to any interest, charge, lien or incumbrance in, upon or affecting money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands (a); and the expression "base fee" shall mean exclusively that estate in fee simple into which an estate tail is converted where the issue in tail are barred, but

* This Act does not extend to Ireland, but on August 15, 1834, the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, was passed, which corresponds in most particulars with the English statute, and came into operation on October 31, 1834, instead of December 31, 1833.

persons claiming estates by way of remainder or otherwise are not barred (b); and the expression "estate tail," in addition to its usual meaning (c), shall mean a base fee into which an estate tail shall have been converted; and the expression "actual tenant in tail" shall mean exclusively the tenant of an estate tail which shall not have been barred, and such tenant shall be deemed an actual tenant in tail, although the estate tail may have been divested or turned to a right (d); and the expression "tenant in tail" shall mean not only an actual tenant in tail, but also a person who, where an estate tail shall have been barred and converted into a base fee, would have been tenant of such estate tail if the same had not been barred; and the expression "tenant in tail entitled to a base fee" shall mean a person entitled to a base fee, or to the ultimate beneficial interest in a base fee, and who, if the base fee had not been created, would have been actual tenant in tail; and the expression "money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands" shall include money, whether raised or to be raised, and whether the amount thereof be or be not ascertained, and shall extend to stocks and funds, and real and other securities, the produce of which is directed to be invested in the purchase of lands, and the lands to be purchased with such money or produce shall extend to lands held by copy of court roll, and also to lands of any tenure, in Ireland or elsewhere out of England, where such lands or any of them are within the scope or meaning of the trust or power directing or authorizing the purchase; and the word "person" shall extend to a body politic, corporate or collegiate, as well as an individual; and every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things as well as one person or thing; and every word importing the plural number shall extend and be applied to one person or thing as well as several persons or things; and every word importing the masculine gender only shall extend and be applied to a female as well as a male; and every assurance already made or hereafter to be made, whether by deed, will, private Act of Parliament or otherwise, by which lands are or shall be entailed, or agreed or directed to be entailed, shall be deemed a settlement; and every appointment made in exercise of any power contained in any settlement, or of any other power arising out of the power contained in any settlement, shall be considered as part of such settlement, and the estate created by such appointment shall be considered as having been created by such settlement (e); and where any such settlement is or shall be made by will, the time of the death of the testator shall be considered the time when such settlement was made: provided always, that those words and expressions occurring in this clause, to which more than one meaning is to be attached, shall not have the different meanings given to them by this clause in those cases in which there is anything in the subject or context repugnant to such construction. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 1.

The principal objects of this statute (which was prepared by Mr. Brodie; Bell v. Holtby, 15 Eq. 189) were to abolish fines and recoveries; to enable a tenant in tail to make an effectual alienation by enrolled deed; and to enable married women to dispose of land by deed acknowledged. See as to the present law of entail note to sect. 15, post, p. 311. The principal objects of this statute.

(a) In the Irish Act the word "estate" is made to extend to "any interest, charge, right, title, lien or incumbrance, in, upon, or affecting lands, either at law or in equity, whether present or vested, or future or contingent." The word "estate" includes the reversionary life interest of a married woman in money invested on mortgage of land (Miller v. Collins, [1896] 1 Ch. 573; overruling Re Newton, 23 Ch. D. 187), but not a mere spes successionis on a possible intestacy (Allcard v. Walker, [1896] 2 Ch. 369). See further, as to the definition of "estate" in the present Act, Briggs v. Chamberlain (11 Hare, 74); Williams v. Cooke (4 Giff. 343). Estate.

(b) The species of base fee here defined (which may be referred to as a statutory base fee) is thus described by Lord Coke:—Where tenant in tail bargains and sells the estate to another and his heirs, and afterwards levies a fine to him and his heirs with proclamations, he has an estate in fee simple as long as the tenant in tail has heirs of his body, derived out of the estate tail; this being an inferior and subordinate estate, a remainder or reversion may be expectant upon it (Seymour's Case, 10 Rep. 97 b, 98 a; see 2 Ld. Raym. 1148; Plowd. 557; Co. Litt. 18; Shep. T. 46, 103, 402; 3 Leon. 117; 1 Prest. on Estates, 431, 433). Base fees. Statutory base fee.

A statutory base fee results from a disposition by an actual tenant in tail made without the consent of the protector (sect. 34, post). It may be enlarged into a fee simple absolute either by a subsequent disposition by the person who, if the former disposition had not been executed, would have been actual tenant in tail (sect. 19); or by the owner of the base fee becoming entitled to the immediate reversion (sect. 39). As to the operation of the Stat. Lim. in barring the title of reversioners where persons claiming in respect of a statutory base fee remain in possession, see sect. 6 of the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, ante, p. 186.

Apart from a statutory base fee, there is at common law another estate which also known as a base fee. Thus according to the old authorities a release or bargain and sale by a tenant in tail passed a fee (known as a base fee) which was voidable by the entry of the issue in tail (Doe v. Woodroffe, 15 M. & W. 793; 2 H. L. C. 829, referring to Machell v. Clarke, 2 Ld. Raym. 782; s.c. 2 Salk. 619; Com. 720; 7 Mod. 18; 11 Mod. 19; see Goodright v. Mead, 3 Burr. 1703; Doe v. Rivers, 7 T. R. 276; Seymour's Case, 10 Rep. 95). So in a modern case it has been laid down that a conveyance by a tenant in tail without a disentailing assurance will in general pass a fee determinable by the entry of the issue in tail (Sturgis v. Morse, 2 D. F. & J. 231; see Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 1 Ch. 444; and the judgment of Kay, J., in Hankey v. Martin, 49 L. T. 560). Such a common law base fee created before the present Act by lease and release might have been confirmed and made indefeasible by a fine levied by the releasor after the death of the releasee (Doe Common law base fee.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 1.

v. Whichelo, 8 T. R. 211). As to the powers of confirming and enlarging common law base fees given by the present Act, see sect. 38, post. A list of the methods by which a base fee arises is given in Challis Real Prop., 2nd ed., p. 298.

Estate tail: the origin of estates tail.

(c) By the common law, before the stat. Westm. 2, commonly called the statute De Donis (13 Edw. 1, c. 1), there were two kinds of estates of inheritance: the one a fee simple absolute, where lands were limited to a man and to his heirs generally; and the other a fee simple conditional, where lands were given to a man and to the heirs of his body (see Willion v. Berkeley, Plowd. 222—252; 2 Prest. on Est. 323—354). In the case of the latter, until issue born, the grantee had not the absolute property in the estate; but the moment issue was born, the condition being performed, the estate became absolutely his property, and he could dispose of it in the same manner as if he had held it in fee simple. The statute De Donis declared that the will of the donor or grantor should be observed, and that an estate so granted to a man and the heirs of his body should descend to the issue, and that he should not have power to alienate the estate (Att.-Gen. v. Marlborough, 3 Madd. 531, 532). Hence the modern estate tail.

What may be entailed.

Two things were essential to an entail within the statute, viz., that the subject be of a real nature, and that the estate in it be an inheritance (Harg. Co. Litt. 20 a, note (5)). Where a dignity is limited to the heirs of the body, even though no place be named in the creation of the title, the dignity is within the statute De Donis, and descendible as an estate tail (Re Rivett-Carnac, 30 Ch. D. 136). Lands in ancient demesne are not within the statute De Donis (Creswell v. Hawkins, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 407).

Annuities.

If a purely personal authority be granted to a man and the heirs of his body, a fee conditional was created, and A can alienate the annuity as soon as an heir of his body is born; as he could have done in the case of real estate before the statute De Donis (Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. sen. 180; Co. Litt. 20 A). But such a grant did not create an estate tail, for the statute De Donis uses only the word "tenement," and an annuity, although it may be an "hereditament," is not a "tenement" (Bignold v. Giles, 4 Drew. 347; see Turner v. Turner, 1 Bro. C. C. 323; Re Rivett-Carnac, 30 Ch. D. 141). Annuities granted with words of inheritance have been held to be personal estate where they were granted by the Crown, either out of Barbadoes Duties (Aubin v. Daly, 4 B. & Ald. 59; Stafford v. Buckley, 2 Ves. sen. 170), or out of the revenue of the Post Office (Holderness v. Carmarthen, 1 Bro. C. C. 376), or out of Coal Duties (Radburn v. Jarvis, 3 Beav. 450). See on the other hand, Att.-Gen. v. Richmond, [1907] 2 K. B. 973, where the same Coal Duties were held to be realty, and entailable within the statute De Donis.

In the case of bequests of personalty to A and the heirs of his body, the ordinary rule was that A took an absolute interest (Re Walker, Macintosh Walker v. W., [1908] 2 Ch. 714; see further, Leventhorpe v. Ashbie, Tud. L. C. Conv. 242, 4th ed. But see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 130, post).

Neither estates pur autre vie in lands, nor terms of years, were entailable any more than personal chattels. They might, however, be so settled as to answer the purposes of an entailed estate and be rendered inalienable almost for as long a time as if they were entailable (Harg. Co. Litt. 20 A, note (5); see Fearne, 495—501, 8th ed.). As to chattels settled by reference to limitations of real estate in strict settlement, see Glenorchy v. Bosville (1 White & Tud. L. C. Eq. 1).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 1.

A quasi tenant in tail in possession of an estate pur autre vie may by act inter vivos deal with the estate as if there had never been any settlement (Allen v. Allen, 2 Dru. & War. 307; Re Barber, 18 Ch. D. 628; see Pickersgill v. Grey, 31 L. J. Ch. 394). The quasi entail in such an estate may be barred by deed, surrender, or even by articles (Guy v. Mannock, 2 Eden, 339; see 16 Ves. 313; Coop. C. C. 178; 1 Mer. 665; see Lynch v. Nelson, I. R. 5 Eq. 192), but not by will (Hopkins v. Ramadge, Batty, 365; Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & L. 281; Creswell v. Hawkins, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 408; Re Barber, 18 Ch. D. 628; see Doe v. Luxton, 6 T. R. 292). Where a tenant in tail in remainder after an estate pur autre vie by deed barred such entail, the deed was held also to bar a quasi estate tail taken by the same person in the estate pur autre vie (Re Michell, Moore v. Moore, [1892] 2 Ch. 87). A quasi entail in a lease for lives may be barred by the first quasi tenant in tail surrendering and renewing (Blake v. B., 1 Cox, 266; 3 P. Wms. 10, note 1, by Cox; see Coop. C. C. 184, 185); mortgaging for a term (Walsh v. Studdert, I. R. 5 C. L. 478), or taking a fee farm grant (Morris v. M., I. R. 6 C. L. 73; see further, Tud. L. C. Conv. 102, 4th ed.). But a quasi tenant in tail in remainder of an estate pur autre vie, after an estate for life to some other person, could not by fine or otherwise, in the lifetime of the tenant for life and without his concurrence, bar the remainders over (Slade v. Pattison, 5 L. J. Ch. 51; Allen v. A., supra; see Wastneys v. Chappell, 3 Br. P. C. 50; Edwards v. Champion, 3 D. M. & G. 202). So where an estate pur autre vie is limited to one for life with remainder over in tail, there the first taker cannot bar the remainder, unless the remainderman in tail joins (Low v. Barron, 3 P. Wms. 262; Osbrey v. Bury, 1 Ball. & B. 53).

Quasi entails of estates pur autre vie.

Before this Act estates tail were barred by means of fines or recoveries (see the note to this section, post).

(d) The words "actual tenant in tail" describe the person upon whom sect. 15 confers the power of barring. They do not include a person who has barred an estate tail, either completely so as to convert it into a fee simple, or incompletely so as to convert it into a statutory base fee (see sect. 19, post).

Actual tenant in tail.

As to the words "divested or turned to a right," Lord Coke distinguished between those alienations which take away an entry by working a discontinuance, and those which divest an estate (Co. Litt. 327 b). The word "divested" is thus explained in Termes de la Ley: "As invest signifieth to deliver possession of a thing, so devest signifieth the taking away of the possession." The words "turned to a right" have a more extensive signification; for when an estate is turned to a right, the owner has only the "Jus proprietatis" or mere right of property, which could not be regained by a possessory but only by a real action (Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 107; see Mr. Preston's argument in Goodright v. Forester, 1 Taunt. 588; Smith v. Clyfford, 1 T. R. 744; Co. Litt. 239 a, note (1)). Having regard to these words (which were discussed in argument, Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 6), the expression "actual tenant in tail" seems to include a tenant in tail who (1) has been ousted by an intruder, or who (2) has by his own conveyance passed to a stranger a common law base fee (see Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 5, 6), or who (3) has been convicted of felony, his property thereupon vesting in an administrator (ibid., [1906] 2 Ch. 1).

"Divested or turned to a right."

"Tenant in tail" is so defined as to include the person upon whom sect. 19 confers the power of enlarging base fees (see Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 721).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 1.

Relation of appointment to deed creating a power.

(e) It has been established ever since the time of Lord Coke (Sir Edward Clere's Case, 6 Rep. 18), that where a power of appointment over real estate is executed, the appointee takes under him who created the power, and not under him who executes it (Marlborough v. Godolphin, 2 Ves. sen. 78); the appointee, however, does not take from the time of the creation of the power, but from the time of its complete execution, e.g., where the execution is by will from the testator's death (ibid.). The estates limited in default of and until the execution of the power are vested until an appointment is made (Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 39; compare Re Ware, Cumberlege v. Cumberlege-Ware, 45 Ch. D. 269), but are defeated by an appointment (compare Lovett v. L., [1898] 1 Ch. 89). Thus, in the case of a power of leasing, the lessee stands in the same relation to all the persons named in the settlement as if that settlement had contained a limitation to his use antecedent to the life estate and the subsequent limitations (Maundrell v. M., 10 Ves. 255, 256; see Co. Litt. 216 a, 241 a, notes by Butl.). So a right of dower, which had attached before the execution of a power, was defeated by an appointment (Ray v. Pung, 5 B. & Ald. 561; 5 Madd. 310).

But the donee of a power cannot by an appointment defeat a lease or other interest granted to him by virtue of his estate (Snape v. Turton, Sir W. Jones, 392; Yelland v. Ficlis, Moore, 788; Goodright v. Cator, Dougl. 477; see Gilb. on Uses, 142; Edwards v. Slater, Hardr. 415; R. v. Ellis, 4 Exch. 652; see also the note, post, p. 354).

With reference to the rules against perpetuities and remoteness (as to which see now sect. 161 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, p. 605), where an appointment is made in exercise of a special power, the appointment must be read into the instrument creating the power, and its validity tested in that way (Whitby v. Mitchell, 42 Ch. D. 500; 44 Ch. D. 85; Re Brown and Sibley, 3 Ch. D. 159). But where the appointment is made under a general power, time runs from the execution of the power, not from its creation (Rous v. Jackson, 29 Ch. D. 521, 526; Re Devon Settled Estates, [1896] 2 Ch. 567).

[Sects. 2—14, 16, 18, 29—31, 41, 46, 50—54, 59, 66, 73, 74, 76, and 79—90 of this Act were repealed as from January 1, 1926, as being obsolete, by sect. 10 of the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924. See for them (including a short account of the nature and operation of fines and recoveries) the second edition of this work, pp. 267 et seq. Sects. 2—12 related to the abolition, amendment, and validity of fines and recoveries, sect. 13 to the custody of records of them, and sect. 14 made estates tail no longer barrable by warranty. The Act of 1924 also repealed parts of other sections. The extent of the repeals will be found noted under them.]

2. Disposition of Lands Entailed.

Power after December 31, 1833, to dispose of lands entailed in fee simple, or for a less estate, saving the rights of certain persons.

15. After the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, every actual tenant in tail, whether in possession, remainder, contingency, or otherwise, shall have full power to dispose of for an estate in fee simple absolute, or for any less estate, the lands entailed, as against all persons claiming the lands entailed by force of any estate tail which shall be vested in or might be claimed by, or which but for some previous Act would have been vested in or might have been claimed by, the person making the disposition, at the time of his making the same, and also as against all persons,* including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, whoe estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of any such estate tail: saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail in respect of which such disposition shall be made, and the rights of all other persons, except those against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 15.

* The remainder of the corresponding clause in the Irish Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92), s. 12, runs thus: "whose estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of any such estate tail, including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, as regards the title to his Majesty to any reversion or remainder created or reserved by any settlement or will, and which reversion or remainder shall have come or shall hereafter come to the Crown in consequence of the attainder of any person to whom the forfeited reversion or remainder was previously to such forfeiture limited by any settlement or will, but not in any other case, or where the title to the Crown shall have accrued by any other means; saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail in respect of which such disposition shall be made, and the rights of all other persons except those against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made." Corresponding clause of Irish Act.

In view of sect. 1, sub-sect. 1 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, p. 598, legal estates tail can no longer subsist or be created. But sect. 130 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, p. 718, authorises the creation of entailed interests by way of trust in any property, real or personal; and also enacts that the right of barring is to continue and that all statutory provisions relating to estates tail in realty shall apply to entailed interests in personalty. Sect. 176 of the same Act enables a tenant in tail (subject as therein mentioned) to dispose by will of property of which he is tenant in tail in possession at his death and of money directed to be invested in the purchase of property of which, if so invested, he would have been tenant in tail in possession at his death.

The words "actual tenant in tail" are defined by sect. 1, ante, p. 306. The words include a person who has conveyed away his estate tail by a deed not inrolled. After the conveyance he can still under this section execute a disentailing deed (Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 5). As to the effect before the present Act of a tenant in tail's assurance (apart from fine or recovery) in creating a common law base fee, see ante, p. 307. And as to the power of tenants in tail to confirm base fees and voidable estates previously created, see sects. 19 and 38, post. As to entails where the reversion is in the Crown, see sect. 1, sub-s. 5, and sect. 20 of the S. L. Act, 1925, post. Actual tenant in tail.

A disentailing deed executed by a tenant in tail does not destroy the interest he possesses in the estate, but enables him, by the exercise of the power which that interest gives him, to render it perpetual (Lilford v. Att.-Gen., L. R. 2 H. L. 63). A disentailing deed whereby A tenant in tail grants the entailed land to B and his heirs to the use of A his heirs and assigns is not an "alienation" (Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 10). As to the Operation of disentailing deeds under this section.

destruction of powers by a disposition under the statute, see Sugden, Powers, 91, 8th ed.; Hill v. Pritchard (Kay, 394); Re Wright and Marshall (28 Ch. D. 93).

Equitable tenants in tail.

The word "estate" in the statute extends to estates in equity as well as at law (sect. 1). As to equitable tenants in tail, and the form of assurance made necessary in that case by this Act, see 1 Hayes, Conv. 155, 5th ed. All entailed interests are now equitable (see note on p. 311, ante).

Where land was devised to trustees on trust for sale and subject thereto to persons in tail, it was not necessary to bar the entail on a sale by the trustees (Re Skerrett, 2 Dru. & War. 585).

Tenant in tail in contingency.

The owner of a contingent estate tail was deemed incompetent to suffer a common recovery with effect (1 Prest. Conv. 142); but tenants in tail in contingency are expressly within the words of this section (see Sugd. R. P. Stat. 192; 1 Hayes, Conv. 194, 5th ed.). Until the contingency happens the only effect of the disposition ought to be to substitute a contingent fee for the contingent estate tail (Sugd. R. P. Stat. 192). Where successive entails were limited subject to a proviso that in a certain event the second entail was to be postponed to the third entail, the operation of the proviso was held to be "in defeasance" of the second entail, and to be barred by a dissentailment thereof (Milbank v. Vane, [1893] 3 Ch. 79). And where, after the death of A, who was tenant for life, trustees were directed to convey real estate to the use of B in tail, but if B should be then dead to the use of the person who should then be the first heir male of the body of B in tail, with remainder over, it was held that, during the life of A, B had a vested equitable estate tail in remainder expectant on the decease of A, and that the subsequent estates were barred by B's disentailing deed, being estates to take effect in a certain event after, if not in defeasance of, B's estate tail (Cardigan v. Curzon Howe, [1901] 2 Ch. 479; where it was pointed out that "any such estate tail" means any estate tail in possession or remainder, &c.). In both the last cases it was unsuccessfully argued that the effect of the limitations was to create alternative gifts. See, further, Doe v. Scarborough, 3 Ad. & Ell. 43, under the old law.

Dispositions under this section —by an alien, lunatic, infant,

An alien might suffer a common recovery (Leon. 404; Shep. Touch. 404), and may execute a disentailing deed (1 Jarm. Wills 59, 6th ed.). Where the tenant in tail is a lunatic, the Court of Lunacy can bar the entail, but the power will not be exercised so as to affect the remainderman (Re Pares, Lillington v. P., 12 Ch. D. 333; Re E. D. S., [1914] 1 Ch. 618; see Lunacy Act, 1890, s. 123; Lunacy Act, 1891, s. 27). A base fee has been enlarged where it was for the benefit of the lunatic (Re Sefton, [1898] 2 Ch. 378). An infant has been ordered under Debts Recovery Act, 1830, s. 11, to execute a disentailing deed (Radcliffe v. Eccles, 1 Keen, 130; see Re Montagu, Faber v. M., [1896] 1 Ch. 549; Re Hambrough, H. v. H., [1909] 2 Ch. 620).

A married woman is not prevented by a restraint on anticipation from barring an entail (Cooper v. Macdonald, 7 Ch. D. 288). Where a settlor gives an estate tail, he cannot restrict the power of the tenant in tail to bar it (Dawkins v. Penrhyn, 4 App. Cas. 64).

Bankruptcy of tenant in tail.

Where a tenant in tail becomes bankrupt, his trustee can bar the entail (see Bankruptcy Act, 1914, sect. 55, sub-s. 5; sect. 56 of the present Act, post).

Felony.

And where a tenant in tail is convicted of felony, there notwithstanding that his property has become vested in an administrator, he still remains able to bar the entail by executing a disentailing deed. The fee simple so acquired will vest in the administrator (Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 20).

A disentailing deed executed by a tenant for life has no operation under this section (Slater v. Dangerfield, 15 M. & W. 263; as to the effect of a recovery suffered by a tenant for life, see Smith v. Clyfford, 1 T. R. 738; Meredith v. Leslie, 6 Br. P. C. 388; Doe v. Scarborough, 3 Ad. & Ell. 43). But a proper disentailing deed will bar the entail, though the tenant in tail who executes it is recited in it to be tenant for life (Evans v. Jones, Kay, 29). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 15.

Disposition by tenant for life.

As to the nature and effect of the instrument to be executed by the tenant in tail for the purpose of barring the entail, see cases quoted in the note to sect. 40, post, p. 332.

The power of leasing conferred by this section on tenants in tail (see p. 331, post) has become less material since the Settled Land Act, 1882, which last Act (sect. 58, sub-sect. 1) enabled a tenant in tail to exercise the powers under that Act of a tenant for life. See now sect. 20, sub-sect. 1 of the S. L. Act, 1925, post. Where a tenant in tail is a lunatic, the judge in lunacy may authorise the committee to grant leases binding on all reversioners (Lunacy Act, 1890, ss. 120, 122; see S. L. Act, 1925, ss 28 and 117 (1) (xxviii). Leases by tenant in tail.

"Lands" in this Act includes rents (sect. 1, ante). As to the effect of a recovery on entailed rents, see Smyth v. Farnaby, Carter, 52; Sid. 285; 2 Keb. 29, 55, 84; Weeks v. Peach, Lutw. 1218, 1224; S. C., Salk. 577; Chaplin v. C., 3 P. Wms. 229; Butl. Co. Litt. 298 a, n. 2; 1 Prest. on Conv. 3; and see Re Frank's Estate, [1915] 1 I. R. 387. Entail of rent.

[Sects. 16 and 18 (see second edition of this work, pp. 277—278) were repealed by the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924, and sect. 17 had already been repealed by S. L. Rev. Act, 1874. Sect. 16 related to assents required to dispositions by women tenants in tail, and sect. 18, excluded from the powers given by the Act tenants in tail restrained by statute from barring their estates tail, and tenants in tail after possibility of issue extinct (see sect. 1, sub-s. 5, and sects. 20 and 23 of the S. L. Act, 1925, post).]

19. After the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, in every case in which an estate tail in any lands shall have been barred and converted into a base fee, either before or on or after that day, the person who, if such estate tail had not been barred, would have been actual tenant in tail of the same lands, shall have full power to dispose of such lands as against all persons, including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, whose estates are to take effect after the determination or in defeasance of the base fee into which the estate tail shall have been converted, so as to enlarge the base fee into a fee simple absolute (f): saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail which shall have been converted into a base fee, and the rights of all other persons, except those against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made. Power after December 31, 1833, to enlarge base fees; saving rights of certain persons.

(f) The remainder of the corresponding section of the Irish statute, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 16, runs thus:—"including the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, as regards the title to * his Majesty to any reversion or remainder created or reserved by any settlement or will, and which reversion or Corresponding clause of Irish Act. remainder shall have come or shall hereafter come to the Crown in consequence of the attainder of any person to whom the forfeited reversion or remainder was, previously to such forfeiture, limited by any settlement or will, but not in any other case, or where the title to the Crown shall have accrued by any other means; saving always the rights of all persons in respect of estates prior to the estate tail which shall have been converted into a base fee and the rights of all other persons, except those against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made: provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall authorize any tenant in tail or other person to defeat or bar any estate or interest which may at the time of passing this Act have been granted to any person or persons by his Majesty, or any of his predecessors, in any reversion or remainder which may have come to the Crown by attainder or otherwise."

Cases on sect. 19.

Compare with this section the definition in sect. 1 of "tenant in tail." A tenant in tail can under this section enlarge a statutory base fee, notwithstanding that he has parted with it to a purchaser (Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 716). And where the tenant in tail is a woman married since 1882, she may enlarge a base fee without the concurrence or acknowledgment required by sect. 40 (Re Drummond and Davie, [1891] 1 Ch. 524).

Issue inheritable not to bar expectancies.

20. Provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall enable any person to dispose of any lands entailed in respect of any expectant interest (g) which he may have as issue inheritable to any estate tail therein (h).

Corresponding clause of the Irish Act.

(g) The words in the corresponding section of the Irish statute, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 17, are "expectant interest or possibility."

By sect. 22 of the same statute it is enacted, "that from and after the 31st day of October, 1834, it shall be lawful for any person, either before or after he shall become entitled in any manner, except as expectant heir of a living person, or as expectant heir of the body of a living person, to an estate in lands, not being a vested estate, and whether he be or be not ascertained as the person or one of the persons in whom the same may become vested, to dispose of such lands for the whole or any part of such estate therein by any assurance, whether deed, will, or any other instrument by which he could have made such disposition if such estate were a vested estate in possession: provided nevertheless, that no such disposition shall be valid or have any effect where the person making the same shall not at the time of the disposition have become entitled to such estate, unless the deed, will, or other instrument by virtue of which he may become entitled be existing and in operation at the time of the disposition." As to the nature of this provision, see 1 Hayes, Conv. 219, 5th ed., and compare L. P. Act, 1925, s. 4, post. This provision is not in terms confined to Ireland, but from the context it would probably be held to be so confined (Sugd. R. P. Stat. 243).

Alienation of expectant interests.

(h) Sect. 20 and the abolition of fines put an end to some powers of alienation which previously might have been exercised by persons having only expectant interests, such as the eldest son of a tenant in tail or fee simple had during the life of his father. A fine levied by a person who afterwards became heir was an estoppel (1 Roll. Abr. 482 (S.) pl. 2; Helps v. Hereford, 2 B. & Ald. 242; Doe v. Martyn, 2 Mann. & R. 485; Doe v. Oliver, 10 B. & C. 181; Edwards v. Rogers, W. Jones, 756; Wright v. Wright, 1 Ves. sen. 412); but a grant by a such a person was void (Wivel's Case, Hob. 45; Perk. sect. 65; 1 Anst. 11; 3 Term Rep. 365); and the fine did not bind collateral heirs unless the right to the entail descended to the cognisor or his heirs (Bradstock v. Scovel, Cro. Car. 434; see 8 Rep. 88 b). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

According to the older cases a mere possibility could only be bound or extinguished at law by estoppel, by a fine, or a recovery (Weale v. Lower, Pollex. 54); or in equity by contract (Beckley v. Newland, 2 P. Wms. 182; Hobson v. Trevor, ibid., 191; see Lyde v. Mynn, 1 M. & K. 693). But when a possibility was coupled with an interest, as where the person was fixed and ascertained, it might be released (Jewson v. Moulson, 2 Atk. 417), or be devised, though it could not be granted or transferred by the ordinary rules of the common law (Lampet's Case, 10 Rep. 46). Alienation of possibilities at law and in equity.

Modern cases have settled the rule that possibilities and expectancies are assignable in equity for value, and an assignment will bind the subject-matter if sufficiently identified (Tailby v. Official Receiver, 13 A. C. 543). The rule was applied to assignments of expectant interests in legacies under the will of a living person (Re Dallas, [1904], 2 Ch. 385; Re Clarke, Coombe v. Carter, 36 Ch. Div. 346). An agreement, of which the subject is an expectancy contingent upon the will of a living person, is not illegal (Cook v. Field, 15 Q. B. 460), and will be enforced in equity (Lyde v. Mynn, 1 M. & K. 683; see Pope v. Whitcombe, 3 Russ. 124). Specific performance was decreed of an agreement between two sons to share equally whatever property they might derive from their father either in his lifetime or at his decease (Wethered v. Wethered, 2 Sim. 183; see Harwood v. Tooke, 2 Sim. 192; Alexander v. Wellington, 2 R. & M. 55; Carleton v. Leighton, 3 Mer. 667). But a volunteer cannot enforce a contract made by deed to dispose of an expectancy (Re Ellenborough, Towry Law v. Burne, [1903] 1 Ch. 697; following Meek v. Kettlewell, 1 Phil. 342).

A spes successionis is not a title to property by English law (Re Parsons, Stockley v. P., 45 Ch. D. 51). So held as to a wife's spes successionis under Scotch law in her husband's personal property (Re Simpson, S. v. S., [1904] 1 Ch. 1). A member of a class of possible next of kin has not a "contingent title" (Re Parsons, supra); and cannot maintain an action in respect thereof (Clowes v. Hilliard, 4 Ch. D. 413; Davis v. Angel, 4 De G. F. & J. 529). See further Allcard v. Walker, [1896] 2 Ch. 369, quoted under sect. 77, post.

A fine by a contingent remainderman did not operate by estoppel only, but when the contingency happened the estate which then became vested fed the estoppel, so that the fine operated upon that estate as if it had been vested in the cognisors at the time the fine was levied (Doe v. Oliver, 10 Barn. & Cress. 181; Doe v. Howell, ibid., 191; Rawlin's Case, 4 Rep. 52; Weale v. Lower, Pollex. 54; Trevivian v. Lawrence, 6 Mod. 258; Ld. Raym. 1051; Vick v. Edwards, 3 P. Wms. 372; Doe v. Martyn, 8 B. & C. 527; Davies v. Bush, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 58; see Fearne, 365). The estoppel raised by the fine of a contingent remainderman was available only by parties and privies (Doe v. Martyn, 8 B. & C. 527). Fines by contingent remaindermen.

A contingent interest in terms of years might be assigned in equity for valuable consideration, or for love and affection between parent and child (1 Ves. sen. 411; Wind v. Jekyl, 1 P. Wms. 572). As to the alienation of contingent interests by married women, see sect. 77, post; Crofts v. Middleton, 8 D. M. & G. 192; Jones v. Frost, 7 Ch. 773). Contingent, executory or future equitable interests in land may be disposed of (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 4, sub-s. 2, post, replacing sect. 6 of the R. P. Act, 1845). And all contingent, executory or other future interests in any real or personal estate are devisable (Wills Act, 1837, s. 3, post). Contingent interest now alienable and devisable.

An estoppel is when one is concluded and forbidden in law to speak against his own act or deed, even though it be to say the truth (Terms of the Law, 157; Litt. s. 667; Co. Litt. 352 a). It is a rule of evidence which prevents a man saying what is true (Onward Society v. Smithson, [1893] 1 Ch. 14). There are three kinds of estoppels, (1) by matter of record; (2) by deed, whether an indenture or a deed poll (Bonner v. Wilkinson, 5 B. & Ald. 682; Co. Litt. 47 b; Lewis v. Willis, 1 Wils. 314; Litt. s. 693); and (3) by matter in pais. Estoppel by matter of record is discussed at length, 2 Smith, L. C. 728, 10th ed. See Co. Litt. 352; and see Cooke v. Rickman, [1911] 2 K. B. 1125.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

Estoppel.

(1) Estoppel by Deed...316.
(2) Estoppel by Matter in pais...318.

(1) Estoppel by deed.

According to the doctrine of estoppel by deed (which will not be extended, General Finance Co. v. Liberator Society, 10 Ch. D. 21), a fictitious statement is treated as true (10 Ch. D. 20). The principle is that where a man has entered into a solemn engagement under his hand and seal as to certain facts, he shall not be permitted to deny any matter which he has so asserted (Bowman v. Taylor, 2 Ad. & El. 291; see Goodtitle v. Bailey, Cowp. 600; Co. Litt. 47 b; Gwyn v. Neath Canal Co., L. R. 3 Ex. 209). The estoppel binds persons claiming under the person estopped (Taylor v. Needham, 2 Taunt, 278; Doe v. Stone, 3 C. B. 176). But where by a deed which erroneously recited A's title A granted land to B, persons claiming under B were not (as between themselves and a stranger) estopped from showing what interest passed under the deed (Trinidad Co. v. Coryat, [1896] A. C. 587; where it was said that recitals are not representations of fact on which a stranger is entitled to act without inquiry).

Estoppel arising from a recital.

In accordance with the above doctrine, the recital of a particular fact in a deed will estop the party making the statement (Bowman v. Taylor, 2 Ad. & El. 278; Hill v. Manchester Waterworks Co., 2 B. & Ad. 544; Pargeter v. Harris, 7 Q. B. 708; Horton v. Westminster, 7 Exch. 780), e.g., the recital of an ante-nuptial contract to settle property (Re Holland, Gregg v. H., [1902] 2 Ch. 360, 387; see Re Maddy, M. v. M., [1901] 2 Ch. 822). Where a lease recited a will, the lessee who executed the counterpart was estopped from denying the execution of the will (Bringloe v. Goodson, 5 Bing. N. C. 738). The doctrine of estoppel by recital applies to the case of an easement (Poulton v. Moore, [1915] 1 K. B. 400). The recital must be precise and unambiguous, e.g., that a grantor is seised of the legal estate (Heath v. Crealock, 10 Ch. 30; Right v. Bucknell, 2 B. & Ad. 278; Onward Society v. Smithson, [1893] 1 Ch. 1; Re Holland, [1901] 2 Ch. 159; Re Horton, H. v. Perks, 51 L. T. 420); and since every deed must be construed according to the intention of the parties as appearing by the whole deed, when a recital is intended to be the statement of one party only, the estoppel is confined to that party (Stroughill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 781; S. E. Ry. Co. v. Wharton, 6 H. & N. 526; see Brandon Hill v. Lane, [1915] 1 K. B. 250). There was no estoppel from a recital which, though accurate so far as it went, was incomplete (Lovett v. L., [1898] 1 Ch. 82). As a general rule no estoppel arises by a deed upon the face of which the truth appears (Doe v. Scarborough, 3 Ad. & El. 2; Doe v. Lawrence, 4 Taunt. 23; Jolly v. Arbuthnot, 4 D. G. & J. 237). As to the application of this rule to the case where the creation by estoppel of a tenancy between mortgagor and mortgagee was in question, see Morton v. Woods (L. R. 4 Q. B. 293, 303); Ex p. Punnett (16 Ch. D. 226, 234). Where an untrue recital has been introduced into a deed by mistake and without fraud there is no estoppel (Brooke v. Haymes, 6 Eq. 25; Empson's Case, 9 Eq. 597; Scholefield v. Lockwood, 31 L. J. Ch. 106). Again, a recital will not estop a party in an action not founded on the deed, but wholly collateral to it (Carpenter v. Buller, 8 M. & W. 209; Carter v. C., 3 K. & J. 645; Ex p. Morgan, Re Simpson, 2 Ch. D. 72; see Doe v. Shelton, 3 Ad. & El. 265; Melbourne v. Brougham, 7 A. C. 307). A married woman may be estopped by a recital in a deed duly executed and acknowledged by her (Jones v. Frost, 7 Ch. 773). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

As to an estoppel arising from the operative words of a grant, apart from the effect of the recitals. In the case of leaseholds it is settled that where A. by deed leases to B Blackacre wherein he has no interest at the time of the lease, and afterwards acquires the legal fee, the lease which was at first a good lease by estoppel becomes (from the feeding of the estoppel) a good lease in interest (Webb v. Austin, 7 M. & G. 724; see Goodtitle v. Morse, 3 T. R. 371). But the doctrine of feeding the estoppel does not apply where in the first instance some interest has passed (Co. Litt. 47B; Doe v. Seaton, 2 C. M. R. 730). In the case of freeholds where A purported to convey Blackacre to B, and subsequently by fraud himself obtained the legal estate which B claimed on the ground of estoppel, it was held that the doctrine of feeding the estoppel did not apply where the estate from which it was sought to feed the estoppel arose from a conveyance obtained fraudulently (Heath v. Crealock, 10 Ch. 30, 33; see Onward Society v. Smithson, [1893] 1 Ch. 13). Nor did the doctrine apply where A subsequently acquired the legal estate as trustee (Keate v. Phillips, 18 Ch. D. 577). In Heath v. Crealock (supra) it was said that the operative words of a grant would create no estoppel. (See Right v. Bucknell, 2 B. & Ad. 283.) Compare with the above, the rule that where A sells land and his title is afterwards defeated but A subsequently acquires the same land under another title, there is an equity arising out of the contract to fasten it upon the new title (Jones v. Kearney, 1 Dr. & War. 159; see Smith v. Baker, 1 Y. & C. Ch. 223; Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103). So where a person who had purported to assign one-sixth of a fund, being at the time only entitled to one-ninth, afterwards acquired one-eighteenth, the whole interest was bound (Re Hoffe, 82 L. T. 556). From operative words.

No estoppel arose from covenants for title (General Finance Co. v. Liberator Society, 10 Ch. D. 15). As to estoppel by covenant, see Doe v. Ford, 3 Ad. & Ell. 649. From covenants for title.

An estoppel may arise from the parcels of a deed of grant, e.g., where land was described as "bounded by the seashore" (Mellor v. Walmesley, [1905] 2 Ch. 175; Roberts v. Karr, 1 Taunt. 494; see ante, p. 77). As to estoppel in regard to the alteration of a lease, see Rudd v. Bowles, [1912] 2 Ch. 60). From parcels.

A nominal consideration being expressed in a deed does not prevent the admission of evidence aliunde of the real consideration if not inconsistent with the deed (Re Leifchild, 1 Eq. 231). Before the Judicature Acts the parties were bound by a receipt for the consideration money in the body of the deed (Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141; Baker v. Dewey, 1 B. & C. 704); but not by an indorsed receipt, which, being no part of the deed, was not an estoppel, but only evidence (Lampon v. Corke, 5 B. & Ald. 606; Graves v. Key, 3 B. & Ad. 313). In either case it might be shown in equity that the money was not paid (Ryle v. Haggie, 1 Jac. & W. 234; Wilson v. Keating, 27 Beav. 121). The rule of equity now prevails. In favour, however, of third parties acting on the faith thereof, a receipt may be binding (Bickerton v. Walker, 31 Ch. D. 151; see Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249; Lloyd's Bank v. Bullock, Consideration.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

[1896] 2 Ch. 192; King v. Smith, [1900] 2 Ch. 425; Rimmer v. Webster, [1902] 2 Ch. 173).

Forged deed.

Where a man executes a deed by forging the name of another, representing himself to be that other, he is bound by an estoppel, as to the nature of which see Re Cooper, C. v. Vesey (20 Ch. D. 633).

Cases where there is no estoppel.

The rule which requires a man to be bound by his deliberate representations of fact may be overbalanced by weightier considerations. Thus, if a trustee, deriving his authority from a public Act of Parliament, grants by a deed unauthorised by the Act, the grantor will not be estopped from insisting against the other party to the deed that he had no such power (Fairtitle v. Gilbert, 2 T. R. 169; see Doe v. Hares, 4 B. & Ad. 435; Webb v. Herne Bay, L. R. 5 Q. B. 642; Re Eddystone Co., [1893] 3 Ch. 19; Islington v. Hornsey, [1900] 1 Ch. 706). So a party to the deed is not estopped from pleading its illegality (Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 347; Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 408); nor from showing that the consideration was immoral, or contrary to an Act of Parliament or public policy (Prole v. Wiggins, 3 Bing. N. C. 230). So a party is not estopped from showing that a deed is void under a statute (Doe v. Howells, 2 Ad. & Ell. 744; see Doe v. Ford, 3 Ad. & El. 649). But a man cannot avoid his own deed by an allegation of his own fraud, as that the deed was executed for the purpose of giving a colourable qualification to kill game (Doe v. Roberts, 2 B. & Ald. 367). See also the cases, Doe v. Skirrow, 7 Ad. & Ell. 157; Gaunt v. Wainman, 3 Scott, 413; Whitton v. Peacock, 2 Bing. N. C. 411; Bringloe v. Goodson, 4 Bing. N. C. 726; see an article on Estoppel by Deed, 5 Jur. 858, 1170.

Copyholds not bound by estoppel.

A surrender of copyholds did not operate by estoppel (Taylor v. Phillips, 1 Ves. sen. 230; Goodtitle v. Morse, 3 T. R. 365; Morse v. Faulkner, 3 Swans. 429; Doe v. Tomkins, 11 East, 185; Doe v. Wilson, 4 B. & Ald. 303; see Doe v. Rolfe, 8 Ad. & El. 650).

(2) Estoppel by matter in pais.

Parties can be estopped by matters in pais, such as livery, entry, acceptance of an estate, and the like (Co. Litt. 352 a). Estoppels in pais often arise between landlord and tenant. As against the tenant, a man who accepts a lease is estopped from disputing the title of his landlord (Langford v. Selmes, 3 K. & J. 220), or of his landlord's heir (Weeks v. Birch, 69 L. T. 759; see Tadman v. Henman, [1893] 2 Q. B. 168). In a wider form the rule is that a tenant cannot deny that the person by whom he is let into possession had title at that time (Doe v. Barton, 11 Ad. & Ell. 307; see R. v. Swifte, [1913] 2 I. R. 113). Again, where a tenant pays rent to a person by whom he was not let into possession, a tenancy by estoppel may arise (Jump v. Payne, 68 L. J. Q. B. 607); apparently on the ground that it is a representation by the tenant that the relation of landlord and tenant exists (see Serjeant v. Nash, [1903] 2 K. B. 312, 316). But in such a case the payment of rent may only amount to an admission which can be explained (Ib. 315). A voluntary payment made under a mistake of money by way of rent does not create any obligation on the ground of estoppel (Batten Pooll v. Kennedy, [1907] 1 Ch. 268). As regards estoppels arising against the landlord; it has been laid down that the estoppel must be mutual (Green v. James, 6 M. & W. 660; see Co. Litt. 352 a). And a landlord has been held estopped from denying that he was reversioner, or from setting up an overriding title (Keith v. Gancia, [1904 1 Ch. 790). See further as to estoppel between landlord and tenant, Woodfall, 21st ed. 264; Foa, 6th ed. 521.

Between landlord and tenant.

As to estoppel where a person enters on land under an invalid title, see ante, p. 154.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

Estoppel in mercantile transactions.

In mercantile transactions an estoppel may arise by representations or conduct, as to which several propositions are given by Brett, J., in Carr v. L. & N. W. Ry., 10 C. P. 316; as to these see Dixon v. Kennaway, [1900] 1 Ch. 837; Whitechurch v. Cavanagh, [1902] A. C. 130, 135. As to estoppel in regard to transfers signed on blank certificates, see Colonial Bank v. Cady, 15 App. Cas. 267; Fuller v. Glyn Mills, [1914] 2 K. B. 168.

Estoppel by representation.

A representation of an intention does not create an estoppel (Chadwick v. Manning, [1896] A. C. 231; Coleman v. North, 47 W. R. 57). But if A makes a representation of fact to B intending it to be acted upon by B, and it is acted upon by B, A is estopped from saying that it is not true (Low v. Bouverie, [1891] 3 Ch. 110; Burkinshaw v. Nicolls, 3 App. Cas. 1026; Seaton v. S., 13 App. Cas. 74; Bateman v. Faber, [1898] 1 Ch. 147); compare Lord Selborne's statement of equitable estoppel by representation (Citizens' Bank v. First National Bank, L. R. 6 H. L. 360). The representation must be unambiguous (Low v. Bouverie, [1891] 3 Ch. 106, 113; Whitechurch v. Cavanagh, [1902] A. C. 145). And B cannot rely by way of estoppel on A's statement where it was induced by B's own misrepresentation or concealment or where the circumstances would have deterred a reasonable man from acting on it (Porter v. Moore, [1894] 2 Ch. 367). The onus of proving that the representation was acted on lies on B (Re Lewis, L. v. L., [1904] 2 Ch. 602).

The representation may be made not merely by language but by conduct, and conduct may include negligence (Bell v. Marsh, [1903] 1 Ch. 541). But the negligence must be the proximate cause of B's mistaken action (Longman v. Bath, [1905] 1 Ch. 646; see also Lancs. & Yorks. Ry. Co. v. MacNicoll, 88 L. J. K. B. 601). A client could not rely on an estoppel alleged to arise from his solicitor's negligence in investigating title and preparing conveyance so as to compel the solicitor to give him (the client) the benefit of a mistake in the original contract (Bell v. Marsh, [1903] 1 Ch. 528).

On the above principle, where a company issues to A a certificate for shares, upon which he acts, the company will be estopped from denying, either that A is the proprietor of these shares (Balkis v. Tomkinson, [1893] A. C. 396; see Dixon v. Kennaway, [1900] 1 Ch. 833; Foster v. Tyne Co., 63 L. J. Q. B. 50); or (unless A be affected with notice to the contrary) that the amount certified to have been paid on the shares has been paid (Parbury's Case, [1896] 1 Ch. 100; Bloomenthal v. Ford, [1897] A. C. 156; see Markham and Darter's Case, [1899] 1 Ch. 414). Even where A is affected with such notice, the above rule applies in the case of a transferee from him for value without notice (Burkinshaw v. Nicolls, 3 A. C. 1004; see McKay's Case, [1896] 2 Ch. 757). As to a company's duty in the custody of share certificates, see Longman v. Bath, [1905] 1 Ch. 646. Where A, by fraudulent misrepresentation, induced B to guarantee A's banking account, a finding of the jury that B was negligent did not prevent him from setting up the defence of misrepresentation to an action by the bank (Carlisle, &c. Banking Co. v. Bragg, [1911] 1 K. B. 489).

Negligence of party setting up misrepresentation.

Estoppel in the case of agency.

Where a person holds out another as his agent, and the agent acts within his agency, the principal may be estopped from denying the agency. Thus where a person by an agreement authorised another to apply for shares, but imposed a condition in a covering letter, he was estopped as against one who had acted on the faith of the agreement without notice of the letter (Ex p. Harrison, 69 L. T. 204; see Re Consort Mines, [1897] 1 Ch. 575, where there was no estoppel; Farquharson v. King, [1902] A. C. 325; Rimmer v. Webster, [1902] 2 Ch. 171). And a person who leaves in the hands of his brokers securities and executed transfers, may be estopped from denying authority to deal with them (Bentinck v. London Bank, [1893] 2 Ch. 120; see Robinson v. Montgomeryshire, [1896] 2 Ch. 841; Bechuanaland v. London Bank, [1898] 2 Q. B. 658). So also a man who leaves in the hands of his solicitor a mortgage deed executed by himself and containing a receipt for the money (King v. Smith, [1900] 2 Ch. 425; compare Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249). But where the secretary of a company acted outside the scope of his agency, the company was not estopped (Whitechurch v. Cavanagh, [1902] A. C. 117; Ruben v. Great Fingall, [1906] A. C. 439). A person having notice of an agent's want of authority was estopped by his own negligence in dealing with him (Jacobs v. Morris, [1902] 1 Ch. 830).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 20.

Miscellaneous cases of estoppel.

A warehouseman who attorned to a purchaser was held to be estopped from denying the latter's title (Henderson & Co. v. Williams, [1895] 1 Q. B. 521; see Ross v. Edwards, 73 L. T. 100). As to estoppel in case of delivery orders, see Union Credit Bank v. Mersey Board ([1899] 2 Q. B. 205); in case of bills of exchange, see Scholfield v. Londesborough ([1896] A. C. 514); and in case of a customer who withholds from his bankers information about forged cheques, see M'Kenzie v. British Linen Co. (6 App. Cas. 82); Ogilvie v. West Australian Corporation ([1896] A. C. 257).

The Court refused to apply equitable estoppel in favour of a volunteer (Lovett v. L., [1898] 1 Ch. 82); or to permit a married woman's restrained property to be bound by estoppel (Bateman v. Faber, Ib. 149).

Extent of the estate created by a tenant in tail by way of mortgage, or for any other limited purpose.

21. Provided always, that if a tenant in tail of lands shall make a disposition of the same under this Act by way of mortgage, or for any other limited purpose, then and in such case such disposition shall, to the extent of the estate thereby created, be an absolute bar in equity as well as at law to all persons as against whom such disposition is by this Act authorized to be made, notwithstanding any intention to the contrary may be expressed or implied in the deed by which the disposition may be effected: provided always, that if the estate created by such disposition shall be only an estate pur autre vie, or for years absolute or determinable, or if, by a disposition under this Act by a tenant in tail of lands, an interest, charge, lien, or incumbrance shall be created without a term of years absolute or determinable, or any greater estate for securing or raising the same, then such disposition shall in equity be a bar only so far as may be necessary to give full effect to the mortgage, or to such other limited purpose, or to such interest, lien, charge, or incumbrance, notwithstanding any intention to the contrary may be expressed or implied in the deed by which the disposition may be effected.

Effect of this section.

This section was intended to put an end to such questions as arose in Jackson v. Innes (1 Bligh. 104), as to whether an equity of redemption was resettled by the mortgage deed (Plomley v. Felton, 14 App. Cas. 66).

By this section, if a tenant in tail makes a mortgage in fee with a proviso for redemption in the usual form, he will thenceforth be entitled to the equity of redemption discharged from the entail; but if he creates an estate pur autre vie, or for years only, or an "interest, charge, or incumbrance," without a term of years, by way of mortgage, the entail will be affected only to the extent of the charge, although there be an express declaration that the deed shall operate as a complete bar (see 1 Hayes, Conv. 183; 9 Bythewood & Jarm. Conv. 404, 405). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 21.

Where a tenant in tail subject to charges for portions was lunatic, the Court directed the charges to be raised by a mortgage for a term of years without a power of sale (Re Pares, 2 Ch. D. 61; and see S. C., 12 Ch. D. 333). But it cannot authorise a mortgage of the interest of an infant tenant in tail in remainder for raising maintenance (Re Hambrough, H. v. H., [1909] 2 Ch. 620).

Mortgage of entailed copyholds.

It seems that if a legal tenant in tail of copyholds mortgaged by conditional surrender which was not followed by admittance, but the money was paid off and the surrender vacated by the entry of satisfaction, the estate tail remained unaffected; but that the estate tail would be barred if the surrender were followed by admittance (see Davidson, Mortgages, 4th ed. 39).

Interest, charge, lien or incumbrance.

Interest, charges, liens or incumbrances may be created by a tenant in tail under the Act; but they must be created, and not left to rest in contract (Sugd. R. P. Stat. 197). Sect. 40 (post) expressly requires in every case a formal legal assurance; it would seem, therefore, that the words "interest, charge, lien or incumbrance," do not include an equitable mortgage by mere deposit of title deeds.

Equitable mortgages.

3. Definition of the Protector.

The owner of the first existing estate under a settlement, prior to the estate tail under the same settlement, to be the protector of the settlement.

22. If at the time when there shall be a tenant in tail of lands under a settlement there shall be subsisting in the same lands or any of them, under the same settlement, any estate for years determinable on the dropping of a life or lives, or any greater estate (not being an estate for years), prior to the estate tail, then, the person who shall be the owner of the prior estate, or the first of such prior estates, if more than one, then subsisting under the same settlement, or who would have been so if no absolute disposition thereof had been made (the first of such prior estates, if more than one, being for all the purposes of this Act deemed the prior estate), shall be the protector of the settlement so far as regards the lands in which such prior estate shall be subsisting, and shall for all the purposes of this Act be deemed the owner of such prior estate, although the same may have been charged or incumbered either by the owner thereof or by the settlor, or otherwise howsoever, and although the whole of the rents and profits be exhausted or required for the payment of the charges and incumbrances on such prior estate, and although such prior estate may have been absolutely disposed of by the owner thereof, or by or in consequence of the bankruptcy or insolvency of such owner, or by any other act or default of such owner; and that an estate by the curtesy, in respect of the estate tail, or of any prior estate created by the same settlement, shall be deemed a prior estate under the same settlement within the meaning of this clause; and that an estate by way of resulting use or trust to or for the settlor shall be deemed an estate under the same settlement within the meaning of this clause.

In cases of Lunacy the Lord Chancellor is protector (see post, ss. 33, 48). Where there is a tenant in tail in possession and a tenant in tail in remainder under the same settlement, the tenant in tail in possession is the protector as to the tenant in tail in remainder (Re Blewitt, 6 D. M. & G. 187).

Where the owner of the only prior estate holds under a different settlement from the tenant in tail, he is not the protector (Berrington v. Scott, 32 L. T. 125). The owner of the prior estate referred to in this section is the owner of the beneficial interest (Re Dudson, 8 Ch. D. 632; compare Clarke v. Chamberlain, 16 Ch. D. 176; Re Hughes, [1906] 2 Ch. 642). Thus, where an equity of redemption was limited to trustees in trust for A for life, with remainder to the use of B in tail, A was the protector, not the trustees (Re Dudson, supra; compare the old law of recoveries, 2nd ed., pp. 268, 273). So, where lands were devised to trustee for a term on trust to pay an annuity, and manage the estate, and pay the surplus to A, who was also the life tenant, subject to the term, A was the protector (Re Ainslie, A. v. A., 54 L. J. Ch. 8). Where, however, a trustee is given an estate during the life of a person on trust to pay the rents to the settlor's creditors, it was said that the trustee would be the protector (Re Dudson, 8 Ch. D. 633).

Where land was devised to trustees during certain lives on trusts for accumulation, which became avoided under the Thellusson Act (see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 164, post), there was after the avoidance no protector. The trustees had no beneficial interest. And as to the heir (1) he was excluded by sect. 27; (2) he did not claim under a "resulting use or trust," nor could he be said to take "under the same settlement" (Re Hughes, [1906] 2 Ch. 642). Compare as to the last point, Vine v. Raleigh, [1896] 1 Ch. 37, quoted under sects. 1 and 20 of S. L. Act, 1925, post. Where lands were vested in trustees for a term of 99 years if A should so long live on trusts for management, &c., with remainders in tail male, it was held that there was no protector (Re Jenkins, [1917] 1 Ch. 46).

An instance of a "resulting use" will be found in Lynch v. Clarkin, [1900] 1 I. R. 178. The Statute of Uses was repealed by L. P. Act, 1925, post.

Each of two or more owners of a prior estate to be the sole protector as to his share.

23. Provided always, that where two or more persons shall be owners, under a settlement, within the meaning of this Act, of a prior estate, the sole owner of which estate, if there had been only one, would in respect thereof have been the protector of such settlement, each of such persons, in respect of such undivided share as he could dispose of, shall for all the purposes of this Act be deemed the owner of a prior estate, and shall, in exclusion of the other or others of them, be the sole protector of such settlement to the extent of such undivided share.

Where A had for life one-fifth of an estate with a remainder in tail in one-fifth, and had also one-fourth of another fifth for life, with a more remote remainder in tail in one-fourth of one-fifth, he was protector of the identical undivided share of which he was tenant in tail, and not merely protector of an equivalent aliquot share of the estate (Tufnell v. Borrell, 20 Eq. 196). See Church v. Edwards, 2 Br. C. C. 180; Oakley v. Smith, Amb. 90; 3 Prest. Conv. 90 et seq. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 23.

24. Provided always, that where a married woman would, if single, be the protector of a settlement in respect of a prior estate, which is not thereby settled, or agreed or directed to be settled, to her separate use, she and her husband together shall in respect of such estate be the protector of such settlement, and shall be deemed one owner; but if such prior estate shall by such settlement have been settled, or agreed or directed to be settled to her separate use, then and in such case she alone shall in respect of such estate be the protector of such settlement. Where a married woman alone shall be the protector, and where she and her husband together shall be protector.

See Keer v. Brown (Johns. 138). Where several persons constitute the protector, the term protector is applicable equally to the entire body and to each individual (Re Wainwright, 1 Phill. 258; see Re Bayley Worthington and Cohen, [1908] 1 Ch. 30). In the case of disentailments after 1882, a married woman is alone protector in respect of a prior estate made separate by M. W. P. Act, 1882 (M. W. P. Act, 1907, sect. 3, post).

25. Provided always, that, except in the case of a lease hereinafter provided for, where an estate shall be limited by a settlement by way of confirmation, or where the settlement shall merely have the effect of restoring an estate, in either of those cases such estate shall for the purposes of this Act, so far as regards the protector of the settlement, be deemed an estate subsisting under such settlement. As to estates confirmed or restored by settlement.

26. Provided always, that where a lease at a rent shall be created or confirmed by a settlement, the person in whose favour such lease shall be created or confirmed, shall not in respect thereof be the protector of such settlement. As to leases at rent created by settlement.

27. Provided always, that [no woman in respect of her dower, and] (except in the case hereinafter provided for of a bare trustee under a settlement made on or before the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three), no bare trustee, heir, executor, administrator or assign, in respect to any estate taken by him as such bare trustee, heir, executor, administrator or assign, shall be the protector of a settlement. No tenant in dower, heir, executor, &c., to be protector, except in the case of a bare trustee.

There is a discrepancy between this date and the date given in sect. 31 (August 28, 1833). It seems doubtful which enactment must control the other (1 Hayes, Conv. 180, 5th ed.; Sugd. R. P. Stat. 203). See as to this section the argument in Re Dudson, 8 Ch. D. 628, and Re Hughes, [1906] 2 Ch. 642, ante, p. 322. The bracketed words were repealed by the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post; as to cases where the death occurred after December 31, 1925, dower being abolished in those cases by sect. 45 of the same Act.

Who shall be the protector where the owner of the prior estate shall by the two last clauses, be excluded.

28. Provided always, that where under any settlement there shall be more than one estate prior to an estate tail, and the person who shall be the owner within the meaning of this Act of any such prior estate, in respect of which but for the two last preceding clauses, or either of them, he would have been the protector of the settlement, shall by virtue of such clauses, or either of them, be excluded from being the protector, then and in such case the person (if any) who, if such estate did not exist, would be the protector of the settlement, shall be such protector.

See Re Dudson (8 Ch. D. 633).

[Sections 29 to 31 (for which see the 2nd ed. of this work, pp. 288-89) were repealed as obsolete by the Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1924. They related to settlements made before 1834.]

Power to any settlor to appoint the protector.

32. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any settlor entailing lands to appoint, by the settlement by which the lands shall be entailed, any number of persons in esse, not exceeding three, and not being aliens, to be protector of the settlement in lieu of the person who would have been the protector if this clause had not been inserted, and either for the whole or any part of the period for which such person might have continued protector, and by means of a power to be inserted in such settlement to perpetuate, during the whole or any part of such period, the protectorship of the settlement in any one person or number of persons in esse, and not being an alien or aliens, whom the donee of the power shall think proper by deed to appoint protector of the settlement in the place of any one person or number of persons who shall die or shall by deed relinquish his or their office of protector; and the person or persons so appointed shall, in case of there being no other person then protector of the settlement, be the protector, and shall, in case of there being any other person then protector of the settlement, be protector jointly with such other person: provided nevertheless, that by virtue or means of any such appointment, the number of the persons to compose the protector shall never exceed three: provided further nevertheless, that every deed by which a protector shall be appointed under a power in a settlement, and every deed by which a protector shall relinquish his office, shall be void unless inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery within six calendar months after the execution thereof: provided further nevertheless, that the person who but for this clause would have been sole protector of the settlement, may be one of the persons to be appointed protector under this clause, if the settlor shall think fit, and shall, unless otherwise directed by the settlor, act as sole protector, if the other persons constituting the protector shall have ceased to be so by death or relinquishment of the office by deed, and no other person shall have been appointed in their place.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 32.

This section is repealed by the L. P. Act, 1925, post, as respects settlements made or coming into operation after 31st December, 1925.

Trustee of executory settlement a settlor within this section.

The trustee of an executory settlement is a settlor within this section of the Act, and as such is entitled to appoint a protector at his discretion. A protector should not be appointed by the Court, unless upon a special case (Bankes v. Le Despencer, 11 Sim. 527). If all the persons appointed under this section die, the owner of the first life estate is protector (Clarke v. Chamberlin, 16 Ch. D. 176). If one of them die the survivors can act as protector (Bell v. Holtby, 15 Eq. 178). And this rule was not altered by a power in the settlement to appoint protectors to fill up vacancies "to the intent that the full number of three persons might from time to time fill the office" (Cohen v. Bayley Worthington, [1908] A. C. 97). The final proviso in the section only applies when the "natural protector" is included in the persons appointed protectors (Ib. 99).

In cases of lunacy, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, or Lords Commissioners, or other persons entrusted with lunatics, or in cases of treason or felony, &c., the Court of Chancery to be the protector.

33. Provided always, that if any person, protector of a settlement, shall be a lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, and whether he shall have been found such by inquisition or not, then the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, or the Lord Keeper or the Lords Commissioners for the custody of the great seal of Great Britain for the time being or other the person or persons for the time being entrusted by the King's sign manual with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot, and of unsound mind, shall be the protector of such settlement in lieu of the person who shall be such lunatic or idiot, or of unsound mind as aforesaid (i); or if any person, protector of a settlement, shall be convicted of treason or felony, or if any person not being the owner of a prior estate under a settlement shall be protector of such settlement, and shall be an infant, or if it shall be uncertain whether such last-mentioned person be living or dead, then his Majesty's High Court of Chancery shall be the protector of such settlement in lieu of the person who shall be an infant, or whose existence cannot be ascertained as aforesaid (k); or if any settlor entailing lands shall in the settlement by which the lands shall be entailed, declare that the person who as owner of a prior estate under such settlement would be entitled to be protector of the settlement, shall not be such protector, and shall not appoint any person to be protector in his stead, then the said Court of Chancery shall, as to the lands in which such prior estate shall be subsisting, be the protector of the settlement during the continuance of such estate; or if in any other case where there shall be subsisting under a settlement an estate prior to an estate tail under the same settlement, and such prior estate shall be sufficient to qualify the owner thereof to be protector of the settlement, and there shall happen at any time to be no protector of the settlement as to the lands in which the prior estate shall be subsisting, the said Court of Chancery shall, while there shall be no such protector, and the prior estate shall be subsisting, be the protector of the settlement as to such lands.

(i) As to the persons by whom the jurisdiction here conferred on the Lord Chancellor can be exercised, see Lunacy Act, 1890, s. 108.

The Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, and not the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, was held to be the protector of a settlement in the place of a lunatic of estates situate in Wales, although the party was resident in Ireland, and had been found lunatic by inquisition issued by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland (Re Graydon, 1 Mac. & G. 655). The cases as to the exercise by the Lord Chancellor of his power of consenting are stated in the note to sect. 48, post, p. 335.

(k) On the husband of a married woman, tenant for life under a settlement, being convicted of felony, the Court of Chancery becomes protector of the settlement (Re Wainwright, 1 Phill. C. C. 258). There is an omission in this section of the case of a person convicted of treason or felony. But the omission must be supplied by implication, otherwise no effect can be given to the previous words, "if any person, protector of a settlement, shall be convicted of treason or felony" (Ib. pp. 261, 262).

As to the form of petition, evidence and order on an application to the Court to consent as a protector of a settlement to the barring of an entail, see Re Gravenor (1 De G. & S. 700; Seton, 7th ed., 1715).

4. Powers of the Protector.

Where there is a protector, his consent requisite to enable an actual tenant in tail to create a larger estate than a base fee.

34. Provided always, that if at the time when any person, actual tenant in tail of lands under a settlement, but not entitled to the remainder or reversion in fee immediately expectant on the determination of his estate tail, shall be desirous of making under this Act a disposition of the lands entailed, there shall be a protector of such settlement, then and in every such case the consent of such protector shall be requisite to enable such actual tenant in tail to dispose of the lands entailed to the full extent to which he is hereinbefore authorised to dispose of the same; but such actual tenant in tail may, without such consent, make a disposition under this Act of the lands entailed, which shall be good against all persons who, by force of any estate tail which shall be vested in or might be claimed by, or which but for some previous act or default would have been vested in or might have been claimed by, the person making the disposition at the time of his making the same, shall claim the lands entailed.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 34.

Advantage of consent to a conveyance.

Formerly, where an estate tail was being barred, a tenant for life was a conveying, not merely a consenting, party, which occasioned inconvenience; as to which, see Co. Litt. 203 b, n. by Butl.; 1 Prest. Conv. 107—118; 2 Sand. on Uses, 207, 4th ed.; Pelham's Case (1 Rep. 14 b); Smith v. Clifford (1 T. R. 738); Doe v. Mulgrave (5 T. R. 320); Jersey v. Deane (5 B. & Ald. 575); Roper v. Halifax (8 Taunt. 845); Doe v. Scarborough (3 Ad. & Ell. 43); Tyrrell v. Marsh (3 Bing. 31); Sug. Pow. 71—78, 8th ed.

Where in a settlement there was a power of sale and exchange with the assent of the tenant for life, her concurrence in a disentailing deed did not prevent her assenting to a subsequent exercise of the power (Hill v. Pritchard, Kay, 394).

Vesting order.

Where there is an adult tenant for life, and an infant tenant in tail, a vesting order under the Trustee Act, 1925, will, if the protector consents to it, bar all estates in remainder, and not pass a base fee only under the Act (Powell v. Matthews, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 973; Re Montagu, Faber v. M., [1896] 1 Ch. 549, where see form of order; see also Re Hambrough, H. v. H., [1909] 2 Ch. 620).

Where a base fee and a protector, his consent requisite to the exercising of a power of disposition.

35. Provided always, that where an estate tail shall have been converted into a base fee, in such case, so long as there shall be a protector of the settlement by which the estate tail was created, the consent of such protector shall be requisite to enable the person who would have been tenant of the estate tail, if the same had not been barred, to exercise, as to the lands, in respect of which there shall be such protector, the power of disposition hereinbefore contained.

The protector to be subject to no control in the exercise of his power of consenting.

36. Any device, shift, or contrivance, by which it shall be attempted to control the protector of a settlement in giving his consent, or to prevent him in any way from using his absolute discretion in regard to his consent, and also any agreement entered into by the protector of a settlement to withhold his consent, shall be void; and the protector of a settlement shall not be deemed to be a trustee in respect of his power of consent; and a court of equity shall not control or interfere to restrain the exercise of his power of consent, nor treat his giving consent as a breach of trust.

It seems that a contract under seal by a protector to give his consent might be such a consent as is required by the Act (Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 724). It has been said that this section enables a protector to act from mere caprice, ill-will, or any bad motive (Bankes v. Le Despencer, 11 Sim. 527).

Certain rules of equity not to apply between the protector and a tenant in tail under the same.

37. Provided always, that the rules of equity in relation to dealings and transactions between the donee of a power and any object of the power in whose favour the same may be exercised, shall not be held to apply to dealings and transactions between the protector of a settlement and a tenant in tail under the same settlement, upon the occasion of the protector giving his consent to a disposition by a tenant in tail under this Act.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 37.

The rules of equity as to frauds on powers were not extended to the case of a tenant in tail in remainder joining with his father, a tenant for life, in suffering a recovery and resettling the estate, although an immediate benefit was conferred on the son as a consideration for his barring the entail (Tweddell v. Tweddell, T. & R. 1; Davis v. Uphill, 1 Sw. 129). As to the circumstances under which a tenant in tail in remainder can sue to set aside a disentailing deed alleged to have been made in fraud, see Bellamy v. Sabine, 2 Phill. 425; Cornewall v. Prioleau, 20 Times L. R. 606.

Frauds on powers.

Corrupt bargain.

The rules of equity above referred to are rules relating to special or limited powers. According to these rules an appointment under a power is invalid where the appointee has agreed with the appointor that a benefit shall thereby accrue to the appointor (Marlborough v. Godolphin, 2 Ves. sen. 70; Boyle v. Peterborough, 1 Ves. 310; Farmer v. Martin, 2 Sim. 502; Arnold v. Hardwich, 7 Sim. 343), or to a stranger to the power (Pryor v. Pryor, 2 D. J. & S. 205; Salmon v. Gibbs, 3 D. G. & S. 343; Birley v. B., 25 Beav. 299; Re Kirwan, 25 Ch. D. 373; Crawshay v. C., 43 Ch. D. 624; Re Wright, Hagan v. Bloor, [1920] 1 Ch. 108). A mere suspicion, however, of a corrupt agreement will not be sufficient to invalidate an appointment (Palmer v. Locke, 15 Ch. D. 300; Hamilton v. Kirwan, 2 Jo. & Lat. 393). Again, an appointment will not be invalidated (1) by the mere fact of a bargain between the appointor and appointee (Langston v. Blackmore, Amb. 288; Roach v. Trood, 3 Ch. D. 429; see Cooper v. C., 5 Ch. 203), as where the bargain did not induce the appointment (Re Turner, 28 Ch. D. 205), or where the bargain related to a jointure which was not thereby diverted from the wife (Saunders v. Shafto, [1905] 1 Ch. 126). Nor will an appointment be invalidated (2) by a bargain between the appointor and all the objects of the power, being sui juris (Davis v. Uphill, 1 Sw. 136); or (3) by reason of the appointor having covenanted to appoint (Bulteel v. Plummer, 6 Ch. 160; Palmer v. Locke, 15 Ch. D. 294; Robinson v. Ommanney, 21 Ch. D. 780). In some cases an appointment to a stranger may be valid if made with the assent of an object of the power; as where it can be considered as in effect an appointment to an object and a settlement by that object (Daniel v. Arkwright, 2 H. & M. 95; Wright v. Goff, 22 Beav. 207; Goldsmid v. G., 2 Hare, 187). Where the invalidity arises by reason of a corrupt agreement, the appointment will be wholly bad, even as to the benefit appointed to an object (Jackson v. J., Dru. 113); unless some consideration (e.g., marriage) has been given which cannot be restored, when the appointment may be good as to the appointee (Daubeny v. Cockburn, 1 Mer. 643); or unless the honest part of the appointment can be separated from the dishonest part, when the former may be good (Topham v. Portland, 1 D. J. & S. 572; Viant v. Cooper, 76 L. T. 768). Where a corrupt appointment has been carried into effect, the appointor may be liable for loss to the trust estate (Re Deane, Bridger v. D., 42 Ch. D. 9).

Corrupt intention.

An appointment is void where there is no bargain, but it is clear that the appointor intends to benefit either himself (Henty v. Wrey, 21 Ch. D. 342; Wellesley v. Mornington, 2 K. & J. 143; Re Little, Harrison v. H., 40 Ch. D. 424; Re Cohen, Brookes v. C., [1911] 1 Ch. 37), or a stranger to the power (Re Marsden, 4 Drew. 594; see Topham v. Portland, 5 Ch. 40; Whelan v. Palmer, 39 Ch. D. 648; Re Perkins, P. v. Bagot, [1893] 1 Ch. 283; Re Buckley (1893), W. N. 95; but see Vatcher v. Paull, [1915] A. C. 372). A release of a power by the donee with a view to his own benefit is valid (Re Radcliffe, R. v. Bewes, [1892] 1 Ch. 227; Re Somes, Smith v. Somes, [1896] 1 Ch. 250; but see Re Jones' Settlement, Stunt v.

J., [1915] 1 Ch. 373). A bona fide appointment is not necessarily void merely because a benefit in fact accrues to the appointor (Henty v. Wrey, supra; Re Huish, 10 Eq. 5; Beere v. Hoffmeister, 23 Beav. 101), or to a stranger (Fearon v. Debrisay, 14 Beav. 635; Roach v. Trood, 3 Ch. D. 440). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 37.

A purchaser with notice of the invalidity of an appointment will not get a good title (Palmer v. Wheeler, 2 Ba. & Be. 18), nor will a purchaser without notice, in the case of an equitable interest (Daubeny v. Cockburn, 1 Mer. 626; Cloutte v. Storey, [1911] 1 Ch. 18; but see sect. 157 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post). But a mere suspicion of a fraudulent appointment is not a good objection by a purchaser to title (M'Queen v. Farquhar, 11 Ves. 467; Green v. Pulsford, 2 Beav. 70). Purchasers.

5. Confirmation of Voidable Estates created by Tenant in Tail.

A voidable estate by a tenant in tail, in favour of a purchaser, confirmed by a subsequent disposition of such tenant in tail under this Act, but not against a purchaser without notice.

38. Provided always, that when a tenant in tail of lands under a settlement, shall have already created or shall hereafter create in such lands, or any of them, a voidable estate, in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration, and shall afterwards under this Act, by any assurance other than a lease not requiring inrolment, make a disposition of the lands in which such voidable estate shall be created, or any of them, such disposition, whatever its object may be, and whatever may be the extent of the estate intended to be thereby created, shall, if made by the tenant in tail with the consent of the protector (if any) of the settlement, or by the tenant in tail alone, if there shall be no such protector, have the effect of confirming such voidable estate in the lands thereby disposed of to its full extent as against all persons except those whose rights are saved by this Act; but if at the time of making the disposition there shall be a protector of the settlement, and such protector shall not consent to the disposition, and the tenant in tail shall not without such consent be capable under this Act of confirming the voidable estate to its full extent, then and in such case such disposition shall have the effect of confirming such voidable estate so far as such tenant in tail would then be capable under this Act of confirming the same without such consent (l): provided always, that if such disposition shall be made to a purchaser for valuable consideration, who shall not have express notice of the voidable estate, then and in such case the voidable estate shall not be confirmed as against such purchaser and the persons claiming under him (m).

(l) The proviso in the corresponding clause in the Irish stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 36, is as follows: "provided always, that if such disposition shall be made to a purchaser for valuable consideration, who shall not have express notice of the voidable estate, and if the deed or instrument creating such voidable estate shall not have been registered previous to such disposition, then and in such case the voidable estate shall not be confirmed as against such purchaser and the persons claiming under him."

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 38.

Old rule as to the effect of recoveries in confirming prior acts of tenant in tail.

(m) If a tenant in tail who had executed any settlement, lease or mortgage, or created any charge or incumbrance by statute, judgment, or otherwise, affecting the entailed land, afterwards suffered a recovery, its effect was to confirm such prior acts, and to make the lands chargeable with them, although before they were defeasible by the issue (Capel's Case, 1 Rep. 60; S. C., Poph. 5, 6; Beck v. Welsh, 1 Wils. 277; Tourle v. Rand, 2 Bro. C. C. 652; Goodright v. Mead, 3 Burr. 1703; Cheney v. Hall, 3 Atk. 9; Ambl. 526; Stapleton v. S., 1 Atk. 2); but not if the settlement was voluntary (Cormick v. Trapaud, 6 Dow. 60). As to the similar effect of a fine in such a case, see Shelburne v. Biddulph (6 Br. P. C. 356, Toml. ed.); Symonds v. Cudmore (Show. 370; 1 Salk. 338; Skin. 284, 317, 328; 3 Salk. 335; Carth. 257; 12 Mod. 32; Holt, 666; 1 Freem. 503; 2 Atk. 204); see 7 Ves. 497; Lloyd v. L. (4 Dru. & War. 374); Browne v. Blake (1 Molloy, 368).

Effect of fines.

Cases on s. 38.

Where after this statute A tenant in tail in remainder created a common law base fee (see ante, p. 307) in favour of a purchaser for value, and then became bankrupt, but the commissioners did not bar the entail, a disentailing deed subsequently executed by A was held to confirm the common law base fee under this section (Hankey v. Martin, 49 L. T. 560).

The proviso at the end of this section does not require that the disentailing instrument should pass the estate to the purchaser. It is sufficient if the instrument forms part of a transaction in respect of which the person claiming the benefit of the proviso is a purchaser (Crocker v. Waine, 5 B. & S. 697).

6. Enlargement of Base Fees.

Base fee, when united with the immediate reversion, enlarged, instead of being merged.

39. If a base fee in any lands, and the remainder or reversion in fee in the same lands, shall at the time of the passing of this Act, or at any time afterwards, be united in the same person, and at any time after the passing of this Act there shall be no intermediate estate between the base fee and the remainder or reversion, then and in such case the base fee shall not merge, but shall be ipso facto enlarged into as large an estate as a tenant in tail, with the consent of the protector, if any, might have created by any disposition under this Act if such remainder or reversion had been vested in any other person.

Merger of base fees.

"If a tenant in tail, claiming the immediate remainder or reversion in fee, bars his estate tail by means of a fine instead of a recovery, he frequently prejudices his title by merging in the remainder or reversion the base fee acquired by the fine, as he thereby not only lets in all the charges and estates made and created by the persons through whom he derived the remainder or reversion, but also renders it necessary, afterwards, to make out his title to the remainder or reversion, which, in many instances, is attended with great difficulty and expense" (1 Real Property Report, p. 28; but see Sperling v. Trevor, 7 Ves. 497). This difficulty is removed by this section.

Merger of estates tail.

Estates tail were an exception to the ordinary rule as to merger (see as to this sect. 185 of L. P. Act, 1925, and note, post). Thus where an estate tail in freeholds and the reversion in fee vested in the same person, the estate tail was by the operation of the statute De Donis kept alive and did not merge (Roe v. Baldmere, 5 T. R. 109; 2 Rep. 61; Foxwell v. Van Grutten, [1897] A. C. 679); secus, in the case of copyholds, Parker v. Turner, 1 Vern. 458; Dunn v. Green, 2 P. W. 9. If, however, a tenant in tail with a reversion in fee to himself, levied a fine, the effect was to create a base fee, which merged in the other fee, and let in all the incumbrances of the ancestor (Shelburne v. Biddulph, 6 Br. P. C. 356; Foxwell v. Van Grutten, supra). An estate tail after possibility of issue extinct was merged by the acquisition of the fee (Co. Litt. 27 b; see 3 Preston Conv. 240). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 39.

7. Modes in which Dispositions of Land under this Act by Tenants in Tail are to be effected.

Tenant in tail to make a disposition by deed as if seised in fee, but not by will or contract; and if a married woman, with her husband's concurrence.

40. Every disposition of lands under this Act by a tenant in tail thereof shall be effected by some one of the assurances (not being a will) by which such tenant in tail could have made the disposition if his estate were an estate at law in fee simple absolute: provided, nevertheless, that no disposition by a tenant in tail shall be of any force either at law or in equity under this Act, unless made or evidenced by deed; and that no disposition by a tenant in tail resting only in contract either express or implied, or otherwise, and whether supported by a valuable or meritorious consideration or not, shall be of any force at law or in equity under this Act, notwithstanding such disposition shall be made or evidenced by deed (n); and if the tenant in tail making the disposition shall be a married woman, the concurrence of her husband shall be necessary to give effect to the same; and any deed which may be executed by her for effecting the disposition shall be acknowledged by her as hereinafter directed (o).

Old rule as to effect of contracts by tenant in tail.

(n) This section adopts an established rule that the issue in tail was not bound, either at law or in equity, to complete contracts made by his ancestor, respecting the entailed land, because the issue claims by a paramount title per formam doni, from the creator of the estate tail, and not from his own ancestors (3 Rep. 41 b; 1 P. Wms. 271; 2 Ves. sen. 634; Hob. 203; 1 Ch. Cas. 171; 2 Ventr. 350; 1 Lev. 237; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 28, pl. 34; Att.-Gen. v. Day, 1 Ves. sen. 218). Such rule applied, although the ancestor had received the whole purchase-money, and a decree had been made to levy a fine (Prec. Ch. 278; 2 Vern. 306; Gilb. Eq. R. 104; 1 Ves. sen. 224; see Franks v. Mainwaring, 2 Beav. 115); and even where tenant in tail, in pursuance of a covenant had acknowledged a fine, but died before it was perfected (2 Vern. 3). The rule was applicable to copyholds, and to equitable tenants in tail of lands whether freehold or copyhold (see Sugd. V. & P. 227, 11th ed.; 1 Prest. Conv. 153).

Effect of this section upon contracts by tenant in tail.

There is nothing in this section to affect contracts as such. Therefore, although they will not bar the entail under the Act, nor can equity give to them that operation, yet they may be recovered upon at law, or be the foundation of a specific performance against the tenant in tail. Thus the Court will decree, as against the tenant in tail, specific performance of a contract for disentailment entered into by him with a purchaser (Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 716; see Davis v. Tollemache, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1181). Where a tenant in tail of copyholds deposited his title deeds with an agreement to "make a formal surrender" to secure a loan, a remainderman who joined in the deposit was held bound to carry out the agreement (Bryce v. Bury, 2 Drew. 11). See further the note to sect. 47, post; and Sugd. R. P. Stat. 197, 2nd ed.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 40.

No particular form of disentailing deed necessary.

No particular form of disentailing deed is necessary; any deed which by its legal operation would have conveyed the fee simple, if the grantor had been seised in fee, will, if executed by a tenant in tail in possession and duly inrolled, bar the entail (Nelson v. Agnew, I. R. 6 Eq. 232). The word "disposition" is not a technical word; but in this section it is limited to such an instrument inter vivos as would be effectual to pass a legal estate in fee simple (Carter v. C., [1896] 1 Ch. 67, 69). Accordingly in this section the word does not include a mere declaration of trust (Green v. Paterson, 32 Ch. D. 108), secus in sect. 77, post (Carter v. C., supra). As to the form of disentailing assurance necessary under this Act, see further, 1 Hayes, Conv. 154 et seq. As to the effect of an order under the Trustee Act, 1893 (see now Trustee Act, 1925, s. 49, post), vesting the estate of an infant tenant in tail, see Re Montagu, Faber v. M. ([1896] 1 Ch. 549), and cases there cited; Re Hambrough, H. v. H. ([1909] 2 Ch. 620). Forms of disentailing assurances will be found in 3 Davidson, Conv. 1166 et seq.

Where a disentailing deed operates as a common law grant, and not by the Statute of Uses, it must be executed by the grantees; if not, it may be rendered inoperative by the subsequent disclaimer by the grantees (Peacock v. Eastland, 10 Eq. 21). But where the disentailing deed operated by the Statute of Uses, it was not necessary that it should be executed by the grantees to uses, and a subsequent disclaimer by them would not affect the operation of the deed (Nelson v. Agnew, supra; Re Dudson, 8 Ch. D. 631). As to the distinction between common law assurances, and assurances under the Statute of Uses, see further Savill v. Bethell, [1902] 2 Ch. 540; Mallott v. Wilson, [1903] 2 Ch. 494. See now sects. 1 and 4 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, by which Act the Stat. of Uses is repealed.

Acknowledgment by married woman, tenant in tail, need not precede inrolment.

(o) In the case of a married woman tenant in tail, it was not necessary that the acknowledgment should precede the inrolment (Ex parte Tavener, 7 De G. M. & G. 627). Now by sect. 167 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, acknowledgment is unnecessary in the case of deeds executed after December 31, 1925; and where the Court dispenses with the husband's concurrence under sect. 91, post, it may by the order declare, as to separate property, that the disposition shall take effect as if the husband had concurred. Independently of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, the concurrence of the husband was held necessary in the case of separate property (Cooper v. Macdonald, 7 Ch. D. 295). The husband might concur, though a discharged bankrupt (ibid., 298). But in the case of women married since 1882, or of property acquired by a married woman since 1882, no concurrence or acknowledgment is necessary (Re Drummond and Davie, [1891] 1 Ch. 531).

[Sect. 41, requiring the inrolment within six months after execution of assurances by tenants in tail, is repealed by the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924. By sect. 133 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, inrolment is unnecessary in the case of assurances and instruments executed or made after December 31, 1925. A deed was valid if inrolled within the six months, even after the death of the tenant in tail (Whitmore Searle v. W. S., [1907] 2 Ch. 332).]

42. The consent of the protector of a settlement to the disposition under this Act of a tenant in tail shall be given either by the same assurance by which the disposition shall be effected, or by a deed distinct from the assurance, and to be executed either on or at any time before the day on which the assurance shall be made, otherwise the consent shall be void. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 42.

Consent of the protector to be given by the same assurance or by a distinct deed.

Where the tenant in tail and the protector were both made parties to a disentailing deed and, the tenant in tail having executed the deed and died, the protector subsequently executed it, the bar was effectual (Whitmore Searle v. W. S., [1907] 2 Ch. 332).

43. If the protector of a settlement shall, by a distinct deed, give his consent to the disposition of a tenant in tail, it shall be considered that such protector has given an absolute and unqualified consent, unless in such deed he shall refer to the particular assurance by which the disposition shall be effected, and shall confine his consent to the disposition thereby made.

If by distinct deed, to be considered unqualified, unless he refer to the assurance.

A contract under seal by a protector to give his consent might amount to a consent within the Act (Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 724).

44. It shall not be lawful for the protector of a settlement who under this Act shall have given his consent to the disposition of a tenant in tail, to revoke such consent.

Protector not to revoke his consent.

45. Any married woman, being either alone or jointly with her husband protector of a settlement, may under this Act, in the same manner as if she were a feme sole, give her consent to the disposition of a tenant in tail.

A married woman protector to consent as a feme sole.

47. In cases of dispositions of lands under this Act by tenants in tail thereof, and also in cases of consents by protectors of settlements to dispositions of lands under this Act by tenants in tail thereof, the jurisdiction of courts of equity shall be altogether excluded, either on the behalf of a person claiming for a valuable or meritorious consideration, or not, in regard to the specific performance of contracts, and the supplying of defects in the execution either of the powers of disposition given by this Act to tenants in tail, or of the powers of consent given by this Act to protectors of settlements, and the supplying under any circumstances of the want of execution of such powers of disposition and consent respectively, and in regard to giving effect in any other manner to any act or deed by Courts of equity excluded from giving any effect to dispositions by tenants in tail, or consents of protectors of settlements, which in Courts of law would not be effectual.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 47.

a tenant in tail or protector of a settlement which in a court of law would not be an effectual disposition or consent under this Act; and that no disposition of lands under this Act by a tenant in tail thereof in equity, and no consent by a protector of a settlement to a disposition of lands under this Act by a tenant in tail thereof in equity, shall be of any force unless such disposition or consent would, in case of an estate tail at law, be an effectual disposition or consent under this Act in a court of law.

This section prevents the Court from holding that a contract to disentail is, as against the issue in tail and remaindermen, as effectual as if a disentailing deed had been executed; or from remedying any defects in the execution of a deed intended to bar an estate tail (Bankes v. Small, 36 Ch. D. 723; see Mills v. Fox, 37 Ch. D. 162). But the section does not prevent the Court from ordering, as against a tenant in tail, specific performance of a contract for disentailment entered into by him with a purchaser (Bankes v. Small, supra; see Petre v. Duncombe, 7 Hare, 24; Re Montagu, Faber v. M., [1896] 1 Ch. 549). An infant has been ordered under Debts Recovery Act, 1830, s. 11, to execute a disentailing deed (Radcliffe v. Eccles, 1 Keen, 130; see Hargreaves v. Wright, 1 W. R. 408). To give effect to an election an infant tenant in tail was declared a trustee and a person was appointed to convey his estate so as to bar the entail (Re Montagu, Faber v. M., [1896] 1 Ch. 549; see Re Hambrough, H. v. H., [1909] 2 Ch. 620). As to lunatics, see ante, p. 312. Under the ordinary covenant, however, to settle after-acquired property a married woman cannot be compelled to execute a disentailing deed (Re Dunsany, Nott v. D., [1906] 1 Ch. 578, approving Hilbers v. Parkinson, 25 Ch. D. 200; see Re Anstis, Chetwynd v. Morgan, 31 Ch. D. 605; Mills v. Fox, 37 Ch. D. 162; Dering v. Kynaston, 6 Eq. 210). The above section does not prevent the rectification, on the ground of mistake, of a deed enrolled under the Act (Hall-Dare v. H.-D., 31 Ch. D. 251; Meeking v. M., [1917] 1 Ch. 77).

Lord Chancellor, &c., to have the power to consent to a disposition by a tenant in tail, and to make such orders as shall be thought necessary; and if any other person shall be joint protector, the disposition not to be valid without his consent.

48. Provided always, that in every case in which the Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners for the custody of the great seal, or other the person or persons entrusted with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot and of unsound mind, or his Majesty's High Court of Chancery, shall be the protector of a settlement, such Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Lords Commissioners, or person or persons so entrusted as aforesaid (p), or the said Court of Chancery (as the case may be), while protector of such settlement, shall, on the motion or petition in a summary way by a tenant in tail under such settlement, have full power to consent to a disposition under this Act by such tenant in tail, and the disposition to be made by such tenant in tail upon such motion or petition as aforesaid shall be such as shall be approved of by such Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners, or person or persons so entrusted as aforesaid, or the said Court of Chancery (as the case may be); and it shall be lawful for such Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Lords Commissioners, or person or persons so entrusted as aforesaid, or the said Court of Chancery (as the case may be), to make such orders in the matter as shall be thought necessary (q); and if such Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper, or Lords Commissioners, or person or persons so entrusted as aforesaid, or the said Court of Chancery (as the case may be), shall, in lieu of any such person as aforesaid, be the protector of a settlement, and there shall be any other person protector of the same settlement jointly with such person as aforesaid, then and in every such case the disposition by the tenant in tail, though approved of as aforesaid, shall not be valid, unless such other person being protector as aforesaid shall consent thereto in the manner in which the consent of the protector is by this Act required to be given. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 43.

(q) The cases Re Blewitt (3 M. & K. 259); Re Wood (3 My. & Cr. 266); deciding that the Lord Chancellor has no jurisdiction where the tenant in tail in possession is a lunatic, have been overruled (Re Blewitt, 6 D. M. & G. 187; see note to sect. 22, ante).

As protector of the settlement, the only duty of the Court is to see what, in reference to the interests of the family, it would be proper for the tenant for life to do; and the object must be rather to protect the objects of the settlement, than to benefit one member of the family to the exclusion of the others (Re Newman, 2 My. & Cr. 112). So, consent was refused to a disposition which would benefit the husband of the tenant in tail to the detriment of the brother of the lunatic (ibid.; Re Graydon, 1 Mac. & G. 655). Consent was also refused to the sale of the next presentation to a family living, the sale not being for the benefit of the lunatic tenant for life (Re Tharp, 3 Ch. D. 59). Consent, however, was given, for carrying out a reasonable arrangement likely to have been made by the lunatic (Re Blewitt, 6 D. M. & G. 198); also, for enabling a tenant in tail in remainder to secure by mortgage the repayment to the estate of a lunatic tenant for life of an allowance made to the tenant in tail out of the surplus income of the tenant for life (Re Sparrow, 20 Ch. D. 320; Re Beridge, 50 L. T. 653); also, for advancing a son of the lunatic (Grant v. Yea, 3 M. & K. 245). Cf. L. P. Act, 1925, s. 171.

49. Provided always, that in every case in which the Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners for the custody of the great seal, or other the person or persons intrusted with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind (r), or his Majesty's High Court of Chancery, shall be the protector of a settlement, no document or instrument, as evidence of the consent of such protector to the disposition of a tenant in tail under such settlement, shall be requisite beyond the order in obedience to which the disposition shall have been made. Order of the Lord Chancellor, &c., to be evidence of consent.

[Sections 50—54, relating to estates tail in copyholds (for which see the second edition of this work, pp. 302—305), were repealed by the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924, copyhold tenure being abolished as from January 1, 1926, by Part V. of the L. P. Act, 1922, and sect. 55 was repealed by the S. L. Rev. Act, 1874.]

8. Bankrupt's Estate Tail.

The commissioner, in the case of an actual tenant in tail becoming bankrupt after December 31, 1833, by deed to dispose of the lands of the bankrupt to a purchaser.

56. Any commissioner acting in the execution of any fiat which after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, shall be issued in pursuance of the said Act (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56), under which any person shall be adjudged a bankrupt who at the time of issuing such fiat, or at any time afterwards, before he shall have obtained his certificate, shall be an actual tenant in tail of lands of any tenure, shall by deed dispose of such lands to a purchaser for valuable consideration, for the benefit of the creditors of such actual tenant in tail, and shall create by any such disposition as large an estate in the lands disposed of as the actual tenant in tail, if he had not become bankrupt, could have done under this Act at the time of such disposition: provided always, that if at the time of the disposition of such lands, or any of them, by such commissioner as aforesaid, there shall be a protector of the settlement by which the estate of such actual tenant in tail in the lands disposed of by such commissioner was created, and the consent of such protector would have been requisite to have enabled the actual tenant in tail, if he had not become bankrupt, to have disposed of such lands to the full extent to which, if there had been no such protector, he could under this Act have disposed of the same, and such protector shall not consent to the disposition, then and in such case the estate created in such lands, or any of them, by the disposition of such commissioner, shall be as large an estate as the actual tenant in tail, if he had not become bankrupt, could at the time of such disposition have created under this Act in such lands without the consent of the protector.

Clauses in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, with respect to the disposition of estates tail under bankruptcies, extended to proceedings under subsequent bankruptcy Acts.

Sect. 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, re-enacting sect. 56 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, empowers the trustee of the bankrupt's estate to deal with any property to which the bankrupt is beneficially entitled as tenant in tail, in the same manner as the bankrupt might have dealt with the same. And the same section provides that sects. 56—73 (both inclusive) of the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, shall extend and apply to proceedings in bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, as if those sections were there re-enacted and made applicable in terms to such proceedings. (Parts of these sections have, however, been repealed by the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924, as noted under them.) In the absence of provisions of the above nature, the estate tail of a bankrupt could not have been reached (Sturgis v. Morse, 2 D. F. & J. 233; Re Gaskell & Walter, [1906] 1 Ch. 445). Compare the effect of the Forfeiture Act, 1870, where a tenant in tail is convicted of felony (Re Gaskell & Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 1). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 56.

Where in the case of copyholds, the entail in which by custom could not be barred until it fell into possession, the tenant in tail in remainder (who had become bankrupt) obtained his certificate and purchased from his assignees an estate in the copyhold to continue during his own life only, the assignees could not on the death of the original tenant for life bar the entail and acquire the ultimate remainder in fee (Johnson v. Smiley, 17 Beav. 223).

Commissioner in case of a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee becoming bankrupt, and of there being no protector, by deed to dispose of the lands of the bankrupt to a purchaser.

57. Any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid, under which any person shall be adjudged a bankrupt, who at the time of issuing such fiat, or at any time afterwards before he shall have obtained his certificate, shall be a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in lands of any tenure, shall by deed dispose of such lands to a purchaser for valuable consideration, for the benefit of the creditors of the person so entitled as aforesaid, provided at the time of the disposition there be no protector of the settlement by which the estate tail converted into the base fee was created; and by such disposition the base fee shall be enlarged into as large an estate as the same could at the time of such disposition have been enlarged into under this Act by the person so entitled if he had not become bankrupt.

As to the consent of the protector in case of bankruptcy.

58. The commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid under which a person being, or before obtaining the certificate becoming, an actual tenant in tail of lands of any tenure, or a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in lands of any tenure, shall be adjudged a bankrupt, shall, if there shall be a protector of the settlement by which the estate tail of such actual tenant in tail, or the estate tail converted into a base fee (as the case may be), was created, stand in the place of such actual tenant in tail, or tenant in tail so entitled as aforesaid, so far as regards the consent of such protector; and the disposition of such lands, or any of them, by such commissioner as aforesaid, if made with the consent of such protector, shall, whether such commissioner may have made under this Act a prior disposition of the same lands without the consent of such protector or not, or whether a prior sale or conveyance of the same lands shall have been made or not, under the said Acts of the sixth year of King George the Fourth, and the first and second years of King William the Fourth, or either of them, or any Acts hereafter to be passed concerning bankrupts, have the same effect as such disposition would have had if such actual tenant in tail, or tenant in tail so entitled as aforesaid, had not become bankrupt, and such disposition had been made by him under this Act with the consent of such protector; and all the previous clauses in this Act, in regard to the consent of the protector to the disposition of a tenant in tail of lands not held by copy of court roll, and in regard to the time and manner of giving such consent, [and in regard to the inrolment of the deed of consent, where such deed shall be distinct from the assurance by which the disposition of the commissioner shall be effected,] shall, except so far as the same may be varied by the clause next hereinafter contained, apply to every consent that may be given by virtue of this present clause.

The bracketed words were repealed by the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924, s. 46 (which required such inrolment) being also repealed thereby. That Act also repealed sect. 59, requiring the enrolment of dispositions of lands (see sect. 133 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post).

Subsequent enlargement of base fees created by the disposition of the commissioner.

60. If any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid shall, under this Act, dispose of any lands of any tenure, of which the bankrupt shall be actual tenant in tail, and in consequence of there being a protector of the settlement by which the estate of such actual tenant in tail was created, and of his not giving his consent, only a base fee shall by such disposition be created in such lands, and if at any time afterwards during the continuance of the base fee there shall cease to be a protector of such settlement, then and in such case, and immediately thereupon, such base fee shall be enlarged into the same estate into which the same could have been enlarged under this Act, if at the time of the disposition by such commissioner as aforesaid there had been no such protector.

Enlargement of base fees subsequent to the sale or conveyance of the same under the Bankruptcy Acts.

61. If a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in lands of any tenure shall be adjudged a bankrupt at the time when there shall be a protector of the settlement by which the estate tail converted into the base fee was created, and if such lands shall be sold or conveyed under the said Acts of the sixth year of King George the Fourth, and the first and second years of King William the Fourth, or either of them, or any other Acts hereafter to be passed concerning bankrupts, and if at any time afterwards during the continuance of the base fee in such lands there shall cease to be a protector of such settlement, then and in such case, and immediately thereupon, the base fee in such lands shall be enlarged into the same estate into which the same could have been enlarged under this Act, if at the time of the adjudication of such bankruptcy there had been no such protector, and the commissioner acting in the execution of the fiat under which the tenant in tail so entitled shall have been adjudged a bankrupt had disposed of such lands under this Act.

62. Provided always, that where an actual tenant in tail of lands of any tenure, or a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in lands of any tenure, shall have already created or shall hereafter create in such lands, or any of them, a voidable estate in favour of a purchaser for valuable consideration, and such actual tenant in tail, or tenant in tail so entitled as aforesaid, shall be adjudged a bankrupt under any such fiat as aforesaid, and the commissioner acting in the execution of such fiat shall make any disposition under this Act of the lands in which such voidable estate shall be created, or any of them, then and in such case, if there shall be no protector of the settlement by which the estate tail of the actual tenant in tail, or the estate tail converted into a base fee, as the case may be, was created, or being such protector he shall consent to the disposition by such commissioner as aforesaid, whether such commissioner may have made under this Act a previous disposition of such lands or not, or whether a prior sale or conveyance of the same lands shall have been made or not under the said Acts of the sixth year of King George the Fourth, and the first and second years of King William the Fourth, or either of them, or any other Acts hereafter to be passed concerning bankrupts, the disposition by such commissioner shall have the effect of confirming such voidable estate in the lands thereby disposed of to its full extent as against all persons except those whose rights are saved by this Act; and if at the time of the disposition by such commissioner in the case of an actual tenant in tail, there shall be a protector, and such protector shall not consent to the disposition by such commissioner, and such actual tenant in tail, if he had not been adjudged a bankrupt, would not without such consent have been capable under this Act of confirming the voidable estate to its full extent, then and in such case such disposition shall have the effect of confirming such voidable estate so far as such actual tenant in tail, if he had not been adjudged a bankrupt, could at the time of such disposition have been capable under this Act of confirming the same without such consent; and if at any time after the disposition of such lands by such commissioner, and while only a base fee shall be subsisting in such lands, there shall cease to be a protector of such settlement, and such protector shall not have consented to the disposition by such commissioner, then and in such case such voidable estate, so far as the same may not have been previously confirmed, shall be confirmed to its full extent as against all persons except those whose rights are saved by this Act: provided always, that if the disposition by any such commissioner as aforesaid shall be made to a purchaser for valuable consideration, who shall not have

A voidable estate created in favour of a purchaser by an actual tenant in tail becoming bankrupt, or by a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee becoming bankrupt, confirmed by the disposition of the commissioner, if no protector, or being such with his consent, or on there ceasing to be a protector; but not against a purchaser without notice.

express notice of the voidable estate, then and in such case the voidable estate shall not be confirmed against such purchaser and the persons claiming under him.

An insolvent tenant in tail executed in 1825 a conveyance under 1 Geo. 4, c. 119. In 1831 he became bankrupt, and under the bankruptcy a statutory conveyance was executed barring the entail. The disentailing assurance under the bankruptcy was held not to confirm or enlarge the determinable fee created by the conveyance of 1825 (Sturgis v. Morse, 2 D. F. & Jo. 223, where see judgment of Turner, L.J.). See also Hankey v. Martin (49 L. T. 560), quoted ante, p. 330.

Acts of a bankrupt tenant in tail void against any disposition under this Act by the commissioner.

63. All acts and deeds done and executed by a tenant in tail of lands of any tenure, who shall be adjudged a bankrupt under any such fiat as aforesaid, and which shall affect such lands, or any of them, and which, if he had been seised of or entitled to such lands in fee simple absolute, would have been void against the assignees of the bankrupt's estate, and all persons claiming under them, shall be void against any disposition which may be made of such lands under this Act by such commissioner as aforesaid.

Subject to the powers given to the commissioner, and to the estate in the assignees, a bankrupt tenant in tail shall retain his powers of disposition.

64. Provided always, that, subject and without prejudice to the powers of disposition given by this Act to the commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid under which a person being, or before obtaining his certificate becoming, an actual tenant in tail of lands of any tenure, or a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in lands of any tenure, shall be adjudged a bankrupt, and also subject and without prejudice to the estate in such lands which may be vested in the assignees of the bankrupt's estate and also subject and without prejudice to the rights of all persons claiming under the said assignees in respect of such lands or any of them, such actual tenant in tail, or tenant in tail so entitled as aforesaid, shall have the same powers of disposition under this Act in regard to such lands as he would have had if he had not become bankrupt.

See Davis v. Tollemache (2 Jur. (N.S.) 1181).

The disposition by the commissioner of the lands of a bankrupt tenant in tail shall, if

65. Any disposition under this Act of lands of any tenure by any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid under which a person being, or before obtaining his certificate becoming, an actual tenant in tail of such lands, or a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in such lands, shall be adjudged a bankrupt, shall, although the bankrupt be dead at the time of the disposition, be in the following cases as valid and effectual as the same would have been, and have the same operation under this Act as the same would have had, if the bankrupt were alive; (that is to say,) in case at the time of the bankrupt's decease there shall be no protector of the settlement by which the estate tail of the actual tenant in tail, or the estate tail converted into a base fee, as the case may be, was created; or in case the bankrupt had been an actual tenant in tail of such lands, and there shall at the time of the disposition be any issue inheritable to the estate tail of the bankrupt in such lands, and either no protector of the settlement by which the estate tail was created, or a protector of such settlement who, in the manner required by this Act, shall consent to the disposition, or a protector of such settlement who shall not consent to the disposition; or in case the bankrupt had been a tenant in tail entitled to a base fee in such lands, and there shall at the time of the disposition be any issue who if the base fee had not been created would have been actual tenant in tail of such lands, and either no protector of the settlement by which the estate tail converted into a base fee was created, or a protector of such settlement who, in the manner required by this Act, shall consent to the disposition.

the bankrupt be dead, have in the cases herein mentioned the same operation as if he were alive.

[Sect. 66, relating to dispositions of copyholds, was repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924, copyhold tenure being abolished after 1925 by Part V. of the L. P. Act, 1922. A trustee in bankruptcy was not compellable to be admitted to copyholds of the bankrupt (B. Act, 1914, s. 48, sub-s. 4, re-enacting s. 50, sub-s. 4, of B. Act, 1883), but might deal with them as if they had been capable of being and had been duly surrendered or otherwise conveyed to such uses as the trustee might appoint, any appointee being admitted to or otherwise invested with the property accordingly (ibid, and see Poole v. Bursell, 10 W. R. 861).]

67. The rents and profits of any lands of which any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid hath power to make disposition under this Act shall in the meantime and until such disposition shall be made, or until it shall be ascertained that such disposition shall not be required for the benefit of the creditors of the person adjudged bankrupt under the fiat, be received by the assignees of the estate of the bankrupt, for the benefit of his creditors; and the assignees may proceed by action of debt for the recovery of such rents and profits, or may distrain for the same upon the lands subject to the payment thereof, and in case any action of trespass shall be brought for taking any such distress may plead thereto the general issue, and give this Act or other special matter in evidence, and also, in case any such distress shall be replevied, shall have power to avow or make cognisance generally in such manner and form as any landlord may now do by virtue of the statute 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, or by any other law or statute now in force or hereafter to be made for the more effectually recovering of rent in arrear; and such assignees and their bailiffs, agents and servants, shall also have all such and the same remedies, powers, privileges and advantages of pleading, avowing and making cognisance, and be entitled to the same costs and damages, and the same remedies for the recovery thereof as landlords, their bailiffs, agents and servants, are now or hereafter may be by law entitled to have when rent is in arrear; and such assignees shall also have the same power and authority of enforcing the observance of all covenants, conditions and agreements in respect of the lands of which such commissioner as aforesaid hath the power of disposition under this Act, and in respect of the rents and profits thereof, and of entry into and upon the same lands for the non-observance of any such covenant, condition and agreement, and of expelling and amoving therefrom the tenants or other occupiers thereof, and thereby determining and putting an end to the estate of the persons who shall not have observed such covenants, conditions and agreements as the bankrupt would have had in case he had not been adjudged a bankrupt; provided always that this clause shall apply to all lands held by copy of court roll, but shall only apply to those lands of any other tenure which any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid may have power to dispose of under this Act after the bankrupt's decease.

This section does not apply to a case where there has been, before the bankruptcy, a voidable estate created in favour of a purchaser (Hankey v. Martin, 49 L. T. 560).

All the provisions of the Act in regard to bankrupts shall apply to their lands in Ireland.

68. All the provisions in this Act contained for the benefit of the creditors of persons who under such fiats as aforesaid shall be adjudged bankrupts after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, and for the confirmation in consequence of bankruptcy of voidable estates created by them shall extend and apply to the lands of any tenure in Ireland of such persons as fully and effectually as if this Act had throughout extended to lands of any tenure in Ireland; saving always the rights of the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, to any reversion or remainder in the Crown in lands in Ireland.

Provisions of the Irish Act as to bankrupts apply

Sections 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, and 59 of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, as to bankrupts' lands in Ireland, with the omission of copyholds, agree in substance and effect with sects. 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65 and 67 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74. By the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 60, it is enacted, that all the provisions in that Act contained for the benefit of the creditors of persons who, under such commissions as aforesaid, (i.e. issued under Irish stat. 11 & 12 Geo. 3, c. 8,) shall be adjudged bankrupts after the 31st October, 1834, and for the confirmation in consequence of bankruptcy of voidable estates created by them shall extend, and apply to the lands of any tenure in England of such persons, as fully and effectually as if the Act had throughout extended to land of any tenure in England.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 68. to their lands in England.

69. Provided always, that in all cases of bankruptcy, every deed of disposition under this Act of lands in Ireland by any commissioner acting in the execution of any such fiat as aforesaid, and also every deed by which the protector of a settlement of lands in Ireland shall consent, shall be inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in Ireland within six calendar months after the execution thereof, and not in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in England.

Deeds relating to the lands of bankrupts in Ireland to be inrolled in the Court of Chancery there.

The 61st section of the Irish stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, provides, that in all cases of bankruptcy every deed of disposition under that Act of lands in England, by any commissioner acting in the execution of any such commission as aforesaid, and also every deed by which the protector of a settlement of lands in England shall consent, shall be inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in England within six calendar months after the execution thereof, and not in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in Ireland.

Deeds relating to Irish bankrupts' lands in England to be inrolled in Court of Chancery there.

9. Money to be laid out in Lands to be Entailed.

[Sect. 70, which repealed 7 Geo. 4, c. 45, was itself repealed by S. L. Rev. Act, 1874, without reviving the former statute.]

71. Lands to be sold, whether freehold or leasehold, or of any other tenure, where the money arising from the sale thereof shall be subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be settled, so that any person, if the lands were purchased, would have an estate tail therein, and also money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be settled, so that any person, if the lands were purchased, would have an estate tail therein, shall for all the purposes of this Act be treated as the lands to be purchased, and be considered subject to the same estates as the lands to be purchased would, if purchased, have been actually subject to; and all the previous clauses in this Act, so far as circumstances will admit, shall, in the case of the lands to be sold as aforesaid being either freehold or leasehold, or of any other tenure, except copy of court roll, apply to such lands in the same manner as if the lands to be purchased with the money to arise from the sale thereof were directed to be freehold, and were actually purchased and settled; [and shall, in the case of the lands to be sold as aforesaid being held by copy of court roll, apply to such lands in the same manner as if the lands to be purchased with the money to arise from the sale thereof were directed to be copyhold, and were actually purchased and settled;] and shall in the case of money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be so settled as aforesaid, apply to such money in the same manner as if such money were directed to be laid out in the purchase of freehold lands, and such lands were actually purchased and settled; save and except that in every case where under this clause a disposition shall be to be made of leasehold lands for years absolute or determinable, so circumstanced as aforesaid, or of money so circumstanced as aforesaid, such leasehold lands or money shall, as to the person in whose favour or for whose benefit the disposition is to be made, be treated as personal estate, and except in case of bankruptcy, the assurance by which the disposition of such leasehold lands or money shall be effected shall be an assignment by deed [which shall have no operation under this Act unless inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery within six calendar months after the execution thereof]; and in every case of bankruptcy the disposition of such leasehold lands or money shall be made by the commissioner [and completed by inrolment] in the same manner as hereinbefore required in regard to lands [not held by copy of court roll].

Old mode of barring estates tail in entailed money.

The bracketed words were repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924, copyhold tenure being abolished by Part V. of the L. P. Act, 1922, and the necessity of inrolment abolished by sect. 133 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post.

Money subject to an imperative direction for investment in the purchase of freehold land is considered by a court of equity as converted into real estate (Re Walker, Mackintosh Walker v. W., [1908] 2 Ch. 712; and Re Twopeny's Settlement, [1924] 1 Ch. 522; see further, Fletcher v. Ashburner, 1 L. C. Eq.; and as to entailed money see also Mosley v. Ward, 29 Beav. 407).

Formerly a person who would have been entitled to the land, if purchased, as tenant in tail, was enabled by a court of equity to receive the money if he could have acquired the fee by fine, but not if a recovery would have been requisite, in which case it was necessary to purchase land in order to suffer a recovery (5 Ves. 12; 6 Ves. 116; In re Lord Somerville, 2 Sim. & Stu. 470; 3 Russ. 369, 416; 5 Russ. 5). The Irish stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 62, repealed the Irish stats. 58 Geo. 3, c. 46, and 7 Geo. 4, c. 45.

Cases under this section.

Where entailed land had been sold and the money paid into Court, a subsequent disentailing assurance whereby the tenant in tail purported to "grant and dispose of" the hereditaments did not disentail the money; the Court pointing out that this section requires the assurance to be an "assignment by deed," and not a grant (Mills v. Fox, 37 Ch. D. 162). Compare the case where in a will money subject to a trust for investment in land to be entailed was held to be referred to under the word "hereditaments" (Re Gosselin, G. v. G., [1906] 1 Ch. 120; see Re Cleveland, [1893] 2 Ch. 250; Re Upton-Cottrell-Dormer, 84 L. J. Ch. 861). Having regard to this section the rule that in an executed document the same words of limitation were necessary to convey an equitable as to convey a legal estate in fee-simple was held not to apply to personalty subject to a trust for investment in land (Re Monckton's Settlement, M. v. M., [1913] 2 Ch. 636); see now as to words of limitation, sect. 60 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, which applies to all instruments executed after 1925. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 71.

Where a disposition is to be made of money subject to be invested in the purchase of land to be settled on a tenant in tail, there under this section the money is, as to the disponee, to be treated as personal estate. Compare the case of capital money which under sects. 21 and 24 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, was subject to be invested in the purchase of land to be settled on a tenant in tail. There by sect. 22, sub-sect. 5 of the last-mentioned Act the money was to be considered as "land" (see now sects. 73, 75 (5) of S. L. Act, 1925, post, in which Act the provisions in S. L. Act, 1882, s. 24, are not re-enacted). And see Re Walker, Macintosh Walker v. W., [1908] 2 Ch. 705; Re Twopeny's Settlement, [1924] 1 Ch. 522.

Under this section an entail may be barred of lands to be purchased with rents hereafter to become due to trustees (Fordham v. F., 34 Beav. 59; see the order in this case, Seton, 7th ed., 1716) or to be purchased under a trust for investing money in land at a future date (Re Harvey, H. v. H., [1901] 2 Ch. 290).

Payment out of Court of entailed money.

A fund in Court representing entailed land will not be paid out to a tenant in tail without a disentailing deed having been executed (Re Butler, 16 Eq. 479; Re Broadwood, 1 Ch. D. 438; Re Reynolds, 3 Ch. D. 61; Re Norcop, 31 L. T. 85; Re Tylden, 11 W. R. 869; Re Smythe, 3 M. & K. 249; see contra, Sowry v. S., 8 W. R. 339; Re Row, 17 Eq. 300; Re Wood, 20 Eq. 372; Stead v. Harper, [1896] W. N. 46). An affidavit proving the execution has been required (Bishop v. De Burgh, 15 L. J. Ch. 35; Re Field, 11 W. R. 927; see, however, Re Butler, supra; Re Reynolds, supra). As to an affidavit of no incumbrances, see Thornhill v. Milbank (12 W. R. 523).

Where the money had been paid into Court by a company and a disentailing deed had been executed, the company was ordered to pay the costs of the deed (Re Brooking, 2 Giff. 31); Re North Staffordshire Ry. Co., 3 Giff. 224; Re Navan & Kingscourt Co., [1906] 1 I. R. 557).

Lands of any tenure in Ireland to be sold, where the purchase-money is subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be entailed, and money under the control of a Court of equity in Ireland, subject to be invested in like manner, to be subject to this Act in cases of bankruptcy.

72. So far as regards any person adjudged a bankrupt under any such fiat as aforesaid, the provisions of the clause lastly hereinbefore contained shall, for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt, apply to lands in Ireland to be sold, whether freehold or leasehold, or of any other tenure, where the money arising from the sale thereof shall be subjected to be invested in the purchase of lands to be settled, so that the bankrupt, if the lands were purchased, would have an estate tail therein, and also to money under the control of any court of equity in Ireland, or of or to which any individuals as trustees may be possessed or entitled in Ireland, and which shall be subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be settled, so that the bankrupt, if the lands were purchased, would have an estate tail therein, as fully and effectually as if this Act had throughout extended to Ireland: provided always, that every deed to be executed by any commissioner or protector, in pursuance of this clause, in regard to lands in Ireland to be so sold, as aforesaid, shall be inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in Ireland within six calendar months after the execution thereof; but every deed to be executed by any commissioner or protector, in pursuance of this clause, in regard to money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands to be so settled as aforesaid, shall be inrolled in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in England within six calendar months after the execution thereof, and not in his Majesty's High Court of Chancery in Ireland; saving always the rights of the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, to any reversion or remainder in the Crown in lands in Ireland to be sold.

This saving is not in the corresponding section in the Irish stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 64.

The necessity for inrolment in England was abolished by sect. 133 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post. Sects. 73, 74, and 76, relating to inrolment, were repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924, and sect. 75 had been repealed by sect. 29 of the Judicature (Officers) Act, 1879.

Ireland.

92. This Act shall not extend to Ireland, except where the same is expressly mentioned.

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, the provisions of this Act were extended to Ireland, with the omission of sects. 4, 5 and 6, relating to lands, held by ancient demesne, and sects. 50—54, 66, 76, 90, relating to copyholds. The other variations between the two statutes are noticed ante, pp. 305, 311, 314, 329, 342, 343, and post, pp. 348, 352.

The clauses in 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, with respect to the disposition of estates tail under bankruptcies, are extended to proceedings under the Bankruptcy (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 58, s. 50).

This Act applies to lands locally situate in the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed (the Berwick-on-Tweed Act, 1836).

(1) Disposal of married women's land before this Act.

As to the disposal of a married woman's land before this Act. According to the common law, having surrendered her will to her husband, a married woman in attempting to deal with her own land was presumed not to be exercising that free will which was necessary to voluntary alienation or contract. In early times several methods for conveying such land were adopted, such as fines and customary forms of alienation; all of which involved a separate examination directed to ascertain (for the purpose of rebutting the above presumption) that she was acting of her own free will (Johnson v. Clark, [1908] 1 Ch. 313 et seq.). This separate examination was so essential that a local custom purporting to enable a married woman to dispose of her land without it was held unreasonable and bad (Id. [1908] 1 Ch. 303; but see now sect. 167 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post). As to the effect of fines, see May v. Roper, 10 Sim. 360; Forbes v. Adams, 9 Sim. 462.

(2) Cases since Act where the statutory method of disposition applies.

Under the present section, read in connection with the interpretation clause, a married woman may dispose of any interest in land either at law or in equity, or any charge, lien or incumbrance in or upon or affecting land either at law or in equity (Briggs v. Chamberlain, 11 Hare, 74); including a right to dower (Dent v. Clayton, 12 W. R. 903); but not a mere spes successionis (Allcard v. Walker, [1896] 2 Ch. 369). This power of disposition includes (1) the married woman's equitable interest in a mortgage debt (Williams v. Cooke, 4 Giff. 343; Miller v. Collins, [1896] 1 Ch. 573; overruling Re Newton, 23 Ch. D. 181; secus, where the charge had been paid off: Re Algeo, I. R. 2 Eq. 485); (2) the married woman's interest whether in possession or reversion in proceeds of real estate devised on trust for sale, whether the sale be or be not made (Briggs v. Chamberlain, 11 Ha. 69; Tuer v. Turner, 20 Beav. 560; Re Jake- man, 23 Ch. D. 344). So where personalty in which the married woman had a reversionary interest under a settlement prior to M. W. Rev. Int. Act, 1857 (post, p. 362), had in breach of trust been invested in land, she could dispose of her interest under this section (Re Durrant and Stonor, 18 Ch. D. 106). And a conveyance by cestui que trusts of land held on immediate trust for sale to the trustee for sale who had purchased it, was held void as against a married woman c. q. t. who had not acknowledged the deed (Franks v. Bollans, 3 Ch. 717; subsequently compromised, see Re Clinton, 13 Eq. 301). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 77.

By Real Prop. Act, 1845, s. 6, contingent and other like interests, and also rights of entry, might be disposed of by a married woman conformably to this Act (Crofts v. Middleton, 8 D. M. & G. 192). Section 6 of the Act of 1845 is replaced by sect. 4, sub-sect. 2 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, and sect. 167 of that Act makes acknowledgment unnecessary as to deeds executed after December 31, 1925.

Contracts.

The present section also enabled a married woman, with the concurrence of her husband, to contract by an acknowledged deed so as to bind her non-separate land, but not herself personally (Crofts v. Middleton, 8 D. M. & G. 192; Pride v. Bubb, 7 Ch. 64). A contract unacknowledged did not bind her so far as regards non-separate land (Castle v. Wilkinson, 5 Ch. 534; Cahill v. C., 8 App. Cas. 420; Williams v. Walker, 9 Q. B. D. 576); even where she was a trustee for sale (Avery v. Griffin, 6 Eq. 606; Re Harkness and Allsopp, [1896] 2 Ch. 358; see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 170 (2), post, replacing s. 1 of M. W. P. Act, 1907). Nor did her husband's contract bind her (Barnes v. Wood, 8 Eq. 424; Nicholl v. Jones, 3 Eq. 696). As to the property of all women married since 1882, see M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 1 (1), post. In cases falling within that Act, see as to contracts, sect. 1 (2) (post, p. 371), and M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 1, post, p. 393.

(3) Disposition under the section.

A declaration of trust whereby the married woman effectually parts with the entire equitable interest in property is a "disposition" within this section (Carter v. C., [1896] 1 Ch. 67). And where the property was copyhold the declaration bound her heir, the case not falling within the final proviso (ibid.). The fact that the husband was a discharged bankrupt did not prevent him from concurring (Re Jakeman, 23 Ch. D. 344). As to the effect of a lease by a husband and wife of the wife's land not acknowledged by her, see Toler v. Slater, L. R. 3 Q. B. 42.

(4) Cases where acknowledgment was unnecessary.

The formalities of this section were unnecessary before 1926 in the following cases: (1) Generally in the case of separate estate whether independently of, or under, the M. W. P. Act, 1882 (see post, pp. 355, 372); including the cases where a married woman was dealing as a mortgagee with land on the security whereof her separate money had been advanced (Re Brooke and Fremlin, [1898] 1 Ch. 647), and where, as one of two mortgagees on joint account, she executed a transfer (Re West and Hardy, [1904] 1 Ch. 145). (2) Where she was disposing of real property held by her as trustee or personal representative (M. W. P. Act, 1907, sect. 1; see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 170 (2), post). (3) Where she was conveying land as bare trustee under sect. 16 of the Trustee Act, 1893 (Re Howgate and Osborn, [1902] 1 Ch. 451; Re Docwra, D. v. Faith, 29 Ch. D. 693). (4) In cases within the proviso at the end of this section; see Green v. Paterson, 32 Ch. D. 95; Carter v. C., supra; or where an order was made under sect. 91, post (Goodchild v. Dougal, 3 Ch. D. 650). (5) Where an Act of Parliament substituted other proceedings (Ex p. Ellison, 2 Y. & Coll. 528). (6) Under sect. 52 of the Conv. Act, 1881, a married woman might by deed unacknowledged release her power over any property, whether real or personal, and whether in possession or reversion and (where the power was coupled with an interest) whether in respect of such interest she was restrained from anticipation or not (Re Chisholm, Hemphill v. H., [1901] 2 Ch. 82; see now sects. 155 and 160 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post). As to leases or sales of a married woman's property under S. E. Act, 1877 (repealed by S. L. Act, 1925, post), see sects. 12, 22, 50 and 51 of that Act, pp. 639, 643, and 655—56 of the second edition of this work. In the case of conveyances by a married woman under the S. L. Act, 1882, sect. 61 of that Act (second edition of this work, pp. 717—718) seems to have rendered an acknowledgment unnecessary. See now sect. 25 of the S. L. Act, 1925, post. Where her property was sold in a partition action, she could, without deed acknowledged, request a sale under sect. 6 of the Partition Act, 1876 (repealed by the L. P. Act, 1925; see for it the second edition of this work, pp. 750—753; and see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 34, and notes, post), and elect by examination in Court to take the proceeds as personalty (Standering v. Hall, 11 Ch. D. 652; Wallace v. Greenwood, 16 Ch. D. 362; but see Hopkinson v. Richardson, [1913] 1 Ch. 234). She and her husband could also convey land for school sites without acknowledgment (School Sites Act, 1841, s. 5).

Affirmation of settlements.

Where a married woman executed but did not acknowledge a separation deed purporting to deal with her real estate, she could not by acting upon it make the deed binding (Harle v. Jarman, [1895] 2 Ch. 419). Similarly in the case of a postnuptial settlement purporting to deal with a married woman's reversionary interest in personalty (Scaton v. S., 13 A. C. 61, see p. 73). With the above should be compared the cases where the difficulty arose not from coverture but from infancy. Thus where previous to the marriage of a female infant a settlement was executed of her land, the settlement was not void but voidable (Cooke v. C., 38 Ch. D. 209; see Edwards v. Carter, [1893] A. C. 364), and on attaining her majority, she could by acts during coverture and without acknowledged deed affirm the settlement so as to bind the property (Barrow v. B., 4 K. & J. 409; see Re Hodson, Williams v. Knight, [1894] 2 Ch. 421; Wilder v. Pigott, 22 Ch. D. 263, the case of a reversionary interest in personalty). The last-mentioned decisions have been said to proceed on the ground of election; but this is election in a general, not in a technical sense of the term; see Harle v. Jarman, [1895] 2 Ch. 427. Where previous to the marriage of an adult female there was an agreement for settlement which did not comply with the Statute of Frauds, a reversionary interest of the married woman in personalty was held bound by her subsequent acts (Greenhill v. North British Co., [1893] 3 Ch. 474). This decision purported to follow Barrow v. B., and Wilder v. Pigott, supra; but quære whether it is consistent with Scaton v. S. and Harle v. Jarman, supra.

(5) Disclaimer by married women.

The Irish stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 68, contains the additional word disclaim, after the words "dispose of." By L. P. Act, 1925, s. 168, post, a married woman may disclaim by deed any estate or interest in land with or without her husband's concurrence as the case may require. She may, since the M. W. P. Act, 1882, disclaim a gift by will of personalty though given with a restraint on anticipation (Re Wimperis, [1914] 1 Ch. 502). As to the release and extinguishment of powers, see post, p. 353.

Disclaimer generally.

An interest devised vests in the devisee by presumption of law before entry (Co. Litt. 111 a). The old doctrine was, that an estate of freehold could be disclaimed only by matter of record (Butler and Baker's Case, 3 Rep. 26). But it is now established that a deed is sufficient for that purpose (Townson v. Tickell, 3 B. & Ald. 31; Begbie v. Crook, 2 Bing. N. C. 70). The disclaimer must be clear and unequivocal (Doe v. Smyth, 6 B. & C. 112). A disclaimer after the exercise of various acts of ownership is void (Bence v. Gilpin, L. R. 3 Ex. 76). A devise of copyholds could be disclaimed by word of mouth only before the devisee had been admitted (R. v. Wilson, 10 B. & C. 5; see Shepp. Touchs. 452). A gift of personal chattels or a term of years, may be waived and avoided by parol (1 Ventr. 128). A husband's disclaimer gave effect to a wife's disposition of her personalty (Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238). On a disclaimer by a devisee the estate will descend to the heir, or pass to a remainderman (ibid. 116). And on the disclaimer of one of two assignees of a term, the whole interest will vest in the other (Smith v. Wheeler, 1 Vent. 128). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 77.

The disclaimer of one of several trustees has the effect of vesting the estate in the other trustees exclusively (Small v. Marwood, 9 B. & C. 300; Browell v. Reed, 1 Hare, 435; see Re Birchall; B. v. Ashton, 40 Ch. D. 436; Doe v. Harris, 16 M. & W. 517); and a discretionary power of sale may be exercised by them (Affleck v. James, 13 Jur. 739). A trustee cannot disclaim part of a trust, e.g., as to all property in England (Re Lord and Fullerton, [1896] 1 Ch. 228). It is most prudent that a deed of disclaimer should be executed by a person named trustee, who refuses to accept the trust, but there may be conduct which amounts to a clear disclaimer (Re Birchall; B. v. Ashton, 40 Ch. D. 436; Re Clout and Frewer, [1924] 2 Ch. 230). As where a trustee purchased the real estate, and took the conveyance from the widow, who was tenant for life, and the heir, to whom the estate must have descended upon the disclaimer of the trust (Stacey v. Elph. 1 M. & K. 195). A disclaimer executed after a lapse of time by one of the three executors of a will was held to be a refusal ab initio (Peppercorn v. Wayman, 5 De G. & S. 230; see Harris v. Watkins, 2 K. & J. 473, as to presuming a disclaimer by a devisee; and see now as to renunciation by a personal representative sects. 5, 6, and 23 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post). The execution of a conveyance of trust premises has been held sufficient evidence of acceptance of the trust (Urch v. Walker, 3 M. & C. 702; see Sharp v. S., 2 B. & Ald. 405). In Crewe v. Dickin (4 Ves. 97), one of two trustees released and conveyed to his co-trustee; the trustee was considered as having accepted the trust (see Nicholson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 371). A trustee of real estate, who disclaimed all estate, powers, &c., in the estate devised, was held not to be a necessary party in a conveyance to a purchaser (Adams v. Taunton, 5 Madd. 433). See, in addition to the cases cited, Litt. ss. 684, 685; Co. Litt. 113 a; Bonifant v. Greenfield, Cro. Eliz. 80; Godb. 77; Anon., 4 Leon. 207; Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East, 410. Disclaimer by trustees.

In the case of a common law grant the land passes to the grantee in the first instance, though by a subsequent disclaimer it may be divested (Thompson v. Leach, 2 Vent. 198; Carth. 211, 230; 2 Salk. 616; Show. P. C. 151; 3 Lev. 284; 1 Show. 296; Rep. temp. Holl. 665). On this ground a voluntary settlement of real estate was supported notwithstanding disclaimer by the trustee (Mallott v. Wilson, [1903] 2 Ch. 494, 501).

The final proviso, now repealed, excepting from the Act in certain cases a married woman's copyholds, was held to apply, Green v. Paterson, 32 Ch. D. 104.

78. Provided always, that the powers of disposition given to a married woman by this Act shall not interfere with any power which, independently of this Act, may be The powers of disposition given to a married vested in or limited or reserved to her, so as to prevent her from exercising such power in any case, except so far as by any disposition made by her under this Act she may be prevented from so doing in consequence of such power having been suspended or extinguished by such disposition.

woman by this Act not to interfere with any other powers.

Irish statute.

Restraint on anticipation.

In the corresponding clause in the Irish statute, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 92, s. 69, the following qualification is added, "but such powers of disposition shall not enable a married woman to dispose of lands, or any estate therein, where the settlement or other instrument under which she may be entitled to the same shall contain a valid restriction against the anticipation thereof by such married woman." This has been said to be an expression by the Legislature of what was meant by the English Act (Baggett v. Meux, 1 Phil. 628). As regards powers of appointment, it was held under the Irish statute, that a restraint imposed on a life interest would not prevent the release of a power (Heath v. Wickham, 5 L. R. Ir. 285; see as to England, Re Chisholm, Hemphill v. Hemphill, [1901] 2 Ch. 82, ante, p. 350). By S. L. Act, 1925, s. 25, post, the powers of a tenant for life under that Act may be exercised by a married woman of full age, notwithstanding a restraint on anticipation. And by sect. 37 of L. P. Act, 1925, post, a husband and wife are, for all purposes of acquisition of any interest in property under a disposition made or coming into effect after December 31, 1925, to be treated as two persons.

(1) Former statutory powers.

By the custom of London, confirmed by statute 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 22, and of several other cities and boroughs, as Norwich, &c., &c., a married woman on being privately examined before the mayor might bind herself by a deed acknowledged and inrolled (Hobb. 225; Com. Dig. London (N. 3); 2 Inst. 673; 1 Prest. Abst. 336; Roper on Husband and Wife, 531; 4 Cruise's Dig. tit. xxxii. ch. 2, pl. 33). By statute 32 Hen. 8, c. 28 (repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924), the husband and wife were empowered to make leases of the wife's lands (see Doe v. Weller, 7 T. R. 478). As to married women's powers under the Settled Land Act, 1925, see sect. 25 of that Act.

(2) Dominion of married women over their property by means of powers.

Prior to the M. W. P. Act, 1882, the disabilities of married women at common law, independently of statute or particular customs, to alien their property, whether real or personal, either by deed or will, were well known (see Harg. Co. Litt. 111 b, n. (4)). The wife of a man who had abjured the realm, or been transported, might act as if her husband were dead (Co. Litt. 132; 2 Vern. 104; 3 P. Wms. 37). Through the medium of powers and trusts, however, a married woman was long allowed to have, both at law and in equity, the full dominion over property independent of her husband. A wife might, without her husband, execute a naked authority to sell lands whether given before or after coverture, and though no special words were used to dispense with the disability of coverture (Co. Litt. 112 a, and n. (6)). The rule was the same where both an interest and an authority passed to the wife, if the authority was collateral to and did not flow from the interest, because then the two were unconnected, as if they were vested in different persons (Rep. temp. Finch. 346). As, too, a feme covert might convey lands in execution of a mere power, so she might with equal effect in performance of a condition, where land was vested in her on condition to convey to others (W. Jones, 137, 138). As regards estates of freehold which a married woman had as trustee, no effectual conveyance could formerly be made by her without fine or recovery, nor, after the present Act, without a deed duly acknowledged (1 Prest. on Abs. 337; Re Caine, 10 Q. B. D. 284; see Avery v. Griffin, 6 Eq. 606). This was altered by the M. W. P. Act, 1907, s. 1 (see now L. P. Act, 1925, s. 170, post). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

Powers of appointment to married women.

Before the M. W. P. Act, 1882, a power of disposing of real estate was often given to a married woman (1) by way of trust, e.g., by a proper conveyance of an estate to trustees in trust for her for life, and afterwards in trust for such person as she should appoint; or (2) by way of power over a use, as where an estate was conveyed to the use of herself for life, remainder to the use of such persons as she should appoint (Peacock v. Monk, 2 Ves. sen. 191). Where by articles before marriage it was agreed that the wife should have a power of appointment over her property, the power was held well created and exercisable (Ripon v. Dawding, Amb. 565; Wright v. Cadogan, 1 Br. P. C. 486; Amb. 468; 2 Eden, 239; see Doe v. Staple, 2 T. R. 684; Sug. Pow. 158).

(3.) Different kinds of powers.

A power may be (1) appendant, when the exercise of it takes effect out of the estate of the donee, as a power of leasing; (2) in gross, when the exercise of it takes effect after the determination of the estate of the donee, as a power of a tenant for life to jointure; or (3) simply collateral, when the donee has no estate at all in the property the subject of the power (1 Saund. on Uses, 4th ed. 169; Sug. Pow. 8th ed. 46; Tudor, L. C. Conv. 4th ed. 539).

Exercise of powers by married women.

It has long been settled, that a married woman may execute a power whether appendant, in gross or simply collateral (Harris v. Graham, 1 Roll. Abr. 329, pl. 12; 2 Roll. Abr. 247, pl. 6; Gibbons v. Moulton, Finch, 346; Daniel v. Upley, Latch. 39; Godb. 327, pl. 419; Tomlinson v. Dighton, 1 P. Wms. 149; Travel v. Travel, 3 Atk. 711; cited 2 Ves. sen. 191; Doe v. Eyre, 5 C. B. 741, 745); unless a contrary intention appears in the instrument creating it (Antrim v. Buckingham, 1 Ch. Cas. 17). She might exercise power as well over a copyhold as a freehold estate (Driver v. Thompson, 4 Taunt. 294). See further Sug. Pow. 154, 8th ed.; Wood v. W., 10 Eq. 220.

Release of powers.

The Fines and Recoveries Act, s. 77 (ante, p. 347), provided a machinery whereby a married woman could release or extinguish certain powers as if she were a feme sole. And as regards release of powers by femes sole, it was settled, prior to the Conv. Act, 1881, that powers appendant or in gross could be released (Albany's Case, 1 Rep. 111; Leigh v. Winter, Sir W. Jones, 411; Sug. Pow. 8th ed. 82). But powers simply collateral could not (Co. Litt. 265 b; 11 Rep. 111a; see Weller v. Ker, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 11; Saul v. Pattinson, 54 L. T. 670; 55 L. J. Ch. 831); unless the power was for the benefit of the donee (West v. Berney, 1 R. & M. 434). Further provisions as to releasing and disclaiming powers were contained in Conv. Act, 1881, s. 52, and Conv. Act, 1882, s. 6 (re-enacted by ss. 155, 156 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post); under which it was held that a married woman could release any power by deed unacknowledged (Re Chisholm, Hemphill v. H., [1901] 2 Ch. 82).

Extinguishment of powers—

Formerly a power appendant or in gross could be extinguished by a fine or a recovery (Digge's Case, 1 Rep. 173; Bird v. Christopher, Styles, 389; King v. Melling, 1 Ventr. 225; Tomlinson

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

v. Dighton, 1 P. Wms. 149; Saville v. Blackett, ibid. 777); even where the power was for the benefit of the donee's children (Bickley v. Guest, 1 Russ. & M. 440; Smith v. Death, 5 Madd. 371; see, however, Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh, 15).

appendant;

A power appendant to a life estate—including a power of leasing (Simpson v. Bathurst, 5 Ch. 193; Lonsdale v. Lowther, [1900] W. N. 165), a power to consent to a sale of the corpus (Alexander v. Mills, 6 Ch. 124; Re Bedingfield and Herring, [1893] 2 Ch. 332), or to consent to an advancement thereout to children (Re Cooper, C. v. Slight, 27 Ch. D. 565)—is not extinguished by an alienation of the donee's interest. It is immaterial whether the alienation is by the donee's assignment (Alexander v. Mills, supra; Ren v. Bulkeley, 1 Dougl. 292; Simpson v. Bathurst, 5 Ch. 193), or upon his bankruptcy (Holdsworth v. Goose, 29 Beav. 111; Eisdale v. Hammersley, 31 Beav. 255; Doe v. Britain, 2 B. & Ald. 93; Hole v. Escott, 2 Keen, 444). The power, however, cannot be exercised without the consent of the alienee (Re Cooper, C. v. Slight, 27 Ch. D. 565; Re Bedingfield and Herring, [1893] 2 Ch. 332), unless the power is expressly reserved upon the alienation (Warburton v. Farne, 16 Sim. 625; Long v. Rankin, Sug. Pow. 8th ed. 899; Morgan v. Rutson, 16 Sim. 234; see Re Wright and Marshall, 28 Ch. D. 93); or the exercise of it does not derogate from the donee's grant, as in the case of a power to appoint new trustees (Hardaker v. Moorhouse, 25 Ch. D. 417). As to the powers of a tenant for life under S. L. Act, 1925, see sect. 104 of that Act, post, p. 960).

A power in gross may be exercised notwithstanding the alienation of the donee's interest (Parsons v. P., 9 Mod. 464), whether by his assignment (Re Stone, I. R. 8 Eq. 621), or by means of a clause of forfeiture on bankruptcy (Wickham v. Wing, 2 H. & M. 436; Re Aylwin, 16 Eq. 585; see Jones v. Winwood, 3 M. & W. 653; Haswell v. H., 2 D. F. & J. 456; Re Evans, [1897] 1 I. R. 410).

Bankruptcy.

The trustee in bankruptcy can exercise a power which the bankrupt could have exercised for his own benefit (Bankcy. Act, 1914, s. 38). This does not include a power to grant a renewed lease (Simpson v. Bathurst, 5 Ch. 208). Nor a husband's right to administer to his wife's estate (Re Turner, 12 P. D. 18). Nor it seems the right of releasing for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate a limited power of appointment (Re Rose, [1904] 2 Ch. 348; [1905] 1 Ch. 94). In the case of a general power of appointing by deed or will, which is vested in the bankrupt, this cannot be exercised by the trustee after the bankrupt's death (Nichols v. Nixey, 29 Ch. D. 1005), nor where a married woman has been made bankrupt under the M. W. P. Act, 1882 (Ex parte Gilchrist, 17 Q. B. D. 521). In the case of a general power of appointing by will only in pursuance of which a will was made before bankruptcy by a man who died undischarged, the appointed fund was not divisible among the creditors in the bankruptcy but passed to the executor (Re Guedalla, Lee v. G., [1905] 2 Ch. 331). A judicial separation does not prevent a wife from joining in the exercise of any joint power given to herself and her husband (Matrim. Causes Act, 1857, s. 26).

Judicial separation.

See further as to the extinguishment of powers, Sug. Pow. 8th ed. 57 et seq.; Farwell, 12 et seq. 3rd ed.

(4) Trust for separate use of married woman.

A further power conferred on a married woman by the general law (independently of the M. W. P. Acts, 1870 and 1882, which see post, pp. 364, 371) was the power of disposing of separate estate, whether real or personal. Thus, by the general law, a married woman, in the absence of any clause against alienation, can deal with the equitable interest in real property to which she is entitled to her separate use, as if she were a feme sole (Taylor v. Meads, 4 D. J. & S. 597; Hall v. Waterhouse, 5 Giff. 64; Pride v. Bubb, 7 Ch. 64; Cooper v. Macdonald, 7 Ch. D. 288; Adams v. Gamble, 12 Ir. Ch. 102; see Major v. Lansley, 2 R. & M. 355). Her power exists not only as to strangers, but as to her husband (Logan v. Birkett, 1 M. & K. 220). As to the legal estate in such property where there are no trustees, see the note to sect. 91, post, p. 361.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

Realty.

Again, by the general law, a married woman entitled to personal property to her separate use, without any restraint on alienation, may not only receive and apply to her separate use the income, but dispose of the corpus, either by an act inter vivos or by will (Rich v. Cockell, 9 Ves. 369; Fettiplace v. Gorges, 1 Ves. jun. 46; 3 Br. C. C. 8; see also Peacock v. Monk, 2 Ves. sen. 191; Hearle v. Greenbank, 3 Atk. 696; 1 Ves. sen. 298). And her power of disposition extends to reversionary interests in personalty settled to her separate use as well as to interests in possession (Keene v. Johnstone, 1 Jones & Carey, I. R. 255; Sturgis v. Corp, 13 Ves. 190; see King v. Lucas, 23 Ch. D. 712); and to contingent as well as vested interests (Lechmere v. Brotheridge, 32 Beav. 353; but see Batt v. Cuthbertson, 4 Dr. & War. 392; Stamford Co. v. Ball, 10 W. R. 196); but not to property to which she has no title whatever at the date of the disposition (Smith v. Lucas, 18 Ch. D. 545). As to gifts to a husband by his wife of her separate personalty whether capital or income, see Woodward v. W., 3 D. J. & S. 672; Re Flamank, Wood v. Cock, 40 Ch. D. 461; Edwards v. Cheyne (No. 2), 13 App. Cas. 385. There was a presumption of resulting trust for the wife's benefit where her separate income had been applied in purchasing land in the husband's name (Mercier v. M., [1903] 2 Ch. 98). A purchase in joint names is dealt with in Re Scott, Palmer v. Vicker, 97 L. T. 537. As to an assignment of leaseholds by a wife to her husband, see Re Marlborough, Davis v. Whitehead, [1894] 2 Ch. 133.

Personalty.

Further, by the general law the contract of a married woman bound her separate estate, when it appeared that such contract was made with reference to and upon the faith or credit of that estate (Johnson v. Gallagher, 3 D. F. & J. 515; London Chartered Bank v. Lemprière, L. R. 4 P. C. 597; Wainford v. Heyl, 20 Eq. 324); such a contract, however, being enforceable only against so much of the separate estate to which at the time of the contract the married woman was entitled, free from restraint, as remained at the time of judgment (Pike v. Fitzgibbon, 17 Ch. D. 454). See as to property appointed by her the note to M. W. P. Act, 1882, sect. 4, post, p. 380.

Contracts binding separate estate.

No particular form of words was necessary to create separate use (Stanton v. Hall, 2 R. & M. 175). As to what words would do so, see Massy v. Rowen (L. R. 4 H. L. 288); Re Peacock (10 Ch. D. 490); Bland v. Dawes (17 Ch. D. 794), and the cases there referred to; Williams v. Waters (14 M. & W. 166); Acton v. White (1 Sim. & Stu. 429); Carnegie v. Carnegie (22 W. R. 783). A trust for separate use will not be inferred from the existence of a restraint on alienation (Stogdon v. Lee, [1891] 1 Q. B. 661). An immediate gift by a husband to his wife was said to raise a presumption of separate use; but not in the case of an interest commencing after his death (Re Turner, T. v. Fitzroy, 66 L. T. 758). As to wearing apparel given or lent by a husband to his wife, see Masson v. De Fries, [1909] 2 K. B. 831; Rondeau Legrand v. Marks, [1918] 1 K. B. 75; quoted, p. 373, post.

Creation of separate use.

As to whether a trust for separate use can be created by parol, see, in the case of real estate, Dye v. D. (13 Q. B. D. 147); and in the case of personal estate, Simmons v. S. (6 Ha. 352); Warden v. Jones (2 De G. & J. 76); Re Whitehead (14 Q. B. D. 419) (cases of ante-nuptial agreements); and Haddon v. Fladgate (27 L. J. Prob. 21, a post-nuptial agreement).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

There is no such thing as separate property of an unmarried woman (Pelton v. Harrison, [1891] 2 Q. B. 425; Re Price, Stafford v. S., 28 Ch. D. 712; Axford v. Reid, 22 Q. B. D. 553; Clarke v. Hastie, 16 Times L. R. 23; see, however, Re Wheeler, Briggs v. Ryan, [1899] 2 Ch. 722). But a trust for separate use will apply to any existing coverture and to all subsequent covertures (Tullett v. Armstrong, 4 My. & Cr. 377; Re Gaffee, 1 Mac. & G. 541; Hawkes v. Hubback, 11 Eq. 5). Such a trust may be destroyed during discoverture, e.g., by conversion of the property (Wright v. W., 2 J. & H. 647). And on its creation it may be confined to an existing coverture (Moore v. Morris, 4 Drew. 33; Stogdon v. Lee, [1891] 1 Q. B. 661), or to future covertures (King v. Lucas, 23 Ch. D. 712; see Steedman v. Poole, 6 Ha. 193).

Duration of separate use.

Restraint on anticipation.

Operation of.

A restraint may be imposed on the alienation or anticipation of property given to a woman for her separate use (Tullett v. Armstrong, 4 M. & Cr. 377; Baggett v. Meux, 1 Phil. 627). Such a restraint can never exist except as an accessory to a gift for separate use (Stogdon v. Lee, [1891] 1 Q. B. 670; Pike v. Fitzgibbon, 17 Ch. D. 464); but the character of separate property arising under the M. W. P. Act, 1882, is sufficient to support it (Re Lumley, Ex parte Hood-Barrs, [1896] 2 Ch. 690). The principle recognised in Pike v. Fitzgibbon (supra) is that a married woman can in no way dispose by way of anticipation of property subject to such a restraint. She cannot dispose of it by making an engagement authorising another person to intercept it (Re Glanvill, Ellis v. Johnson, 31 Ch. D. 539; see the form of judgment in Scott v. Morley, 20 Q. B. D. 132). She cannot do so even by practising a fraud (Stanley v. S., 7 Ch. D. 589; Bateman v. Faber, [1898] 1 Ch. 144, 151). Nor can she bind her restrained property by estoppel (Bateman v. Faber, supra). She cannot be compelled to elect in respect of restrained property (Re Wheatley, Smith v. Spence, 27 Ch. D. 606; Re Vardon, 31 Ch. D. 275); even where subsequently to the instrument of gift coming into operation she becomes discovert (Haynes v. Foster, [1901] 1 Ch. 361; see, however, Hamilton v. H., [1892] 1 Ch. 396; Re Hargrove, [1915] 1 Ch. 398; Re Tongue, [1915] 2 Ch. 283; Bolster v. B., [1916] 1 Ir. 57). A purported dealing with property subject to the restraint being invalid, did not cause a forfeiture (Re Adamson, Public Trustee v. Billing, 109 L. T. 25). If she is the "true owner" of restrained property, she cannot "consent" to its being in the "order or disposition" of a bankrupt (Re Mills, [1895] 2 Ch. 564). The restraint may control a married woman's statutory powers of disposition (see note, ante, p. 352). The restraint did not prevent a married woman from releasing a power (Re Chisholm, Hemphill v. H., [1901] 2 Ch. 82), nor from barring an entail (Cooper v. Macdonald, 7 Ch. D. 288); nor, where the fee is given to her, did it make the land settled land, so as to give her the powers of a tenant for life under the S. L. Acts (Bates v. Kesterton, [1896] 1 Ch. 159. But see now S. L. Act, 1925, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (iv)). The effect may be to prevent alienation only during a particular period (Re Bown, 27 Ch. D. 411; see Re Spencer, Thomas v. S., 30 Ch. D. 183). A restraint on anticipation will be void if it transgresses the rule against perpetuities (Re Ridley, Buckton v. Hay, 11 Ch. D. 645; Cooper v. Laroche, 17 Ch. D. 368; Shute v. Hogge, 58 L. T. 546; see Re Game, G. v. Tennant, [1907] 1 Ch. 276, and cases there referred to).

Property on which imposed.

The restraint may be imposed on any property whether real (Baggett v. Meux, 1 Phil 627), or personal (ibid.), e.g. an annuity secured by a personal covenant (Macnaghten v. Paterson, [1907] A. C. 492), and whether the property be absolute or for life (Baggett v. Meux, 1 Phil. 627). Where the restraint is attached to an absolute bequest, the question whether it is effectual does not depend on whether the gift is of an income-bearing fund or of a sum of cash (see this distinction taken in the older cases, Re Ellis, 17 Eq. 409; Re Benton, Smith v. S., 19 Ch. D. 277; Re Clarke, 21 Ch. D. 748); but on whether the testator has shown an intention that the trustees are to keep the fund and pay only the income to the married woman, or, on the other hand, an intention that the capital shall be paid to her (Re Bown, O'Halloran v. King, 27 Ch. D. 411). Accordingly, if the intention be that the capital shall be paid to her, this may be done (ibid.; Re Fearon, Hotchkin v. Mayor, 45 W. R. 232; Re Milward, Steedman v. Hobday, 87 L. T. 476; Russell v. Lawder, [1904] 1 I. R. 328; see Re Croughton, 8 Ch. D. 460); but payment will be refused if this intention is absent (Re Grey, Acason v. Greenwood, 34 Ch. D. 712; Re Tippett and Newbold, 37 Ch. D. 444; Re Holmes, Hallows v. Holmes, 67 L. T. 335; see Re Currey, Gibson v. Way, 32 Ch. D. 361, a case of real estate; and see Re Bankes, Reynolds v. Ellis, [1902] 2 Ch. 333). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

What words will create a restraint on anticipation.

No particular form of words is necessary to impose a restraint on anticipation, the question being one of intention (Baker v. Bradley, 25 L. J. Ch. 7). As to what words will create a restraint, see Harrop v. Howard (3 Hare, 624); Moore v. Moore (1 Coll. 54); Medley v. Horton (8 Jur. 853); Brown v. Bamford (1 Phil. 620); Field v. Evans (15 Sim. 375); Harnett v. Macdougall (8 Beav. 187); Steedman v. Poole (6 Hare, 193); Re Ross (1 Sim. 190); Sturgis v. Corp (13 Ves. 190); Parkes v. White (11 Ves. 222); Alexander v. Young (6 Hare, 393); Goulder v. Camm, (1 D. F. & G. 146); Re Lavender ([1898] 1 Ir. R. 175); Bolster v. B. ([1916] 1 I. R. 57). A life estate in land without impeachment of waste is not inconsistent with a restraint on anticipation (Re Lumley, Ex p. Hood-Barrs, [1896] 2 Ch. 690), except in a case of waste (ibid.; Clive v. C., 7 Ch. 433).

Duration of the restraint.

A restraint on anticipation is in force only during coverture (Barton v. Briscoe, Jac. 603; Brown v. Pocock, 2 M. & K. 189; Massey v. Parker, ibid., 174; Woodmeston v. Walker, 2 R. & M. 197; Re Young, 18 Beav. 199), and does not therefore prevent a disposition by will (Re Grey, Acason v. Greenwood, 34 Ch. D. 714; Re Currey, Gibson v. Way, 56 L. T. 80). The restraint continues in force after a decree for judicial separation or a protection order, except (during the separation or protection) as to property acquired after the decree or order (Waite v. Morland, 38 Ch. D. 135; Hill v. Cooper, [1893] 2 Q. B. 85). If property be given to a woman for her separate use subject to a restraint on anticipation, the restraint will operate during any existing or subsequent coverture (Tullett v. Armstrong, 4 M. & C. 377; see Hamilton v. H., [1892] 1 Ch. 396; Stroud v. Edwards, 77 L. T. 280). It may, however, be destroyed by the acts done during discoverture, e.g., by the woman converting the property from its original form (Wright v. W., 2 J. & H. 647), or by entering into a covenant to settle it (Re Wood, W. v. Hooper, 61 L. T. 197; and see Re Chrimes, [1917] 1 Ch. 30). On the creation of the restraint it may be confined to a particular coverture (Re Gaffee, 1 Mac. & G. 541; Shafto v. Butler, 19 W. R. 595). The restraint does not affect income of a married woman which has accrued due (Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, [1896] A. C. 174). A judgment can be enforced against income which has accrued due at the date of the judgment whether it has come to her hands or not (ibid.), but cannot be enforced against income which accrues afterwards (Bolitho v. Gidley, [1905] A. C. 98).

Dispensing with the restraint.

When a trustee has committed a breach of trust at the request of a cestui que trust who is a married woman restrained from anticipation, the Court may, under sect. 62 of the Trustee Act, 1925 (post, where see note), impound her interest to indemnify him. Restrained property may in some cases be made available for payment of costs (Solicitors Act, 1860, sect. 28; M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 2 (post, p. 394)). The Court may also in certain cases dispense with the restraint, under sect. 169 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post. Independently of these provisions, the Court cannot dispense with the restraint, even where it would be for the benefit of the married woman (Robinson v. Wheelwright, 6 D. M. & G. 535; Peillon v. Brooking, 25 Beav. 218; Re Glanvill, Ellis v. Johnson, 31 Ch. D. 532; see Michell v. M., [1891] P. 208); even in cases of fraud (Arnold v. Woodhams, 16 Eq. 29; Stanley v. S., 7 Ch. D. 589).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 78.

In the case of an executory trust for the separate use of a married woman, the Court has directed a restraint on anticipation to be inserted in the settlement (Turner v. Sargent, 17 Beav. 515; Dunnill v. D., I. R. 6 Eq. 323; Loch v. Bagley, 4 Eq. 122; Re Parrott, Walter v. P., 33 Ch. D. 274). See further as to the restraint, the notes to the M. W. P. Act, 1882, post, pp. 371 et seq.

Restraint on alienation in the case of men and unmarried women.

Neither a feme sole nor a man can be restrained from disposing by way of anticipation of any property to which she or he is entitled (Pike v. Fitzgibbon, 17 Ch. D. 464; see Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429, the case of a life interest; and Re Fitzgerald, Surman v. F., [1904] 1 Ch. 573, the case of a Scotch "alimentary provision"). Further, a gift over upon an attempt to alien an absolute interest previously given is void as a condition, both in the case of real and personal estate (Re Dugdale, D. v. D., 38 Ch. D. 180; Re Machu, 21 Ch. D. 838; Hunt-Foulston v. Furber, 3 Ch. D. 285; and see Re Smith, S. v. S., [1916] 1 Ch. 369). But such a gift over will be good if it follows a life interest (Dugdale v. D., sup.; Hurst v. H., 21 Ch. D. 278). So property may be well limited to a man until he shall become bankrupt, and after his bankruptcy over (Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 433). The effect of gifts for life determinable on bankruptcy or alienation was discussed in Samuel v. S. (12 Ch. D. 158); Robertson v. Richardson (30 Ch. D. 623); Metcalfe v. M. ([1891] 3 Ch. 1); Sartoris v. S. ([1892] 1 Ch. 11); Re Cotgrave, Mynors v. C. ([1903] 2 Ch. 705); Re Baker, B. v. B. ([1904] 1 Ch. 157); Re Laye, Turnbull v. L. ([1913] 1 Ch. 298). See also Trustee Act, 1925, s. 33, post.

Condition restraining alienation of realty.

A condition in a feoffment or grant not to alien to any person is void (6 Rep. 41 b; see Bradley v. Peixoto, Tudor's L. C. Conv. 514, 4th ed.). A grantee may, however, be restrained from aliening to a particular person (Large's Case, 2 Leon. 82; 3 Leon. 182; Muschamp's Case, Bridgm. 134). So, a devise in fee on condition that the devisees should not alien, except to their sisters or their children, is good (Doe v. Pearson, 6 East, 172; Cuthbert v. Purrier, Jac. 417; Ross v. R., 1 Jac. & W. 158; Re Macleay, 18 Eq. 186; Martin v. M., 19 L. R. Ir. 72; see, however, Attwater v. A., 18 Beav. 330). But a condition in absolute restraint of alienation during a particular time is void (Rosher v. R., 26 Ch. D. 801).

[Sects. 79 to 90, which prescribed the mode of acknowledgment and required a separate examination of the married woman, were repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924. See for them the second edition of this work, pp. 327 et seq. For the provisions of sects. 84 to 88 there had been substituted those of sect. 7 of the Conv. Act, 1882, itself repealed by L. P. Act, 1925. Sect. 167 of the latter Act (post) provides that as to deeds executed and orders made after December 31, 1925, acknowledgments and separate examination of married women before payments or transfers to them, shall be unnecessary].

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 91.

Court of Common Pleas, in the case of a husband being lunatic, &c., may dispense with his concurrence, except where the Lord Chancellor or other persons entrusted with lunatics, or the Court of Chancery, shall be the protector of a settlement in lieu of the husband.

91. Provided always, that if a husband shall in consequence of being a lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, and whether he shall have been found such by inquisition or not, or shall from any other cause be incapable of executing a deed, [or of making a surrender of lands held by copy of court roll,] or if his residence shall not be known, or he shall be in prison, or shall be living apart from his wife, either by mutual consent or by sentence of divorce, or in consequence of his being transported beyond the seas, or from any other cause whatsoever, it shall be lawful for the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, by an order to be made in a summary way upon the application of the wife, and upon such evidence as to the said Court shall seem meet, to dispense with the concurrence of the husband in any case in which his concurrence is required by this Act or otherwise; and all acts, deeds, or surrenders to be done, executed, or made by the wife in pursuance of such order in regard to lands of any tenure, or in regard to money subject to be invested in the purchase of lands, shall be done, executed, or made by her in the same manner as if she were a feme sole, and when done, executed, or made by her shall (but without prejudice to the rights of the husband as then existing independently of this Act) be as good and valid as they would have been if the husband had concurred: provided always, that this clause shall not extend to the case of a married woman where under this Act the Lord High Chancellor, Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners for the custody of the great seal, or other the person or persons intrusted with the care and commitment of the custody of the persons and estates of persons found lunatic, idiot, or of unsound mind, or His Majesty's High Court of Chancery, shall be the protector of the settlement in lieu of her husband.

The words in square brackets were repealed by L. P. Act (Amendment) Act, 1924. By sect. 167, sub-sect. 3 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post (which removes the necessity of acknowledgment as to deeds executed after 1925), where the Court under any statutory power dispenses with the husband's concurrence, and the Court is satisfied that the wife is entitled to the property for her separate use, the Court may by the order declare that the disposition shall have the same effect as if the husband had concurred therein. See also as to dispositions requiring the husband's concurrence, the Married Women's Reversionary Interests Act, 1857, post. Sect. 2 of that Act, which expressly applied the provisions of this Act for dispensing with the husband's concurrence, was repealed by L. P. Amdt. Act, 1924; but in view of the words "or otherwise" the present section seems to remain applicable.

Application for orders under this section should now be made to the King's Bench Division of the High Court (see Jud. Act, 1873, ss. 16 and 34; Order in Council of 16 Dec. 1880; Re Caine, 10 Q. B. D. 284; Re Giles, [1894] W. N. 73; 70 L. T. 757), though it may be that the Chancery Division has jurisdiction under special circumstances (ibid.; Re Hart (1882), W. N. 36). This section gives no authority to the Court to grant a dispensation order unless the land is actuallly contracted to be sold or conveyed (Re Graham, 13 W. R. 782; see, however, Re Hart (1882), W. N. 36). Where the concurrence of the husband was dispensed with under this section, the deed had not to be acknowledged (Goodchild v. Dougal, 3 Ch. D. 650). A dispensation order under this section does not deprive the husband of his common law rights in the property (Fowke v. Draycott, 29 Ch. D. 996). If an order is obtained by fraud it may be set aside (Ex p. Cockerell, 4 C. P. D. 39).

Husband of unsound mind.

Where the application is on the ground that the husband is of unsound mind, the affidavit must show in distinct terms, or by necessary inference, that the husband is a lunatic at the time of the application (Re Turner, 3 C. B. 166). The Court refused to act upon an affidavit merely stating that the husband and wife were living apart, and that the former was in a very nervous and excitable state, and that it was believed that it would be very difficult, if not wholly impossible, to procure the execution by him of any deed, but required an affidavit showing an ineffectual application to him for the purpose (Re Murphy, 4 M. & G. 635; Re Clare, 49 L. J. C. P. 557). The affidavit as to mental condition should be by a medical man (Re Reeves, 24 W. R. 848; Re Clare, supra).

Husband abroad—

dispensation granted;

Orders have been made in the following cases:—Where the husband had absconded after committing an act of bankruptcy, and had never been heard of since (Ex p. Gill, 1 Bing. N. R. 168; see Cruise's Dig. vol. vii. p. 1, 4th ed.). Where the husband had resided abroad for more than twenty years with another woman (Ex p. Shirley, 5 Bing. (N.S.) 226). Where the husband had absconded from home, and had since sailed for a foreign port, and had been made a bankrupt (Ex p. Stone, 9 Dowl. P. C. 843). Where it appeared that the parties lived together only seventeen weeks after marriage, when the husband went away, and the wife after many inquiries was not able to find him (Anon., 2 Jur. 945). Where the affidavit stated that about two months previously the husband went to Australia with the intention of never returning (Re Kelsey, 16 C. B. 197).

The Court refused to dispense with the concurrence of a husband in the following cases:—Where the wife's affidavit merely stated that her husband entered a government steamer in January, 1844, and that the last the wife had heard of him was, that in January, 1845, he was on board another government steamer at New Zealand; and that she believed it was his intention never to return (Ex p. Gilmore, 3 C. B. 967). Where it appeared that the husband was in correspondence with the wife, and remitting sums of money for her support, however small (Re Squires, 17 C. B. 176). Where, in 1852, the husband went to Australia and had not been heard of since 1857, and the wife deposed to her belief that he would never return to this country, it also appearing that no application had been made to him to concur (Re Eden, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 232). Upon the mere statement that the husband, a seaman, had gone abroad, and had not been heard of for some years, and that the wife had been informed that he was dead. The affidavit must show some reasonable ground for presuming the statement to be true (Ex p. Taylor, 7 C. B. 1).

Husband and wife separated.

Under the words of the section as to living apart, orders have been made in the following cases:—Where she and her husband lived separate from each other, and he had been found lunatic by inquisition (Ex p. Thomas, 4 M. & Scott, 331). Where the husband left his wife, and she had never heard of him since, and his present residence was altogether unknown to her; and where, if the application were not granted, the wife would be liable to incur a forfeiture (Ex p. Shuttleworth, 4 M. & Scott, 332, n. (b); see Re Hart (1882), W. N. 36). Where she held the property as trustee for sale, and they were living apart, and the husband contributed to her support, but refused to concur except on payment (Re Caine, 10 Q. B. D. 284). Where the husband had deserted the wife, but they were in communication (Ex p. Sutcliffe, 29 L. T. 747; see, however, Re Horsfall, 3 M. & G. 132). An order was refused where the wife had left her husband in consequence of his violence (Re Price, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 286). In addition to an affidavit that the parties were living apart, the Court has required a further affidavit that the husband has refused to concur (Ex p. Trenery, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 187), and that he contributes nothing to the wife's support (Ex p. Fish, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 715; Re Carburton, 16 W. R. 84; Re Fletcher, 17 W. R. 319; Ex p. Robinson, L. R. 4 C. P. 205). An order having been made upon the usual affidavit that the husband and wife were living apart by mutual consent, the Court refused to rescind the order after it had been acted upon, and the rights of third parties had intervened, upon the application of the husband, who swore that though he resided apart from his wife (upon an allowance made to him out of her separate estate) he occasionally visited and slept with her (Re Rogers, L. R. 1 C. P. 47). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 91.

Wife's separate property.

In cases not within the M. W. P. Act, 1882, where there are no trustees of separate property, the husband is trustee of the legal estate (Bennet v. Davis, 2 P. Wms. 316). Orders under this section to enable a married woman to convey the legal estate in her separate property have been made in the following cases:—Where the husband was a minor (Re Haigh, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 198). Where he had absconded, and had not been heard of for eighteen years, although it also appeared that she had in the meantime married again (Ex p. Yarnall, 17 C. B. 189). Where the husband lived separate from his wife and had refused to execute the deed (Re Perrin, 14 C. B. 420; Re Woodcock, 1 C. B. 437). As to conveyance of separate property by a married woman when living apart by a sentence of judicial separation without alimony, see Ex p. Andrews (19 C. B. (N.S.) 371). As to the equitable interest in a married woman's separate property, see ante, p. 354.

Affidavits.

The Court will not dispense with the affidavit of the married woman herself (Ex p. Bruce, 9 Dowl. P. C. 840), and if speechless, she must be examined (Re Williams, 1 M. & G. 881). The affidavit is sufficient if sworn (where the party is residing abroad) before an officer, whom the certificate of a notary public certifies to be a person empowered by law to take affidavits (Re Schiff, 1 Dowl. & L. 911). The affidavit must describe the deponent as "the wife of, &c.," even though circumstances are disclosed showing a well-grounded belief that the husband is dead (Ex p. Sparrow, 12 C. B. 334; Re Noy, 7 Scott, N. R. 434; Re Anderson, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 811). The affidavit must contain the addition or description of the husband (Re Gardner, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 215; see also Re Firth (1872), W. N. 220).

Form of rule to dispense with husband's concurrence.

An order under this section was made in the following form:—"It is ordered that the said Ann Tanner Duffill be at liberty, by deed or surrender, to dispose of, release, surrender or extinguish all her estate and interest of and in the hereditaments and premises in the said affidavit mentioned, to such person or persons as she may think fit, without the concurrence of her said husband, it appearing to the Court, by the said affidavit, that the said Henry Holland Duffill is living apart from his said wife by sentence of divorce" (Ex p. Duffill, 5 M. & G. 378).

Final proviso

See, in connection with the final proviso in the above section, sects. 24, 33, and Re Wainwright (1 Phil. 258).

II.—The Married Women's Reversionary Interests Act, 1857.

20 & 21 Vict. c. 57.

An Act to enable Married Women to dispose of Reversionary Interests in Personal Estate. [25th August, 1857.]

20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

Be it enacted as follows:

Married women may dispose of reversionary interests in personal estate, and release powers over such estate, and also their rights to a settlement out of such estate in possession.

1. After the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, it shall be lawful for every married woman by deed to dispose of (d) every future or reversionary interest, whether vested or contingent, of such married woman, or her husband in her right, in any personal estate whatsoever, to which she shall be entitled under any instrument made after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven (e) (except such a settlement as after mentioned), and also to release or extinguish any power (f) which may be vested in or limited or reserved to her in regard to any such personal estate, as fully and effectually as she could do if she were a feme sole, and also to release and extinguish her right or equity to a settlement out of any personal estate to which she, or her husband in her right, may be entitled in possession under any such instrument as aforesaid, save and except that no such disposition, release or extinguishment shall be valid unless the husband concur in the deed by which the same shall be effected, [nor unless the deed be acknowledged by her as hereinafter directed]: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to any reversionary interest to which she shall become entitled by virtue of any deed, will or instrument, by which she shall be restrained from alienating or affecting the same.

The bracketed words were repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924. Sect. 167 of L. P. Act, 1925, post, makes acknowledgment unnecessary in the case of deeds executed after 1925.

Married woman unable to dispose of reversionary choses in action not settled to her separate use, except under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57.

(d) For a married woman's power of disposition over reversionary interests in personalty settled to her separate use, see the note to Fines and Recoveries Act, s. 78, ante, p. 355. As regards her reversionary interests in personalty not settled to her separate use, it was well established before the present Act that a husband could not assign or release his wife's reversionary choses in action so as to bind her surviving (Honner v. Morton, 3 Russ. 65); and the fact of her joining in the assignment made no difference (Purdew v. Jackson, 1 Russ. 1; Cresswell v. Dewell, 4 Giff. 460; see Winter v. Easum, 2 D. J. & S. 272; Bolitho v. Hillyar, 34 Beav. 180; Rogers v. Acaster, 14 Beav. 445; Hore v. Becher, 12 Sim. 465; Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, L. R. 2 P. C. 87). Nor could a married woman by election part with her reversionary choses in action (Williams v. Mayne, I. R. 1 Eq. 519; see Harle v. Jarman, [1895]

2 Ch. 419; quoted, ante, p. 350). A husband and wife could not effectually dispose of the life interest of the wife in a fund not settled to her separate use beyond the duration of the coverture (Stiffe v. Everitt, 1 M. & C. 37; Re Godfrey, I. R. 1 Eq. 533). A husband and son, having surrendered their respective interests in a fund to the wife, for the purpose of enabling her to assign it to the son, the Court refused to permit a merger (Whittle v. Henning, 2 Phill. C. C. 731; Story v. Tonge, 7 Beav. 91; Hanchett v. Briscoe, 22 Beav. 496; see, however, 14 Sim. 592—599; Bishop v. Colebrooke, 16 Sim. 39; and see Re Davenport, Turner v. King, [1895] 1 Ch. 361, a case since the M. W. P. Act, 1882, and dealing with separate property). As to binding by covenant in an ante-nuptial settlement the reversionary interests acquired by a married woman during coverture but not falling into possession until after its termination, see Lloyd v. Pritchard, [1908] 1 Ch. 265. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, s. 1.

An assignment under this Act ought not to be regarded as that of the husband and wife according to their respective interests (Re Batchelor, Sloper v. Oliver, 16 Eq. 485). The real disposing party is the wife (Re Jakeman, 23 Ch. D. 351). Where the property assigned consisted of a wife's reversionary interest under a will, the assignment prevented the executors from exercising any right of retainer over the interest assigned in respect of a debt due from the husband to the testator (Re Batchelor, supra; compare the effect on such retainer of the wife's equity to a settlement: Re Briant, Poulter v. Shackel, 39 Ch. D. 471). A policy of insurance effected by a married woman in her own name may be disposed of under this Act (Witherby v. Rackham, 60 L. J. Ch. 511; 39 W. R. 393; see Re Turner, T. v. Fitzroy, 66 L. T. 758). But mere possibilities or expectancies are not within this Act (Allcard v. Walker, [1896] 2 Ch. 369). Cases under section.

If the Infant's Settlement Act, 1855, applies to post-nuptial settlements, it does not enable a married woman to evade the formalities of this Act (Seaton v. Seaton, 13 App. Cas. 70).

An acknowledgment under this Act by a married woman of an assignment was taken into consideration even where the Act did not apply (Roberts v. Cooper, [1891] 2 Ch. 335).

(e) An appointment of a reversionary interest in personalty by deed after 1857, under a special power in a deed dated before 1857, does not bring the interest within this Act, even if the prior life interest is assigned at the same time (Re Butler, I. R. 3 Eq. 138); nor did the powers of the Act apply where the reversionary interest arose under a will dated before 1857, but the testator had made a codicil (not confirming the will) since 1857 (Re Elcom, Layborn v. Grover Wright, [1894] 1 Ch. 303). But where a woman was entitled to a reversionary interest created before 1857, and after 1857 while unmarried re-settled that interest, the power of the Act applied (Re Bennett, Capes v. Ferrand, 73 L. T. 17).

(f) As to the various kinds of powers, their suspension and extinction, and as to the execution of powers by married women, see the note to Fines and Recoveries Act, s. 78, ante, p. 353. Powers.

[Sect. 2, requiring deeds executed by married women to be acknowledged in manner required by the Fines and Recoveries Act, ante, and applying the provisions of that Act, was repealed by L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924. Sect. 167, sub-sect. 1 of L. P. Act, 1925, post, makes acknowledgment unnecessary in the case of dispositions under this Act, made after 1925, if made with the husband's concurrence. See as to dispensing with that concurrence, sect. 91 of the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, ante, and sect. 167, sub-sect. 3 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post].

20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, s. 3.

The powers of disposition given by this Act not to interfere with any other powers.

3. Provided always, that the powers of disposition given to a married woman by this Act shall not interfere with any power which independently of this Act may be vested in or limited or reserved to her, so as to prevent her from exercising such power in any case, except so far as by any disposition made by her under this Act she may be prevented from so doing, in consequence of such power having been suspended or extinguished by such disposition.

Act not to extend to settlements of married women upon marriage.

4. Provided always, that the powers of disposition hereby given to a married woman shall not enable her to dispose of any interest in personal estate settled upon her by any settlement or agreement for a settlement made on the occasion of her marriage.

An agreement in contemplation of marriage was executed by the husband and wife to settle a money fund of the wife's for her separate use—to return to the husband if he should survive. The Court considered that the wife was to have the absolute interest in the event of her surviving, and that the case fell within the exception contained in this section (Clarke v. Green, 2 H. & M. 474).

Not to extend to Scotland.

5. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

III.—The Married Women's Property Act, 1870.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 93.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Property of Married Women. [9th August, 1870.]

33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 1.

Whereas it is desirable to amend the law of property and contract with respect to married women:

Be it enacted as follows:

Earnings of married women to be deemed their own property.

1. The wages and earnings of any married woman acquired or gained by her after the passing of this Act in any employment, occupation, or trade in which she is engaged or which she carries on separately from her husband, and also any money or property so acquired by her through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, and all investments of such wages, earnings, money, or property, shall be deemed and taken to be property held and settled to her separate use, independent of any husband to whom she may be married, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for such wages, earnings, money, and property.

This Act has been repealed, saving all Acts done and rights or liabilities acquired thereunder (M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 22, post, p. 392). As to the object of the Act see R. v. Harrald, L. R. 7 Q. B. 361. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 1.

Under the law before this Act a husband might in his own name recover his wife's wages (Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 7), or the profits of a business carried on by her (Savile v. Sweeny, 4 B. & Ad. 524). And payment to her of her own earnings was not good, unless she had her husband's authority to receive them (Offley v. Clay, 2 M. & G. 172). As to a married woman's separate trading before this Act under her husband's agreement, see 2 Bright's Husband and Wife, 292; and under the custom of the city of London, see 2 Bright, 76. Law before the section.

The question whether a trade was carried on by a married woman separately from her husband was held to be one of fact, to be determined on the circumstances of the case (Petty v. Anderson, 3 Bing. 170; Smallpiece v. Dawes, 7 C. & P. 40; Lovell v. Newton, 4 C. P. D. 7; Laporte v. Cortick, 31 L. T. 434; 23 W. R. 131; Whittaker v. W., 46 L. T. 802; 30 W. R. 787; Re Dearmer, James v. D., 53 L. T. 905). All the stock-in-trade and property connected with the trade was protected by this section, as well as the earnings (Ashworth v. Outram, 5 Ch. D. 923). The earnings were equitable assets (Re Poole, Thompson v. Bennett, 6 Ch. D. 739). This section did not protect the earnings from an unlawful industry (Mason v. Mitchell, 34 L. J. Ex. 68). As to the liability of the husband in respect of a separate trade of his wife, see Re Shepherd (39 L. T. 652). And as to a married woman's bankruptcy, see the note to sect. 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, post, p. 377. Cases under the section.

[By sect. 2, deposits in savings banks and government annuities in the name of a married woman were deemed to be her separate property, subject to a power for the Court to order payment to the husband when his money had been used without his consent. By sect. 3, a married woman or woman about to be married might require any sum she was entitled to in the public funds to be placed in her name as a married woman entitled to her separate use, and while so entered it was to be deemed her separate property, subject to a power for the Court to order transfer to the husband of investments made with his money without his consent. (For orders under this section, see Re Bartholomew, 23 L. T. 433; Re Butlin, ibid., 523; Re Tanner (1874), W. N. 198; Howard v. Bank of England, 19 Eq. 295). Sect. 4 contained similar provisions in regard to shares, debentures, &c., in joint stock companies (see R. v. Carnatic Ry. Co., L. R. 8 Q. B. 299; and as to previous law, Re Matthewman, 3 Eq. 788; Butler v. Cumpston, 7 Eq. 16; Dalton v. Midland Ry. Co., 13 C. B. 474). Sect. 5 contained similar provisions in regard to a woman's interest in industrial and other societies. Sect. 6 provided for the case of investments made in fraud of creditors. See, now, as to these matters, sects. 6—10 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882.] Sects. 2—6.

7. Where any woman married after the passing of this Act shall, during her marriage become entitled to any personal property as next of kin or one of the next of kin of an intestate, or to any sum of money not exceeding two hundred pounds under any deed or will, such property shall, subject and without prejudice to the trusts of any settlement affecting the same, belong to the woman for her separate use, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for the same. Personal property not exceeding £200 coming to a married woman to be her own.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 7.

The words "become entitled" include the case of a reversionary legacy falling into possession (Lane v. Oakes, 30 L. T. 726; 22 W. R. 709). The limit of £200 applies only to sums given by deed or will (Re Voss, King v. V., 13 Ch. D. 504). Where a married woman was entitled under the same will to a reversionary legacy and also to a share of residue, which, taken separately, were each of them less than £200, but taken together exceeded £200 they were not aggregated, but each was made "separate" by the section (Re Davies, Harrison v. D., [1897] 2 Ch. 204).

Before this Act, a legacy left to a married woman in general terms must have been paid to her husband (Palmer v. Trevor, 1 Vern. 262). Where, however, she had obtained a protection order under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 25, payment to herself was ordered (Re Kingsley, 6 W. R. 849; Re Rainsdon, 4 Drew. 446).

The inaccuracy of the marginal note to this section should be observed. The marginal note forms no part of the Act (Sutton v. S., 22 Ch. D. 511; Claydon v. Green, L. R. 3 C. P. 511; Re Venour, V. v. Sellon, 2 Ch. D. 522; Att.-Gen v. G. E. Ry. Co., 11 Ch. D. 461, 465; see, however, as to private Acts, Re Woking Urban Council Act, [1914] 1 Ch. 322). But the title is an important part of the Act (Fielding v. Morley, [1899] 1 Ch. 41), and should be looked at to ascertain its objects (R. v. Cockerton, [1901] 1 Q. B. 731; Jones v. Sherrington, [1908] 2 K. B. 547). The scope of an Act may be limited by the title (Fielding v. Morley, supra) or not (Re Groos, [1904] P. 273). The preamble also may be referred to where the enacting words of the sections are not clear (Re Griffith, Carr v. G., 12 Ch. D. 661; see further Re Harkness and Allsopp, [1896] 2 Ch. 361; Powell v. Kempton Co., [1897] 2 Q. B. 265; Att.-Gen. v. Margate Co., [1900] 1 Ch. 749).

Freehold property coming to a married woman, rents and profits only to be her own.

8. Where any freehold, copyhold, or customaryhold property shall descend upon any woman married after the passing of this Act as heiress or co-heiress of an intestate, the rents and profits of such property shall, subject and without prejudice to the trusts of any settlement affecting the same, belong to such woman for her separate use, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for the same.

This section did not enable a married woman to convey the fee simple of descended freeholds by an unacknowledged deed. The "rents and profits" are only such as can be personally enjoyed by her (Johnson v. J., 35 Ch. D. 345; see Re Voss, King v. V., 13 Ch. D. 504).

[Sect 9 contained provisions for settling questions between husband and wife. See now sect. 17 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882.]

Married woman may effect policy of insurance.

10. A married woman may effect a policy of insurance upon her own life or the life of her husband for her separate use, and the same and all benefit thereof, if expressed on the face of it to be so effected, shall enure accordingly, and the contract in such policy shall be as valid as if made with an unmarried woman.

As to insurance of a

A policy of insurance effected by any married man on his own life, and expressed upon the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife or of his wife and children, or any of them, shall enure and be deemed a trust for the benefit of his wife for her separate use, and of his children, or any of them, according to the interest so expressed, and shall not, so long as any object of the trust remains, be subject to the control of the husband or to his creditors, or form part of his estate. When the sum secured by the policy becomes payable, or at any time previously, a trustee thereof may be appointed by the Court of Chancery in England or in Ireland according as the policy of insurance was effected in England or in Ireland, or in England by the judge of the county court of the district, or in Ireland by the chairman of the civil bill court of the division of the county in which the insurance office is situated, and the receipt of such trustee shall be a good discharge to the office. If it shall be proved that the policy was effected and premiums paid by the husband with intent to defraud his creditors, they shall be entitled to receive out of the sum secured an amount equal to the premiums so paid.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 10.

husband for benefit of his wife.

Old law.

Independently of this Act it has been held that a wife has an insurable interest in the life of her husband (Reed v. Royal Exchange Co., Peake's Add. Cases, 70), and a husband in that of his wife (Griffiths v. Fleming, [1909] 1 K. B. 805).

As to policies effected since January 1, 1883, see the further provisions of sect. 11 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882 (post, p. 384). The following cases have been decided under the above section of the Act of 1870. Where a policy taken out by a married woman contained a recital that she was desirous of effecting an insurance in terms of the provisions of this Act for the benefit of her children, it was held that no interest passed to them by reason merely of the mention of them (Re Burgess' Policy, 85 L. J. Ch. 273).

Cases under this section

Where the husband substituted for a policy he already had a policy expressed to be for the benefit of his wife, the latter was within this section (Holt v. Everall, 2 Ch. D. 266). Under a policy expressed to be for the benefit of wife and children, the wife and children took as joint tenants (Re Seyton, S. v. Satterthwaite, 34 Ch. D. 511; Re Davies, [1892] 1 Ch. 90). Where the trust was for the wife and children as the husband should appoint, but no appointment was made, the wife and children took in equal shares (Re Edwards, 41 L. T. 434). An after-taken wife is within the trust created by the words of this Act (Re Parker, [1906] 1 Ch. 526). But on the words of a particular policy she did not participate (Re Griffith, [1903] 1 Ch. 739). Policies under this Act were not a satisfaction of a covenant to settle money on the settlor's wife and children (Cartwright v. C., [1903] 2 Ch. 306).

On an application under this section to appoint trustees there is no jurisdiction to declare the rights of the parties (Re Adams, 23 Ch. D. 525; but see Re Mellor, 6 Ch. D. 127). When the husband became of unsound mind, trustees were appointed and authorised to surrender the policy for a fully paid one of less amount (Schultze v. S., 56 L. T. 231). A single trustee will not be appointed (ibid.; Re Howson (1885), W. N. 213). As to a policy effected by a husband for the benefit of his wife who was subsequently convicted of murdering him, see Cleaver v. Mutual Association ([1892] 1 Q. B. 147.) In the case of policies effected under this Act, sect. 11 of the 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 10.

M. W. P. Act, 1882, does not apply, and on the death of the husband a trustee must be appointed under this section; the petition being entitled under the Act of 1870 only (Re Adams, 23 Ch. D. 525; Re Turnbull, T. v. T., [1897] 2 Ch. 415; Re Kuyper, [1899] 1 Ch. 38; see contra, Re Soutar, 26 Ch. D. 236). The application may be made by petition (Re Atkinson, 13 R. 285).

[Sect. 11 contained provisions as to a married woman suing. See now the M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 1, sub-s. 2, and note, p. 374, post.]

Husband not to be liable on his wife's contracts before marriage.

12. A husband shall not, by reason of any marriage which shall take place after this Act has come into operation, be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage, but the wife shall be liable to be sued for, and any property belonging to her for her separate use shall be liable to satisfy, such debts as if she had continued unmarried.

Old law.

According to the old law a husband was liable at law for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage (2 Bright, Husband and Wife, 2). And in equity her separate property was liable to satisfy such debts (Biscoe v. Kennedy, 1 Bro. C. C. 17, n.; Chubb v. Stretch, 9 Eq. 555).

Cases under this section.

Having regard to sects. 22 and 13 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882, this section and the decisions thereunder remain of importance with respect to women married before the last-mentioned Act. Under this section such a married woman's separate property was made liable at law to satisfy debts contracted by her before marriage. The section was held to extend to property settled to her separate use without power of anticipation (Sanger v. S., 11 Eq. 470; London Bank v. Bogle, 7 Ch. D. 773; Re Hedgely, Small v. H., 34 Ch. D. 379; Axford v. Reid, 22 Q. B. D. 548). See as to women married since 1882, Birmingham v. Lane, [1904] 1 K. B. 38. An order under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), s. 5, may be made upon such a married woman (Dillon v. Cunningham, L. R. 8 Ex. 23). As to her arrest in execution for a debt contracted dum sola, see Nagle v. O'Donnell (I. R. 7 C. L. 79). A judgment may also be given against a married woman under R. S. C., Ord. 14, r. 1, without proof of the existence of separate estate (Downe v. Fletcher, 21 Q. B. D. 11). But this section does not make her liable to the bankruptcy law (Re Grissell, 12 Ch. D. 484; Ex p. Holland, Re Heneage, 9 Ch. 307; see Day v. Freunel, 35 L. T. 551; R. v. Robinson, L. R. 1 C. C. 80). Where a woman joined with a surety in making a promissory note which fell due and on which judgment was recovered before her marriage, the surety who had paid the full amount after her marriage could not recover against the husband (Conlon v. Moore, I. R. 9 C. L. 190). As to the liability of the husband in the case of marriages from 1874 to 1882, see M. W. P. Act, 1874 (post, p. 369). And in the case of marriages after 1882, see M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 14, post, p. 387).

[Sects. 13 and 14 rendered a married woman liable for the maintenance of her husband and children. See now sects. 20 and 21 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882, post, p. 392.]

Commencement of Act.

15. This Act shall come into operation at the time of the passing of this Act.

16. This Act shall not extend to Scotland. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 16.

Act not to extend to Scotland.

17. This Act may be cited as the Married Women's Property Act, 1870.

Short title.

IV.—The Married Women's Property Act, 1870, Amendment Act, 1874.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 50.

An Act to amend the Married Women's Property Act (1870).

[30th July, 1874.]

Whereas it is not just that the property which a woman has at the time of her marriage should pass to her husband, and that he should not be liable for her debts contracted before marriage, and the law as to the recovery of such debts requires amendment:

Be it enacted as follows:

37 & 38 Vict. c. 50, s. 1.

1. So much of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, as enacts that a husband shall not be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage is repealed so far as respects marriages which shall take place after the passing of this Act, and a husband and wife married after the passing of this Act may be jointly sued for any such debt.

Husband and wife may be jointly sued for her debts before marriage.

This Act has been repealed saving all acts done and rights or liabilities acquired thereunder (M. W. P. Act, 1882, sect. 22, post, p. 392).

2. The husband shall, in such action and in any action brought for damages sustained by reason of any tort committed by the wife before marriage or by reason of the breach of any contract made by the wife before marriage, be liable for the debt or damages respectively to the extent only of the assets hereinafter specified; and in addition to any other plea or pleas may plead that he is not liable to pay the debt or damages in respect of any such assets as hereinafter specified; or, confessing his liability to some amount, that he is not liable beyond what he so confesses; and if no such plea is pleaded the husband shall be deemed to have confessed his liability so far as assets are concerned.

Extent to which husband liable.

The liability of the husband under this Act ceases on the death of his wife (Bell v. Stocker, 10 Q. B. D. 129). An Englishman marrying a native of Jersey, where a husband is liable for his wife's ante-nuptial debts, is protected in England by this Act (De Greuchy v. Wills, 4 C. P. D. 363). Notwithstanding this Act a husband was, under sect. 78 of the Companies Act, 1862, liable as a contributory in his own right on shares registered in the name of his wife, though acquired by her before her marriage (Ex p. Hatcher, 12 Ch. D. 284). See now, as to women married before the M. W. P. Act, 1882, Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, sect. 128; Buckley, 9th ed., 298, 68. And see as to the law under the M. W. P. Act, 1882, sects. 7 and 13 of that Act, post, pp. 382, 386.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 50, s. 2.

Under this section it is sufficient to allege in the statement of claim that the husband is liable for the debts, without alleging that he has received assets from his wife (Matthews v. Whittle, 13 Ch. D. 811).

If husband without assets he shall have judgment for costs.

3. If it is not found in such action that the husband is liable in respect of any such assets, he shall have judgment for his costs of defence, whatever the result of the action may be against the wife.

Creditors were allowed to add to their debt and recover against the wife costs which they had to pay to the husband under this section (London Bank v. Bogle, 7 Ch. D. 773).

Joint and separate judgment against husband and wife for debt.

4. When a husband and wife are sued jointly, if by confession or otherwise it appears that the husband is liable for the debt or damages recovered, or any part thereof, the judgment to the extent of the amount for which the husband is liable shall be a joint judgment against the husband and wife, and as to the residue, if any, of such debt or damages, the judgment shall be a separate judgment against the wife.

Assets for which husband liable.

5. The assets in respect of and to the extent of which the husband shall in any such action be liable are as follows:

(1.) The value of the personal estate in possession of the wife which shall have vested in the husband:

(2.) The value of the choses in action of the wife which the husband shall have reduced into possession, or which with reasonable diligence he might have reduced into possession:

(3.) The value of the chattels real of the wife which shall have vested in the husband and wife:

(4.) The value of the rents and profits of the real estate of the wife which the husband shall have received, or with reasonable diligence might have received:

(5.) The value of the husband's estate or interest in any property, real or personal, which the wife in contemplation of her marriage with him shall have transferred to him or to any other person:

(6.) The value of any property, real or personal, which the wife in contemplation of her marriage with the husband shall with his consent have transferred to any person with the view of defeating or delaying her existing creditors:

Provided that when the husband after marriage pays any debt of his wife or has a judgment bona fide recovered against him in any such action as is in this Act mentioned, then to the extent of such payment or judgment the husband shall not in any subsequent action be liable. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 50, s. 5.

6. This Act shall not extend to Scotland. Extent of Act.

7. This Act may be cited as the Married Women's Property Act (1870) Amendment Act, 1874. Short title.

V.—The Married Women's Property Act, 1882.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75.

An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts relating to the Property of Married Women. [18th August, 1882.]

Be it enacted as follows:

1. (1) A married woman shall, in accordance with the provisions of this Act, be capable of acquiring, holding, and disposing by will or otherwise, of any real or personal property as her separate property, in the same manner as if she were a feme sole, without the intervention of any trustee (e). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1. Married woman to be capable of holding property and of contracting as a feme sole.

(2.) A married woman shall be capable of entering into and rendering herself liable in respect of and to the extent of her separate property on any contract, and of suing and being sued, either in contract or in tort, or otherwise, in all respects as if she were a feme sole, and her husband need not be joined with her as plaintiff or defendant, or be made a party to any action or other legal proceeding brought by or taken against her; and any damages or costs recovered by her in any such action or proceeding shall be her separate property; and any damages or costs recovered against her in any such action or proceeding shall be payable out of her separate property, and not otherwise (f).

(3.) Every contract entered into by a married woman shall be deemed to be a contract entered into by her with respect to and to bind her separate property, unless the contrary be shown (g).

(4.) Every contract entered into by a married woman with respect to and to bind her separate property shall bind not only the separate property which she is possessed of or entitled to at the date of the contract, but also all separate property which she may thereafter acquire (g).

[(5.) Every married woman carrying on a trade separately from her husband shall in respect of her separate property, be subject to the bankruptcy laws in the same way as if she were a feme sole (h).]

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

This sub-section was repealed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, and the following section (reproducing sect. 12, sub-sects 1 and 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1913) substituted:—"Sect. 125 (1). Every married woman who carries on a trade or business, whether separately from her husband or not, shall be subject to the bankruptcy laws as if she were a feme sole; (2) Where a married woman carries on a trade or business and a final judgment or order for any amount has been obtained against her, whether or not expressed to be payable out of her separate property, that judgment or order shall be available for bankruptcy proceedings against her by a bankruptcy notice as though she were personally bound to pay the judgment debt or sum ordered to be paid."

The phraseology of this Act appears to have been taken from Lord Thurlow's judgment in Hulme v. Tenant, 1 Br. C. C. 16 (Farwell, Powers, 182).

Sub-sect. (1).

(e) Sub-sect. 1 is to be construed along with sects. 2 and 5 (Re Cuno, Mansfield v. M., 43 Ch. D. 12). Accordingly, in the case of a woman married before 1883, sub-sect. 1 applies only to property acquired since 1882 (ibid.; sect. 5, post; Re Harris, 28 Ch. D. 171). Similarly, it has been held to apply only to what is done by the married woman during coverture in relation to property of which during coverture she is possessed (Re Price, Stafford v. S., 28 Ch. D. 712). A gift or conveyance to a married woman and her husband since the Act created a joint tenancy, not a tenancy by entireties as before the Act, the share of the wife being for her separate use (Re Jupp, Jupp v. Buckwell, 39 Ch. D. 148; Thornley v. T., [1893] 2 Ch. 229). But the capacity of a married woman was only altered as between herself and her husband; so in the case of a gift to a husband and wife and a third person, the construction, as regards the amount taken by the husband and wife, was not altered by the Act (Re Jupp, supra; Re March, Mander v. Harris, 27 Ch. D. 166, 170; see Re Dixon, Byram v. Tull, 42 Ch. D. 306; Re Gue, Smith v. G., 61 L. J. Ch. 510; 67 L. T. 823; Re Jeffery, Nussey v. J., [1914] 1 Ch. 375). But by sect. 37 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post, a husband and wife are, for all purposes of acquisition of any interest in property under a disposition made or coming into operation after 1925, to be treated as two persons. In the disposition of land to which the wife was beneficially entitled the Act of 1882 (where it applied) abolished the necessity of the husband's concurrence and an acknowledged deed (Re Drummond and Davie, [1891] 1 Ch. 531). This rule governs the case of real estate conveyed to her by way of mortgage to secure money which was her separate property (Re Brooke and Fremlin, [1898] 1 Ch. 647); and also the case of real property held by her as trustee or personal representative (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 170 (2)); and as to all deeds executed after 1925, acknowledgment is unnecessary (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 167, post).

The "separate property" referred to in the Act does not include an unexercised general power of appointment by deed or will (Ex p. Gilchrist, 17 Q. B. D. 521; compare sect. 4, post).

The separate use arising by virtue of this Act is sufficient to support a restraint on anticipation (Re Lumley, Ex p. Hood-Barrs, [1896] 2 Ch. 690).

Where money was bequeathed in trust as to the income for a woman married since 1882 for life, and as to the capital as she should appoint by will, and in default for her executors, administrators and assigns, it was held that the reversion was under the Act her separate property, and that on her releasing her power the two interests would coalesce, and she would be absolutely entitled (Re Davenport, Turner v. King, [1895] 1 Ch. 361; see Re Williams, Williams v. Grant, 76 L. T. 150). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

Since this Act wearing apparel given by a husband to his wife is prima facie her separate property (Masson v. De Fries, [1909] 2 K. B. 831). As regards paraphernalia it was pointed out that under the old common law all the wife's personal chattels were the husband's property. As an exception the common law gave a widow paraphernalia (something over and above dower), namely a right after her husband's death to keep as her own property certain personal chattels of which she had had the use during coverture. The husband's common law rights having been destroyed by the present Act, the above exception was said by Farwell, L.J., to exist no longer (Masson v. De Fries, [1909] 2 K. B. 836). A husband may discharge his obligation to provide his wife with necessary wearing apparel by lending it to her (Rondeau Legrand v. Marks, [1918] 1 K. B. 75). Paraphernalia.

The provisions of this Act relating to the wills of married women are sect. 1, sub-sect. 1, and sect. 4; see also sect. 23, and M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 3, post, p. 395. Sect. 1, sub-sect. 1, did not enable a married woman by a will made during coverture to dispose of property acquired after coverture (Re Price, Stafford v. S., 28 Ch. D. 709; see Re Cuno, Mansfield v. M., 43 Ch. D. 12; see now M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 3, post, p. 395). A married woman can by will make a good gift for the maintenance of a churchyard (Re Douglas, D. v. Simpson, [1905] 1 Ch. 279). A direction for payment of debts in the will of a married woman made the arrears of a restrained annuity assets for paying damages for a breach of her covenant (Sprange v. Lee, [1908] 1 Ch. 424). Having regard to the testamentary power conferred by statute on a married woman, her will can now raise a case of election against her husband (Re Harris, Leacroft v. H., [1909] 2 Ch. 206). Wills and intestacy.

As to the effect of this Act on a will dated prior to its passing, see Re Bowen, James v. J. ([1892] 2 Ch. 291); and as to the wills of married women independently of this Act, and the present form of probate of wills of married women, see note to sect. 8 of the Wills Act, post.

As regards the beneficial title to a married woman's property after her death, it has been decided that, notwithstanding this Act, a husband is entitled to recover from his wife's executor separate personalty undisposed of by her (Re Lambert, Stanton v. L., 39 Ch. D. 626), and also non-separate choses in action, not reduced into possession during the coverture (Smart v. Tranter, 43 Ch. D. 587; see Miners v. Lawry, 60 S. J. 666). On the death intestate of a married woman, her separate leaseholds may be taken by her husband, without taking out administration, subject, however, to any contracts binding them (Surman v. Wharton, [1891] 1 Q. B. 491); see Re Bellamy, Elder v. Pearson, 25 Ch. D. 620). A husband is still entitled to curtesy in real estate as to which his wife has died intestate (Hope v. H., [1892] 2 Ch. 336).

(f) The word "contract" in the M. W. P. Act, 1882, includes the acceptance of the office of trustee or executrix (sect. 24, post). It was said that the words of sub-sect. 2 do not create any personal liability; they only subject the married woman to a "proprietary liability"—i.e., in respect of her separate property (Scott v. Morley, 20 Q. B. D. 128; Draycott v. Harrison, 17 Q. B. D. 153. But see as to this Pelton v. Harrison, [1892] 1 Q. B. 118; Holtby v. Hodgson, 24 Q. B. D. 103). Sub-sect. (2).

Under this sub-section a married woman can with her husband enter into a joint contract with a stranger (Hoare v. Niblett, [1891] 1 Q. B. 781). Such a joint liability cannot be implied from the fact Joint contracts by married woman.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

that a married woman, who is residing with her husband and has herself separate estate, orders necessaries for the household (Morel v. Westmoreland, [1903] 1 K. B. 78; [1904] A. C. 11; compare Re Shaw, S. v. Jones, 94 L. T. 93). In such a case there is a prima facie presumption of the husband's liability (ibid.), which, however, can be rebutted in various ways (ibid.; Manby v. Scott, 2 Sm. L. C.).

Where such a joint liability exists, judgment recovered against the husband bars a second action against the wife (Hoare v. Niblett, supra). The present rules of practice, however, provide that in certain cases a plaintiff who in one action is suing A and B as joint contractors may, after judgment against A, continue to prosecute the action against B (Ord. 14, r. 5; Ord. 13, r. 4). But if the action asserts a liability which is alternative, and not joint, judgment against A is conclusive evidence of an election not to proceed against B (Morel v. Westmoreland, supra; French v. Howie, [1906] 2 K. B. 674).

As regards contracts with her husband, the rule before the Act was that a married woman could during coverture contract with him so as to bind her separate estate (Vansittart v. V., 4 K. & J. 70); and this has not been altered by the Act (Butler v. B., 16 Q. B. D. 374). A bona fide purchase by the wife from the husband of goods which are paid for out of her separate estate, and remain in the conjugal domicil, will be good against the husband's creditors (Ramsay v. Margrett, [1894] 2 Q. B. 18). A husband and wife can contract as strangers as to the ownership of chattels in their joint possession (Masson v. De Fries, [1909] 2 K. B. 839), and such a contract may be inferred from their dealing (Hunt v. H., 25 T. L. R. 132). An arrangement entered into by a wife with her husband, upon her assigning leaseholds to him was dealt with, Re Marlborough, Davis v. Whitehead, [1894] 2 Ch. 133. As to the effect of contracts by married women, see further the cases decided under sub-sects. 3 and 4 of this section (now repealed), post, p. 377; and M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 1 (post, p. 393).

Married woman suing.

A married woman may present a petition under the Trustee Act (Re Outwin, 48 L. T. 410; 31 W. R. 374). Sect. 12 (post) gives her remedies for the protection of her separate property. Thus she may sue alone in respect of a trespass on a house which is her separate property (Weldon v. De Bathe, 14 Q. B. D. 339; Symonds v. Hallett, 24 Ch. D. 346; Heimbs v. Newcastle Society, 76 L. T. 109); or in respect of a tort committed before the present Act (Weldon v. Winslow, 13 Q. B. D. 784; Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. D. 667; James v. Barraud, 31 W. R. 786; Severance v. Civil Service Association, 48 L. T. 485), or in respect of her separate interest in a partnership firm (Eddowes v. Argentine, 63 L. T. 364). As to suing to recover a separate legacy, see Re Robinson, Pindar v. Robinson (1885), W. N. 147, and as to resisting a claim to an easement, Hulley v. Silversprings Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 218. For the purpose of such an action she became discovert within the meaning of the Limitation Act, 1623, s. 7 (ante, p. 266), upon the commencement of the present Act (Lowe v. Fox, supra; Weldon v. Neal, 51 L. T. 289; 32 W. R. 828).

As against her husband she can without a trustee sue him on his covenant in a separation deed (Sweet v. S., [1895] 1 Q. B. 12), or for an account of her separate rents and profits (Thornley v. T., [1893] 2 Ch. 229), or for detention of her goods (Larner v. L., [1905] 2 K. B. 539, see R. v. Murray, [1906] 2 K. B. 385; Healey v. H., [1915] 1 K. B. 938). And where a husband forcibly detained his wife's separate money, she could sue his executors for its return (Wassell v. Leggatt, [1895] 1 Ch. 554). She can acquire against him a title to land by possession (Keelan v. Garvey, [1924] 1 I. R. 107). Her power of suing her husband for a tort is limited by sect. 12 (post). And she cannot sue him for malicious prosecution (Tinkley v. T., 24 T. L. R. 691), or for slander (Young v. Y., 5 Fraser, 330). As to election by a wife whose husband has purported to deal with her property, see Re Williams, [1915] 1 Ch. 50; see also Re Sullivan, [1917] 1 I. R. 38.

Where an injunction is claimed her sole undertaking in damages must be accepted (Pike v. Cave, 62 L. J. Ch. 937; 68 L. T. 650; Re Prynne, 53 L. T. 465); and such an undertaking can be enforced by the husband (Hunt v. H., 54 L. J. Ch. 289). She will not be ordered to give security for costs on the ground of poverty (Re Thompson, Stevens v. T., 38 Ch. D. 317; as to costs of an appeal, see Whittaker v. Kershaw, 44 Ch. D. 296). She cannot, however, act as guardian ad litem or next friend (Re Somerset, Thynne v. St. Maur, 34 Ch. D. 465). Damages for personal injuries awarded to a wife are her separate property, notwithstanding that her husband was co-plaintiff (Beasley v. Roney, [1891] 1 Q. B. 509). A plaintiff who is a married woman should be so described (Re Poinons, Sutton v. Martin, [1891] W. N. 139).

Married woman being sued.

The effect of sub-sect. 2 is to allow a married woman to be sued in respect of anything in respect of which a man could be sued, subject to this, that her power to contract is limited, and the remedy is confined to her separate estate (Whittaker v. Kershaw, 45 Ch. D. 329); and the fact that she has no separate estate except subject to a restraint on anticipation does not prevent her being sued (ibid.; see Braunstein v. Lewis, 64 L. T. 265). She may be sued by an executor to refund a legacy (ibid.). She may be sued by her husband for money lent after marriage (Butler v. B., 16 Q. B. D. 374), but not for money lent before marriage (S. C., 14 Q. B. D. 831). Her husband's power of suing her in tort is limited by sect. 12 (post). She may be sued for torts committed by her during coverture; and her husband may be sued with her unless the tort is connected directly with a contract by her and is the means of enforcing it (Edwards v. Porter, [1925] A. C. 1, where Seroka v. Kattenburg, 17 Q. B. D. 177, and Earle v. Kingscote, [1900] 2 Ch. 585, were approved). See also Cuenod v. Leslie, [1909] 1 K. B. 880. Judgment may be ordered against her, under R. S. C. Ord. 14 (Downe v. Fletcher, 21 Q. B. D. 11; Perks v. Mylrea (1884), W. N. 64), or under R. S. C. Ord. 16, r. 52, as a third party, and in respect of a liability created before this Act (Gloucestershire Co. v. Phillipps, 12 Q. B. D. 533).

Judgments against married women.

For the law before this Act as to judgment in common law actions against married women, see Scott v. Morley (20 Q. B. D. 123, 124); and for the judgments in Chancery actions as regards her separate estate, see McHenry v. Davies (10 Eq. 92); Picard v. Hine (5 Ch. 278). The proper form of judgment against a married woman in ordinary cases, after the Act of 1882, was settled by the Court of Appeal in Scott v. Morley (20 Q. B. D. 120). It directs that the sum recovered be payable out of her separate property, and not otherwise; and that execution be limited to her separate property not subject to restriction against anticipation, unless by reason of sect. 19 the property is liable to execution notwithstanding such restriction (see Bursill v. Tanner, 13 Q. B. D. 691; Nicols v. Morgan, 16 L. R. Ir. 409; Brown v. Morgan, 12 L. R. Ir. 122). There is no jurisdiction to make an order that she pay the amount recovered within a fixed time (Hulbert v. Cathcart, [1894] 1 Q. B. 244). The form of judgment in Scott v. Morley was held appropriate in an action brought against a widow on a contract made during coverture (Softlaw v. Welch, [1899] 2 Q. B. 419). The same form was also held appropriate in an action to compel a married woman administratrix to make good a devastavit (Re Turnbull, T. v. Nicholas, [1900] 1 Ch. 180). It was said that a judgment against a married woman under this section was a judgment against her personally, but payable only out of her separate property (Holtby v. Hodgson, 24 Q. B. D. 103; Pelton v. Harrison, [1892] 1 Q. B. 118).

Scott v. Morley form.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

In common form.

Since the M. W. P. Act, 1882, it has been held that judgment in common form can be obtained against a married woman personally in respect of an ante-nuptial debt (Robinson v. Lynes, [1894] 2 Q. B. 577). But such judgment cannot be enforced against restrained property except where such restraint was contained in a settlement by a married woman of her own property (Birmingham v. Lane, [1904] 1 K. B. 35; see Downe v. Fletcher, 21 Q. B. D. 11; Maloney v. Harvey [1895] 2 Ir. R. 169). Where judgment in common form was recovered against a married woman who had obtained a protection order, a receiver was refused of restrained property which had vested in her before the order (Hill v. Cooper, [1893] 2 Q. B. 85; see Waite v. Morland, 38 Ch. D. 135). An order directing a married woman administratrix to pay into court money belonging to the intestate and shown to be in her possession (there being no devastavit) should be in common form (Re Turnbull, T. v. Nicholas, [1900] 1 Ch. 180). Where a married woman is rated as owner of house property, she is liable (in proceedings against her to recover poor rate) to distress, and imprisonment in default of a sufficient distress (Re Allen, [1894] 2 Q. B. 924).

Enforcing judgments against married women.

A judgment in the Scott v. Morley form is not a final judgment against the married woman on which bankruptcy proceedings can be founded (Ex p. Coulson, 20 Q. B. D. 251; Ex p. Lester, Re Lynes, [1893] 2 Q. B. 113; Re Elliott, [1900] 2 Ir. 439), even after the death of her husband (Re Hewett, Ex. p. Levene, [1895] 1 Q. B. 328). She may be ordered to attend for examination as to her means (Holtby v. Hodgson, supra; Aylesford v. G. W. Ry., 41 W. R. 42). But no other person can be examined (Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, Ex p. Blyth, [1896] 2 Q. B. 338). A married woman cannot be committed under sect. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for default in payment (Scott v. Morley, supra; Draycott v. Harrison, 17 Q. B. D. 147; Re Turnbull, T. v. Nicholas, supra; see Johnson v. Brown, 20 L. R. Ir. 443, where a married woman was committed). On a judgment in the Scott v. Morley form, a garnishee order may be obtained under R. S. C. Ord. 45, r. 1 (Holtby v. Hodgson, 24 Q. B. D. 103; Barnett v. Howard, [1900] 2 Q. B. 784, but see Wood v. Lewis, [1914] 3 K. B. 73), but it cannot, semble, be enforced against land over which she has an unexercised general power of appointment by deed or will (Ex p. Gilchrist, 17 Q. B. D. 521). So a judgment against a husband and wife, payable so far as she was concerned out of her separate estate, was not enforceable by elegit against land subject to a general power of appointment (not exercised) vested jointly in the husband and wife (Goatley v. Jones, [1909] 1 Ch. 557). A judgment against a married woman in the Scott v. Morley form may be enforced against arrears of restrained income accrued due at the date of the judgment whether paid over or not (Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, [1896] A. C. 174); but not against income which accrues due after that date (Bolitho v. Gidley, [1905] A. C. 98). A writ of sequestration in a divorce action is not limited in its terms, but will not affect property subject to a restraint until after decree absolute (Hyde v. H., 13 P. D. 173). A woman cannot alienate either permanent alimony under the Divorce Act, 1857 (Re Robinson, 27 Ch. D. 160), or permanent maintenance under the Divorce Act, 1866 (Watkins v. W., [1896] P. 222), or an allowance under 58 & 59 Vict. c. 39, sect. 5 (Paquine v. Snary, [1909] 1 K. B. 688). As to enforcing judgments against restrained property, see further the note to sect. 1 of the M. W. P. Act, 1893 (post, p. 394). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

Where a creditor delayed entering judgment until an instalment of income had just become due a receiver was refused (Colyer v. Isaacs, 77 L. T. 198). The Court refused to appoint a receiver of furniture settled on the husband and wife in Whitaker v. Cohen (69 L. T. 451). Orders have been enforced against separate property by an inquiry and a receiver (Re Peace and Waller, 24 Ch. D. 405; Perks v. Mylrea (1884), W. N. 64).

Where in an action on a married woman's covenant, the defendant paid money into court on being allowed to defend, the successful plaintiff was held in any event entitled to the money (Bird v. Barstow, [1892] 1 Q. B. 94).

As to costs of proceedings instituted by a married woman, see M. W. P. Act, 1893, post, p. 394. An appeal by a married woman will, if it fail, be dismissed with costs in the usual way (Perrins v. Bellamy, 68 L. J. Ch. 397). Costs ordered to be paid by a married woman can be recovered out of any unrestrained separate property to which she is entitled at the date of the order (Cox v. Bennett, [1891] 1 Ch. 617). As to arrears of restrained income, see cases quoted, supra, p. 376. Where an action by a married woman was dismissed with costs to be taxed and payable out of her separate property, a receiver of the only separate property she had was appointed before taxation (Cummins v. Perkins, [1899] 1 Ch. 16). As to actions before this Act, see Re Glanvill, Ellis v. Johnson (31 Ch. D. 532). A married woman need not give security for costs (Threlfall v. Wilson, 8 P. D. 18; Severance v. Civil Service Association, 48 L. T. 485), even if she has no separate estate (Re Isaac, Jacob v. I., 30 Ch. D. 418; see Re Robinson, Pindar v. R. (1885), W. N. 147), except in the case of an appeal (Whittaker v. Kershaw, 44 Ch. D. 296; Weldhen v. Scattergood (1887), W. N. 69), but not on an appeal against an order of attachment (Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, [1896] 2 Q. B. 375). If she sues by a next friend, the next friend may be ordered to give security (Re Thompson, Stevens v. T., 38 Ch. D. 317). In the case of a judgment against a married woman an order to set off costs may be made under Ord. 65, r. 27, sub-s. 21 (Pelton v. Harrison, [1892] 1 Q. B. 118). Costs.

(g) As to the power of a married woman, independently of this Act, to deal by way of contract with her non-separate land, and with her separate estate, real and personal, see ante, pp. 349, 355, 393. Sub-sects 3 and 4 were repealed by the M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 4, and replaced by sect. 1 of that Act (post, p. 393). For the cases decided on the repealed sub-sections, see the 2nd ed. of this work, pp. 351-2. Contracts.

(h) A married woman with separate property, not trading separate from her husband, was not subject to the bankruptcy laws (Ex p. Coulson, 20 Q. B. D. 249). And a receiving order could not be made against her after marriage, even on a petition presented before marriage (Re A Debtor, [1898] 2 Q. B. 576). But see now sect. 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, ante, p. 372. Sub-sect. (5). Bankruptcy.

A trade belonging exclusively to a married woman, was a trade carried on by her separately from her husband, even where it was managed by him partially (Re Worsley, [1901] 1 K. B. 309) or wholly (Re Simon, [1909] 1 K. B. 201). Carrying on a farm is not "carrying on a trade" (Re Long, [1905] 2 I. R. 343). See, further, the note to sect. 1 of the M. W. P. Act, 1870, ante, p. 365.

As regards the initiation of bankruptcy proceedings, a bankruptcy notice could not be issued upon a judgment (in the Scott v. Morley form) recovered against a married woman in respect of trade debts (Re Lynes, [1893] 2 Q. B. 113; see Re Hewett, [1895] 1 Q. B. 328), nor upon a judgment in ordinary form against the firm under the name of which she is trading (Re Handford, [1899] 1 Q. B. 566). But a bankruptcy petition might be presented against her (Re Dagnall, [1896] 2 Q. B. 407), and on such a petition a receiving order can be made in respect of debts incurred while trading, even after the married woman has ceased to trade (ibid.; Re Worsley, [1901] 1 Q. B. 309). To give the Court jurisdiction to make a married woman a bankrupt it was not necessary to prove the existence of separate property at the time when the receiving order was made (Re Simon, [1909] 1 K. B. 205).

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1.

"Separate property" in sub-sect. 5 of sect. 1 of M. W. P. Act, 1882, did not include property over which a married woman had an unexercised general power of appointment (Ex. p. Gilchrist, 17 Q. B. D. 521; see Goatley v. Jones, [1909] 1 Ch. 557); and she could not be compelled to exercise such a power for the benefit of creditors (ibid.); but it did include a life estate under a settlement where there was no restraint on anticipation (Ex p. Boyd, 21 Q. B. D. 264). Where a married woman entitled to a restrained life interest and trading separately from her husband became bankrupt in 1891, and her husband subsequently died, it was held that under sub-sect. 5 and sect. 19 the whole life interest vested in the bankruptcy trustee subject only to the restraint on anticipation, and on such restraint ceasing by the husband's death the bankruptcy trustee was entitled (Re Wheeler, Briggs v. Ryan, [1899] 2 Ch. 722; compare the different rule established in the case of judgment creditors; Beckett v. Tasker, 19 Q. B. D. 7; Pelton v. Harrison, [1891] 2 Q. B. 422; Softlaw v. Welch, [1899] 2 Q. B. 419; and see Pike v. Fitzgibbon, 17 Ch. D. 463).

As regards sect. 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, supra, its provisions applied to a debt incurred before they came into operation (Re Clark; ex p. Pope, [1914] 3 K. B. 1095). A woman who continues to trade after marriage can be made bankrupt on a debt incurred before marriage (Re Reynolds, ex p. White, [1915] 2 K. B. 186). A judgment against her in tort for a liability incurred in business is available for bankruptcy proceedings (Re Allen, ex p. Shaw, [1915] 1 K. B. 285).

Property of a woman married after the Act to be held by her as a feme sole.

2. Every woman who marries after the commencement of this Act shall be entitled to have and to hold as her separate property and to dispose of in manner aforesaid all real and personal property which shall belong to her at the time of marriage, or shall be acquired by or devolve upon her after marriage, including any wages, earnings, money, and property gained or acquired by her in any employment, trade, or occupation, in which she is engaged, or which she carries on separately from her husband, or by the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill.

The effect of this section is to add the incident of separate use to the interest of the married woman in any property which belongs to her at the time of marriage (Re Onslow, Plowden v. Gayford, 39 Ch. D. 622), or accrues afterwards (Re Davenport, Turner v. King, [1895] 1 Ch. 361). This separate use is sufficient to support a restraint on anticipation (Re Lumley, Ex p. Hood-Barrs, [1896] 2 Ch. 696). It also rendered separate examination unnecessary (Riddell v. Errington, 26 Ch. D. 220; see Re Batt, [1897] 2 Ch. 65; see now sect. 167 of the L. P. Act, 1925, post). This section extends to the enlarging by a married woman after her marriage of a base fee which had been disposed of by her to a purchaser before her marriage (Re Drummond and Davie, [1891] 1 Ch. 524). See further, the note to sect. 1, sub-sect. 1, ante, p. 372. And as to separate trading, see the notes to sect. 1 of the M. W. P. Act, 1870 (ante, p. 365), and to sect. 1, sub-sect. 5 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882, ante, p. 377. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 2.

By Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, s. 21, a wife deserted by her husband may apply to a police magistrate or justices in petty sessions for an order to protect any money or property she may acquire by her own lawful industry; and by virtue of the order such earnings and property will belong to her as if she were a feme sole.

Loans by wife to husband.

3. Any money or other estate of the wife lent or entrusted by her to her husband for the purpose of any trade or business carried on by him, or otherwise, shall be treated as assets of her husband's estate in case of his bankruptcy, under reservation of the wife's claim to a dividend as a creditor for the amount or value of such money or other estate after, but not before, all claims of the other creditors of the husband for valuable consideration in money or money's worth have been satisfied.

This section was repealed by the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, and the following provision substituted: Bankruptcy Act, 1914, s. 36 (2): "Where the husband of a married woman has been adjudged bankrupt, any money or other estate of such woman lent or entrusted by her to her husband for the purpose of any trade or business carried on by him or otherwise, shall be treated as assets of his estate, and the wife shall not be entitled to claim any dividend as a creditor in respect of any such money or other estate until all claims of the other creditors of her husband for valuable consideration in money or money's worth have been satisfied."

"Other estate" included furniture (Re Donaldson, [1902] 2 I. R. 310). As regards money, the wife claiming to prove in her husband's bankruptcy must, generally speaking, show that money lent by her to the husband was not lent for the purpose of his trade (Re Genese, 16 Q. B. D. 700; see Re Cronmire, [1901] 1 Q. B. 480). She may prove in competition with creditors for money lent to a partnership of which her husband is a member (Re Tuff, 19 Q. B. D. 88); or for money lent to the husband for private purposes (Re Tidswell, 56 L. J. Q. B. 548; Mackintosh v. Pogose, [1895] 1 Ch. 505; Re Clark, Ex p. Schulze, [1898] 2 Q. B. 330; see, however, Alexander v. Barnhill, 21 L. R. Ir. 511). Property mortgaged by a wife to secure a debt owing by her husband to a third party, and subsequently applied in discharge of it, is not lent or entrusted to him within this section (Alexander v. Barnhill, supra; see Re Cronmire, [1901] 1 Q. B. 480; Mercier v. M., [1903] 2 Ch. 98). Where a husband, who had borrowed his wife's separate estate for his own business, died insolvent, having appointed his wife executrix, she could retain the debt (Re May, Crawford v. M., 45 Ch. D. 499; Re Simpson, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 530; Re Ambler, Woodhead v. A., [1905] 1 Ch. 697); but where she was not her husband's representative, and his estate was administered by the Court, she was postponed (Re Leng, Tarn v. Emmerson, [1895] 1 Ch. 652; contra, Moore v. Smith, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 512; and see Re Slade, [1921] 1 Ch. 160).

As to how far the Act was retrospective, see Re Home (54 L. T. 301). As to the presumption arising from the receipt by the husband of the wife's separate income, see Re Young, 29 Times L. R. 391; and as to the rights of a husband lending money to a wife for her business, see Butler v. B. (14 Q. B. D. 831; 16 Q. B. D. 374).

Execution of general power:

4. The execution of a general power by will by a married woman shall have the effect of making the property appointed liable for her debts and other liabilities in the same manner as her separate estate is made liable under this Act.

Recovery of a married woman's debts out of property appointed by her will.

The antenuptial debts of a married woman can be recovered out of property appointed by her under a general testamentary power (Re Parkin, Hill v. Schwarz, [1892] 3 Ch. 510).

Antenuptial debts.

As to engagements entered into by her during coverture on the credit of her separate estate, it was said by Kay, J., that according to the law before the present Act, property appointed by will under a general power was not assets for payment thereof, whether the power of appointment was by deed or will, or by will only (Re Roper, R. v. Doncaster, 39 Ch. D. 488, 491; see Ex p. Gilchrist, Re Armstrong, 17 Q. B. D. 532); inasmuch as such property could not be said to have been her separate property at the time of the engagement (see Pike v. FitzGibbon, 17 Ch. D. 454, quoted ante, p. 355).

Postnuptial debts.

Rule before M. W. P. Act, 1882.

This dictum of Kay, J., however, is opposed to decisions holding that property appointed under a general power was assets for payment of these engagements where the power was either a power to appoint by deed or will (London & Chartered Bank v. Lempriere, 4 P. C. 572; Mayd v. Field, 3 Ch. D. 587); or by will only (Re Harvey, Godfrey v. Harben, 13 Ch. D. 216; Hodges v. H., 20 Ch. D. 749). See the criticism on the last mentioned cases (39 Ch. D. 489, 490).

Rule under M. W. P. Act, 1882.

In cases within the M. W. P. Act, 1882, but not within the M. W. P. Act, 1893, post, the above section makes property appointed by will under a general power assets applicable for payment of the postnuptial debts of a married woman, where at the time she contracted the debt she had some separate property (see Palliser v. Gurney, 19 Q. B. D. 521). But not where she had no separate property at that time (Re Fieldwick, Johnson v. Adamson, [1909] 1 Ch. 1). See as to the order of application, Re Williams, Green v. Burgess, 59 L. T. 310.

Rule under M. W. P. Act, 1893.

In cases within the M. W. P. Act, 1893, the appointed property is assets for payment of her postnuptial debts whether at the time of the contract she had separate property or not (M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 1, post, p. 393).

Cases under the present section.

The present section was held to apply:—where a sum was expressed to be appointed in satisfaction of a debt in fact owing from another person, which debt was paid by him after the death of the testatrix (Re Hodgson, Darley v. H., [1899] 1 Ch. 666); where the married woman's debts had been incurred before the M. W. P. Act, 1882, under a protection order (Re Hughes, Brandon v. H., [1898] 1 Ch. 529).

Before the M. W. P. Act, 1882, it was held that sect. 27 (as to general powers) of the Wills Act, 1837 (post), applied to the wills of married women (Bernard v. Minshull, Johns. 296). Sect. 24 now also applies to them (M. W. P. Act, 1893, s. 3, post, p. 395, where see note).

In the case of persons other than married women the execution of a general testamentary power makes the appointed property assets for payment of the appointor's debts (Fleming v. Buchanan, 3 D. M. G. 976; Land Transfer Act, 1897, s. 1 (2); Administration of Estates Act, 1925, s. 3 (2), post).

A married woman's funeral expenses were payable out of property appointed by her will (Re M'Myn, Lightbown v. M'Myn, 33 Ch. D. 575). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 4.

5. Every woman married before the commencement of this Act shall be entitled to have and to hold and to dispose of in manner aforesaid as her separate property all real and personal property, her title to which, whether vested or contingent, and whether in possession, reversion, or remainder, shall accrue after the commencement of this Act, including any wages, earnings, money, and property so gained or acquired by her as aforesaid. Property acquired after the Act by a woman married before the Act to be held by her as a feme sole.

The words "her title" mean the title which first accrued to her, whether vested, contingent, in possession, in remainder, or in reversion (Reid v. R., 31 Ch. D. 411; Re Tucker, Emmanuel v. Parfitt, 52 L. T. 923; 33 W. R. 932; Re Adames, 53 L. T. 198; 33 W. R. 834; Re Hobson, Webster v. Rickards, 55 L. J. Ch. 300; 34 W. R. 195; Re Tench, Ex p. McCormack, 15 L. R. Ir. 406). Where, accordingly, the title in reversion accrued before the Act, but the property fell into possession after the Act, the section did not apply (Reid v. R., supra; compare the construction placed on a covenant to settled after acquired property, Re Bland, B. v. Perkins, [1905] 1 Ch. 4; Re Brook, B. v. Hirst, 111 L. T. 36). Nor was the section made applicable by reason of a conversion into money after the Act (Re Bacon, Toovey v. Turner, [1907] 1 Ch. 475).

A mere spes successionis claimed by A. as one of a possible class of next of kin, is not a contingent title within this section (Re Parsons, Stockley v. P., 45 Ch. D. 51; Re Simpson, S. v. S., [1904] 1 Ch. 1; Re Butler, Joyce v. Brew, [1918] 1 I. R. 394; contra, Re Beaupré, 21 L. R. Ir. 397). As to how far this section affects settlements, see sect. 19 (post, p. 390).

This section applies to money recovered by the verdict of a jury, even in an action in which the husband is co-plaintiff (Beasley v. Roney, [1891] 1 Q. B. 509).

As to the power of a woman married before this Act over separate property acquired before this Act, see ante, p. 355.

6. All deposits in any post-office or other savings-bank, or in any other bank, all annuities granted by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt or by any other person, and all sums forming part of the public stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or of any other bank, which at the commencement of this Act are standing in the sole name of a married woman, and all shares, stock, debentures, debenture stock, or other interests of or in any corporation, company, or public body, municipal, commercial, or otherwise, or of or in any industrial, provident, friendly, benefit, building, or loan society, which at the commencement of this Act are standing in her name, shall be deemed, unless and until the contrary be shown, to be the separate property of such married woman; and the fact that any such deposit, annuity, sum As to stock, &c., to which a married woman is entitled.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 6.

forming part of the public stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England or of any other bank, share, stock, debenture, debenture stock, or other interest as aforesaid, is standing in the sole name of a married woman, shall be sufficient prima facie evidence that she is beneficially entitled thereto for her separate use, so as to authorise and empower her to receive or transfer the same, and to receive the dividends, interest, and profits thereof, without the concurrence of her husband, and to indemnify the Postmaster-General, the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, and all directors, managers, and trustees of every such bank, corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid, in respect thereof.

As to the probate of the will of a married woman having money standing in her name in the savings bank, see Harding v. Sutton (59 L. T. 839). As to investments held by a married woman as trustee, see sect. 18 (post, p. 389).

As to stock, &c., to be transferred, &c., to a married woman.

7. All sums forming part of the publis stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable in the books of the Bank of England or of any other bank, and all such deposits and annuities respectively as are mentioned in the last preceding section, and all shares, stock, debentures, debenture stock, and other interests of or in any such corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid, which after the commencement of this Act shall be allotted to or placed, registered, or transferred in or into or made to stand in the sole name of any married woman shall be deemed, unless and until the contrary be shown, to be her separate property, in respect of which so far as any liability may be incident thereto her separate estate shall alone be liable, whether the same shall be so expressed in the document whereby her title to the same is created or certified, or in the books or register wherein her title is entered or recorded, or not.

Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall require or authorise any corporation or joint stock company to admit any married woman to be a holder of any shares or stock therein to which any liability may be incident, contrary to the provisions of any Act of Parliament, charter, bye-law, articles of association, or deed of settlement regulating such corporation or company.

Where shares standing in a married woman's name represented savings from her separate estate, her husband was not liable as a contributory (Belcher's Case (1883), W. N. 94). But a deposit made by a wife in her own name out of remittances by her husband belonged to him (Birkett v. B., 24 Times L. R. 284).

In the case of a woman married before the commencement of the present Act her husband may be a contributory in respect of shares acquired by her before that date (Companies Consolidation Act, 1908, s. 128; see Ex p. Hatcher, 12 Ch. D. 284; quoted ante, p. 370). Her name alone should not be placed on the list (Lang's Case, 4 App. Cas. 562; compare Re London and Bombay Bank, 18 Ch. D. 581). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 7.

Investments in joint names of married women and others.

8. All the provisions hereinbefore contained as to deposits in any post-office or other savings-bank, or in any other bank, annuities granted by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt or by any other person, sums forming part of the public stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable in the books of the Bank of England, or of any other bank, shares, stock, debentures, debenture stock, or other interests of or in any such corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid respectively, which at the commencement of this Act shall be standing in the sole name of a married woman, or which, after that time, shall be allotted to, or placed, registered, or transferred to or into, or made to stand in, the sole name of a married woman, shall respectively extend and apply, as far as relates to the estate, right, title, or interest of the married woman, to any of the particulars aforesaid which, at the commencement of this Act, or at any time afterwards, shall be standing in, or shall be allotted to, placed, registered, or transferred to or into, or made to stand in, the name of any married woman jointly with any persons or person other than her husband.

As to stock, &c., standing in the joint names of a married woman and others.

9. It shall not be necessary for the husband of any married woman, in respect of her interest, to join in the transfer of any such annuity or deposit as aforesaid, or any sum forming part of the public stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable as aforesaid, or any share, stock, debenture, debenture stock, or other benefit, right, claim, or other interest of or in any such corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid, which is now or shall at any time hereafter be standing in the sole name of any married woman, or in the joint names of such married woman and any other person or persons not being her husband.

Fraudulent investments with money of husband.

10. If any investment in any such deposit or annuity as aforesaid, or in any of the public stocks or funds, or in any other stocks or funds transferable as aforesaid, or in any share, stock, debenture, or debenture stock of any corporation, company, or public body, municipal, commercial, or otherwise, or in any share, debenture, benefit, right, or claim whatsoever in, to, or upon the funds of any industrial, provident, friendly, benefit, building, or loan society, shall have been made by a married woman by means of moneys of her husband, without his consent, the Court may, upon an application under section seventeen of this Act, order such investment, and the dividends thereof, or any part thereof, to be transferred and paid respectively to the husband; and nothing in this Act contained shall give validity as against creditors of the husband to any gift, by a husband to his wife, of any property, which, after such gift shall continue to be in the order and disposition or reputed ownership of the husband, or to any deposit or other investment of moneys of the husband made by or in the name of his wife in fraud of his creditors; but any moneys so deposited or invested may be followed as if this Act had not passed.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 10.

Moneys payable under policy of assurance not to form part of estate of the insured.

11. A married woman may by virtue of the power of making contracts hereinbefore contained effect a policy upon her own life or the life of her husband for her separate use; and the same and all benefit thereof shall enure accordingly.

A policy of assurance effected by any man on his own life, and expressed to be for the benefit of his wife, or of his children, or of his wife and children, or any of them, or by any woman on her own life, and expressed to be for the benefit of her husband, or of her children, or of her husband and children, or any of them, shall create a trust in favour of the objects therein named, and the moneys payable under any such policy shall not, so long as any object of the trust remains unperformed, form part of the estate of the insured, or be subject to his or her debts: Provided, that if it shall be proved that the policy was effected and the premiums paid with intent to defraud the creditors of the insured, they shall be entitled to receive, out of the moneys payable under the policy, a sum equal to the premiums so paid. The insured may by the policy, or by any memorandum under his or her hand, appoint a trustee or trustees of the moneys payable under the policy, and from time to time appoint a new trustee or new trustees thereof, and may make provision for the appointment of a new trustee or new trustees thereof, and for the investment of the moneys payable under any such policy. In default of any such appointment of a trustee, such policy, immediately on its being effected, shall vest in the insured and his or her legal personal representatives, in trust for the purposes aforesaid. If, at the time of the death of the insured, or at any time afterwards, there shall be no trustee, or it shall be expedient to appoint a new trustee or new trustees, a trustee or trustees or new trustee or new trustees may be appointed by any Court having jurisdiction under the provisions of the Trustee Act, 1850, or the Acts amending and extending the same. The receipt of a trustee or trustees duly appointed, or, in default of any such appointment, or in default of notice to the insurance office, the receipt of the legal personal representative of the insured shall be a discharge to the office for the sum secured by the policy, or for the value thereof, in whole or in part.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 11.

See the note to sect. 10 of the M. W. P. Act, 1870 (ante, p. 367). The present section does not apply to policies effected under sect. 10 of the M. W. P. Act, 1870 (Re Turnbull, T. v. T., [1897] 2 Ch. 415; Re Kuyper, [1899] 1 Ch. 38). Upon a motion to appoint a trustee there is no jurisdiction to decide the rights of the widow and children inter se (Re Graham, 29 L. R. Ir. 498).

A policy was effected by a husband and wife for benefit of the survivor, each contributing to the premium, and the wife died first; the insurance was valid as within the above words "a policy effected by any woman on her own life" (Griffiths v. Fleming, [1909] 1 K. B. 805). Where a policy was effected by a husband and expressed to be for the benefit of his wife and children in conformity with this Act, a second wife and her child participated with the children of the first marriage, all taking as joint tenants (Re Browne, [1903] 1 Ch. 188; see Re Parker, [1906] 1 Ch. 526). Compare the construction placed on powers to appoint income to a wife (Re Hancock, Malcolm v. Burford Hancock, [1896] 2 Ch. 173) and to jointure (Marlborough v. M., [1901] 1 Ch. 165). An endowment policy taken out by a husband, the insurance moneys being payable on his death or on his living for twenty years, was held to be a policy on his own life within this section, and on his death within the twenty years a valid trust for his wife was created (Re Ioakimidis' Policy, [1925] Ch. 403). See also as to what is a policy "for the benefit of his wife," Chrystal's Trustee v. Chrystal, [1912] S. C. 1003, a case under sect. 2 of the Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880. See also Re Fleetwood's Policy, [1926] Ch. 48.

Where a wife was convicted of murdering her husband, neither she nor anyone claiming under her could claim the amount of a policy effected by the husband for her benefit, but there was a resulting trust in favour of the husband's estate (Cleaver v. Mutual Association, [1892] 1 Q. B. 147).

A policy effected by a wife on her own life for the benefit of her husband belonged where the husband predeceased his wife to his executor (Prescott v. P., [1906] 1 I. R. 155).

Remedies of married woman for protection and security of separate property.

12. Every woman, whether married before or after this Act, shall have in her own name against all persons whomsoever, including her husband, the same civil remedies, and also (subject, as regards her husband, to the proviso hereinafter contained) the same remedies and redress by way of criminal proceedings, for the protection and security of her own separate property, as if such property belonged to her as a feme sole, but, except as aforesaid, no husband or wife shall be entitled to sue the other for a tort. In any indictment or other proceeding under this section, it shall be sufficient to allege such property to be her property: and in any proceeding under this section a husband or wife shall be competent to give evidence against each other, any statute or rule of law to the contrary notwithstanding.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 12.

Provided always, that no criminal proceeding shall be taken by any wife against her husband by virtue of this Act while they are living together, as to or concerning any property claimed by her, nor while they are living apart, as to or concerning any act done by the husband while they were living together, concerning property claimed by the wife, unless such property shall have been wrongfully taken by the husband when leaving or deserting, or about to leave or desert, his wife.

As to the civil proceedings which can be commenced by a married woman, see ante, p. 374. As regards criminal proceedings it has been held that in an indictment for stealing her separate goods they cannot be laid as the property of her husband (R. v. Murray, [1906] 2 K. B. 385). A married woman cannot criminally prosecute her husband for personal libel on herself (R. v. London, 16 Q. B. D. 772; see Tinkley v. T., 24 Times L. R. 691). See also as to the proviso in the section, Lemon v. Simmons (36 W. R. 350; 57 L. J. Q. B. 260).

An action by her against him for rescission of a separation deed on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation is not an action of "tort" within this section (Hulton v. H., [1917] 1 K. B. 813). A husband cannot sue his wife to restrain her from wrongfully pledging his credit (Webster v. W., [1916] 1 K. B. 714). See as to an agreement by which a wife forgoes the right to pledge it, Balfour v. B., [1919] 2 K. B. 571. As to an action by a wife against her husband for a declaration that the house in which they lived was her separate property, see Shipman v. S., 93 L. J. Ch. 382, where an interlocutory injunction was granted restraining the husband from entering the house.

Wife's ante-nuptial debts and liabilities.

13. A woman after her marriage shall continue to be liable in respect and to the extent of her separate property for all debts contracted, and all contracts entered into or wrongs committed by her before her marriage, including any sums for which she may be liable as a contributory, either before or after she has been placed on the list of contributories, under and by virtue of the Acts relating to joint stock companies; and she may be sued for any such debt and for any liability in damages or otherwise under any such contract, or in respect of any such wrong; and all sums recovered against her in respect thereof, or for any costs relating thereto, shall be payable out of her separate property; and, as between her and her husband, unless there be any contract between them to the contrary, her separate property shall be deemed to be primarily liable for all such debts, contracts, or wrongs, and for all damages or costs recovered in respect thereof: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall operate to increase or diminish the liability of any woman married before the commencement of this Act for any such debt, contract, or wrong, as aforesaid, except as to any separate property to which she may become entitled by virtue of this Act, and to which she would not have been entitled for her separate use under the Acts hereby repealed or otherwise, if this Act had not passed. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 13.

The words "before her marriage" mean before the existing marriage, including the period of any previous marriage and the interval between the two marriages (Jay v. Robinson, 25 Q. B. D. 472); and the word "debt" includes both common law debts contracted by a woman whilst she is a feme sole, and debts contracted under the Act in respect of her separate property (ibid., p. 474). A husband cannot under this section sue his wife in respect of loans made by him to her before marriage (Butler v. B., 14 Q. B. D. 836). Judgment can be recovered against a married woman personally for an antenuptial debt (Robinson v. Lynes, [1894] 2 Q. B. 577). In the case of women married since 1882, where a restraint exists, this section must be read in conjunction with sect. 19, which may prevent the property being made available to satisfy an antenuptial debt (Birmingham v. Lane, [1904] 1 K. B. 38).

Husband to be liable for his wife's debts contracted marriage to a certain extent.

14. A husband shall be liable for the debts of his wife contracted, and for all contracts entered into and wrongs committed by her, before marriage, including any liabilities to which she may be so subject under the Acts relating to joint-stock companies as aforesaid, to the extent of all property whatsoever belonging to his wife which he shall have acquired or become entitled to from or through his wife, after deducting therefrom any payments made by him, and any sums for which judgment may have been bona fide recovered against him in any proceeding at law, in respect of any such debts, contracts, or wrongs for or in respect of which his wife was liable before her marriage as aforesaid; but he shall not be liable for the same any further or otherwise; and any court in which a husband shall be sued for any such debt shall have power to direct any inquiry or proceedings which it may think proper for the purpose of ascertaining the nature, amount or value of such property: Provided always that nothing in this Act contained shall operate to increase or diminish the liability of any husband married before the commencement of this Act for or in respect of any such debt or other liability of his wife as aforesaid.

The husband is still liable for the wrongs committed by his wife after marriage, unless they are directly connected with contracts by her (Edwards v. Porter, [1925] A. C. 1). Judgment recovered against a wife, who has no separate property, in respect of an antenuptial debt, is no defence to an action against the husband for the same debt (Beck v. Pierce, 23 Q. B. D. 316). A husband married since 1882 may be sued alone for his wife's antenuptial debts, whether she be alive or dead (ibid., p. 321). If the wife is sued alone she cannot require her husband to be joined, and if he is sued alone he cannot require her to be joined (ibid.). Under the Stat. Lim. time runs in favour of the husband in respect of an antenuptial debt of the wife from the cause of action, not the marriage, and no acknowledgment or part payment by the wife after marriage will alter this (ibid., p. 322).

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 15.

Suits for antenuptial liabilities.

15. A husband and wife may be jointly sued in respect of any such debt or other liability (whether by contract or for any wrong) contracted or incurred by the wife before marriage as aforesaid, if the plaintiff in the action shall seek to establish his claim, either wholly or in part, against both of them; and if in any such action, or in any action brought in respect of any such debt or liability against the husband alone, it is not found that the husband is liable in respect of any property of the wife so acquired by him or to which he shall have become so entitled as aforesaid, he shall have judgment for his costs of defence, whatever may be the result of the action against the wife if jointly sued with him; and in any such action against husband and wife jointly, if it appears that the husband is liable for the debt or damages recovered, or any part thereof, the judgment to the extent of the amount for which the husband is liable shall be a joint judgment against the husband personally and against the wife as to her separate property; and as to the residue, if any, of such debt and damages, the judgment shall be a separate judgment against the wife as to her separate property only.

As to this joint judgment, see Beck v. Pierce (23 Q. B. D. 321).

Act of wife liable to criminal proceedings.

16. A wife doing any act with respect to any property of her husband, which, if done by the husband with respect to property of the wife, would make the husband liable to criminal proceedings by the wife under this Act, shall in like manner be liable to criminal proceedings by her husband.

The stealing by a wife of her husband's property is made a criminal offence by this Act (R. v. Payne, [1906] 1 K. B. 97; see R. v. James, [1902] 1 K. B. 540).

Doubts having arisen on the subject of evidence (see R. v. Brittledon, 12 Q. B. D. 266), it was enacted that in any criminal proceeding against a husband or wife authorised by the present Act, the husband and wife respectively should be competent and admissible witnesses, and (except when defendant) compellable to give evidence (M. W. P. Act, 1884). See also sect. 4 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898.

Questions between husband and wife as to property to be decided in a summary way.

17. In any question between husband and wife as to the title to or possession of property, either party, or any such bank, corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid in whose books any stocks, funds, or shares of either party are standing, may apply by summons or otherwise in a summary way to any judge of the High Court of Justice in England or in Ireland, according as such property is in England or Ireland, or (at the option of the applicant irrespectively of the value of the property in dispute) in England to the judge of the county court of the district, or in Ireland to the chairman of the civil bill court of the division in which either party resides, and the judge of the High Court of Justice or of the county court, or the chairman of the civil bill court (as the case may be) may make such order with respect to the property in dispute, and as to the costs of and consequent on the application as he thinks fit, or may direct such application to stand over from time to time, and any inquiry touching the matters in question to be made in such manner as he shall think fit: Provided always, that any order of a judge of the High Court of Justice to be made under the provisions of this section shall be subject to appeal in the same way as an order made by the same judge in a suit pending or on an equitable plaint in the said court would be; and any order of a county or civil bill court under the provisions of this section shall be subject to appeal in the same way as any other order made by the same court would be, and all proceedings in a county court or civil bill court under this section in which, by reason of the value of the property in dispute, such court would not have had jurisdiction if this Act or the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, had not passed, may, at the option of the defendant or respondent to such proceedings, be removed as of right into the High Court of Justice in England or Ireland (as the case may be) by writ of certiorari or otherwise as may be prescribed by any rule of such High Court; but any order made or act done in the course of such proceedings prior to such removal shall be valid, unless order shall be made to the contrary by such High Court: Provided also, that the judge of the High Court of Justice or of the county court, or the chairman of the civil bill court, if either party so require, may hear any such application in his private room: Provided also, that any such bank, corporation, company, public body, or society as aforesaid, shall, in the matter of any such application for the purposes of costs or otherwise, be treated as a stakeholder only.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 17.

Applications under this section have been made by originating summons as regards a public-house (Gaynor v. G., [1901] 1 I. R. 217), also by motion in divorce actions, as regards furniture (Phillips v. P., 13 P. D. 220), and as regards paraphernalia (Tasker v. T. (1895), P. 1). In such an action the registrar cannot under this section make an order to hand over property (Wood v. W., 14 P. D. 157). Where there is no action the application should be by originating summons (see the form Dan. Ch. F. p. 1180, 6th ed., and Table of Titles in the Annual Practice). See as to varying the report of a registrar to whom a question has been referred, Wilder v. W., 56 S. J. 571.

18. A married woman who is an executrix or administratrix alone or jointly with any other person or persons of the estate of any deceased person, or a trustee alone or jointly as aforesaid of property subject to any trust, may Married woman as an executrix or trustee.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 18.

sue or be sued, and may transfer or join in transferring any such annuity or deposit as aforesaid, or any sum forming part of the public stocks or funds, or of any other stocks or funds transferable as aforesaid, or any share, stock, debenture, debenture stock, or other benefit, right, claim, or other interest of or in any such corporation, company, public body, or society in that character, without her husband, as if she were a feme sole.

A married woman who is an executrix or trustee may under the earlier part of this section sue or be sued in respect of the trust property, whatever its nature may be (Re Harkness and Allsopp, [1896] 2 Ch. 363). She can also dispose without her husband of real or personal property held by her as trustee or personal representative (L. P. Act, s. 170 (2), post, re-enacting M. W. P. Act, 1907, s. 1); see as to the law before the Act of 1907, Re Harkness and Allsopp, supra). Similarly she could convey land as a "bare trustee" within sect. 16 of the (repealed) Trustee Act, 1893, without any acknowledgment or the concurrence of her husband (Re Docwra, D. v. Faith, 29 Ch. D. 693). So where she is a paid-off mortgagee (Re Howgate and Osborn, [1902] 1 Ch. 451). As to the form of order directing payment to a married woman trustee, see Re Hawksworth ((1887), W. N. 113); and as to orders directing payment by her, see note to sect. 24, post.

Saving of existing settlements, and the power to make future settlements.

19. Nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with or affect any settlement or agreement for a settlement made or to be made, whether before or after marriage, respecting the property of any married woman (i), or shall interfere with or render inoperative any restriction against anticipation at present attached or to be hereafter attached to the enjoyment of any property or income by a woman under any settlement, agreement for a settlement, will, or other instrument (k); but no restriction against anticipation contained in any settlement or agreement for a settlement of a woman's own property to be made or entered into by herself shall have any validity against debts contracted by her before marriage, and no settlement or agreement for a settlement shall have any greater force or validity against creditors of such woman than a like settlement or agreement for a settlement made or entered into by a man would have against his creditors (l).

(i) The earlier part of this section applies to all settlements, whether made before or after marriage, not only to what are popularly called marriage settlements (Re Armstrong, Ex p. Boyd, 21 Q. B. D. 271).

The words "interfere with or affect" mean "invalidate or render inoperative" (Re Armstrong, Ex p. Boyd, 21 Q. B. D. 270, 273). The effect of the settlement is to be determined as it would have been under the old law. And no one who under that law could have taken any interest is to be deprived of such interest (Re Onslow, Plowden v. Gayford, 39 Ch. D. 625). Sect. 19 prevents the Act from interfering with any settlement which would have bound the property if the Act had not been passed (Hancock v. H., 38 Ch. D. 90). So, in the case of settlements before 1908, a husband's covenant in a settlement made in 1870, to settle property coming to him in right of his wife, was held notwithstanding sect. 5 (ante) to bind property bequeathed to her in 1883 (ibid.). Again, a covenant by the husband and wife, in a settlement prior to 1882, to settle property not limited to the wife's separate use, bound property acquired by her after 1882 (Re Stonor, 24 Ch. D. 195; Re Whitaker, Christian v. W., 34 Ch. D. 227). And a settlement since 1882 by the intended husband and wife (the latter being an infant) of funds coming to the latter on her marriage was held binding though the wife on attaining twenty-one repudiated the settlement (Stevens v. Trevor-Garrick, [1893] 2 Ch. 307; Buckland v. B., [1900] 2 Ch. 534). See now, as to settlements by the husband after 1907, sect. 2 of the M. W. P. Act, 1907, post, p. 396. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 19.

On the other hand, where a married woman was entitled to separate property under a settlement made before the Act, the incidents annexed by the Act to separate property (e.g., the liability to alienation on bankruptcy) attached to it (Re Armstrong, Ex p. Boyd, 21 Q. B. D. 264). Again, where a woman entitled under a settlement made in 1878 to a life interest, with remainder (in default of her testamentary appointment) to herself absolutely, re-married since 1882, she held all her interest as feme sole (Re Onslow, Plowden v. Gayford, 39 Ch. D. 622). And where since 1882 property is settled on a married woman subject to a restraint on anticipation, but without the words "for her separate use," the separate use arising under sects. 1 and 2 of the present Act will support the restraint (Re Lumley, Ex p. Hood-Barrs, [1896] 2 Ch. 690).

(k) As to the creation and effect of a restraint against anticipation, see ante, p. 356. And as to enforcing against restrained income judgments recovered against a married woman since the Act, see the cases quoted ante, p. 376.

Where the restraint was contained not in a settlement made by a married woman of her own property but in a separation deed, the latter part of the section did not apply, and the earlier words prevented the restrained income from being made available to satisfy her antenuptial debt (Birmingham v. Lane, [1904] 1 K. B. 35).

(l) The latter part of the section has no operation on settlements made before the Act (Beckett v. Tasker, 19 Q. B. D. 12; Smith v. Whitlock, 34 W. R. 414; 55 L. J. Q. B. 286). The words "before marriage" mean before her existing marriage, and include the period of a previous marriage and the interval between the two marriages (Jay v. Robinson, 25 Q. B. D. 472). The word "debts" includes both common law debts contracted by a woman whilst a feme sole, and debts contracted under the Act in respect of her separate property (ibid. 474). As to the effect of the marriage of a debtor before judgment, see Rothschild v. Fisher, [1920] 2 K. B. 243).

20. Where in England the husband of any woman having separate property becomes chargeable to any union or parish, the justices having jurisdiction in such union or parish may, in petty sessions assembled, upon application of the guardians of the poor, issue a summons against the wife, and make and enforce such order against her for the maintenance of her husband out of such separate property as by the thirty-third section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868, they may now make and enforce against a husband for the maintenance of his wife if she becomes Married woman to be liable to the parish for the maintenance of her husband.

31 & 32 Vict. c. 122.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 20.

chargeable to any union or parish. Where in Ireland relief is given under the provisions of the Acts relating to the relief of the destitute poor to the husband of any woman having separate property, the cost price of such relief is hereby declared to be a loan from the guardians of the union in which the same shall be given, and shall be recoverable from such woman as if she were a feme sole by the same actions and proceedings as money lent.

Married woman to be liable to the parish for the maintenance of her children.

21. A married woman having separate property shall be subject to all such liability for the maintenance of her children and grandchildren as the husband is now by law subject to for the maintenance of her children and grandchildren: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall relieve her husband from any liability imposed upon him by law to maintain her children or grandchildren.

See Peters v. Cowie (2 Q. B. D. 131); Coleman v. Birmingham (6 Q. B. D. 615).

Maintenance of parents.

As regards her parents, a married woman was not liable for their maintenance before 1909 (Pontypool v. Buck, [1906] 2 K. B. 896). But since 1908 where she has separate property she is subject to all such liability for the maintenance of her parent or parents as a feme sole is subject to (M. W. P. Act, 1908).

Repeal of 33 & 34 Vict. c. 93. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 50.

22. The Married Women's Property Act, 1870, and the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, Amendment Act, 1874, are hereby repealed: Provided that such repeal shall not affect any act done or right acquired while either of such Acts was in force, or any right or liability of any husband or wife, married before the commencement of this Act, to sue or be sued under the provisions of the said repealed Acts or either of them, for or in respect of any debt, contract, wrong, or other matter or thing whatsoever, for or in respect of which any such right or liability shall have accrued to or against such husband or wife before the commencement of this Act.

This section prevented sect. 11 of this Act from applying to policies effected under the M. W. P. Act, 1870, ante (Re Turnbull, T. v. T., [1897] 2 Ch. 415). The section was repealed by S. L. R. Act, 1898, as also the preamble to the present Act, which being of a formal character has been omitted.

Legal representative of married woman.

23. For the purposes of this Act the legal personal representative of any married woman shall in respect of her separate estate have the same rights and liabilities and be subject to the same jurisdiction as she would be if she were living.

A husband who takes separate property jure mariti is a "legal personal representative" within this section, and liable thereunder to the extent of the property so taken (Surman v. Wharton, [1891] 1 Q. B. 491).

24. The word "contract" in this Act shall include the acceptance of any trust, or of the office of executrix, or administratrix, and the provisions of this Act as to liabilities of married women shall extend to all liabilities by reason of any breach of trust or devastavit committed by any married woman being a trustee or executrix or administratrix either before or after her marriage, and her husband shall not be subject to such liabilities unless he has acted or intermeddled in the trust or administration. The word "property" in this Act includes a thing in action.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 24.

Interpretation of terms.

Before this Act, the separate estate of a married woman was not in general liable for breaches of trust or torts committed by her (Wainford v. Heyl, L. R. 20 Eq. 321). Since the Act, she may be ordered to make good a loss occasioned by her devastavit, for which purpose the order should be in the Scott v. Morley (20 Q. B. D. 120) form (Re Turnbull, T. v. Nicholas, [1900] 1 Ch. 180). Where there is no devastavit, an order directing her to pay money into court should be in the common form (ibid). Where letters of administration are granted to a married woman, it is not now necessary that her husband should join in the administration bond (Re Ayres, 8 P. D. 168).

25. The date of the commencement of this Act shall be the first of January one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Commencement of Act.

26. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

Extent of Act.

27. This Act may be cited as the Married Women's Property Act, 1882.

Short title.

The Married Women's Property Act, 1893.

56 & 57 Vict. c. 63.

1. Every contract hereafter entered into by a married woman, otherwise than as agent,

56 & 57 Vict. c. 63, s. 1.

Effect of contracts by married women.

(a) shall be deemed to be a contract entered into by her with respect to and to bind her separate property whether she is or is not in fact possessed of or entitled to any separate property at the time when she enters into such contract;

(b) shall bind all separate property which she may at that time or thereafter be possessed of or entitled to; and

(c) shall also be enforceable by process of law against all property which she may thereafter while discovert be possessed of or entitled to;

Provided that nothing in this section contained shall render available to satisfy any liability or obligation arising out of such contract any separate property which at that time or thereafter she is restrained from anticipating.

This Act repeals sub-sections 3 and 4 of sect. 1 of the M. W. P. Act, 1882, ante. The object was to correct or reverse Stogdon v. Lee, [1891] 1 Q. B. 661, and to repeal the provision of the M. W. P. Act, 1882, which threw on a married woman the burden of showing that her contract did not bind her separate estate (Paquin v. Beauclerk, [1906] A. C. 163).

For the present section to apply, there must be a contract entered into for the first time after the passing of the Act. An acknowledgment of a pre-existing debt is not sufficient (Re Wheeler; Hankinson v. Haytor, [1904] 2 Ch. 66). And the contract must have been entered into by the married woman "otherwise than as agent." Where a husband had authorised his wife to contract, so that in fact she did not contract "otherwise than as agent," the section did not apply, even where the contractee did not know of the husband's authority (Paquin v. Beauclerk, [1906] A. C. 148).

Under the M. W. P. Act, 1882, it was held that where an action on a contract made during coverture was brought against a woman after her husband's death, the form of judgment in Scott v. Morley (ante, p. 375) was appropriate (Softlaw v. Welch, [1899] 2 Q. B. 419). The husband's death rendered her property no longer separate, but this did not free it from liability. It also removed any restraint, but this did not subject it to liability (Pelton v. Harrison, [1891] 2 Q. B. 422, 426; see, however, as to this last point, Re Wheeler; Briggs v. Ryan, [1899] 2 Ch. 722, ante, p. 378). Under the present Act the proviso in sect. 1 preserves unaltered the law as to restrained property (Brown v. Dimbleby, [1904] 1 K. B. 32), and a contract can be enforced only against such of the married woman's separate property as has not been subject to a restraint against anticipation (Wood v. Lewis, [1914] 3 K. B. 73). And where a married woman entitled to restrained income had during coverture entered into a contract, and after the termination of the coverture judgment was recovered against her in an action on the contract, instalments of the income accruing after such termination could not be rendered available to satisfy the judgment. So held where coverture terminated by the husband's death (Brown v. Dimbleby, [1904] 1 K. B. 28; where a receiver was asked of instalments not due), or by divorce (Barnett v. Howard, [1900] 2 Q B. 784; where the instalments had accrued due before judgment. Qu. whether in the latter case the instalments were not available, according to Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, [1896] A. C. 174; see also as to restrained income accruing due after a divorce, Hyde v. H., 13 P. D. 173.

The question of the liability of the wife's estate after her death on a contract made during coverture was raised where she had purported to release her husband's covenant to pay restrained income and also not to sue for the same. After her death, the release being admittedly void, her executors sued for arrears of the income, and the husband having claimed damages for breach of the covenant not to sue, these arrears were held to be assets for payment of the damages by reason of a direction in her will for payment of her debts (Sprange v. Lee, [1908] 1 Ch. 424).

Costs may be ordered to be paid out of property subject

2. In any action or proceeding now or hereafter instituted by a woman or by a next friend on her behalf, the court before which such action or proceeding is pending shall have jurisdiction by judgment or order from time to time to order payment of the costs of the opposite party out of property which is subject to a restraint on anticipation, and may enforce such payment by the appointment of a receiver and the sale of the property or otherwise as may be just.

to restraint on anticipation.

The "proceeding" must be one which initiates litigation; and so the section does not apply in the case of an appeal by a married woman defendant (Hood-Barrs v. Cathcart, [1894] 3 Ch. 376; Hood-Barrs v. Heriot, [1897] A. C. 177); nor to a petition in an action presented by a married woman defendant (Hollington v. Dear, [1895], W. N. 35; nor to a wife's summons in a divorce action relating to the custody of children (Gordon v. G. [1904] P. 163); nor to a probate action brought by an executor in consequence of a caveat entered by a married woman (Moran v. Place, [1896] P. 214). But the section does apply to a counterclaim by a married woman defendant (Hood-Barrs v. Cathcart, [1895] 1 Q. B. 873); to an application by a married woman plaintiff for a new trial (Dresel v. Ellis, [1905] 1 K. B. 594); to a written claim made by her to goods taken in execution and served on the sheriff (Nunn v. Tyson, [1901] 2 K. B. 487); and to an application by her to intervene in a probate action (Crickitt v. C., [1902] P. 177). It applies even where the husband is co-plaintiff (Huntley v. Gaskell, [1905] 2 Ch. 656). The onus lies on the married woman to show that the restraint should be sustained to the prejudice of the person claiming costs (Pawley v. P., [1905] 1 Ch. 596).

An order under this section may be made subsequently to the order directing payment of costs (Hood-Barrs v. Cathcart, [1895] 1 Q. B. 873). An order was made in Paget v. P. ([1898] 1 Ch. 470). As to the form of order, see Davies v. Treharris Brewery Co. ([1894], W. N. 198; 13 R. 219).

See also the power to charge the costs of a married woman on a fund preserved (Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28).

3. Section twenty-four of the Wills Act, 1837, shall apply to the will of a married woman made during coverture whether she is or is not possessed of or entitled to any separate property at the time of making it, and such will shall not require to be re-executed or republished after the death of her husband.

Will of married woman.

As to the law before this Act, see Willock v. Noble, L. R. 7 H. L. 580, and Re Price, Stafford v. S., 28 Ch. D. 709, quoted ante, p. 373.

In the case of every married woman who dies after 5th December, 1893, this section applies to her will whether made before or after that date (Re Wylie, W. v. Moffat, [1895] 2 Ch. 116). It makes her will executed during coverture operate upon all that she has at her death (Re James, Hole v. Bethune, [1910] 1 Ch. 157). A will "in exercise of all powers" was held to exercise the statutory power given by this section (ibid.).

Before the M. W. P. Act, 1882, it was held that sect. 27 of the Wills Act, 1837, applied to the wills of married women (Bernard v. Minshull, Johns. 296). As to the joint effect of sects. 24 and 27, see the cases quoted under sect. 27 of the Wills Act, 1837 (post).

4. Sub-sections (3) and (4) of section one of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, are hereby repealed.

Repeal.

6. This Act shall not apply to Scotland.

The Married Women's Property Act, 1907.

7 Edw. VII. c. 18.

7 Edw. 7, c. 18, s. 1.

An Act to amend the Married Women's Property Act, 1882.

[21st August, 1907.]

[Sect. 1, enabling a married woman to dispose without her husband of real or personal property held by her as trustee or personal representative, was repealed by L. P. Act, 1925, and replaced by s. 170 (2) and (4) of that Act, which see post, p. 762.]

Under the M. W. P. Act, 1882, it had been held that a married woman who was trustee for sale of land, could not convey it to a purchaser except with the concurrence of her husband and by deed acknowledged (Re Harkness and Allsopp, [1896] 2 Ch. 358; see M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 18; ante, p. 390).

Settlements of a married woman's separate property.

45 & 46 Vict. c. 75.

2.—(1.) Notwithstanding section nineteen of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, a settlement or agreement for a settlement made after the commencement of this Act by the husband or intended husband, whether before or after marriage, respecting the property of any woman he may marry or have married, shall not be valid unless it is executed by her if she is of full age, or confirmed by her after she attains full age.

(2.) But if she dies an infant any covenant or disposition by her husband contained in the settlement or agreement shall bind or pass any interest in any property of hers to which he may become entitled on her death and which he could have bound or disposed of if this Act had not been passed.

(3.) Nothing in this section shall render invalid any settlement or agreement for a settlement made or to be made under the provisions of the Infants Settlements Act, 1855.

18 & 19 Vict. c. 43.

See notes to M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 19 (ante, p. 390).

Married woman entitled to prior estate to be protector of settlement alone.

3.—(1.) Where a married woman would, if single, be the protector of a settlement in respect of a prior estate, which is by virtue of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, made her separate property, then she alone shall, in respect of that estate, be the protector of the settlement.

(2.) This section applies to disentailing assurances and surrenders made after the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and as well before as after the commencement of this Act. 7 Edw. 7, c. 18, s. 3.

See sect. 24 of the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, ante, p. 323.

4.—(1.) This Act may be cited as the Married Women's Property Act, 1907. Short title;

(2.) This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand nine hundred and eight. commencement.

(3.) This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

(4.) This Act shall be construed with the Married Women's Property Acts, 1882, 1884, and 1893, and those Acts and this Act may be cited together as the Married Women's Property Acts, 1882 to 1907. Construction. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75. 47 Vict. c. 14. 56 & 57 Vict. c. 63.

VI.—Dower and Curtesy.

The Dower Act, 1833.

3 & 4 William IV. c. 105.

§ 1. Interpretation...397.
§ 2. Equitable Estates liable to Dower...401.
§ 3. Seisin of Husband not necessary...402.
§§ 4—10. How Husband may bar or restrict Dower...402—404.
§ 11. Agreement not to bar Dower enforceable...404.
§ 12. Priority of Legacies in lieu of Dower...404.
§ 13. Certain Forms of Dower abolished...405.
§ 14. Saving and Restraining Clause...405.
Note on Curtesy...405.

Be it enacted, that the words and expressions hereinafter mentioned, which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this Act, except where the nature of the provision or the context of the Act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows; that is to say, the word "land" shall extend to manors, advowsons, messuages, and all other hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal (except such as are not liable to dower), and to any share thereof; and every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things as well as one person or thing. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 1. Meaning of the words in the Act. "Land." Number.

The Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post, abolishes (sect. 45) dower, freebench, tenancy by the curtesy, and all other estates and interests of husbands and wives in real estate as to which the other dies intestate, whether arising under the general law or by custom or otherwise, in the cases of all persons dying after 1925; and the same Act repeals the present Act as to all deaths after that date (s. 56 and sched. 2). In view of the changes in the law effected Law of dower before this Act.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 1.

by the legislation of 1925 the notes to the present Act in the earlier editions of this work (2nd ed. pp. 369—79) have been abbreviated.

For a statement of the law of dower before this Act see the first Report of the R. P. Commrs. 16—19; Co. Litt. 32 a; Lyster v. Mahony, 1 Dru. & War. 236.

Out of what property a woman was entitled to dower.

The widow of a man to whom an estate was devised in fee, with a limitation over to the testator's heir, in case the devisee had no children or issue, was held to be entitled to dower (Moody v. King, 2 Bing. 447; Smith v. Spencer, 4 W. R. 729). She was not entitled to dower out of an estate pur autre vie (Low v. Burron, 3 P. W. 262; Re Michell, Moore v. M., [1892] 2 Ch. 99). Where, however, land was limited to the husband pur autre vie, with certain contingent estates in remainder over, with ultimate remainder to him in fee, the land was held liable to dower (Lemon v. Mark, [1899] 1 I. R. 416; see Re Michell, supra).

Mines.

Dower was due of mines wrought during coverture, but not of mines or strata unopened. If lands assigned for dower contain an open mine, tenant in dower may work it for her own benefit (Stoughton v. Leigh, 1 Taunt. 401; Dickin v. Hamer, 1 Dr. & Sm. 284). And a dowress may claim one-third of the income of the proceeds arising from the royalties of mines opened after her husband's decease (Dickin v. Hamer, supra), or of proceeds of timber cut after her husband's decease (Bishop v. B., 5 Jur. 931; Dickin v. Hamer, supra). Where land subject to dower was taken by a railway company, the dowress had the value of her dower paid to her out of the purchase-money (Re Hall, 9 Eq. 179). In another case one-third of the purchase-money was carried over to a separate account, the dividends being payable to the dowress for life (Harrop v. Wilson, 34 Beav. 166); but see Re Wilson, W. v. Clark, [1916] 1 Ch. 220. See, further, as to the property out of which a woman was entitled to dower, and the requisites to dower, the note to sect. 2, post; Tudor's L. C. Conv. 112 et seq. 4th ed.

Timber.

Barring dower.

In consequence of two maxims of the common law—first, that no right can be barred until it accrues; and, secondly, that no right or title to an estate of freehold can be barred by a collateral satisfaction—it was impossible to bar a woman of her dower by any assignment or assurance of lands, either before or during the marriage (Vernon's Case, 4 Rep. 1; Co. Litt. 36 b).

Legal jointures.

Dower, however, might be barred by a legal jointure.

According to Lord Coke (Co. Litt. 36 b), there are six requisites to a strict legal jointure, viz., 1st. The provision for the wife must by original limitation take effect in possession or profit immediately after the husband's death (Wood v. Shirley, Cro. Jac. 488; see Re De Hoghton, De H. v. De H., [1896] 2 Ch. 385; Greenwood v. Lutman, [1915] 1 I. R. 266). 2nd. It must be for the term of her own life or greater estate (Dyer, 97 b). 3rd. It must be made to herself, and no other for her. 4th. It must be made in satisfaction of the whole, and not of part, of her dower. 5th. It must be either expressed or averred to be in satisfaction of her dower (see 9 Mod. 152; 3 Atk. 8; 1 Ves. sen. 54; 4 Ves. 391). And 6th. It may be made either before or after marriage (4 Rep. 3).

Jointure before marriage was a peremptory bar of dower; jointure after marriage she had an option to renounce (1 Swanst. 429, n); but a feme covert was held not competent during the coverture to elect between a jointure made to her after marriage and her dower at common law (Frank v. F., 3 M. & C. 171). A jointure settled on a wife by articles, to which she was not a party, did not deprive her of dower (Buckingham v. Drury, 3 Br. P. C. 497; Daly v. Lynch, ibid. 48); but an infant having before her marriage a jointure made to her in bar of dower was thereby bound and barred by the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10) (ibid.) That statute was repealed by L. P. Act, 1925, post. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 1.

Equitable jointures.

In equity, a trust estate, an agreement to settle lands as a jointure (see Warde v. W., 16 Beav. 103; Wellesley v. W., 4 M. & Cr. 554), or a covenant from the husband for payment of an annuity to his wife, for life, in case she survived him, in full for her jointure and in bar of dower, in short, any provision, however precarious, and whether secured out of realty or personalty, which an adult before marriage accepts in lieu of dower, is a good jointure (Buckingham v. Drury, 5 Br. P. C. 570; 4 Br. C. C. 506; Wilmot's Notes, 177; Charles v. Andrews, 9 Mod. 152; Williams v. Chitty, 3 Ves. jun. 545; Tinney v. T., 3 Atk. 8; Carruthers v. C., 4 Br. C. C. 500; Estcourt v. Estcourt, 1 Cox, 20; Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. R. 613; 4 Rep. 2 a, n. by Thomas; Harg. Co. Litt. 36 b, n (5); Sugd. V. & P. 543, 544, 11th ed.; Dyke v. Rendall, 2 D. M. & G. 209). A future contingent provision, accepted by an adult female upon her marriage in lieu of dower, was in equity a valid bar to dower (Re Herons, 1 Flan. & K. 330; see Power v. Sheil, 1 Moll. 312; Williams v. Chitty, 3 Ves. 545; Corbet v. C., 5 Russ. 254). So where the husband and his father, "for providing a competent jointure" for the wife, settled moneys for the benefit of the husband, his wife, and issue (Dyke v. Rendall, 2 D. M. & G. 209). And where a tenant in tail in remainder agreed to execute a legal postnuptial settlement, to secure a jointure (Pennefather v. Pennefather, I. R. 6 Eq. 171). And where the intended husband covenanted that in case he should die in the lifetime of his intended wife, without issue by her, she should be entitled to one-half of his property at death (Hamilton v. Jackson, 2 J. & Lat. 295). In order, however, to exclude the right to dower, there had to be either an express declaration or a plain intention (Hamilton v. Jackson, 2 J. & Lat. 299; O'Rorke v. O'Rorke, 17 L. R. Ir. 153). A grant of an annuity to the wife surviving did not bar dower, even out of the lands charged with the annuity (Cody v. Cody, 5 L. R. Ir. 620; see Lemon v. Mark, [1899] 1 I. R. 416).

Where widow barred of distributive share in husband's personalty.

A stipulation in a marriage settlement, that the provision thereby made for the wife was to be "in lieu of dower or thirds," was held, on the husband dying intestate, to bar the claim of his widow to a distributive share in his personal estate (Thompson v. Watts, 2 J. & H. 291; see Sambourne v. Barry, I. R. 6 Eq. 28; Gurly v. G., 8 Cl. & Fin. 743; Re Burgess, 11 Ir. Ch. R. (N.S.) 164; Colleton v. Garth, 6 Sim. 19; Coyne v. Duigan, [1894] 1 I. R. 138; Re Hogan, H. v. H., [1901] 1 Ir. R. 168).

As to the law of jointures, see 1 Rop. on Husband and Wife, by Bright, c. 10; Cruise's Dig. tit. 7; Bac. Abr. Dower and Jointure (G.); Gilb. on Uses, by Sugd. p. 321, &c.

Attendant terms.

As to how far attendant terms could have been used to bar a right to dower, see Mole v. Smith, Jac. R. 496; Radnor v. Vandebendy, Show. P. C. 69; Pr. Ch. 65; Swannock v. Lifford, 2 Atk. 208; Ambl. 6; Co. Litt. 208 a, n.; Willoughby v. W., 1 T. R. 763; Maundrell v. M., 10 Ves. 246; Wynn v. Williams, 5 Ves. 130; Butl. Co. Litt. 290 b, n. l. s. 13; Re Sleeman, 4 Ir. Ch. 563; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, post; Corry v. Cremorne, 12 Ir. Ch. 136; Anderson v. Pignet, 8 Ch. 180, post; and as to when a court of equity would relieve against them, see Dudley v. D., Prec. Ch. 241; Radnor v. Rotherham, ibid. 65; Williams v. Lambe, 3 B. C. C. 264; Wilkins v. Lynch, 1 Hayes, Ir. R. 98.

Uses to bar dower.

The form of limitation to uses to bar dower formerly used is discussed, Gilb. on Uses, by Sugd. 321—325, n.; Fearne, 347, n. by Butl. 7th ed.; 2 Dav. Conv. 210; 3 Dav. Conv. 249, n. (o); Collard v Roe (4 De G. & J. 525). A limitation to the old uses to bar

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 1.

dower did not deprive of her dower a woman married since the passing of the Act (Fry v. Noble, 7 D. M. & G. 687; Re Michell, Moore v. M., [1892] 2 Ch. 99).

Purchase without notice.

The defence of purchase for value without notice failed as against a claim for dower (Williams v. Lambe, 3 Brown, C. C. 264; see Collins v. Archer, 1 R. & M. 292; Phillips v. P., 4 D. F. & J. 217; Ind, Coope v. Emmerson, 12 App. Cas. 300).

Forfeiture of dower by adultery.

Under 13 Edw. 1, c. 34 (repealed by Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post), a woman forfeited her dower by adultery, even though brought about by her husband's cruelty (Hetherington v. Graham, 6 Bing. 139; Woodward v. Dowse, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 722; Bostock v. Smith, 34 Beav. 57). Under the old law a divorce à vinculo matrimonii was a bar to dower (Frampton v. Stephens, 21 Ch. D. 164), and so has been a decree for dissolution of marriage (ibid.). As to the effect of a divorce a mensa et thoro, see Rolfe v. Perry, 11 W. R. 357; Shute v. S., Prec. Ch. 111.

Bar by acknowledged deed.

Dower was extinguished by a deed duly acknowledged by the wife, even where her name was not inserted as a co-grantor (Dent v. Clayton, 12 W. R. 903).

Remedies for the recovery of dower.

The remedies for the recovery of dower before 1860 were by writs of dower. Since that year the usual remedy has been by action in Chancery. For instances of such actions, see Sheaf v. Cave (24 Beav. 259); Bamford v. Bamford (5 Hare 203); Marshall v. Smith (5 Giff. 37); Dawson v. Whitehaven (6 Ch. D. 218); Meek v. Chamberlain (8 Q. B. D. 31); see also the forms of orders, Seton, 6th ed. 955, 1546; Kernaghan v. M'Nally (11 Ir. Ch. Rep. (N.S.) 52). As to costs, see Harris v. H. (11 W. R. 62); Stormont v. Wickens (14 W. R. 192).

Limitation.

An action for the assignment of dower is not within the R. P. Lim. Acts, 1833 and 1874 (Williams v. Thomas, [1909] 1 Ch. 713, overruling Marshall v. Smith, 5 Giff. 37). As to the arrears of dower which may be recovered, see ante, p. 228.

Freebench in case of copyholds.

The Dower Act did not apply to freebench (Smith v. Adams, 5 D. M. & G. 712). Freebench (abolished by sect. 45 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, as to all deaths after 31st December, 1925, from which date also Copyhold Tenure is abolished by Part V. of L. P. Act, 1922), in the absence of any custom to the contrary, did not attach even in right until the husband's death (Benson v. Scott, 12 Mod. 49; 2 Ves. sen. 633; Godwin v. Winsmore, 2 Atk. 526; R. v. Lopen, 2 T. R. 580; Brown v. Raindle, 3 Ves. jun. 256). And therefore any alienation by him alone, even by contract (Hinton v. H., 2 Ves. sen. 631), to take effect in his lifetime, defeated the widow's claim (Benson v. Scott, 3 Lev. 385; Goodwin v. Windmore, 2 Atk. 526; Farley's Case, Cro. Jac. 36; Moor, 758; Dagworth v. Radford, Sir W. Jones, 462; 1 Freem. 516; Gilb. Ten. 321; see 2 Watk. on Cop. 73—79; Shelford on Copyholds, pp. 68—72). And if a man surrendered copyholds to the use of his will, and then devised them, the widow did not take freebench (Lacy v. Hill, 19 Eq. 350). Under sect. 3 of the Wills Act a devise without a surrender had the same effect (ibid.; see Powdrell v. Jones, 2 Sm. & G. 407, where a devise did not bar freebench, the special custom being that the title of the wife could only be destroyed by voluntary surrender; Riddell v. Jenner, 10 Bing. 29; Doe v. Gwinnell, 1 Q. B. 682). Where a purchaser of a copyhold took a surrender, but died before admittance, his widow was not entitled to freebench (Smith v. Adams, 5 D. M. & G. 712). Secus, where the heir of the purchaser had been admitted (Vaughan v. Atkins, 5 Burr. 2764). A widow was not entitled to freebench out of a moiety of copyholds to which her husband was entitled in remainder after a life estate (Smith v. Adams, 18 Beav. 499). Nor out of trust estates (Forde

v. Wade, 4 Bro. C. C. 520). The widow of a tenant in tail was entitled to freebench, though the custom was confined to widows of tenants in fee (Doe v. Sanders, 3 Dougl. 303). Freebench was not barred by a settlement (Willis v. W., 34 Beav. 340). See further Scriven, 69, Elton, 157. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 1.

The Dower Act extended to lands of gavelkind tenure (Farley v. Bonham, 2 J. & H. 177). By the custom of gavelkind (abolished by sect. 45 of the Administration of Estates Act, 1925, post, in the case of all deaths after 1925), the wife, after the death of her husband, had for her dower a moiety of all lands of her husband so long as she continued chaste (Robinson, Gav., 205—236; see Re Maskell and Goldfinch, [1895] 2 Ch. 525). But she was not entitled as of right to have an apportioned part of the proceeds of sale of lands assigned to her, but only to a proportionate share of the income of the purchase money (Re Wilson, W. v. Clark, [1916] 1 Ch. 220). Gavelkind.

2. When a husband shall die, beneficially entitled to any land for an interest which shall not entitle his widow to dower out of the same at law, and such interest, whether wholly equitable, or partly legal and partly equitable (m), shall be an estate of inheritance in possession, or equal to an estate of inheritance in possession (other than an estate in joint tenancy) (n), then his widow shall be entitled in equity to dower out of the same land. Widows to be entitled to dower out of equitable estates.

(m) For example of interests partly legal and partly equitable equal to an estate of inheritance in possession, see Re Michell, Moore v. M., ([1892] 2 Ch. 99). In that case, where the husband was at his death entitled to an equitable estate pur autre vie, and also a legal remainder expectant on the death of the c. q. vie without a second son, the widow took no dower.

Before this Act there was no dower out of equitable estates (Dawson v. Whitehaven, 6 Ch. D. 221; D'Arcy v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 388; Re Michell, Moore v. M., [1892] 2 Ch. 93). Old law.

A woman was not entitled to dower out of a legal estate in remainder (Lloyd v. L., 4 Dru. & W. 370), or out of estates of which the husband was seised in fee, subject at the time of his marriage to leases for lives, which did not expire during the coverture (D'Arcy v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 387; Fitz. Abr. Dower, pl. 184; Br. Abr. Dower, pl. 44; Co. Litt. 32 a; Co. Litt. 203 a, Harg. note; Perk. 333, 348; Forder v. Wade, 4 Br. C. C. 520). On the surrender in deed or in law of the life estate to the husband the right of dower attached (1 Roll. Abr. 676, pl. 40). But if a rent were reserved on a lease for years, made before marriage, the wife was entitled to recover dower of the third part of the rent immediately, and also of the land, with a cesset executio during the term (Prec. Ch. 250). And the wife of a man entitled to lands under a devise to him in fee or in tail, subject to a chattel interest for raising the testator's debts, was dowable after payment of them (Co. Litt. 41 a; 8 Rep. 96 a; 2 Vern. 404). Where a husband was seised in fee subject to a trust term to secure life annuities and to pay himself half the surplus rents, his widow was entitled to have her dower set out (Sheaf v. Cave, 24 Beav. 259). Where a husband was entitled to an equitable estate in fee simple determinable in the event, which took place, of his dying without leaving issue living at his decease, his widow was, notwithstanding the operation of the executory devise over, entitled to dower (Smith v. Spencer, 4 W. R. 729). Reversions and remainders.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 2.

Joint tenants.

(n) The widow of a joint tenant in fee or in tail was not entitled to dower, because, upon the death of one of the joint tenants, the estate went to the survivor, who was then in from the first grantor, and might plead the deed creating the estate as originally made to him, without naming his companion (Litt. s. 45; Co. Litt. 37 b, 30 a, 183 a). And if a joint tenant aliened his share, his wife was not endowed (Fitz. N. B. 150; Br. Dow. pl. 30; Cro. Jac. 615). A widow of a tenant in common was in the circumstances held entitled to dower (Reynard v. Spence, 4 Beav. 103).

Seisin shall not be necessary to give title to dower.

3. When a husband shall have been entitled to a right of entry or action in any land, and his widow would be entitled to dower out of the same, if he had recovered possession thereof, she shall be entitled to dower out of the same, although her husband shall not have recovered possession thereof: provided that such dower be sued for or obtained within the period during which such right of entry or action might be enforced.

Right of entry.

A right of entry is where a man, who has the possession of lands, is disseised or ousted, or, having a right to the possession, is kept out of it; in which case he may peaceably make an entry upon the lands, or bring an action of ejectment to recover possession (see Rosc. on Real Actions, 79, &c.; 1 Real Prop. Rep. 493). The time within which a right of entry must be prosecuted is now prescribed by R. P. Lim. Acts, 1833 and 1874 (see ante, p. 147 et seq.). As to the relation back of an actual entry, see Ocean v. Ilford, [1905] 2 K. B. 493. See now as to rights of entry sects. 1 (2) (e), 3 (3) and 4 (2) (b) of L. P. Act, 1925, post.

As to seisin, mentioned in the marginal note to this section, see the 2nd ed. of this work, p. 374, and authorities there cited. By sect. 51 of L. P. Act, 1925, post, all lands and interests therein lie in grant and are incapable of being conveyed by livery or livery and seisin.

No dower out of estate disposed of.

4. No widow shall be entitled to dower out of any land which shall have been absolutely disposed of by her husband in his lifetime, or by his will.

A devise of "all my real estate" to trustees on trust for sale barred dower under sect. 4 (Lacey v. Hill, 19 Eq. 346; see Rowland v. Cuthbertson, 8 Eq. 466).

Priority to partial estates, charges, and specialty debts.

5. All partial estates and interests, and all charges created by any disposition or will of a husband, and all debts, incumbrances, contracts and engagements to which his land shall be subject or liable, shall be valid and effectual as against the right of his widow to dower.

Effect of sections.

By the above sections all dispositions by the husband were made effectual as against the right of his widow to dower. Thus a mortgage by a husband was a bar pro tanto of dower (Jones v. J., 4 K. & J. 361).

Notwithstanding the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833 (repealed by Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, see now sect. 32 of that Act), and the 5th section of this Act, the widow's right to dower or free-bench had still priority over mere creditors of a deceased husband (Spyer v. Hyatt, 20 Beav. 621; Jones v. J., supra; Northern Bank v. M'Machin, [1909] 1 I. R. 374; but see Williams, R. P. 19th ed. 318, n.). 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 5.

6. A widow shall not be entitled to dower out of any land of her husband, when in the deed by which such land was conveyed to him, or by any deed executed by him, it shall be declared that his widow shall not be entitled to dower out of such land. Dower may be barred by a declaration in a deed;

A declaration was sufficient under this section, although the deed was not executed by the husband (Fairley v. Tuck, 27 L. J. Ch. 28; 6 W. R. 9). A declaration in a conveyance, prior to this Act, did not deprive a wife, married after this Act, of her dower (Fry v. Noble, 20 Beav. 598; 7 D. M. & G. 687; Clarke v. Franklin, 4 K. & J. 266). A recital might operate as a declaration (Re Gibbon, Moore v. G., [1909] 1 Ch. 367).

7. A widow shall not be entitled to dower out of any land of which her husband shall die wholly or partially intestate, when by the will of her husband duly executed for the devise of freehold estates, he shall declare his intention that she shall not be entitled to dower out of such land, or out of any of his land. or by a declaration in the husband's will.

8. A right of a widow to dower shall be subject to any conditions, restrictions, or directions which shall be declared by the will of her husband duly executed as aforesaid. Dower shall be subject to restrictions.

9. Where a husband shall devise any land out of which his widow would be entitled to dower if the same were not so devised, or any estate or interest therein, to or for the benefit of his widow, such widow shall not be entitled to dower out of or in any land of her said husband, unless a contrary intention shall be declared by his will. Devise of real estate to the widow shall bar her dower.

This Act gave the husband complete power to defeat the right of dower, either by deed or will (sects. 4 and 5); and where any interest in the land otherwise liable to dower was given to the wife, in order to preserve the right of dower, an intention to that effect had to be declared (sect. 9), although no gift to the wife out of personal estate was to defeat the right of dower, unless an intention to do so be declared by the will (sect. 10). Defeating the right to dower.

Where a testator devised his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion and payment of an annuity out of the income of the proceeds to his widow, she was deprived of her right to dower by sect. 9 (Rowland v. Cuthbertson, 8 Eq. 466; Lacey v. Hill, 19 Eq. 346; Re Thomas, T. v. Howell, 34 Ch. D. 166). A devise by a husband to his wife of his fee simple land deprived her of dower out of land of which he was tenant in tail (Cooper v. C., 6 Ir. Ch. R. 221).

Under the Intestates Act, 1890 (repealed as to deaths after 1925 by Admon. of Estates Act, 1925), the estate of an intestate leaving no issue, which did not exceed £500, belonged to his widow. (See Re Green, 17 Times L. R. 242.) If the estate exceeded £500 she had a charge for £500. This right of the widow was in addition to Intestates' Estates Act, 1890.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 9.

her interest in the rest of the intestate's realty and personalty, e.g. her dower (see sect. 4 of the Act); but the amount of the dower was subject to abatement in respect thereof (Re Charriere, Duret v. C., [1896] 1 Ch. 912; Rea v. R., [1902] 1 I. R. 451). The right might be barred by a provision in a settlement (Re Hogan, H. v. H., [1901] 1 I. R. 168). The Act did not apply to a partial intestacy (Re Twigg, T. v. Black, [1892] 1 Ch. 579), but applied where the executor and all the beneficiaries named in a will predeceased a testator (Re Cuffe, Fooks v. C., [1908] 2 Ch. 500). The value of the estate had to be taken as at the death; and if it did not then exceed £500 the whole belonged to the widow, notwithstanding that by the falling in of a contingent reversionary interest it became of greater value (Re Heath, H. v. Widgeon, [1907] 2 Ch. 270). See now as to all deaths after 1925 sects. 46 et seq. of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post.

Bequest of personal estate to the widow shall not bar her dower.

10. No gift or bequest made by any husband to or for the benefit of his widow of or out of his personal estate, or of or out of any of his land not liable to dower, shall defeat or prejudice her right to dower, unless a contrary intention shall be declared by his will.

A bequest of personalty never operated in bar of dower unless an intention to that effect clearly appeared (Ayres v. Willis, 1 Ves. sen. 230).

Agreement not to bar dower may be enforced.

11. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that nothing in this Act contained shall prevent any court of equity from enforcing any covenant or agreement entered into by or on the part of any husband not to bar the right of his widow to dower out of his lands, or any of them.

In purchasing an estate free from dower by force of this Act, it was advisable to ascertain that the vendor had not bound himself by agreement not to bar his wife's dower (Sugd. V. & P. 548, pl. 24, 11th ed.).

Legacies in bar of dower still entitled to preference.

12. Nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with any rule of equity, or of any ecclesiastical court, by which legacies bequeathed to widows in satisfaction of dower are entitled to priority over other legacies.

Preference of legacies in lieu of dower.

When a legacy was given to a wife in satisfaction of dower, she did not, in case assets proved deficient, abate in proportion to other legatees (Burridge v. Bradyl, 1 P. Wms. 127; Blower v. Morrett, 2 Ves. sen. 420; Davenhill v. Fletcher, Ambl. 244).

But this rule did not apply where the testator at his death was not entitled to any real estate (Acey v. Simpson, 5 Beav. 35); or where his only real estate was conveyed to him with a declaration against dower (Roper v. R., 3 Ch. D. 714), or where he disposed by will of all his real estate (Re Greenwood, G. v. G., [1892] 2 Ch. 295). Kekewich, J., refused to extend the rule to a legacy given in satisfaction of an ascertained debt (Re Wedmore, W. v. W., [1907] 2 Ch. 377; but see Davies v. Bush, Younge, 343; Re Whitehead, W. v. Street, [1913] 2 Ch. 56).

A legacy to a wife in satisfaction of dower carried interest only for one year from the death (Re Bignold, B. v. B., 45 Ch. D. 496).

13. No widow shall hereafter be entitled to dower ad ostium ecclesiæ, or dower ex assensu patris. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 13.

Certain dowers abolished.

An account of this species of dower, which had long become obsolete, will be found in Litt. ss. 38, 39, 40; Co. Litt. 34a; 2 Bl. Comm. 132, 133.

14. This Act shall not extend to the dower of any widow who shall have been or shall be married on or before the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, and shall not give to any will, deed, contract, engagement, or charge executed, entered into, or created before the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, the effect of defeating or prejudicing any right to dower.

Act not to take effect before January 1, 1834.

See Fry v. Noble (20 Beav. 598; 7 D. M. & G. 687); and Clarke v. Franklin (4 K. & J. 266).

TENANT BY THE CURTESY.

Tenancy by the curtesy and every other estate and interest of a husband in real estate as to which his wife dies intestate, whether arising under the general law or by custom or otherwise, is abolished by sect. 45, sub-s. 1 (b) of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, as to all deaths after Dec. 31, 1925, (but see as to entailed interests sect. 130, sub-s. 4 of L. P. Act, 1925, post). For the new provisions made for husbands and wives on intestacy see sect. 46 of the Admon. of Estates Act. The following statement of the law of tenancy by the curtesy is abbreviated from that in the 2nd ed. of this work, pp. 378-9.

Tenant by the curtesy of England was where a man married a woman solely seised of an estate of inheritance, that is, of lands and tenements in fee simple or fee tail, and had by her issue, born alive, and capable of inheriting her estate. In this case the husband, on the death of his wife, held the lands for his life, as tenant by the curtesy of England (Litt. ss. 35, 52; 2 Bl. Comm. 126). And it seems that a husband might have curtesy of an estate which his wife had inherited (Williams, Real Prop., App. E. 572, 14th ed.); and of money which was to be considered as land (Cunningham v. Moody, 1 Ves. sen. 174). A husband was still entitled to curtesy in real estate as to which his wife, married since 1882, had died intestate (Hope v. H., [1892] 2 Ch. 336).

Requisites of a tenancy by the curtesy.

Four circumstances were requisite for enabling the husband to be tenant by the curtesy:—1st. A legal marriage; but if the marriage were voidable only, the husband was tenant by the curtesy, unless the marriage were actually avoided during the lives of both parties (Hicks v. Harris, Carth. 271; 2 Salk. 548; 4 Mod. 182; see 2 Ves. sen. 245; 7 Rep. 43 b).

2nd. The wife had to have a seisin in deed of corporeal hereditaments (Co. Litt. 29 a), either before or after issue born (ibid. 30 a).

In some cases where it was impossible to obtain seisin in deed, seisin in law was sufficient to give rise to curtesy. Thus, "where a wife who hath issue inherits an advowson or rent in fee and dieth before the rent becomes due or the church becomes void, she has but a seisin in law, yet the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy because he could by no industry attain to any other seisin (Co. Litt.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 14.

29 a)." On the same principle, where a father devised land to a married daughter who predeceased him, her husband took an estate by the curtesy by virtue of sect. 33 of the Wills Act, 1837 (Eager v. Furnivall, 17 Ch. D. 115).

Where there was a devise in fee simple, with an executory devise over, the husband's right to curtesy attached on the first estate, and was not defeated by its determination (see Buckworth v. Thirkel, 10 Moore, 235, n.; 2 Bing. 447; 3 Bos. & P. 652, n.; 4 Doug. 323; see 2 Sim. 251; 2 Rop. on Husband and Wife, Jac. ed. Addenda, No. 2; Butl. Co. Litt. 241 a, n. (4); Boothby v. Vernon, 9 Mod. 147). But see Barker v. B., 2 Sim. 249.

Curtesy arose out of an estate of inheritance; it could not arise out of an estate pur autre vie (Stead v. Platt, 18 Beav. 54). And the wife must have been solely seised of an estate in fee simple or fee tail. There was no curtesy in respect of an estate held in joint tenancy; but it existed in respect of an estate held under a tenancy in common (Palmer v. Rich., [1897] 1 Ch. 141) and in respect of the estate of a coparcener (Co. Litt. 174 b, 183 a).

As to the effect of the wife's election on the husband's curtesy, see Griggs v. Gibson (1 Eq. 685).

3rd. The wife had to have issue born alive, and capable of inheriting the estate (Co. Litt. 29 b; 8 Rep. 34 b; Dyer, 25 b; see Jones v. Ricketts, 31 L. J. Ch. 753).

4th. The last circumstance required to consummate the right of the husband was the death of the wife (Co. Litt. 20 a).

Copyholds.

Copyholds were not subject to curtesy, except by custom (4 Rep. 22 a, 30 b; Paulter v. Cornhill, Cro. Eliz. 361), to which resort had to be had for determining what portion of the lands of a feme copyholder a husband took. See Co. Litt. 30 a, 111 a; 2 Sid. 153; Robinson on Gav., pp. 177—204; Scriven on Cop. 74, 7th ed.; Shelford on Copyholds, pp. 72—74.

Equitable estates.

Equity followed the law in the quality of estates, and therefore a husband became tenant by the curtesy of an equitable estate of inheritance of the wife, and this notwithstanding a direction to pay the rents to her separate use (Morgan v. M., 5 Madd. 408; Hearle v. Greenbank, 3 Atk. 715; Pitt v. Jackson, 2 Br. C. C. 51; Follett v. Tyrer, 14 Sim. 125). So where there was a devise of freeholds to trustees upon trust to stand possessed thereof unto and to the use of a married woman, her heirs and assigns for ever, for her separate use (Appleton v. Rowley, 8 Eq. 139; contra, Moore v. Webster, 3 Eq. 267). But a disposition by a wife of her separate property, either by deed or will prevented an estate by the curtesy (Cooper v. Macdonald, 7 Ch. D. 288).

Adverse possession, commenced before the equitable estate of the wife began, by a party claiming by a title paramount to the trust, who retained possession until after the death of the wife, prevented any title by the curtesy (Parker v. Carter, 4 Hare, 400).

The husband might be excluded in equity by an express declaration, that, upon the death of the wife, the inheritance should descend to the heir of the wife, and that the husband should not be a tenant by the curtesy (Bennett v. Davis, 2 P. Wms. 316); although a partial exclusion from the enjoyment of the property had not that effect (5 Madd. 412).

Powers of tenant by the curtesy.

By the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, s. 22 (ante, p. 321), an estate by the curtesy qualifies a person to be protector of a settlement. And by sect. 20, sub-s. 1 (vii) of the S. L. Act, 1925, post (replacing the S. L. Act, 1882, sect. 58 (1) (viii), a tenant by the curtesy has the powers of a tenant for life.

The Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, abolishes (sect. 45) with regard to the real estate of every person dying after Dec. 31, 1925, all existing modes, rules and canons of descent, whether operating by the general law or by local custom. For the present devolution of property on intestacy see sects. 46 et seq. of that Act. But by sect. 51 the foregoing provisions of the Act do not apply to any beneficial interest in real estate of a lunatic or defective living and of full age on 1st January, 1926, who is unable to make a will and thereafter dies intestate without having recovered testamentary capacity; and such beneficial interest is to devolve in accordance with the general law in force before 1926. The present Act therefore governs such cases; and gifts to the heir or heirs, or any particular heir or class of heirs, or the heir, either general or special, also confer interests on the persons who would have answered the description under the law in force before 1926 (L. P. Act, 1925, sects. 131 and 132, post).

See also sect. 51, sub-s. 1 of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, and as to entailed interests sub-s. 4 of that section and sect. 130, sub-s. 4 of L. P. Act, 1925, post. The notes to the present Act in the former editions of this work (pp. 380—391 in the 2nd ed.) have been curtailed by the omission or shortening of passages relating to the law before the passing of the Act and other matters, the Act itself being retained in this edition in view of its having governed descents down to the end of 1925, as well as of its continued application in the cases above referred to.

Meaning of words in the Act.

"Land."

Be it enacted, that the words and expressions hereinafter mentioned, which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this Act, except where the nature of the provision or the context of the Act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows (that is to say), the word "land" shall extend to manors, advowsons, messuages, and all other hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal, and whether freehold or copyhold, or of any other tenure, and whether descendible according to the common law, or according to the custom of gavelkind or borough-English, or any other custom, and to money to be laid out in the purchase of land, and to chattels and other personal property transmissible to heirs, and also to any share of the same hereditaments and properties or any of them, and to any estate of inheritance or estate for any life or lives, or other estate transmissible to heirs, and to any possibility, right or title of entry or action, and any other interest capable of being inherited, and whether the same estates, possibilities, rights, titles, and interests, or any of them, shall be in possession, reversion, remainder, or contingency; and the words "the purchaser" shall mean the person who last acquired the land otherwise than by descent or than by any escheat, partition, or inclosure, by the effect of which the land shall have become part of or descendible in the same manner as other land acquired by descent; and the word "descent" shall mean the title to inherit land by reason of consanguinity, as well where the heir shall be an ancestor or collateral relation, as where he shall be a child or other issue; and the expression "descendants" of any ancestor shall extend to all persons who must trace their descent through such ancestor; and the expression "the person last entitled to land" shall extend to the last person who had a right thereto, whether he did or did not obtain the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits thereof; and the word "assurance" shall mean any deed or instrument (other than a will) by which any land shall be conveyed or transferred at law or in equity; and every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things as well as one person or thing; and every word importing the masculine gender only shall extend and be applied to a female as well as a male.

Equitable estates.

Equitable estates are subject to the same rules of descent as legal (2 P. Wms. 668; 1 Rep. 121 b; 4 Rep. 22; 2 Eden 258; 1 Sand. Uses, 217, 3rd ed.; Trash v. Wood, 4 M. & C. 324; Re Hudson, Cassels v. H., [1908] 1 Ch. 655).

Descent shall always be

2. In every case descent shall be traced from the purchaser; and to the intent that the pedigree may never be carried further back than the circumstances of the case and the nature of the title shall require, the person last entitled to the land shall, for the purpose of this Act, be considered to have been the purchaser thereof, unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same, in which case the person from whom he inherited the same shall be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same; and in like manner the last person from whom the land shall be proved to have been inherited shall in every case be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 2.

traced from the purchaser, but the last owner shall be considered to be the purchaser, unless the contrary be proved.

Where there shall be a total failure of heirs of the purchaser, or where any land shall be descendible as if an ancestor had been the purchaser thereof, and there shall be a total failure of the heirs of such ancestor, then and in every such case the land shall descend, and the descent shall thenceforth be traced, from the person last entitled to the land, as if he had been the purchaser thereof (Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859, s. 19).

22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 19.

The last preceding section shall be read as part of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106 (ibid., s. 20).

Effect of this section in the case of purchase from an heir.

A vendor making title as heir is not bound to produce affirmative evidence in his possession that the ancestor from whom he traces descent took as purchaser, but may rely on the statutory presumption contained in this section until some proof to the contrary is adduced. But he is bound to disclose any matters within his knowledge tending to rebut the presumption that his ancestor took by purchase (Dorling v. Claydon, 1 H. & M. 402). Where an action to try the validity of a will was compromised on the terms that the rights of the female plaintiff to certain lands should be the same as if there had been an intestacy, she took that land by descent, not by purchase (Blake v. Hynes, 11 L. R. Ir. 284).

Estates in remainder or reversion, or by executory devise.

The descent under the present Act of an estate in remainder or reversion, or by executory devise, is analogous to the descent of an estate taken by descent from a purchasing ancestor (Ingilby v. Amcotts, 21 Beav. 585).

For the purpose of estoppel against a tenant the heir of the landlord may be his privy in blood though the heirship is ascertained under this section by tracing descent from an ancestor of the landlord (Weeks v. Birch, 69 L. T. 759).

Whole share of coparcener dying intestate, leaving a son. descends on the son.

Where a coparcener died intestate leaving a son, the whole of her share descended on her son (Cooper v. France, 19 L. J. Ch. 315); and the same principle applied in the case of her leaving more remote descendants (Paterson v. Mills, 19 L. J. Ch. 310; Re Matson, James v. Dickinson, [1897] 2 Ch. 509). Where land was limited to the "right heirs" of A., who were females, they took as joint tenants and not coparceners, and there was no right of representation (Berens v. Fellowes, 56 L. T. 391; 35 W. R. 350; Re Baker, Pursey v. Holloway, 79 L. T. 343). See Owens v. Gibbons, [1902] 1 Ch. 636. See the previous discussions of descent among coparceners in 5 Jur. 641, 763; 23 Law Mag. 279; 1 Hayes's Convey. 314, 5th ed.; 1 Jarm. & Blyth. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 2.

Customary descents.

The rule as to tracing the descent from the purchaser applied where there was a customary descent (sect. 1, ante). If the custom was found applicable by reason of the parties being within the requisite degree of consanguinity, the customary mode of descent was to be applied, and the descent traced according to the directions of the Act. If the parties were not within the requisite degree, the directions of the Act were to be followed, the descent being traced according to common law (per Crompton, J.; Muggleton v. Barnett, 2 H. & N. 653; Re Smart, S. v. S., 18 Ch. D. 165; see Williams, Real. Prop. App. A.). An equitable interest in copyholds descended to the customary heirs (Re Hudson, Cassels v. H., [1908] 1 Ch. 655). When the custom was that copyholds for the first descent after a surrender descend to the eldest son, and if no surrender to the youngest, the word "descent" was not used in its strict legal sense, but meant "a single step in the scale of genealogy" (Bickley v. B., 4 Eq. 216). See Scriven, p. 167 et seq., 7th ed. Copyhold and customary tenure were abolished by Part V. of L. P. Act, 1922, as from 1st January, 1926.

Lands of gavelkind tenure, chiefly found in Kent, descended to all sons in equal shares, and in default of sons to all daughters (Robinson on Gavelkind, 5th ed. p. 44). This custom (which in Kent was the common law, Re Chenoweth, Ward v. Dwelley, [1902] 2 Ch. 488) extended to collaterals (Re Chenoweth, Ward v. Dwelley, supra; see Crump v. Norwood, 7 Taunt. 362). Lands of borough English tenure descended to the youngest son (Robins. Gavelkind, 236). In the case of the descent of lands of gavelkind or borough English tenure, the jus representationis attached to the custom (Hook v. H., 1 H. & M. 43; Clements v. Scudamore, 1 P. Wms. 65). In the case of other customary descents, however, where the express terms of the custom were silent, the descent was in accordance with the common law (Rider v. Wood, 1 K. & J. 644; Re Smart, S. v. S., 18 Ch. D. 165; see Locke v. Colman, 1 My. & Cr. 423). Descent by the custom of gavelkind or borough English or any other custom was abolished with regard to the real estate and personal inheritance of every person dying after 31st December, 1925, by sect. 45 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post.

Right of posthumous heir.

Although lands had actually descended in the first instance to the person who was heir of the party last seised at the time of his decease, yet, if a nearer heir was afterwards born, property shifted to the nearest heir who subsequently came into being (see Rider v. Wood, 1 K. & J. 644; Cru. Dig. Descent, Ch. III. s. 14). A posthumous heir was entitled to the rents of a descended estate only from the date of his birth, and the qualified heir was entitled to the rents which accrued before the birth of the posthumous heir, whether actually received before that time or not (Richards v. R., Johns, 754; Re Mowlen, 18 Eq. 9; Re Wilmer, Moore v. Wingfield, [1903] 1 Ch. 885, 888; see, however, Goodale v. Gawthorne, 2 Sm. & Giff. 375).

Heir entitled under a will shall take as devisee, and a limitation to the grantor or his heirs shall create an estate by purchase.

3. That when any land shall have been devised, by any testator who shall die after the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, to the heir or to the person who shall be the heir of such testator, such heir shall be considered to have acquired the land as a devisee, and not by descent; and when any land shall have been limited, by any assurance executed after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, to the person or to the heirs of the person who shall thereby have conveyed the same land, such person shall be considered to have acquired the same as a purchaser, by virtue of such assurance, and shall not be considered to be entitled thereto as his former estate or part thereof.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 3.

This section of the Act is in direct contravention of two old-established rules of law—(a) that a man could not make his right heir take by purchase, and (b) that a grantor could not enable his heir general to take a remainder as purchaser under a limitation to his heirs. See the 2nd ed. of this work, pp. 385—7, and authorities there cited; and as to limitations to heirs since 1st January, 1926, see sects. 131 and 132 of L. P. Act, 1925, post (the former of which abolishes as from that date the Rule in Shelley's Case (1 Rep. 93)), and sect. 51, sub-sect. 1 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post.

It does not seem certain whether this section applied to the case of a devise of copyholds to an heir who disclaimed all interest under the will, and entered as heir of the testator (Bickley v. B. 4 Eq. 216).

It applies to a devise to "right heirs" (Owen v. Gibbons, [1902] 1 Ch. 636). So where a testator devised lands to his own right heirs who were females, they took as joint tenants and not as coparceners (Re Baker, Pursey v. Holloway, 79 L. T. 343; see Swaine v. Burton, 15 Ves. 371; Berens v. Fellowes, 56 L. T. 391; Owen v. Gibbons, supra).

Construction of devises to "heir."

Under a devise of customary lands to the testator's heir, his heir-at-law took, and not his customary heir (Thorp v. Owen, 2 Sm. & G. 90; Polley v. P., 31 Beav. 363; Garland v. Beverley, 9 Ch. D. 213; see Sladen v. S., 2 J. & H. 369). Copyhold and customary tenure were abolished from 1st January, 1926, by L. P. Act, 1922, Part V.

A devise of the whole fee simple in the testator's residuary real estate to trustees, in trust to convey to such person as should answer the description of the testator's heir-at-law, broke the descent of real estate which had descended to the testator ex parte materna, and the trustees were bound to convey to the common law heir (Davis v. Kirk, 2 K. & J. 391; compare the grant in Heywood v. H., 34 Beav. 317). As to a devise to "my nearest male heir" see Lightfoot v. Maybery, [1914] A. C. 782.

Where a settlor entitled ex parte materna limited lands (by an ultimate limitation in a settlement), to the right heirs of her mother, whose heir-at-law she then was, the estate descended on her intestacy to her own heir ex parte materna (Moore v. Simpkin, 31 Ch. D. 95).

Where heirs take by purchase under limitations to the heirs of their ancestor, the land shall descend as if the ancestor had been the purchaser.

4. When any person shall have acquired any land by purchase under a limitation to the heirs or to the heirs of the body of any of his ancestors, contained in an assurance executed after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, or under a limitation to the heirs or to the heirs of the body of any of his ancestors, or under any limitation having the same effect, contained in a will of any testator who shall depart this life after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, then and in any of such cases such land shall descend, and the descent thereof shall be traced as if the ancestor named in such limitation had been the purchaser of such land.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 4.

The above section lays down a rule of descent applicable as well to limitations to heirs general as to limitations to heirs special.

A gift to the heirs of a person to whom no estate is given is a gift to them as personæ designatæ, and they take as joint tenants (Berens v. Fellowes, 56 L. T. 391; 35 W. R. 350).

Brothers, &c. shall trace descent through their parent.

5. No brother or sister shall be considered to inherit immediately from his or her brother or sister, but every descent from a brother or sister shall be traced through the parent.

Before this Act the descent between brothers and sisters was considered as immediate; and in making out their title to each other, the common father need not have been named, though living, but the descent between them was exactly the same as if he had been dead (Watk. Desc. 111, n.; H. Chitty on Desc. 64, 354; Collingwood v. Pace, 1 Ventr. 413; Bridg. by Bann. 410).

Lineal ancestor may be heir in preference to collateral persons claiming through him.

6. Every lineal ancestor shall be capable of being heir to any of his issue; and in every case where there shall be no issue of the purchaser, his nearest lineal ancestor shall be his heir in preference to any person who would have been entitled to inherit, either by tracing his descent through such lineal ancestor, or in consequence of there being no descendant of such lineal ancestor, so that the father shall be preferred to a brother or sister, and a more remote lineal ancestor to any of his issue, other than a nearer lineal ancestor or his issue.

Old rule excluding the ascending line.

It was an old maxim of law that an inheritance might lineally descend but not ascend (3 Rep. 40a). The parent, therefore, could never take immediately by descent from the child, but the land would rather have escheated (Cowper v. C., 2 P. Wms. 666).

By the present section lineal ancestors are admitted.

Where a son, legitimate in Scotland by the subsequent marriage of his parents, died intestate as to lands in England of which he was seised in fee and without issue, the father did not inherit under this section (Re Don, 4 Drew. 194). Compare the rule laid down in Doe v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 895, that a child born out of wedlock, although legitimated by the subsequent marriage of his parents, cannot inherit land in England. And see Re Grey, G. v. Stanford, [1892] 3 Ch. 88; and Shaw v. Gould, L. R. 3 H. L. 55.

The male line to be preferred.

7. And be it further enacted and declared, that none of the maternal ancestors of the person from whom the descent is to be traced, nor any of their descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his paternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed; and also that no female paternal ancestor of such person, nor any of her descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his male paternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed; and that no female maternal ancestor of such person, nor any of her descendants, shall be capable of inheriting until all his male maternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed.

Where, after due and sufficient investigation, there is no reasonable possibility of ascertaining that there are descendants from the paternal ancestors, then under the above section the descendants of the maternal ancestors must be sought for (Greaves v. Greenwood, 2 Ex. D. 297). As to what is sufficient evidence of the extinction of superior lines of descent, see ibid.; Lyell v. Kennedy (18 Q. B. D. 811); Rawlinson v. Miller (1 Ch. D. 52); Jeakes v. White (6 Exch. 880); and the note, ante, p. 182.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 7.

8. And be it further enacted and declared, that where there shall be a failure of male paternal ancestors of the person from whom the descent is to be traced, and their descendants, the mother of his more remote male paternal ancestor, or her descendants, shall be the heir or heirs of such person, in preference to the mother of a less remote male paternal ancestor, or her descendants; and where there shall be a failure of male maternal ancestors of such person and their descendants, the mother of his more remote male maternal ancestor, and her descendants, shall be the heir or heirs of such person, in preference to the mother of a less remote male maternal ancestor, and her descendants.

The mother of more remote male ancestor to be preferred to the mother of the less remote male ancestor.

This statute has declared the law to be in accordance with the position laid down by Blackstone (2 Comm. 238; Davies v. Lowndes, 5 Bing. N. C. 169). It was decided, that where a person seised of an estate ex parte materna died without issue, the descendants of his maternal grandfather must all be extinct before any descendant of a remoter maternal ancestor could inherit, however nearly related to the propositus ex parte materna (Hawkins v. Shewen, 1 Sim. & Stu. 257; see Hale's Hist C. L. by Runn. 2nd vol. 120). As to what is sufficient evidence of the extinction of a superior line of descent, see Jeakes v. White (6 Exch. 880), and the cases quoted under sect. 7.

9. Any person related to the person from whom the descent is to be traced by the half blood shall be capable of being his heir; and the place in which any such relation by the half blood shall stand in the order of inheritance, so as to be entitled to inherit, shall be the next after any relation in the same degree of the whole blood, and his issue, where the common ancestor shall be a male, and next after the common ancestor where such common ancestor shall be a female, so that the brother of the half blood on the part of the father shall inherit next after the sisters of the whole blood on the part of the father and their issue, and the brother of the half blood on the part of the mother shall inherit next after the mother.

Half blood, if on the part of a male ancestor, to inherit after the whole blood of the same degree; if on the part of a female ancestor, after her.

The law before this Act excluded the half blood from taking by descent, subject to some exceptions and qualifications stated on p. 390 of the 2nd. ed. of this work, including the cases of estates tail and titles of honour.

Exceptions to the rule excluding the half blood.

A brother or sister of the half blood was entitled under the Statute of Distribution (1 Jac. 2, c. 17, s. 7) to share the personal estate of an intestate equally with one of the whole blood, inasmuch as they were both equally near of kin to the intestate; Jessop v. Watson, 1 M. & K. 665; Burnett v. Mann, 1 Ves. sen. 156). But see now sect. 46, sub-sect. 1 (v) of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10.

After the death of a person attainted, his descendants may inherit.

10. That when the person from whom the descent of any land is to be traced shall have had any relation who, having been attainted, shall have died before such descent shall have taken place, then such attainder shall not prevent any person from inheriting such land who would have been capable of inheriting the same, by tracing his descent through such relation, if he had not been attainted, unless such land shall have escheated in consequence of such attainder before the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.

The effect of attainder.

Persons attainted of high treason or felony were incapable of inheriting lands or of transmitting them by descent to their posterity (Co. Litt. 8 a; Cro. Car. 566). Another consequence of such an attainder was the corruption and extinction of all hereditary blood in the person attainted, by which he was rendered not only incapable of himself inheriting or of transmitting his own property by heirship, but he also obstructed the descent of lands to his posterity, in all cases where they were obliged to derive their title through him from any remote ancestor (11 Rep. 1 b; Co. Litt. 391 b; see Yorke's Law of Forfeiture, 72, 4th ed.; 2 Blac. Com. 251; 4 ibid. 388; Bl. Considerations on the Law of Forfeiture for High Treason; Bac. Abr. Forfeiture; Burn's J. Forfeiture). But as between two sons of an attainted father, there was nothing to hinder one brother from inheriting to the other (1 Ventr. 413; Yorke's Law of Forfeiture, 83, 4th ed.; Kynnaird v. Leslie, L. R. 1 C. P. 389).

Statutes as to attainder.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 23.

By the Forfeiture Act, 1870, s. 1, it is enacted that, from and after the 4th July, 1870, no confession, verdict, inquest, conviction, or judgment of or for any treason or felony or felo de se shall cause any attainder or corruption of blood or any forfeiture or escheat. As to the rights of the Crown under the law before the Act see Talbot v. Jevers, [1917] 2 Ch. 363. But nothing in the Act is to affect the law of forfeiture consequent upon outlawry (see also 54 Geo. 3, c. 145; Hansard, Parl. Debates, vol. 27, pp. 527—538; Trustee Act, 1925, s. 65, post). As to a tenant in tail convicted of felony, see Re Gaskell and Walter, [1906] 2 Ch. 1; quoted, ante, p. 312.

Act not to extend to any descent before January, 1834.

11. This Act shall not extend to any descent which shall take place on the death of any person who shall die before the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.

Limitations made before January 1, 1834, to the heirs of a person then living, shall take effect as if this Act had not been made.

12. Where any assurance executed before the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, or the will of any person who shall die before the same first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, shall contain any limitation or gift to the heir or heirs of any person, under which the person or persons answering the description of heir shall be entitled to an estate by purchase, then the person or persons who would have answered such description of heir if this Act had not been made, shall become entitled by virtue of such limitation or gift, whether the person named as ancestor shall or shall not be living on or after the said first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.

ADMINISTRATION OF ESTATES OF DECEASED PERSONS.

I.—The Land Transfer Act, 1897, ss. 1—5, 24—26.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65.

An Act to establish a Real Representative and to Amend the Land Transfer Act, 1875. [6th August, 1897.]

Part I.

Establishment of a Real Representative.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 1.

Devolution of legal interest in real estate on death.

1.—(1.) Where real estate is vested in any person without a right in any other person to take by survivorship it shall, on his death, notwithstanding any testamentary disposition, devolve to and become vested in his personal representatives or representative from time to time as if it were a chattel real vesting in them or him.

(2.) This section shall apply to any real estate over which a person executes by will a general power of appointment, as if it were real estate vested in him.

(3.) Probate and letters of administration may be granted in respect of real estate only, although there is no personal estate.

(4.) The expression "real estate," in this part of this Act, shall not be deemed to include land of copyhold tenure or customary freehold in any case in which an admission or any act by the lord of the manor is necessary to perfect the title of a purchaser from the customary tenant.

(5.) This section applies only in cases of death after the commencement of this Act.

Part I. of this Act applied in the case of all deaths occurring between 1st January, 1898, and 31st December, 1925. It was repealed by L. P. Act, 1922, as respects deaths occurring after 31st December, 1925 (see L. P. (Amendment) Act, 1924, s. 1 and sched. 1, and as to the date 15 Geo. 5, c. 4). The remainder of the Act was repealed by the Land Registration Act, 1925, post. For the similar provisions, in respect of deaths after 1925, of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, see that Act, post.

Law as to persons dying before 1898.

Sect. 25 of the Act (post, p. 425), fixed January 1, 1898, as the date on which the Act was to come into operation. In the case of a person dying before that date and who had by his will charged his debts on his real estate, the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859, contained provisions for raising the money, either by trustees to whom the real estate had been devised for the testator's whole interest (sect. 14), or by the executors (sect. 16). As to a devisee in fee or tail raising the money in such a case, see sect. 18. Where such a person's will did not contain a charge, or where he died intestate, the real estate could be made available for payment of debts under the Administration of Estates Act, 1833, the proceedings used for the purpose being a creditor's administration action in the Chancery Division, to which the devisee or heir, as well as the executor, was a necessary party (and see the forms of indorsement on a creditor's writ, App. A., R. S. C. 1883, Pt. III., s. 1). Such an action might be commenced by originating summons (see R. S. C., Ord. LV., rr. 3, 4, 10, and 10a). See further, Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 32, and notes, post.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 1.

Persons dying after 1897.

Under the present Act, the real estate of a person dying after 1897 was made available in all cases for the payment of his debts without the necessity for any proceedings. Sect. 1, sub-sect. 1, vested such real estate (including real estate appointed by will under a general power—sub-sect. 2; but not including copyholds—sub-sect. 4) in the personal representatives. And this real estate was to be administered in the same manner for the payment of debts, &c., as if it were personal estate (sect. 2, sub-sect. 3). For the purpose of such administration the powers, rights, duties and liabilities of the personal representatives in respect of the personal estate were to apply to the real estate as if the same were a chattel real (see sect. 2, sub-sect. 2). And, subject to such powers, rights, duties, and liabilities, the representatives held the real estate as trustees for the beneficiaries (sect. 2, sub-sect. 1). To these beneficiaries a transfer might be made by the representatives, either by means of an assent to a devise or by a conveyance, and either subject to a charge or not sect. 3, sub-sect. 1); and might be ordered after the expiration of one year from the death (sect. 3, sub-sect. 2). The Act further contains provisions as to probate and letters of administration (sect. 1, sub-sect. 3, and sect. 2, sub-sect. 4), and also a special power for the representatives to appropriate parts of the residuary estate (sect. 4).

Parties to administration actions.

If it becomes necessary to administer in an action the freehold estate of a person dying since 1897, it seems that (contrary to the rule before this Act) the devisee is not a necessary party (see Re Harrowby and Paine, [1902] W. N. 137) and that between 1897 and 1926 the heir was not a necessary party (ibid.). See as to the devolution of property on intestacy after 1925, Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 45, post. And since 1898, a creditor need not sue on behalf of himself and all other creditors (Re James, J. v. Jones, [1911] 2 Ch. 348).

Where the owner of real estate in England dying since 1897 held shares in a company which is being wound up, his personal representatives and also his heirs (see now Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 45, post), and devisees were liable to contribute (Comp. Consol. Act, 1908, s. 126 (1)). The representatives should be placed on the list of contributories, but not it seems the devisees (or before 1926 the heirs) (sect. 126, sub-sect. 2; see sect. 168, sub-sect. 2).

Contributories.

Real estate made legal assets.

The real estate referred to in sect. 1 appears to be thereby made "legal assets"—i.e., assets which the representative could virtute officii recover in a Court of law or equity (Cook v. Gregson, 3 Drew. 549, post, p. 440).

What real estate vests under the section.

The trust and mortgage estates vested in a deceased person at the time of his death were dealt with by sect. 30, sub-sect. 1, of the Conv. Act, 1881, under which they devolved on the personal representative in the same manner as a chattel real, notwithstanding any testamentary disposition (see now sect. 3, sub-sect. 1 (ii) of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post). As regards his beneficial interests the words of the present sub-section include every interest of the deceased (whether legal or equitable) in real estate (Re Somerville and Turner, [1903] 2 Ch. 587). Such real estate is to vest in the personal representatives as if it were a "chattel real"; as to the meaning of which, see ante, p. 136. As to the devolution on the executor of all interests of the deceased (whether legal or equitable) in chattels real at the commencement of this Act see Re Culverhouse, [1896] 2 Ch. 253. 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 1.

According to sect. 26 of the L. T. Act, 1897 (post, p. 425), the Act is to be construed as one with the L. T. Act, 1875. Sect. 2 of the last-mentioned Act provides that such Act shall not apply to Scotland or Ireland. It seems, accordingly, that the provisions as to a real representative did not apply to real estate situate in Scotland or Ireland (see now sect. 58, sub-sect. 3 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post). Scotland and Ireland.

The real estate made available for debts by the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833 (which only applied where there was no testamentary charge of debts), included, in the words of that Act, every estate or interest in real estate of or to which a person died seised or entitled. In the case of a man who died intestate leaving a widow, it was said that what was claimed by or came to the widow as dower was no part of what the intestate was seised of at his death, and that accordingly the dower had priority over the creditors (Spyer v. Hyatt, 20 Beav. 623; Northern Bank v. M'Machin, [1909] 1 I. R. 374). Under the present Act the widow's dower seems to have the same priority. (Dower is abolished in the case of deaths after 1925 by Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 45 (1), post.) Dower.

As regards real estate appointed by the will of the deceased under a general power, this, under sect. 1, sub-sect. 2, of this Act, vests in the representative (see now Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 3 (2), post). Previously such property had been held to fall within the words of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833, above referred to, and to be applicable in payment of debts under that Act (Fleming v. Buchanan, 3 D. M. & G. 980). Under the joint operation of sects. 24 and 27 of the Wills Act, 1837, all general powers vested in a testator immediately before his death are (in the absence of a contrary intention) executed by a general devise (see post, p. 528). In the case of a married woman such appointed property was made liable for her debts by M. W. P. Act, 1882, s. 4, ante, p. 380. Sect. 27 always applied to the will of a married woman (Bernard v. Minshull, John. 276); and in the case of a married woman dying since December 5, 1893, s. 24 has been rendered applicable by sect. 3 of the M. W. P. Act, 1893, ante, p. 395. The case of a testator who has exercised a general testamentary power becoming bankrupt and dying undischarged is dealt with in Re Guedalla, Lee v. G., [1905] 2 Ch. 331, quoted, ante, p. 354. Real estate appointed.

Copyholds where the interest was legal and an admission was necessary were not included in the real estate which vests in the representative (sect. 1, sub-sect. 4); and to these the old law still applied. But an equitable interest in copyholds passed to the representative (Re Somerville and Turner, [1903] 2 Ch. 583). (Copyhold and customary tenure were abolished as from January 1, 1926, by L. P. Act, 1922, Part V.) Copyholds.

The expression "personal representative" in sub-sect. 1 means an executor or administrator (sect. 24, sub-sect. 2, post, p. 425). It has been held that this section vested a testator's real estate in all the executors appointed by his will, whether they had or had not proved; unless those who had not proved had, by renunciation or Representative.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 1.

otherwise, made it impossible for them to obtain probate; in which last case (semble) the real estate might vest exclusively in the executors who had proved (Re Pawley and London Bank, [1900] 1 Ch. 64; see Re Boucherett, Barne v. Erskine, [1908] 1 Ch. 180; quære as to the effect of a retractation of renunciation, see Re Stiles, [1898] P. 12; Re Morant, 3 P. & M. 151); but see sect. 6 of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, p. 430. It was said by North, J., that, until some executor proved, the legal estate remained in the heir (John v. J., [1898] 2 Ch. 576). See now Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, ss. 2 (2) and 8, post, the former of which re-enacts sect. 12 of the Conv. Act, 1911. But upon probate or grant of administration there is a relation back to the death of the title of the representative (Re Pryse, [1904] P. 301; see ante, p. 166). As to the vesting of personal estate between the death and grant of administration, see Court of Probate Act, 1858, s. 19, re-enacted by sect. 9 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post.

Where a testator appointed general executors, and also special executors for his property in Australia, the general executors could under this section make a good title to property in England without the concurrence of the special executors (Re Cohen's Executors, [1902] 1 Ch. 187; compare Re Clark, M'Kecknie v. Clark, [1904] 1 Ch. 294).

Married woman representative.

Where a married woman holds real or personal property solely or jointly with any other person as personal representative she can, without her husband, dispose of the same as if she were a feme sole (L. P. Act, 1925, s. 170 (2), replacing M. W. P. Act, 1907, s. 1).

Estate duty.

As regards the incidence of estate duty, it has been held that, notwithstanding this section, real estate does not "pass to the executor as such" within the meaning of sect. 9, sub-sect. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894, and must bear a rateable part of the duty (Re Palmer, P. v. Rose-Innes, [1900] W. N. 9; Re Sharman, Wright v. S., [1901] 2 Ch. 280).

Escheat.

As regards escheated land (as to which see ante, p. 142), this Act did not bind the Crown, which is not named therein (see cases quoted ante, p. 143); and accordingly did not affect the legal estate in such land (Re Hartley, [1899] P. 40; Re Ball, [1902] W. N. 226). Escheat was abolished in the case of deaths after 1925 by the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 45 (1) (d), post.

Probate, &c.

As to probate and letters of administration in the case of real estate, see note to sect. 2, sub-sect. 4, post.

In the case of applications under Part I. of this Act, the Senior Judge of the Chancery Division has no exclusive jurisdiction (Re Walbeck, [1904] W. N. 204).

Provisions as to administration.

2.—(1.) Subject to the powers, rights, duties, and liabilities hereinafter mentioned, the personal representatives of a deceased person shall hold the real estate as trustees for the persons by law beneficially entitled thereto, and those persons shall have the same power of requiring a transfer of real estate as persons beneficially entitled to personal estate have of requiring a transfer of such personal estate.

In the case of personal estate it was held before this Act that an executor was not, strictly speaking, a trustee for legatees (see Re Barker, Buxton v. Campbell, [1892] 2 Ch. 491; Re Davis, Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 124; see Re Lacy, Royal Association v. Kydd, [1899] 2 Ch. 149; Re Hyatt, Bowles v. H., 38 Ch. D. 617); but an executor might become a trustee by his conduct (see cases quoted ante, p. 222). Under this section the representative (subject as therein mentioned) is made a trustee of the real estate for the beneficiaries (see Re Peel, Woodcock v. Holdroyd (1899), W. N. 208). But as regards costs, where a conflict arose on the construction of a devise between devisees and the heir, and the executors brought them both before the Court, the unsuccessful party was ordered to pay costs (ibid.). Where land descended to an infant, and the representative disclaimed the trusteeship arising under this section, the Court appointed trustees under sect. 42 of the Conv. Act, 1881 (Re Cowley, [1901] 1 Ch. 38; see now S. L. Act, 1925, s. 102, post). Under sects. 1 & 2 of the Land Transfer Act, 1897, the legal personal representative is an express trustee of real estate, and the R. P. Lim. Act, 1874, does not run in his favour (Toates v. T., [1926] 2 K. B. 30).

As regards personal estate, it was held before this Act that, subject to paramount claims of creditors, the next-of-kin of an intestate had a right to require the specific property forming his personal estate to be transferred to them by the administrator (Cooper v. C., L. R. 7 H. L. 65, 72). See now pp. 471 et seq., post.

(2.) All enactments and rules of law relating to the effect of probate or letters of administration as respects chattels real, and as respects the dealing with chattels real before probate or administration, and as respects the payment of costs of administration and other matters in relation to the administration of personal estate, and the powers, rights, duties, and liabilities of personal representatives in respect of personal estate, shall apply to real estate so far as the same are applicable, as if that real estate were a chattel real vesting in them or him, save that it shall not be lawful for some or one only of several joint personal representatives, without the authority of the court, to sell or transfer real estate.

As to the rules of law relating to the effect of probate or letters of administration as respects chattels real, and as respects the dealing with chattels real before probate or administration, see the note to the R. P. Lim. Act, 1833, s. 6, ante, p. 166.

As regards the costs of administration, the rule of law which obtained at the passing of this Act is stated in the note to sub-sect. 3 of present section; see the words of the proviso in that sub-section.

Powers, rights and duties of representatives.

The "powers and rights" of representatives in dealing with the chattels real of a deceased person include power for executors (for the purpose of administration and before assenting to a bequest thereof) to sell the chattels real (Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. 609; Cole v. Miles, 10 Hare, 179), and to mortgage them (Thorne v. T., [1893] 3 Ch. 196; Re Morgan, Pillgrem v. P., 18 Ch. D. 98; Re Scott and Alverez, [1895] 1 Ch. 596; and see sect. 39 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post). And unless the contrary be shown, executors dealing with purchasers or mortgagees, even more than twenty years after the testator's death, are to be presumed to be acting in discharge of their duties as such (Re Venn and Furze, [1894] 2 Ch. 114; Corser v. Cartwright, L. R. 7 H. L. 736; Re Henson, Chester v. H., [1908] 2 Ch. 356; see Re Verrell, [1903] 1 Ch. 65, where the rule did not apply). It would seem that in dealings with freeholds under the powers of the present Act this rule would apply rather than the rule in Re Tanqueray Willaume (20 Ch. D. 480, post, p. 440; see now Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 36 (8), post, p. 459). Executors cannot give an option of purchase at a future time of lease-holds (Oceanic Co. v. Sutherberry, 16 Ch. D. 236); but, if necessary for the due administration of the property, can grant an underlease (ibid.; see Re Judd and Poland, [1906] 1 Ch. 684). Administrators after a grant have equal power with executors (Wms. Exors., 11th ed. 688). The rights and liabilities, under sub-sect. 2, of the administratrix of an equitable mortgagor of freeholds were said to include the right to redeem, and the liability to be sued in a foreclosure action; to which action the mortgagor's heir was held not to be a necessary party (Re Harrowby & Paine, [1902] W. N. 137).

One of several representatives.

One only of several executors could sell chattels real (Simpson v. Gutteridge, Cole v. Miles, supra). And it seems that one administrator stands on the same ground with one executor (Jacomb v. Harwood, 2 Ves. sen. 267). This power of a single representative was expressly made applicable in the case of trust and mortgage estates by sect. 30 of the Conv. Act, 1881 (see now Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 3 (1) (ii), post). But the proviso in this subsection prevents it from applying in the case of real estate vesting in representatives under the present Act.

Estate duty.

As regards estate duty, the power and duty of the personal representatives is to discharge out of the general personal estate the estate duty payable in respect of the chattels real of the deceased, even where they are specifically bequeathed (Re Culverhouse, Cook v. Culverhouse, [1896] 2 Ch. 251; see Finance Act, 1894, s. 6, sub-s. 2; Re Webber, Gribble v. W., [1896] 1 Ch. 914). Having regard, however, to sect. 9, sub-sect. 1, of the Finance Act, 1894, the estate duty payable in respect of the freeholds of the deceased is charged on such freeholds (Re Palmer, P. v. Rose-Innes, [1900] W. N. 9; see Re Sharman, Wright v. S., [1901] 2 Ch. 280).

Liabilities of representatives.

As to the liability of personal representatives in respect of the chattels real of the deceased, see the note to sect. 26 of the Trustee Act, 1925, post. Their liability in respect of the acts of the deceased generally is dealt with in Wms. Exors., 11th ed., 1332 et seq. The representatives may also be liable in respect of their own acts, e.g. devastavit. The rule of limitation applicable in such a case is stated ante, pp. 258, 295. See also, in connection with the representative's acts, sects. 30 and 68 of the Trustee Act, 1925, post. The last-mentioned liability is dealt with generally in Wms. Exors., 11th ed., 1457 et seq.

(3.) In the administration of the assets of a person dying after the commencement of this Act, his real estate shall be administered in the same manner, subject to the same liabilities for debt, costs, and expenses, and with the same incidents, as if it were personal estate; provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the order in which real and personal assets respectively are now applicable in or towards the payment of funeral and testamentary expenses, debts, or legacies, or the liability of real estate to be charged with the payment of legacies.

Persons dying before 1898, liability of their personalty to pay—debts, costs and expenses.

In the case of a person dying before the commencement of this Act, his general personal estate was the primary fund for payment of his debts other than debts being at the time of the death charged on land (see post, p. 484); which last-mentioned debts were by the Real Estates Charges Acts (see now sect. 35 of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post), payable primarily out of the land charged. Similarly costs and expenses, including the costs of an administration action, were payable primarily out of general personalty (Trethewy v. Helyar, 4 Ch. D. 53). But where real estate was included in the action, any additional costs were borne by the real estate (Patching v. Barnett, [1907] 2 Ch. 154; Re Middleton, Thompson v. Harris, 19 Ch. D. 552). Where real and personal estate were given on trust for conversion, the proceeds formed one fund for this purpose (Re Price, Williams v. Jenkins, 31 Ch. D. 493). The rule in Patching v. Barnett has not been altered by the present Act (Re Jones, Elgood v. Kinderley, [1902] 1 Ch. 92); even where the will contains a direction to pay "testamentary expenses" out of personalty (Re Betts, Doughty v. Walker, [1907] 2 Ch. 149). Before this Act the costs of probate litigation were not payable out of real estate (Re Shaw, Bridges v. S., [1894] 3 Ch. 615). But this Act has altered the rule (Re Prince, Godwin v. P., [1898] 2 Ch. 228; see Briscoe v. Baillie Hamilton, [1902] P. 238; Re Vickerstaff, V. v. Chadwick, [1906] W. N. 67). 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 2.

The order in which, at the date of the passing of this Act, real and personal assets were applicable in payment of debts is stated post, p. 484. The words "testamentary expenses" in wills have been held to include the costs of an administration action (Penny v. P., 11 Ch. D. 440; Sharp v. Lush, 10 Ch. D. 468; see Re Betts, supra; as to administration under an intestacy, see Re Cledmow, Yeo v. C., [1900] 2 Ch. 182). They have also been held to include estate duty payable in respect of a bequest of personalty (Re Trenchard, T. v. T., [1905] 1 Ch. 82); but not personalty appointed under a general power (O'Grady v. Wilmot, [1916] 2 A. C. 231, overruling Re Hadley, Johnson v. H., [1909] 1 Ch. 24, 20); nor settlement estate duty on personalty (Re King, Travers v. Kelly, [1904] 1 Ch. 363; see as to this Re Pimm, Sharpe v. Hodgson, [1904] 2 Ch. 345; Re Cayley, Awdry v. C., ibid., 781; Re Turnbull, Skipper v. Wade, [1905] 1 Ch. 726); nor estate duty payable in respect of specifically devised real estate (Re Sharman, Wright v. S., [1901] 2 Ch. 280; Re Jolley, 17 T. L. R. 244). As regards the incidence of estate duty payable in respect of real estate, it has been held that, under sect. 9, sub-sect. 1 of the Finance Act, 1894, such duty is charged on and payable out of the real estate itself (Re Palmer, P. v. Rose-Innes, [1900] W. N. 9; see also sect. 5, post). The cases relating to the liability of real estate to be charged with legacies are collected, p. 439. The order of application of assets in payment of testamentary expenses is the same as in the case of debts (Re Pullen, Parker v. Pullen, [1910] 1 Ch. 564). Proviso.

The proviso has preserved the doctrine of marshalling (post, p. 427), under which, where the general personalty has been exhausted by a creditor, a pecuniary legatee is entitled to be repaid out of land charged with debts (Re Kempster, K. v. K., [1906] 1 Ch. 446; see Re Balls, Trewby v. B., [1909] 1 Ch. 795). The words of the proviso were held to prevent an administratrix from successfully claiming a right to retain out of real assets a debt due to her from the intestate (Re Williams, Holder v. W., [1904] 1 Ch. 52). But see now as to retainer, Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 34, and notes, post.

(4.) Where a person dies possessed of real estate, the court shall, in granting letters of administration, have regard to the rights and interests of persons interested in his real estate, and his heir-at-law, if not one of the next of kin, shall be equally entitled to the grant with the next of kin, and provisions shall be made by rules of court for adapting the procedure and practice in the grant of letters of administration to the case of real estate.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 2.

Old rules as to probate of will of realty;

Before this Act a will disposing of realty only, but not appointing an executor, could not be proved (Re Drummond, 2 Sw. & Tr. 8). Where it appointed an executor, it could (Re Hornbuckle, 15 P. D. 151; Re Jordan, L. R. 1 P. & M. 555). But the last rule did not apply to the will of a married woman appointing under a power (Re Tomlinson, 6 P. D. 209; Re Barden, L. R. 1 P. & M. 325), except where by equitable conversion the real estate was personalty (Re Gunn, 9 P. D. 242).

In the case of a will dealing with realty and personalty, the Court could, under the Court of Probate Act, 1857, grant probate without citing the heir (sect. 63). He was not bound unless cited (ibid.); but he was bound if cited even as one of the next-of-kin (Beardsley v. B., [1899] 1 Q. B. 746). Probate was conclusive evidence of a will proved in solemn form (Court of Probate Act, 1857, s. 62). Where not so proved, see sect. 64.

Rule under Act as to probate and letters of administration in case of real estate.

Under the present Act, probate and letters of administration might be granted in respect of real estate only (sect. 1, sub-sect. 3); even, it seems, in the case of the will of a married woman exercising a power (sub-sect. 2).

Sect. 2, sub-sect. 4, deals with letters of administration in the case of real estate. The position of the heir under the Act has been said to be practically that of the next-of-kin (Twist v. Tye, [1902] P. 98). By an additional rule and order of the Probate Division dated November 20, 1897, all rules, orders and instructions and the existing practice of the Court with respect to non-contentious business shall, so far as the circumstances of each case will allow, be applicable to grants of probate and administration made under the authority of the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (L. R. Current Index, 1897, p. lxxxii.). Under this rule grants ad colligendum may be made applicable to real estate (Re Roberts, [1898] P. 152). Where an heir with a clear title applies for administration and there is no personalty, a grant may be made without notice to the next-of-kin; otherwise they should have notice (Re Barnett, [1898] P. 145). Administration was granted to one of the next-of-kin without citing the heir, who was abroad (Re Blenkinsop, 49 W. R. 336). Sub-sect. 4 does not expressly refer to a husband, whose right to administration of his wife's estate is well established; under special circumstances this right was disregarded, and administration was granted to the guardian ad litem of the wife's heir (Re Ardern [1898] P. 147; see Re Roberts, supra). The universal devisee and legatee in a will which names no executor is entitled to administration with the will annexed (Re Pryse, [1904] P. 301). As to the form of grant where land had escheated, see Re Ball, [1902] W. N. 226.

Provision for transfer to heir or devisee.

3.—(1.) At any time after the death of the owner of any land, his personal representatives may assent to any devise contained in his will, or may convey the land to any person entitled thereto as heir, devisee, or otherwise, and may make the assent or conveyance, either subject to a charge for the payment of any money which the personal representatives are liable to pay, or without any such charge; and on such assent or conveyance, subject to a charge for all moneys (if any) which the personal representatives are liable to pay, all liabilities of the personal representatives in respect of the land shall cease, except as to any acts done or contracts entered into by them before such assent or conveyance.

(2.) At any time after the expiration of one year from the death of the owner of any land, if his personal representatives have failed on the request of the person entitled to the land to convey the land to that person, the court may, if it thinks fit, on the application of that person, and after notice to the personal representatives, order that the conveyance be made, or, in the case of registered land, that the person so entitled be registered as proprietor of the land, either solely or jointly with the personal representatives. 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 3.

(3.) Where the personal representatives of a deceased person are registered as proprietors of land on his death, a fee shall not be chargeable on any transfer of the land by them unless the transfer is for valuable consideration.

(4.) The production of an assent in the prescribed form by the personal representatives of a deceased proprietor of registered land shall authorise the registrar to register the person named in the assent as proprietor of the land.

Cases under the section.

Where executors conveyed freeholds to devisees in trust, "subject to a charge of any money which the personal representatives were liable to pay," and on a subsequent sale by such devisees the purchaser insisted on an indemnity in respect of any claims against the testator's estate of which at the date of the conveyance the executors had no notice; it was held that, having regard to sect. 2, sub-sect. 3, of this Act, and sect. 29 of the Law of Prop. Amt. Act, 1859 (see now sect. 27 of the Trustee Act, 1925, post), the purchaser was not entitled to the indemnity (Re Cary and Lott, [1901] 2 Ch. 463).

The personal representative is entitled to assent to the devise in preference to executing a conveyance (Re Pix, Plomley v. Stileman, [1901] W. N. 165; where see as to form of assent. See also the instrument of assent, Form 51, Rule 185, Land Transfer Rules, 1903). A written assent, not under seal, is not liable to stamp duty as a conveyance (Kemp v. Commrs. of Revenue, [1905] 1 K. B. 581). See further as to assent, Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, s. 36, and notes, post.

Appropriation of land in satisfaction of legacy or share in estate.

4.—(1.) The personal representatives of a deceased person may, in the absence of any express provision to the contrary contained in the will of such deceased person, with the consent of the person entitled to any legacy given by the deceased person or to a share in his residuary estate, or, if the person entitled is a lunatic or an infant, with the consent of his committee, trustee, or guardian, appropriate any part of the residuary estate of the deceased in or towards satisfaction of that legacy or share, and may for that purpose value in accordance with the prescribed provisions the whole or any part of the property of the deceased person in such manner as they think fit. Provided that before any such appropriation is effectual, notice of such intended appropriation shall be given to all persons interested in the residuary estate, any of whom may thereupon within the prescribed time apply to the court, and such valuation and appropriation shall be conclusive save as otherwise directed by the court.

(2.) Where any property is so appropriated a conveyance thereof by the personal representatives to the person to whom it is appropriated shall not, by reason only that the property so conveyed is accepted by the person to whom it is conveyed in or towards the satisfaction of a legacy or share in residuary estate, be liable to any higher stamp duty than that payable on a transfer of personal property for a like purpose.

(3.) In the case of registered land, the production of the prescribed evidence of an appropriation under this section shall authorise the registrar to register the person to whom the property is appropriated as proprietor of the land.

Operation of section.

As to appropriation apart from statute, and under sect. 41 of the Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, see that section and notes, post, p. 464. As regards appropriations since the passing of the L. T. Act, 1897, it has been decided that where there was a trust for conversion the Act did not take away the old general power (Re Beverly, Watson v. W., [1901] 1 Ch. 687). Where there was no such trust, however, the case may be doubtful having regard to the doubt which exists as to the effect of the Act on any appropriations made after it came into operation, but not effected in accordance with its provisions (Re Beverly, supra).

Under the section, it will be observed, valuations by the representative of appropriated estates were to be made "in accordance with the prescribed provisions"; and beneficiaries (to whom notice of an intended appropriation is required to be given) were to be at liberty to apply to the Court "within the prescribed time." Sect. 22, sub-sect. 6 (i) of the Land Transfer Act, 1897, provided for the making of general rules for regulating any such matters as are authorised by the Act to be prescribed. To the Land Transfer Rules, 1903, was attached (among other forms) a form of appropriation of land under this section (see Form 52, Rule 185). But no rules were made dealing either with the question of the valuation of assets, or the time for an application to the Court and the powers of the section therefore remained in abeyance (see now sect. 41 of Admon. of Estates Act, 1925, post, which applies in the case of deaths before 1926).

The marginal note to the section (which forms no part of the statute itself, Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 11 Ch. D. 461) refers only to appropriation of "land," and the words of sub-sects. 2 and 3 are similarly restricted. It has been held, however, that sub-sect. 1 is not confined to real estate (Re Beverly, Watson v. W., [1901] 1 Ch. 687; and see as to leaseholds, Re Cooke's Settlement, Tarry v. C., [1913] 2 Ch. 661; and as to shares in companies, Re Craven, Watson v. C., [1914] 1 Ch. 358). An appropriation under the section of land by the representative could only be made in the case of a death after 1897. But as regards an appropriation of property other than land, the words of sub-sect. 1 appear to apply to a death before as well as since the Act.

The expression "personal representative" is defined by sect. 24, sub-sect. 2, as meaning "executor or administrator." But if the section is to be applied to the case of intestacy, the words "residuary estate" must refer to the surplus of the intestate's assets after payment of his debts.

The section does not deal with an appropriation by trustees, or an appropriation to a settled share where unborn persons are or may be interested. 60 & 61 Vict. c. 65, s. 4.

5. Nothing in this part of this Act shall affect any duty payable in respect of real estate or impose on real estate any other duty than is now payable in respect thereof. Liability for duty.

See Re Palmer, P. v. Rose-Innes, [1900] W. N. 9, quoted ante, p. 421.

Part IV.

Miscellaneous.

24.—(1.) All hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal, shall be deemed land within the meaning of the principal Act and this Act, except that nothing in this Act shall render compulsory the registration of the title to an incorporeal hereditament, or to mines or minerals apart from the surface, or to a lease having less than forty years to run or two lives yet to fall in, or to an undivided share in land, or to freeholds intermixed and indistinguishable from lands of other tenure, or to corporeal hereditaments parcel of a manor, and included in a sale of the manor as such. Interpretation.

(2.) In this Act the expression "personal representative" means an executor or administrator.

25. This Act shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight. Commencement of Act.

26. This Act may be cited as the Land Transfer Act, 1897, and shall be construed as one with the principal Act, and that Act and this Act may be cited together as the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897. Short title and construction.

II.—The Administration of Estates Act, 1925.

15 Geo. V. c. 23.

An Act to consolidate Enactments relating to the Administration of the Estates of Deceased Persons.

[9th April, 1925.]

Part I.

Devolution of Real Estate.

1.—(1.) Real estate to which a deceased person was entitled for an interest not ceasing on his death shall on his death, and notwithstanding any testamentary disposition thereof, devolve from time to time on the personal repre- Devolution of real estate on personal representative.

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 1.

sentative of the deceased, in like manner as before the commencement of this Act chattels real devolved on the personal representative from time to time of a deceased person.

(2.) The personal representatives for the time being of a deceased person are deemed in law his heirs and assigns within the meaning of all trusts and powers.

(3.) The personal representatives shall be the representative of the deceased in regard to his real estate to which he was entitled for an interest not ceasing on his death as well as in regard to his personal estate.

The provisions of Part I. of this Act are similar to those of Part I. of the Land Transfer Act, 1897, ante, repealed as respects deaths occurring after December 31, 1925, by L. P. Act, 1922 (see L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1924, s. 1, and Sched. I, and as to the date, 15 Geo. 5, c. 4). See as to the effect of these enactments with regard to the availability of real estate for the payment of debts, sect. 1 of the L. T. Act, 1897, and notes, ante, and sect. 32 of the present Act, and notes, post. For definition of "real estate" see sect. 3, sub-sect. 1, post; and as to interests "ceasing on death," sub-sects. 3 to 5 of that section. The Act commenced January 1, 1926 (sect. 58, sub-sect. 2, post).

Application to real estate of law affecting chattels real.

2.—(1.) Subject to the provisions of this Act, all enactments and rules of law, and all jurisdiction of any court with respect to the appointment of administrators or to probate or letters of administration, or to dealings before probate in the case of chattels real, and with respect to costs and other matters in the administration of personal estate, in force before the commencement of this Act, and all powers, duties, rights, equities, obligations, and liabilities of a personal representative in force at the commencement of this Act with respect to chattels real, shall apply and attach to the personal representative and shall have effect with respect to real estate vested in him, and in particular all such powers of disposition and dealing as were before the commencement of this Act exercisable as respects chattels real by the survivor or survivors of two or more personal representatives, as well as by a single personal representative, or by all the personal representatives together, shall be exercisable by the personal representatives or representative of the deceased with respect to his real estate.

Cf. sect. 2, sub-sect. 2, of L. T. Act, 1897, ante, p. 419.

(2.) Where as respects real estate there are two or more personal representatives, a conveyance of real estate devolving under this Part of this Act shall not, save as otherwise provided as respects trust estates including settled land, be made without the concurrence therein of all such representatives or an order of the court, but where probate is granted to one or some of two or more persons named as executors, whether or not power is reserved to the other or others to prove, any conveyance of the real estate may be made by the proving executor or executors for the time being, without an order of the court, and shall be as effectual as if all the persons named as executors had concurred therein. 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 2.

For the provisions as to settled land, see sects. 22—24, post. The latter part of the present sub-section re-enacts sect. 12 of the Conv. Act, 1911, but extends it to the case of power not being reserved. See also sect. 8, post, and as to the law before the Act of 1911, sect. 2, sub-s. 2 of L. T. Act, 1897, ante, and Re Pawley and London, &c. Bank, [1900] 1 Ch. 64; Re Boucherett, Barne v. Erskine, [1908] 1 Ch. 180.

(3.) Without prejudice to the rights and powers of a personal representative, the appointment of a personal representative in regard to real estate shall not, save as hereinafter provided, affect—

(a) any rule as to marshalling or as to administration of assets;

(b) the beneficial interest in real estate under any testamentary disposition;

(c) any mode of dealing with any beneficial interest in real estate, or the proceeds of sale thereof;

(d) the right of any person claiming to be interested in the real estate to take proceedings for the protection or recovery thereof against any person other than the personal representative.

Compare sect. 2 of L. T. Act, 1897, ante, in view of which, and of s. 29 of the L. P. (Amdt.) Act, 1859 (see now Trustee Act, 1925, s. 27, post), it was held that a purchaser from devisees in trust to whom freeholds had been conveyed by executors "subject to a charge of any money which the personal representatives were liable to pay" was not entitled to an indemnity against claims of which the executors had no notice (Re Cary and Lott, [1901] 2 Ch. 463).

The order in which assets are applicable under the present Act is set out in Sched. I., post, p. 484, in the notes to which the order previously obtaining is also stated.

Marshalling assets between legatees.

If the order has been disturbed by any creditor, equity will marshal the assets so as to set right the disturbance. Thus, if the general personal estate out of which pecuniary legacies are to be paid has been exhausted by creditors the legatee will be repaid out of lands devised for payment of debts, and out of lands descended (Rickard v. Barrett, 3 K. & J. 289; Foster v. Cook, 3 Br. C. C. 347); and out of lands charged with debts (Re Roberts, R. v. R., [1902] 2 Ch. 834; Re Kempster, K. v. K., [1906] 1 Ch. 446). But (inasmuch as a residuary devise remains specific notwithstanding the Wills Act (Hensman v. Fryer, 3 Ch. 420)) a pecuniary legatee cannot call upon a residuary devisee to contribute to the payment of debts (Collins v. Lewis, 8 Eq. 708; Dugdale v. D., 14 Eq. 234); unless the legacy is charged on the residuary real estate (Re Bawden, [1894] 1 Ch. 693). Where a debt is charged by way of mortgage on specifically devised real estate and the testator excludes the Real Estate Charges Acts (see now sect. 35, post), and the mortgagee obtains payment out of the personal estate, a pecuniary legatee can stand in the shoes of the mortgagee as against the real estate and has priority over the devisee (Re Smith, S. v. S., [1899] 1 Ch. 371). When a testator agreed to purchase land and devised it, and after his death the purchase-money was paid out of his general personal estate, a pecuniary legatee stood in the place of the vendor against the land (Lilford v. Powys Keck, 1 Eq. 347). Generally speaking, if specific or residuary devisees or specific legatees are called on to pay debts, they have a right to throw the debts on the other property which is primarily liable. And on failure of other assets, any one of such devisees or legatees who may have paid the whole of the debts, will have a right to contribution from the others (Wms. Real Assets, 113; Hensman v. Fryer, 3 Ch. 430; followed on the question of the specific character of a residuary devise in Lancefield v. Iggulden, 10 Ch. 136; but not followed on the question of the right of pecuniary legatees to contribution. Dugdale v. D., 14 Eq. 234; Farquharson v. Floyer, 3 Ch. D. 109).

15 Geo. 5. c. 23. s. 2.

Marshalling assets between creditors

The principle of marshalling was, that a person who had two funds to which he might resort for the payment of a debt, should not by his choice disappoint another who had only one, but the latter should stand in the place of the former (Trimmer v. Bayne, 9 Ves. 209; see Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 391). Thus where, before the Admin. of Estates Act, 1833, creditors holding specialties binding the heir exhausted the personal estate, equity allowed simple contract creditors to stand in their place against the real estate (Cradock v. Piper, 15 Sim. 302; see Kidney v. Coussmaker, 12 Ves. 154, and the notes to Aldrich v. Cooper, 1 L. C. Eq.). There does not appear to be any authority for holding that the right to marshal assets will be exercised in favour of a simple contract creditor, whose immediate right against the real estate is barred by the Stat. Lim. (Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 230; see Busby v. Seymour, 1 J. & Lat. 527).

Interpretation of Part I

3.—(1.) In this Part of this Act "real estate" includes—

(i) Chattels real, and land in possession, remainder, or reversion, and every interest in or over land to which a deceased person was entitled at the time of his death; and

(ii) Real estate held on trust (including settled land) or by way of mortgage or security, but not money to arise under a trust for sale of land, nor money secured or charged on land.

Appointments under general power.

(2.) A testator shall be deemed to have been entitled at his death to any interest in real estate passing under any gift contained in his will which operates as an appointment under a general power to appoint by will, or operates under the testamentary power conferred by statute to dispose of an entailed interest.

Entailed interests.

(3.) An entailed interest of a deceased person shall (unless disposed of under the testamentary power conferred by statute) be deemed an interest ceasing on his death, but any further or other interest of the deceased in the same property in remainder or reversion which is capable of being disposed of by his will shall not be deemed to be an interest so ceasing. 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 3.

(4.) The interest of a deceased person under a joint tenancy where another tenant survives the deceased is an interest ceasing on his death. Joint tenants.

(5.) On the death of a corporator sole his interest in the corporation's real and personal estate shall be deemed to be an interest ceasing on his death and shall devolve to his successor. Corporators sole.

This subsection applies on the demise of the Crown as respects all property, real and personal, vested in the Crown as a corporation sole.

The definition of "real estate" in sect. 1, sub-sect. 4 of L. T. Act, 1897, ante, does not specify the interests included in it, but merely excludes copyholds. Sub-sect. 2 of the present section repeats the effect of sect. 1, sub-sect. 2 of L. T. Act, and sub-sect. 1 (ii) that of sect. 30 of Conv. Act, 1881. As to entailed interests, see sects. 130 and 176 of L. P. Act, 1925, post, and cf. sect. 55, sub-sect. 3, post, as to them and as to the exercise of a general power. On sub-sect. 5, cf. L. P. Act, 1925, s. 180, post, p. 770.

Part II.

Executors and Administrators.

General Provisions.

[Sect. 4, repealed and re-enacted by Jud. Act, 1925, s. 159, empowered the Court to summon an executor to prove or renounce.]

5. Where a person appointed executor by a will— Cesser of right of executor to prove.

(i) survives the testator but dies without having taken out probate of the will; or

(ii) is cited to take out probate of the will and does not appear to the citation; or

(iii) renounces probate of the will;

his rights in respect of the executorship shall wholly cease, and the representation to the testator and the administration of his real and personal estate shall devolve and be committed in like manner as if that person had not been appointed executor.

This section is in effect a re-enactment, as to clause (iii), of sect. 79 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857, and as to clauses (i) and (ii), of sect. 16 of the Court of Probate Act, 1858. If executors do not appear to a citation, or renounce probate, the will must be read and administration granted as if no executors had been appointed; but no intestacy as to any part of the property results, even if the executors renounce (O'Dwyer v. Geare, 1 Sw. & Tr. 465; 29 L. J. P. 47). A renunciation may be retracted before it is filed and recorded in the registry (Re Morant, 3 P. & M. 151); but not afterwards, unless the executor can show that it is for the benefit of the estate or the parties interested (Re Gill, 3 P. & M. 113; Re Stiles, [1898] P. 12). See also sect. 6, post.

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 6.

Withdrawal of renunciation.

6.—(1.) Where an executor who has renounced probate has been permitted, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, to withdraw the renunciation and prove the will, the probate shall take effect and be deemed always to have taken effect without prejudice to the previous acts and dealings of and notices to any other personal representative who has previously proved the will or taken out letters of administration, and a memorandum of the subsequent probate shall be endorsed on the original probate or letters of administration.

(2.) This section applies whether the testator died before or after the commencement of this Act.

The Act commences January 1, 1926 (sect. 58, post). The provisions of this section are new.

Executor of executor represents original testator.

7.—(1.) An executor of a sole or last surviving executor of a testator is the executor of that testator.

This provision shall not apply to an executor who does not prove the will of his testator, and, in the case of an executor who on his death leaves surviving him some other executor of his testator who afterwards proves the will of that testator, it shall cease to apply on such probate being granted.

(2.) So long as the chain of such representation is unbroken, the last executor in the chain is the executor of every preceding testator.

(3.) The chain of such representation is broken by—

(a) an intestacy; or

(b) the failure of a testator to appoint an executor; or

(c) the failure to obtain probate of a will;

but is not broken by a temporary grant of administration if probate is subsequently granted.

(4.) Every person in the chain of representation to a testator—

(a) has the same rights in respect of the real and personal estate of that testator as the original executor would have had if living; and

(b) is, to the extent to which the estate whether real or personal of that testator has come to his hands, answerable as if he were an original executor.

This section re-enacts the effect of 25 Edw. 3, stat. 5, c. 5, and sect. 16 of Court of Probate Act, 1858, repealed by this Act as to deaths after 1925.

Right of proving executors to exercise powers.

8.—(1.) Where probate is granted to one or some of two or more persons named as executors, whether or not power is reserved to the others or other to prove, all the powers which are by law conferred on the personal representative may be exercised by the proving executor or executors for the time being and shall be as effectual as if all the persons named as executors had concurred therein. 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 8.

(2.) This section applies whether the testator died before or after the commencement of this Act.

Cf. sect. 2, sub-sect. 2 and note, ante. The section is new.

9. Where a person dies intestate, his real and personal estate, until administration is granted in respect thereof, shall vest in the Probate Judge in the same manner and to the same extent as formerly in the case of personal estate it vested in the ordinary. Vesting of estate of intestate between death and grant of administration.

By 13 Edw. 1, c. 19, the personal estate of intestates vested in the Ordinary, and by sect. 19 of Court of Probate Act, 1858, in the Judge of that Court. The present section extends to real estate. The Probate Judge is the President of the Probate Division (sect. 55, sub-sect. 1 (xv), post).

[Sects. 10—14 were repealed by Jud. Act, 1925, and replaced by provisions of that Act. By sect. 162 of that Act the Court, in granting letters of administration, is to have regard to the rights of all persons interested in the real and personal estate or the proceeds of sale thereof, and in particular administration with the will annexed may be granted to a devisee or legatee, and as regards land settled before the death, and not by the will, to the trustees, and administration may be limited as the Court thinks fit. The section also directs the grant, in cases of total intestacy, to be made to some party or parties interested in the residuary estate, unless by reason of insolvency of the estate or other special circumstance the Court thinks it expedient to grant it to some other person (cf. as to deaths before 1926, sect. 73 of Court of Probate Act, 1857); and in regard to settled land the grant is to be made to the trustees if willing to act. Sect. 11 of the present Act (Jud. Act, s. 167) related to administration bonds. By sect. 160 of Jud. Act (replacing sect. 12) representation is not to be granted to more than four persons, and if a beneficiary is an infant or a life interest arises under the will or intestacy, administration is to be granted to a trust corporation (see note to L. P. Act, 1925, s. 205, p. 794, post) or not less than two individuals; and where in those cases the only personal representative is an individual, one or more additional representatives may be appointed. Sect. 14 of the present Act (Jud. Act, s. 161) regulated the grant of administration to trust corporations (supra).] As to appointing a creditor sole administrator of an insolvent estate, see Re Herbert's Estate, [1926] P. 109.

15. Where administration has been granted in respect of any real or personal estate of a deceased person, no person shall have power to bring any action or otherwise act as executor of the deceased person in respect of the estate comprised in or affected by the grant until the grant has been recalled or revoked. Executor not to act while administration is in force.

This section re-enacts sect. 75 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857, extending it to real estate.

[Sect. 16, repealed and re-enacted by Jud. Act, 1925, s. 163, provided for the grant of administration pendente lite.]

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 17.

Continuance of legal proceedings after revocation of temporary administration.

17. If, while any legal proceeding is pending in any court by or against an administrator to whom a temporary administration has been granted, that administration is revoked, that court may order that the proceeding be continued by or against the new personal representative in like manner as if the same had been originally commenced by or against him, but subject to such conditions and variations, if any, as that court directs.

This section replaces sect. 76 of Court of Probate Act, 1857.

[Sects. 18—20, repealed and replaced by sects 164—166 of Jud. Act, 1925, provided for the grant of special administration where a personal representative is abroad, and for the grant of administration cum testamento annexo and durante minore ætate.]

Rights and liabilities of administrator.

21. Every person to whom administration of the real and personal estate of a deceased person is granted, shall, subject to the limitations contained in the grant, have the same rights and liabilities and be accountable in like manner as if he were the executor of the deceased.

Special Provisions as to Settled Land.

Special executors as respects settled land.

22.—(1.) A testator may appoint, and in default of such express appointment shall be deemed to have appointed, as his special executors in regard to settled land, the persons, if any, who are at his death the trustees of the settlement thereof, and probate may be granted to such trustees specially limited to the settled land.

In this subsection "settled land" means land vested in the testator which was settled previously to his death and not by his will.

(2.) A testator may appoint other persons either with or without such trustees as aforesaid or any of them to be his general executors in regard to his other property and assets.

See in connection with this and the two following sections the provisions of the S. L. Act, 1925, post, under which the legal estate the subject of the settlement is vested in the tenant for life or statutory owner (see for definition S. L. Act, s. 117 (1) (xxvi), post, p. 980). Sects. 7 and 8 of S. L. Act (post, p. 863) provide for the conveyance to the tenant for life or statutory owner by the personal representatives of a deceased one.

Provisions where, as respects settled land, representation is not granted to the trustees

23.—(1.) Where settled land becomes vested in a personal representative, not being a trustee of the settlement, upon trust to convey the land to or assent to the vesting thereof in the tenant for life or statutory owner in order to give effect to a settlement created before the death of the deceased and not by his will, or would, on the grant of representation to him, have become so vested, such representative may— 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 23.

(a) before representation has been granted, renounce his office in regard only to such settled land without renouncing it in regard to other property; of the settlement.

(b) after representation has been granted, apply to the court for revocation of the grant in regard to the settled land without applying in regard to other property.

(2) Whether such renunciation or revocation is made or not, the trustees of the settlement, or any person beneficially interested thereunder, may apply to the High Court for an order appointing a special or additional personal representative in respect of the settled land, and a special or additional personal representative, if and when appointed under the order, shall be in the same position as if representation had originally been granted to him alone in place of the original personal representative, if any, or to him jointly with the original personal representative, as the case may be, limited to the settled land, but without prejudice to the previous acts and dealings, if any, of the personal representative originally constituted or the effect of notices given to such personal representative.

(3) The court may make such order as aforesaid subject to such security, if any, being given by or on behalf of the special or additional personal representative, as the court may direct, and shall, unless the court considers that special considerations apply, appoint such persons as may be necessary to secure that the persons to act as representatives in respect of the settled land shall, if willing to act, be the same persons as are the trustees of the settlement, and an office copy of the order when made shall be furnished to the Principal Probate Registry for entry, and a memorandum of the order shall be endorsed on the probate or administration.

(4.) The person applying for the appointment of a special or additional personal representative shall give notice of the application to the Principal Probate Registry in the manner prescribed.

(5.) Rules of court may be made for prescribing for all matters required for giving effect to the provisions of this section, and in particular—

(a) for notice of any application being given to the proper officer;

(b) for production of orders, probates, and administration to the registry;

(c) for the endorsement on a probate or administration of a memorandum of an order, subject or not to any exceptions;

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 23.

(d) for the manner in which the costs are to be borne;

(e) for protecting purchasers and trustees and other persons in a fiduciary position, dealing in good faith with or giving notices to a personal representative before notice of any order has been endorsed on the probate or administration or a pending action has been registered in respect of the proceedings.

Power for special personal representatives to dispose of settled land.

24.—(1.) The special personal representatives may dispose of the settled land without the concurrence of the general personal representatives, who may likewise dispose of the other property and assets of the deceased without the concurrence of the special personal representatives.

(2.) In this section the expression "special personal representatives" means the representatives appointed to act for the purposes of settled land and includes any original personal representative who is to act with an additional personal representative for those purposes.

Duties, Rights, and Obligations.

Duty of personal representative as to inventory.

25. The personal representative of a deceased person shall, when lawfully required so to do, exhibit on oath in the court, a true and perfect inventory and account of the real and personal estate of the deceased, and the court shall have power as heretofore to require personal representatives to bring in inventories.

Sect. 25 re-enacts a provision of 21 Hen. 8, c. 5.

Sect. 26, relating to actions by and against personal representatives, will be found ante, p. 243.

Protection of persons acting on probate or administration.

27.—(1.) Every person making or permitting to be made any payment or disposition in good faith under a representation shall be indemnified and protected in so doing, notwithstanding any defect or circumstance whatsoever affecting the validity of the representation.

(2.) Where a representation is revoked, all payments and dispositions made in good faith to a personal representative under the representation before the revocation thereof are a valid discharge to the person making the same; and the personal representative who acted under the revoked representation may retain and reimburse himself in respect of any payments or dispositions made by him which the person to whom the representation is afterwards granted might have properly made.

This section is a re-enactment of sects. 77 and 78 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857.

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 28.

Liability of person fraudulently obtaining or retaining estate of deceased.

28. If any person, to the defrauding of creditors or without full valuable consideration, obtains, receives or holds any real or personal estate of a deceased person or effects the release of any debt or liability due to the estate of the deceased, he shall be charged as executor in his own wrong to the extent of the real and personal estate received or coming to his hands, or the debt or liability released, after deducting—

(a) any debt for valuable consideration and without fraud due to him from the deceased person at the time of his death; and

(b) any payment made by him which might properly be made by a personal representative.

Replaces 43 Eliz. c. 8. See Vernon v. Curtis, 2 H. Bl. 18, 26 n; Vaughan v. Browne, 2 Stra. 1106; Stratford-upon-Avon v. Parker, [1914] 2 K. B. 562; Wms. Exors., 11th ed., pp. 177 et seq.

Liability of estate of personal representative.

29. Where a person as personal representative of a deceased person (including an executor in his own wrong) wastes or converts to his own use any part of the real or personal estate of the deceased, and dies, his personal representative shall to the extent of the available assets of the defaulter be liable and chargeable in respect of such waste or conversion in the same manner as the defaulter would have been if living.

30 Car. 2, st. 1, c. 7, made the representatives of executors de son tort liable, and 4 Will. & M. c. 24, s. 12, extended the liability to the representatives of rightful executors and administrators. These enactments are replaced as to deaths after 1925 by this section. See as to devastavit p. 295, ante, and as to actions against representatives for torts of the deceased sect. 26, sub-s. 5, of the present Act, ante, p. 244.

Provisions applicable where administration granted to nominee of the Crown.

30.—(1.) Where the administration of the real and personal estate of any deceased person is granted to a nominee of the Crown (whether the Treasury Solicitor, or a person nominated by the Treasury Solicitor, or any other person), any legal proceeding by or against that nominee for the recovery of the real or personal estate, or any part or share thereof, shall be of the same character, and be instituted and carried on in the same manner, and be subject to the same rules of law and equity (including, except as otherwise provided by this Act, the rules of limitation under the statutes of limitation or otherwise), in all respects as if the administration had been granted to such nominee as one of the persons interested under this Act in the estate of the deceased.

(2) An information or other proceeding on the part of His Majesty shall not be filed or instituted, and a petition of right shall not be presented, in respect of the real or personal estate of any deceased person or any part or share thereof, or any claim thereon, except within the same time and subject to the same rules of law and equity within and subject to which a proceeding for the like purposes might be instituted by or against a subject.

(3) The Treasury Solicitor shall not be required, when applying for or obtaining administration of the estate of a deceased person for the use or benefit of His Majesty, to deliver, nor shall the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court or the Commissioners of Inland Revenue be entitled to receive in connexion with any such application or grant of administration, any affidavit, statutory declaration, account, certificate, or other statement verified on oath; but the Treasury Solicitor shall deliver and the said Division and Commissioners respectively shall accept, in lieu thereof, an account or particulars of the estate of the deceased signed by or on behalf of the Treasury Solicitor.

39 & 40 Vict. c. 18. 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 51.

(4) References in sections two, four, six and seven of the Treasury Solicitor Act, 1876, and in subsection (3) of section three of the Duchy of Lancaster Act, 1920, to "personal estate" shall include real estate.

Sub-sects. 1 and 2 of this section re-enact, with application to realty also, sects. 2 and 3 of the Intestates Estates Act, 1884. See also as to claims by the Crown, sect. 57, p. 482, post, and as to the persons interested under this Act in the estate of the deceased, sect. 46, p. 471, post.

Power to make rules.

31. Provision may be made by rules of court for giving effect to the provisions of this Part of this Act so far as relates to real estate and in particular for adapting the procedure and practice on the grant of letters of administration to the case of real estate.

Part III.

Administration of Assets.

Real and personal estate of deceased are assets for payment of debts.

32.—(1) The real and personal estate, whether legal or equitable, of a deceased person, to the extent of his beneficial interest therein, and the real and personal estate of which a deceased person in pursuance of any general power (including the statutory power to dispose of entailed interests) disposes by his will, are assets for payment of his debts (whether by specialty or simple contract) and liabilities, and any disposition by will inconsistent with this enactment is void as against the creditors, and the Court shall, if necessary, administer the property for the purpose of the payment of the debts and liabilities.

This subsection takes effect without prejudice to the rights of incumbrancers. 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

(2) If any person to whom any such beneficial interest devolves or is given, or in whom any such interest vests, disposes thereof in good faith before an action is brought or process is sued out against him, he shall be personally liable for the value of the interest so disposed of by him, but that interest shall not be liable to be taken in execution in the action or under the process.

For the power to dispose by will of entailed interests see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 176, p. 768, post. "Will" includes a codicil (sect. 55, sub-s. 1 (xxviii), post).

Summary of former law.

At the time of the passing of Admon. of Estates Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104), lands devised or charged for payment of debts were equitable assets, but lands not so charged were not available at all for payment of debts, except that freehold lands were liable to debts by specialty where the heirs were bound, and were also liable to debts of all descriptions owing from traders (Debts Recovery Act, 1830 (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47), s. 9; see Re Illidge, Davidson v. I., 27 Ch. D. 480, 483). The Administration of Estates Act, 1833, extended to the freeholds of all persons the provisions of the Debts Recovery Act, 1830, as to the freeholds of traders, and also subjected copyholds to a similar liability. (For order under that Act see Worthington v. Abbott, [1910] 1 Ch. 588). To enforce this statutory liability it was necessary to apply to a court of equity (Ball v. Harris, 4 M. & C. 268). It should also be remembered that specialties executed after 1881 bound heirs, though not so expressed (see L. P. Act, 1925, s. 80 (1), post); and seem accordingly to have brought the holders within the words of the Debts Recov. Act, 1830, s. 3, the right of action under which section was not taken away by the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833 (Re Illidge, 27 Ch. D. 482). The liability of the heir and devisees was at law joint (Re Lacey, Howard v. Lightfoot, [1907] 1 Ch. 347); but the liability extended only to the value of the land taken by descent or devise (Re Moon, Holmes v. H., [1907] 2 Ch. 310). As to the effect on payments under the Stat. Lim. see ante, pp. 252, 282.

The substance of the Administration of Estates Act, 1833, was that the land itself was made assets (Re Hyatt, Bowles v. H., 38 Ch. D. 619); and the remedies given against the heir and devisee did not control the larger effect of the previous words, which made the land assets generally (Downes v. Morris, 3 Hare, 399). Accordingly, where a person died without heirs, it was held that as against the lord claiming by escheat the lands of the deceased were assets for payment of his debts (Evans v. Brown, 5 Beav. 114; Hughes v. Wells, 9 Hare, 749). Under this Act freehold estates over which a testator had a general power of appointment, and which he appointed by will, were assets for payment of his debts (Fleming v. Buchanan, 3 D. M. & G. 976). So all rents arising from the real estate of a deceased person after his death were assets by accretion, whether received by his heir (Re Illidge, Davidson v. I., 27 Ch. D. 478; see Re Moon, Holmes v. H., [1907] 2 Ch. 311), or by a person appointed a trustee of his will after his death (Re Hyatt, Bowles v. H., 38 Ch. D. 621), the creditor being entitled to an account (ibid.; see Seton, 1429, 6th ed.). So an equity of redemption of freeholds was assets (Foster v. Handley, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 200; Beale v. Symonds, 16 Beav. 406), or copyholds (Burrell v. Smith, 9 Eq. 443), and consequently a mortgagee might tack his simple contract debt as against the heir or devisee (Rolfe v. Chester, 20 Beav. 610; Thomas v. T., 22 Beav. 341). The Act applied where the testator had not charged his land with, or devised it subject to, the payment of his debts. Where he had created such a charge, and had not made any express provision for raising the money, sects. 14—18 of the L. P. Amdt. Act, 1859 (22 and 23 Vict., c. 35) empowered the devisees in trust or executors to raise it by sale or mortgage. For the above-named Acts and sections and full notes upon them see the 2nd ed. of this work, pp. 392—421. They are repealed by the present Act as to all deaths occurring after December 31, 1925, ; and having regard to the L. T. Act, 1897 (ante) it has not been necessary in the case of persons dying after 1897 to have recourse to them, except as regards copyholds (see L. T. Act, 1897, s. 1 (4), ante, p. 415, and Sissons v. Chichester-Constable, [1916] 2 Ch. 75). (Copyhold tenure was abolished as from January 1, 1926, by L. P. Act, 1922, Part V.)

(1) Charge of debts on real estate.

On the question, what amounted to a charge of debts upon real estate, a mere authority to trustees to pay claims on the estate was not such a charge (Re Head's Trustees, 45 Ch. D. 310). A general direction, however, in a will to pay debts, charged them ordinarily on all the testator's real estate (Graves v. G., 8 Sim. 55; Cook v. Dawson, 29 B. 126; Corser v. Cartwright, L. R. 7 H. L. 735; Re Adams and Perry, [1899] 1 Ch. 554); unless a contrary intention appeared in the will (Thomas v. Britnell, 2 Ves. Sen. 313; see Re Butler, Le Bas v. Herbert, [1894] 3 Ch. 258; Re Major, Taylor v. M., [1914] 1 Ch. 278). Such contrary intention might appear (1) by reason of there being a specific charge of debts on part of the real estate (Palmer v. Graves, 1 Keen, 545; Corser v. Cartwright, supra), in which case the words must be clear (Taylor v. T., 6 Sim. 246; Jones v. Williams, 1 Coll. 156; see Wrigley v. Sykes, 21 Beav. 337; Marshall v. Gingell, 21 Ch. D. 790); or (2) by reason of the direction being a direction to executors to pay, in which case the presumed intention was that the debts were to be paid only out of the property which passes to the executors as such (Wasse v. Heslington, 3 M. & K. 495; Re Bailey, B. v. B., 12 Ch. D. 272). Where, however, in addition to the direction to the executors to pay debts the will contained a devise of real estate to them, such real estate might be charged, whether under the devise they took beneficially for life or otherwise (Henvell v. Whitaker, 3 Russ. 343; Finch v. Hattersley, ibid. 345), or merely on trust (Hartland v. Murrell, 27 Beav. 204; Re Tanqueray-Willaume, 20 Ch. D. 465; Re Brooke, B. v. B., [1894] 1 Ch. 43; Re Stokes, Parsons v. Miller, 67 L. T. 223; see De Burgh Lawson v. De Burgh Lawson, 41 Ch. D. 568; the will of a married woman in exercise of a power). But it was a question of intention (Re Bailey, B. v. B., 12 Ch. D. 272; Wasse v. Heslington, 3 M. & K. 495). And such real estate was not charged, either where the executors took unequal benefits (Harris v. Watkins, Kay, 438; see Re Tanqueray-Willaume, 20 Ch. D. 465), or where the devise was to one executor only (Warren v. Davis, 2 M. & K. 49; see Marshall v. Gingell, 21 Ch. D. 790). Real estates made assets by means of such a charge were equitable assets (Silke v. Prime, 1 Br. C. C. 138; Shiphard v. Lutwidge, 8 Ves. 26). 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

With regard to legacies, where there is only a general gift of them, they are not charged on the testator's real estate (Kightley v. K., 2 Ves. Jun. 328). To charge them a clear intention must be shown (Bench v. Biles, 4 Mad. 188); clearer, it would seem, than in the case of debts (Kightley v. K., supra). Where there is a direction that the real estate be sold, the proceeds to form part of the personal estate, the realty is charged (Bright v. Larcher, 3 De. G. & J. 148; Field v. Peckett, 29 B. 568). A direction to the executor to pay legacies would seem to charge real estate devised to him (Alcock v. Sparhawk, 2 Vern. 228; Elliot v. Handcock, ibid. 143; Cross v. Kennington, 9 Beav. 150); but a direction to executors to realise for the payment of legacies such part of the testator's estate as they thought right, did not charge the real estate (Re Cameron, Nixon v. Cameron, 26 Ch. D. 19). A general charge of legacies on the real estate did not charge specifically devised realty (Spong v. S., 3 Bli. (N.S.) 84; Conron v. C., 7 H. L. C. 168); except where the legacies were coupled with debts (Maskell v. Farrington, 3 D. J. & S. 338; see Mannox v. Greener, 14 Eq. 456); or where the specific devises comprised the whole of the testator's real estate (Bank of Ireland v. McCarthy, [1898] A. C. 181). Where legacies are charged on the real estate if the personal estate be deficient, see as to the time when the deficiency is to be ascertained, Richardson v. Horton, 13 Eq. 121, and cases there referred to; McCarthy v. McCartie, [1897] 1 I. R. 86; [1898] A. C. 181. Charge of legacies on real estate.

Where a will gives legacies generally, and also gives the residue of the real and personal estate in one mass, the result is to charge the legacies upon the residuary real estate (Greville v. Browne, 7 H. L. C. 689; Re Bellis, 5 Ch. D. 504; Re Dyson and Fowke, [1896] 2 Ch. 720; Re Adams and Perry, [1899] 1 Ch. 554). The rule applies where the gift is of all real and personal estate "not otherwise disposed of" (Re Bawden, National Bank v. Cresswell, [1894] 1 Ch. 693; see Re Smith, S. v. S., [1899] 1 Ch. 369); and whether the legacies are given before or after the gift of residue (Elliott v. Dearsley, 16 Ch. D. 327; Re Balls, Trewby v. B., [1909] 1 Ch. 791); and is not affected by a direction that debts and legacies are to be paid by the executors (Re Brooke, B. v. Rooke, 3 Ch. D. 630). As to its application in the case of property subject to a special power of appointment, see Gainsford v. Dunn (17 Eq. 405). The rule applies even where the will contains a specific devise of real estate by means of which the word "residue" might have been explained (Francis v. Clemow, Kay, 435); but in such case the specifically devised estate is not charged (see Bray v. Stephens, 12 Ch. D. 169). Where, after bequeathing legacies, a testator devised his real estate in B and the residue of his real and personal estate, the legacies were charged on the real estate in B as well as the testator's other real estate (Bray v. Stephens, 12 Ch. D. 162). But where, after bequeathing legacies, a testator devised all his real estate and bequeathed the residue of his personal estate, the rule in Greville v. Browne did not apply (Wells v. Rowe, 48 L. J. Ch. 476). When the rule applies the legacies are payable primarily out of the personalty, unless the testator directs payment out of a mixed fund arising from the conversion of the real and personal estates; in which case they are payable rateably out of the realty and personalty (Re Boards, Knight v. K., [1895] 1 Ch. 499; Re Spencer Cooper, Poe v. Spencer Cooper, [1908] 1 Ch. 130). The rule was not applied to legacies expressly directed to be paid out of personal estate (Gyett v. Williams, 2 J. & H. 429).

Notwithstanding a charge of legacies on real estate, the general personal estate remains the primary fund for their payment (Davies v. Ashford, 15 Sim. 46; Paget v. Huish, 1 H. & M. 668); unless the words of the charge exonerate the personal estate (Re Needham, Robinson v. N., 54 L. J. Ch. 78; Ion v. Ashton, 28 Beav. 379).

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

(2) Legal and equitable assets.

Mention may here be made of the distinction between legal and equitable assets. After the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833, all the debts of the deceased were payable out of all his assets, whether legal or equitable. Legal assets were described as the assets with which a Court of law would charge an executor in an action brought against him by a creditor; and included all assets which, virtute officii, he could recover, whether in a Court of law or of equity (Cook v. Gregson, 3 Drew. 549; Att.-Gen. v. Brunning, 8 H. L. C. 258). Equitable assets were described as the assets which could only be made available for payment of debts through a Court of equity (Cook v. Gregson, supra). Independently of the L. T. Act, 1897, equitable assets included (1) land charged or devised for payment of debts (Silke v. Prime, 1 Bro. C. C. 138), including the proceeds of sale thereof (Bain v. Sadler, 12 Eq. 570; see Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. 135); (2) land which could only be reached by the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833 (Re Illidge, Davidson v. I., 27 Ch. D. 484; Walters v. W., 18 Ch. D. 182); and (3) separate estate to which, before the M. W. P. Act, 1870, a married woman was entitled (Anon., 18 Ves. 258), and also earnings which, by that Act, were made separate estate (Re Poole, Thompson v. Bennett, 6 Ch. D. 739). Under the M. W. P. Act, 1882, the separate estate of a married woman, including property appointed by her will under a general power (sect. 4), appears to have been made legal assets (see sect. 1, sub-s. 2, and sect. 23, ante, pp. 371, 392). Personal estate appointed by the will of a feme sole under a general power has been held by the C. A. to be legal assets (Re Hadley, Johnson v. H., [1909] 1 Ch. 30; see contra the words of Lord Lindley, Commrs. of Stamps v. Stephen, [1904] A. C. 140; of Lord Romilly, Pardo v. Bingham, 6 Eq. 487; of Eady, J., Re Peacock, Kelcey v. Harrison, [1902] 1 Ch. 555; and of Warrington, J., Re Guedalla, Lee v. G., [1905] 2 Ch. 339; and see now O'Grady v. Wilmot, [1916] 2 A. C. 231). Under the L. T. Act, 1897, the real estate of a person dying after 1897 (including real estate appointed under a general testamentary power, but not including copyholds) vested in his personal representative (L. T. Act, 1897, s. 1, ante, p. 415), and seems also to have been legal assets. The provisions of sects 1, sub-s. 1, and 3, sub-s. 2, of the present Act (ante, pp. 425, 428) are similar. The principal distinctions between these two classes of assets were: (1) out of legal assets an executor had a right of retainer for his own debt (see post, p. 447), but not out of equitable assets; (2) debts were payable in the order of priority given post, p. 443, out of legal assets, but pari passu out of equitable assets (Seton, 7th ed. 1362).

(3) Effect of lapse of time upon executor's power of sale.

The power implied under a charge of debts in wills before the L. P. Amdt. Act, 1859, has been held to exist notwithstanding the lapse of a considerable time. Thus, in Greetham v. Colton (34 Beav. 615), thirteen years; in Forbes v. Peacock (Phill. 717), twenty-five years; in Sabin v. Heape (27 Beav. 353), twenty-seven years; and in Wrigley v. Sykes (21 Beav. 337), thirty-three years, had elapsed between the testator's death and the sale. In a case before the L. T. Act, 1897, the rule was laid down that after twenty years there was a presumption that the debts had been paid, and that in such case a purchaser of freeholds from the executor was bound to inquire as to this; but that within that period the purchaser was not entitled to make any inquiry (Re Tanqueray-Willaume, 20 Ch. D. 480). Before the L. T. Act, 1897, the last-mentioned rule

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

did not apply to an executor selling leaseholds (Re Venn and Furze, [1894] 2 Ch. 101; Re Whistler, 35 Ch. D. 561; see Re Molyneux and White, 15 L. R. Ir. 383; Re Verrell, [1903] 1 Ch. 65); as to an administrator see Re Norwood and Blake, [1917] 1 I. R. 472. Since the L. T. Act, 1897 (ante, p. 415), it may be a question whether as regards freeholds affected by that Act the rule continued to apply. And as to all conveyances of legal estates since 1925 see sect. 36, sub-s. 8 of the present Act, post. Compare the rule that after ten years from the death money will not be paid out of Court to an executor without notice to beneficiaries (Practice Note, [1904] W. N. 135).

(4) Power to mortgage.

A power of sale out and out does not authorise a mortgage (Stroughill v. Anstey, 1 D. M. & G. 645; Page v. Cooper, 16 Beav. 400); but a power of sale for raising a particular charge does (ibid.; see Walker v. Southall, 56 L. T. 882): so a power of sale to pay debts implies power to mortgage (Ball v. Harris, 4 M. & C. 267; see Colyer v. Finch, 5 H. L. C. 905; Corser v. Cartwright, L. R. 7 H. L. 731). A trust for sale was held not to authorise a mortgage, even where some of the trusts required the raising of money (Walker v. Southall, 56 L. T. 882; see Haldenby v. Spofforth, 1 Beav. 390). But the trustees could mortgage where they had power to employ capital in carrying on a business (Re Dimmock, D. v. D., 52 L. T. 494); or power to make any outlay out of the income or capital of the testator's real and personal estate (Re Bellinger, Durell v. B., [1898] 2 Ch. 534). A power to mortgage does not give a power to sell (Cook v. Dawson, 29 Beav. 128); but a power to mortgage authorises a mortgage with a power of sale (Bridges v. Longman, 24 Beav. 29; Cook v. Dawson, 29 Beav. 128; Re Chawner's Will, 8 Eq. 569; contra, Clarke v. Royal Panopticon, 4 Drew. 26). As to sales by the Court see sect. 38, sub-s. 2, post.

(5) Administration of assets in one country where owner domiciled in another.

As regards the application in payment of the debts of a person domiciled in one country of assets belonging to him situate in another, it has been laid down that the proper order and priority of distribution of assets is always a matter for the lex fori; and the country where the distribution takes place always claims to itself the right to regulate the course of distribution (Thurburn v. Steward, L. R. 3 P. C. 513; see Re Doetsch, Matheson v. Ludwig, [1896] 2 Ch. 836). Personal assets for the purpose of administration as distinguished from distribution among successors are governed by the law, not of their owner's domicile, but of their locality (Blackwood v. Reg., 8 App. Cas. 93; Commrs. of Stamps v. Hope, [1891] A. C. 476; Henty v. Reg., [1896] App. Cas. 567, overruling on this point Wilson v. Dunsany, 18 Beav. 293). Compare in the case of real assets Harrison v. H., 8 Ch. 342; Re Hewit, Lawson v. Duncan, [1891] 3 Ch. 568. Mortgages on land are immovables (Re Hoyles, Row v. Jagg, [1911] 1 Ch. 179). In the case of a debt contracted abroad by a domiciled Englishman, the lex loci contractus does not entitle the creditor to prior payment out of equitable assets administered here (Pardo v. Bingham, 6 Eq. 485). An executor who has taken out probate in one country must not remit assets situate there to another country, in order to give a priority which would not exist in the first country (Cook v. Gregson, 2 Drew. 286; see Re Kloebe, Kannreuther v. Geiselbrecht, 28 Ch. D. 179). In the administration of the English estate of a deceased domiciled abroad, foreign creditors are entitled to dividends pari passu with English creditors (Re Kloebe, Kannreuther v. Geiselbrecht, 28 Ch. D. 175).

(6) Debts of a deceased person.

In view of the distinction (as regards payment out of real estate) between specialty and simple contract debts before the Admon. of Estates Act, 1833, that Act expressly referred to each of these classes of debts. Debts by simple contract are, where the contract is neither ascertained by matter of record, nor yet by deed, but by oral evidence, or by notes unsealed (2 Bl. Comm. 465). A foreign judgment constitutes but a simple contract debt (Wilson v. Dunsany, 18 Beav. 293). So the right to indemnity of a surety for a specialty debt, who has not paid (Ferguson v. Gibson, 14 Eq. 379; Re Illidge, Davidson v. I., 27 Ch. D. 482). So damages awarded in an arbitration for breach of an agreement to lease a mine (Talbot v. Shrewsbury, 16 Eq. 26).

15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

Simple contract debts.

Payments on behalf of lunatics.

In the case of necessaries supplied to a lunatic, the law implies an obligation on the part of the lunatic under which the amount of such necessaries may become payable as a simple contract debt out of his real or personal assets (Re Rhodes, R. v. R., 44 Ch. D. 94; Wentworth v. Tubb, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 171; see the cases quoted, ante, p. 258, and see Re Beavan, Davies v. B., [1912] 1 Ch. 196, as to the rights of a lender of money to provide necessaries; see also Pope on Lunacy, 257, 2nd ed.). And a trustee will be allowed such payments in account (Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211). Necessaries include costs of proceedings in lunacy (Stedman v. Hart, Kay, 607; Jones v. Noyes, 7 W. R. 21; Williams v. Wentworth, 5 Beav. 325).

Debts in connection with trusts.

A trustee, who has committed a breach of trust by misapplying the trust fund, is considered only as a simple contract debtor to his cestui que trust (Vernon v. Vawdry, 2 Atk. 119; Cox v. Bateman, 2 Ves. sen. 19; see Perry v. Phelips, 4 Ves. 116). But an acknowledgment by a trustee under his hand and seal, that he alone had received the whole trust money for the purposes of the trust (Gifford v. Manley, Cas. temp. Talbot, 109; see Kay, 725), or any general words amounting to a covenant on his part, will make him a debtor by specialty (Montford v. Cadogan, 19 Ves. 638; Wood v. Hardisty, 2 Coll. 542). And the words "covenant or agree," are not necessary in a trust deed to constitute a specialty contract: a declaration by the trustee that he will stand possessed on certain trusts, &c., is sufficient (Richardson v. Jenkins, 1 Drew. 477). A trustee, however, under a deed, the terms of which would amount to the creation of a contract, is not a specialty debtor if he has not executed the deed, although he has acted under it (Richardson v. Jenkins, 1 Drew. 477). And even where the trustee has executed the deed, the Court will not raise a covenant without necessity (Adey v. Arnold, 2 D. M. & G. 437). In every case the question is: Was it intended that the trustee should give a covenant for payment of the money? (Isaacson v. Harwood, 3 Ch. 228). The mere assignment of the trust property will not create a specialty debt (Adey v. Arnold, 2 D. M. & G. 432; Wynch v. Grant, 2 Drew. 312); nor a recital of an agreement to become trustee (Wynch v. Grant, ubi supra); nor a declaration by the trustee that he accepts the office (Holland v. H., 4 Ch. 449).

Specialty debts.

As to specialty debts, see generally the note to sect. 3 of the Civil Proc. Act, 1833, ante, p. 246. To make a debt a specialty it must be enforceable at law. There is no specialty in equity (Holland v. H., 4 Ch. 455). Specialty debts have been held to have been created by a covenant in a marriage settlement to settle money (Eyre v. Monro, 3 K. & J. 305); by a covenant to execute a lease (Kidd v. Boone, 12 Eq. 89); and by a covenant for further assurance (Re Dickson, ibid. 154). In general, an acknowledgment of a debt by an instrument under seal will amount to a covenant to pay and creates a specialty (Saunders v. Milsome, 2 Eq. 573), but not where the acknowledgment is made for a collateral purpose (Jackson v. N. E. Ry., 7 Ch. D. 573, 583; Isaacson v. Harwood, 3 Ch. 225; Marryat v. M., 28 Beav. 224). All moneys payable in pursuance of the regulations of a company formed under Companies Act, 1862, by a member to the company were specialty debts (Cos. Act, 1862, s. 16); and where a company was being wound up, the liability of a contributory to pay calls was a specialty (sect. 75; Buck v. Robson, 10 Eq. 629), even where the company was not registered under that Act (Re Muggeridge, M. v. Sharp, 10 Eq. 443). See now Comp. Consol. Act, 1908, ss. 14 and 125. Calls on shares in a company incorporated by a Colonial Act only give rise to a simple contract debt (Welland Co. v. Blake, 6 H. & N. 415; 30 L. J. Ex. 161). 15 Geo. 5, c. 23, s. 32.

Calls enforced against real estate.

The Admon. of Estates Act, 1833, charged the real estate not only with debts actually due, but also with all liabilities resulting out of obligations entered into during life (Hamers' Devisees' Case, 2 D. M. & G. 366). Calls in respect of shares made after the death of a shareholder were enforced against his real estate in the hands of his devisees (ibid.; Turquand v. Kirby, 4 Eq. 123). It is now provided that on the death of a contributory his personal representatives and also his heirs and devisees shall be liable to contribute (Comp. Consol. Act, 1908, s. 126 (1)). As to settling on the list, see sect 126, sub-s. 2, sect. 168, sub-s. 2.

Costs.

The costs of probate litigation could not, before the L. T. Act, 1897 (ante, p. 415), be paid out of real estate (Charter v. C., 3 Ch. D. 218; Re Price, Williams v. Jenkins, 31 Ch. D. 485; Re Shaw, Bridges v. S., [1894] 3 Ch. 615). But the L. T. Act, 1897, altered the rule (Re Prince, Godwin v. P., [1898] 2 Ch. 228; see Brisco v. Baillie Hamilton, [1902] P. 238; Re Vickerstaff, V. v. Chadwick, [1906] W. N. 67). The costs of a creditor's administration action were, according to the old rule, paid out of the same funds and in the same order as debts (see Wilson v. Heaton, 11 Beav. 492). According, however, to the modern rule (laid down by the C. A. in a legatee's administration action), the general costs of an action to administer real and personal estate are borne by the personal estate; but the costs exclusively occasioned by the administration of the real estate are thrown upon the real estate (Patching v. Barnett, [1907] 2 Ch. 154; Re Middleton, Thompson v. Harris, 19 Ch. D. 552). This was not altered by the L. T. Act, 1897 (Re Jones, Elgood v. Kinderley, [1902] 1 Ch. 92; Re Betts, Doughty v. Walker, [1907] 2 Ch. 149).

(7) Order of payment of debts.

In the administration of equitable assets all creditors are paid pari passu without regard to legal priority (Wm. Exors., 11th ed. 1290; see Pardo v. Bingham, 6 Eq. 485; Re Poole, Thompson v. Bennett, 6 Ch. D. 739).

In the administration of legal assets the debts of persons dying since 1869 have been paid in the following order:—

(1.) Debts due to the Crown on record or specialty. See as to the priority of the Crown in winding up proceedings, Re Henley (9 Ch. D. 469); Re Oriental Bank (28 Ch. D. 643); Fox v. Newfoundland, [1898] A. C. 667; New South Wales v. Palmer, [1907] A. C. 179. But see now Re Wood & Co., [1922] 2 Ch. 369. A surety to the Crown who had paid the debt was entitled to the Crown's priority (Re Churchill, Manisty v. C., 39 Ch. D. 174). As to who are Crown debtors, see p. 559, post.

(2.) Debts to which particular statutes give priority, such as debts for poor rates due from overseers (Poor Relief Act, 1743, s. 3; Fisher v. Shirley (1879), W. N. p. 108); debts due from their officers to an unincorporated building society (Moors v. Marriott, 7 Ch. D. 543), or to a friendly society (Friendly Societies Act, 1896, s. 35; see Ex parte Edmonds, 46 L. T. 240); or to a savings-bank (Trustee Savings Banks Act, 1863, s. 14; Jones v. Williams, 36 Ch. D. 573); certain debts from officers or soldiers dying while subject to military law (Regimental Debts Act, 1893, s. 2). When an insolvent estate is being administered in the Chancery Division, the priority as to rates and wages given by the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, applied (Re Heywood, Parkington v. H., [1897] 2 Ch. 593). See now as to insolvent estates, sect. 34 and Sched. I., post.

(3.) Judgments in Courts of record, and decrees in Courts of equity against the deceased pari passu (M'Causland v. O'Callaghan, [1904] 1 I. R. 376). After the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1860, it was held that to enjoy this priority the judgment must be registered (Re Turner, T. v. Waller, 12 W. R. 337; 33 L. J. Ch. 232; Kemp v. Waddingham, L. R. 1 Q. B. 355; Van Gheluive v. Nerinckx, 21 Ch. D. 189). See now as to registration of writs and orders the Land Charges Act, 1925, s. 6, post. A foreign judgment is only a simple contract debt (Wilson v. Dunsany, 18 Beav. 293). As to a surety for the deceased who has paid off a judgment recovered during his life for the debt, see Re M'Myn, Lightbown v. M. (33 Ch. D. 575).

(4.) Judgments against legal personal representatives for debts of deceased whether specialty or simple contract (Williams v. W., 15 Eq. 270; see however as to judgments for simple contract debt, Re Bentinck, B. v. B., [1897] 1 Ch. 673), and whether the judgment be registered or not. The rule before Administration of Estates Act, 1869, that registration was unnecessary (Jennings v. Rigby, 33 Beav. 198), was not altered by that Act (Williams v. W., 15 Eq. 270). A balance order for payment of a call is not such a judgment (Re Hubback, International Co. v. Hawes, 29 Ch. D. 934). Where a general decree for administration was made on the same day as the judgment, the judgment creditor had no priority (Parker v. Ringham, 33 Beav. 535). So where a like decree was made after order nisi to sign judgment, but before judgment actually signed (Hanson v. Stubbs, 8 Ch. D. 154). Judgments against representatives are payable according to their dates (Dolland v. Johnson, 2 Sm. & G. 301; see M'Causland v. O'Callaghan, [1904] 1 I. R. 376).
